The proposal called for creation of a seven-man fact-finding committee to study the dispute and make recommendations. Despite IWA's strong protests, the board would not have the power to make final and binding recommendations.

IWA Pres. A. F. Hartung, announcing the policy committee action and submitting the proposal to a secret vote, said: "We shall present the proposal to our members factually. Our future actions shall be guided solely by their decision."

AT THE SAME time, the union submitted a separate referendum to its 6000 members on strike against the Weyerhaeuser Co., which would not be affected by any fact finding recommendation. The separate Weyerhaeuser referendum seeks a determination on the company's 2.5c wage increase offer.

Weyerhaeuser's wages now run 5c an hour ahead of the industry, and the 2.5c increase, if accepted, could set a 7.5c wage pattern for the industry.

All ballots will be counted Sept. 10, Hartung said.

Murray Warns Of NLRB Okay On Yellow Dog Pacts

"YELLOW DOG" contracts may yet be legalized under the present National Labor Relations Board's rulings, Sen. Murray (D. Mont.) has warned.

Murray assailed recent decisions of the NLRB, which now has a majority of appointees of Pres. Eisenhower.

He particularly criticized the board ruling which gives employers the right to question their workers about union affiliations or activities if this is done without "threats."

"This decision gives employers the right to call in employes individually prior to a union election and force them to submit to prolonged inquisition as to whether or not they belive in trade unionism," Murray said.

"It takes us back to the days of the yellow dog contract and highlights a whole series of interpretations which have been made since Eisenhower appointees became a majority on the board."

He also rapped the NLRB decision to drop jurisdiction over many small industries and turn them back to the states or local authorities. This "can only result in a return to the era when differences between employer and employe were settled by bloodshed," he warned.

The Working Stiffs—

Mantle Of Respectability Palls On Hoboes Union

By LES FINNEGAN

IN McKEESPORT, Pa., one of the nation's oldest and most unusual "unions" held its 46th annual convention, but the two-day meeting received little or no national notice.

The Hoboes of America—more formally known as the International Itinerant Workers' Union—had only one serious convention issue. Some delegates feared that their organization, founded in 1908 in Cincinnati, had grown too respectable.

JEFF DAVIS

There was no disagreement, however, on the basic membership requirement that specifies: "A Hobo Will Work; A Tramp Won't; And A Bum Can't." Delegates reiterated their friendship for "stay-at-home unions."

Proof of this friendship, said Jeff Davis, perennial head of the Hoboes Union, is the fact that "two of our boys during their travels in the last year have become members of 17 unions, five other Hoboes are members in good standing—on leave, of course—in 14 unions, and six others are members of eight different unions."

That, concluded Davis, "is real fraternal relations."

Feudal Politicians, Bosses Fight Guatemalan Unions

A WAVE of repressive measures against trade unions under the new Castillo Armas regime in Guatemala has driven two legitimate groups of unionists into a fighting, unified labor organization, Daniel Benedict, associate director of the CIO International Affairs Dept., reported last week on his return from a second trip to that country.

The legal existence of several unions has been abolished even though they had complied with an earlier decree dissolving the existing leadership, which in some cases had included Communists left over from the Arbenz dictatorship, and had arranged for new elections, Benedict said.

In addition, many employers have taken advantage of unsettled conditions by firing and in some cases jailing employes who were active non-Communist union members, he said.

THE TWO FORMATIVE union groups driven into each other's arms by persecution are the Comite Nacional de Reorganizacion Sindical (CNRS), or National Committee for Trade Union Reorganization, and the Federacion Autonomo Sindical (FAS), or Autonomist Trade Union Federation, which has a Christian Democratic orientation.

At the first joint meeting, messages of support were given by Benedict for the CIO, Robert Alexander for the AFL, and Rafael Otero Borlaff of the Cuban Federation of Labor on behalf of the Inter-American Regional Organization of Workers (ORIT), the western hemisphere arm of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

"It is reported," Benedict noted, "that a struggle is going on between the old Ubico (dictator who preceded Arbenz) crowd, who believe in a political dictatorship accompanied by an economic regime of laissez faire where businessmen are pretty much free to do whatever they want, and a group centered around Col. Monzon, which is working toward a complete reactionary military dictatorship.

ORIT Protests New Anti-Union Moves

The solidarity of workers throughout the Western hemisphere with the workers of Guatemala in their efforts to build a democratic trade union movement was reiterated by the Inter-American Regional Organization of Workers (ORIT) at a meeting of its enlarged secretariat in Havana, Cuba.

The meeting expressed concern over dissolution of Guatmalan unions by government decree and the threat to the land reform program "by the arbitrary action of feudalistic-minded groups." The dissolution of unions was described as an "unpardonable error."

"Various political and business figures are making proposals that all labor rights be suspended for periods varying from six months to two years, with the obvious hope that the suspension would never be lifted."

Among the unions whose legal existence was abolished are the railroad workers. Most of its members are employed by the Intl. Railways of Central America, of which the U. S.-controlled U. S. Fruit Co. is the main stockholder. The railroad in addition has discharged some 170 non-Communist but pro-union employes, Benedict said.

The land reform the new government promised to maintain is being wiped out, Benedict reported. Many Indians who had been granted small farms, either individually or through cooperatives, have been driven from their land by the government or by former owners.

Meantime, he noted, the Communists driven from power by the Castillo Armas "liberation army" are poised to exploit every evidence of reaction.

HE KNOWS ABOUT UNIONS—National Commander Arthur J. Connell of the American Legion greets CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther at Legion's big convention in Washington. Connell operates clothing store in Middletown, Conn., featuring the union-label products of members of the CIO Clothing Workers.

'Bargain Basement Defense Cut Decried By Reuther To Legion

ADEQUATE defense cannot be bought in a "bargain basement," CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther warned the American Legion convention last week in Washington.

At the same time, he called for a program of security, higher living standards, freedom and social and economic justice to turn back the challenge of Communist propaganda.

"We, as a free people in a free nation," he said, "are not confronted with the problem of national solvency but rather with the compelling problem of national survival.

"In a period where peace and freedom are threatened by both total atomic wars and by localized conventional wars, we must of necessity be equipped and prepared to meet both these threats.

"TO FALSELY economize on the theory that we need to be prepared only for total atomic wars will give strategic areas of the world to the Communists by default and will encourage more and more a repetition of what happened in Indo-China.

"We need to have the courage and the good sense to take the price tag off our defense efforts. Fitting our defense to a predetermined budgetary decision is dangerous and unrealistic. The price of freedom is high."

The U. S. cannot have the guns or the manpower it needs, or adequate protection for servicemen's families, "by engaging in political hocus-pocus," he said.

Declaring that "no one will win a hydrogen war," Reuther told the legionnaires that the struggle against communism must be won "with the tools of peace, in the positive struggle for human betterment."

He cited the CIO's belief that "what's good for the country is good for the CIO," and stressed the need for solving the problem of distributing the abundance we create.

"ONLY AN AMERICA fully at work can be strong enough to lead the free world," he said. "Only an America fully at work can demonstrate in a practical way that people can have both bread and freedom.

"Only as we demonstrate how to maintain full employment and full production can we effectively strip the mask of hyprocrisy from Communist propaganda. Communism offers the promise of economic security at the tragic price of political and spiritual enslavement."

We can't have economic and social justice in the U. S., or extend them to the rest of the world, unless we have full production and full employment, he stressed.

"There is no magic formula by which we can achieve victory over the Communist conspiracy," he said.

"But there is a practical way of beating the Communists, and it is this: We must prove—not by words but by deeds—that in democratic America, people have security and freedom, and that what we have, all the rest of the world can have, and we will help them get both bread and freedom.

"If we in America will mobilize our great moral and spiritual resources toward the achievement of this goal, then we can achieve a world where social and economic justice shall flourish, a world created in the image of freedom, security, brotherhood and peace."

T-H Injunction Extended—

Cole Named To Head Atomic Labor Inquiry

THE INJUNCTION which has kept members of the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers from striking at atomic energy plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Paducah, Ky., since Aug. 11 has been extended to the full 80 days provided by the Taft-Hartley Act.

The extension was ordered after hearings by U. S. District Court Judge Robert L. Taylor in Knoxville, Tenn.—two days before Sec. of Labor Mitchell named David L. Cole chairman of a five-man committee which will study labor relations at atomic plants owned by the government and operated by private firms.

The, Oak Ridge and Paducah installations are operated by the Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Corp.

Cole, impartial arbiter under the CIO-AFL No-Raiding Agreement, is a Paterson, N. J., lawyer who formerly headed the U. S. Mediation & Conciliation Service.

THE INJUNCTION was extended despite the protests of Benjamin Sigal, UGCCW attorney, that the government had failed to establish that a strike or threatened strike constituted a threat to the national safety, and that Pres. Eisenhower had not complied with requirements of the Atomic Energy Act when he obtained the original injunction.

Sigal reminded the court that supervisors at Oak Ridge—there is one for every 3.5 production workers—maintained production during the three-day UGCCW strike in July. The only "threat" to national security the government could dig up, he said, was that a strike might—how soon was not said—delay production of U-235, and might, in turn, delay production of atomic weapons.

DAVID L. COLE

Judge Taylor, however, chose to give weight to the opinions of the President and the Atomic Energy Commission that the threat to national peril was real, and ordered the injunction extended to its full T-H term.

Adlai Rips Ike For Flop On T-H, Joblessness

THE FAILURES of the Eisenhower Administration in facing up to revision of the Taft-Hartley Act and meeting the problems posed by widespread unemployment were vigorously attacked last week by Adlai Stevenson, Democratic candidate for President in 1952.

"Politics dropped to a new low plane indeed in this matter of revising the Taft-Hartley Act," he told the convention of the AFL Electrical Workers in Chicago.

"The Republican candidate said particularly that what he called 'union busting' provisions of the law should be removed. Well, they haven't been.

"To you young people, there must be something painfully familiar about this proposition that everything will work out fine if you just be quiet and leave things up to management."

IN DISCUSSING unemployment, the former Illinois Governor pointed out that "the interests of American labor today go far beyond the amendment and administration of the Taft-Hartley Act."

"There appear to be, although it is hard to tell from the juggled figures, about five million men and women out of work," he said.

"In the Administration's answer to the natural concern is reflected a disturbing attitude which is not new, but which has not been perceptible during recent years of high employment.

"'Don't worry,' they insist, 'the economy is, as a matter of fact, only a little bit behind last year's.' 'Unemployment,' they say with pride, 'is leveling out.'

"What this current attitude reflects is not only apparent satisfaction with the present state because it is no worse, but indifference to the fact that these 'yesterday' answers are inadequate; that yesterday is today not a measure of success, but of failure."

(Stevenson compares GOP promises versus performance on farm prices; Page 4.)

Here's Ike On Labor Day—

The text of Pres. Eisenhower's Labor Day statement follows:

ON THIS DAY all Americans once again give thanks that we live in a country which upholds the high belief that every citizen should have the right to seek freely the work he wants to do.

To all the world we have shown the incredible results which can be accomplished in a land where every man can choose the job he wants—any job for which his ability fits him; prepare himself for it; and join freely with his fellow-workers in common effort.

A slave state may force its masses to brutish, endless toil. But it can never produce that deep and tremendous surge of might which comes to a nation when each man knows that he is driving a wedge or plowing a furrow or operating a lathe purely because he is a free man, that to this endeavor he freely sets his hand.

In this principle lies a true and joyous strength. May we recognize it today with a new conviction.

Sen. Maybank Dies At 55

SPECULATION that Dixiecrat Jimmie Byrnes may return to the Senate was reported last week after the death of Sen. Maybank (D. S.C.) at 55.

Maybank, who died of a heart attack, long had supported public housing measures. But he shifted his stand after recent U. S. Supreme Court decisions hitting at racial segregation in schools and housing.

Press reports from Columbia said that speculation on his successor centered on Gov. Byrnes, former Senator and Secretary of State, former Gov. J. Strom Thurman (who headed the 1948 "States' Rights" Dixiecrat ticket), and State Sen. Edgar A. Brown. Byrnes' term as Governor ends this year.

Dispatches reported that a nominee to fill Maybank's seat may be selected through either a special primary election or a special party convention.

GOP Stalls Inquiry On Power Deal

THE PROPOSED congressional investigation into the Dixon-Yates power giveaway was stalled last week in what Democratic National Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell called a "scandal" and "backstage maneuvering" to keep the facts from the public.

The probe was to have been made by the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, headed by Rep. Cole (R. N.Y.), as a result of charges of corruption made by Mitchell. Cole "postponed" the opening indefinitely after a series of razzle-dazzle shifts involving a changed date and cancellation of the whole affair.

The give-away involves a contract, forced on the Atomic Energy Commission by Pres. Eisenhower, under which the Dixon-Yates combine would build a power plant and deliver its output to the Tennessee Valley Authority at Memphis, Tenn., to replace TVA power sold to the AEC at Paducah, Ky. It was obvisously intended to undercut the TVA.

Mitchell and Sen. Gore (D. Tenn.) joined to demand that the details of the deal be made public. Gore said he was unable to get a copy of the contract and had appealed to Eisenhower to get him one.

"The truth is," Gore said, "that this contract, if drafted to plan, will not stand the light of day."

The TVA also accused the AEC of withholding facts the TVA needs. Vice Chairman Harry A. Curtis, in a letter to Budget Bureau Dir. Rowland R. Hughes, complained the AEC had given "no more than selected excerpts from the draft of agreement," and that "they have informed us that . . . these are the only provisions which concern us."

Who Are Dixon & Yates?

What's going on in the Tennessee Valley, anyway?

Why the tremendous anxiety to take care of Dixon-Yates utility firm?

Why has the knowledgeable and experienced TVA been shunted to one side in the controversial negotiations over the government-financed private utility generating plant of the Dixon-Yates firm?

Why the brush-off of TVA by the Atomic Energy Commission on the question of how much to pay Dixon-Yates?

Why the flat charge, by the competing Gibbs engineering firm, that the Dixon-Yates group called private utility firms all over the country to urge a boycott of Gibbs if it continued to compete with Dixon-Yates for the contract to build the plant?

These are questions which surge to the forefront as one reads the daily papers about the negotiations—and finagling—over the construction of that West Memphis electric generator.

It seems to us that only a portion of the story has been made public. What we've read makes us uneasy about what may not have been written. We think it's time for a good impartial, official investigation of the whole Dixon-Yates deal.

Recession Or Not?

Vice Pres. Richard Nixon says there's no recession that anybody can complain—or campaign—about.

Same day, The Wall Street Journal reports that total personal income in July was $1,700,000,000 less than last year.

Thanks for the information, Dick.

Register!

The Census Bureau reports there'll be an estimated 100 million Americans eligible to vote on Election Day.

Forget about the big figures.

The most important one is you.

Are you registered? If you're not, your political likes and dislikes won't mean a thing if you can't cast that vote.

And after you've registered, you make sure the adult members of your family are registered. And your friends and neighbors and the people in your shop.

For when the individuals are registered to vote, the big figures take care of themselves.

Orchids For Two

It's nice, at the end of a long hard summer, to be able to pass along a verbal bouquet or two.

• First, to the good people of Hobbs, N. M.—who ended segregation in their schools in accord with the Supreme Court decision. They did it calmly, sensibly and without regard to the hysteria that a few people tried to create. A lot of bigger towns would do well to learn a lesson from Hobbs.

• Secondly, we like the way that Asst. Sec. of the Navy James H. Smith, Jr., righted a frightful wrong in the case of a civilian named Abraham Chasanow—who had been wrongly suspended from his job as a security risk. Smith went far beyond the call of duty in getting the facts, in clearing the good name of Chasanow, and in apologizing to him on behalf of the Navy.

In doing so, Smith has struck a real blow for more fair processes in the loyalty-security program. Its lack of fairness on many occasions has been a Washington scandal. Perhaps the Chasanow case will lead to its improvement.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS
Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director
Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII September 6, 1954 No. 36

'I Am Too Interested In Medicine—'

In Other Words—

'A Remarkable GOP Achievement'

At a recent Democratic conference on farm problems in Sioux Falls, S. D., Adlai E. Stevenson, 1952 Democratic presidential candidate, discussed a "remarkable Republican achievement: the lowest farm prices and highest cost of living—both at the same time." Excerpts from his address follow:

By ADLAI E. STEVENSON

I HAVE BEEN INTERESTED in the paeans of praise that have arisen from the Eastern Republican press for the Eisenhower Administration's abandonment of price supports at 90% of parity.

Although the flexibility is within the narrow limits of 82.5% and 90% of parity, this legislation has been widely hailed as a great victory for the Administration and for sanity. The President even said with, I suspect, more enthusiasm than confidence: "Now we have gotten a program that will encourage efficient production, will stimulate consumption and stabilize farm income."

STEVENSON

I wish that were true and that we were at the end of our farm and surplus troubles. But with more confidence than enthusiasm, I say it is not true.

This Republican farm bill continues the faults of the present legislation, adds no real flexibility and, in fact, will accomplish little or nothing apart from a probable reduction in farm prices.

The President has indignantly asserted that he was misunderstood at Kasson; that he was in favor of full parity, but only if it was obtained by faith and hope, Well, perhaps he was misunderstood at Kasson, but there was no room for ambiguity in what he said over here at Brookings, S. D.:

"The Republican Party is pledged to the sustaining of the 90% parity price support, and it is pledged even more than that to helping the farmer obtain his full parity, 100% of parity, with the guarantee in the price support of 90%."

The General promised to support prices for storable crops other than the six basics. And what happened to that proposition? It was totally ignored.

And what happened to the promise to develop a support plan for perishable farm products? It was totally ignored.

The General also promised more and better soil conservation, more research, less politics, less regimentation and many other things. But his Secretary of Agriculture has cut soil conservation and flood control funds in half and opened the ranks of the Soil Conservation Service to patronage politics.

Most of all, I object to the downright dishonesty of representing that these flexible price supports will reduce our taxes, will reduce the price of food to consumers, and will solve the surplus problem.

First, as to tax saving. About 1% of the national budget is applied to all agricultural programs, including price supports. In fact, the House Agricultural Committee has estimated that farm subsidies over the past 20 years have cost a little over $1 billion, compared with over $45 billion in business subsidies.

Next, the propaganda and the facts come in conflict with regard to the effect of farm prices on the cost of living. While the prices received by farmers have fallen 20 points since 1951, retail food prices are still at their 1952 peak.

Actually A Food Shortage

Nor, finally, is there any historical basis for concluding that lower farm prices will reduce production and thus solve the surplus problem. On the contrary, our experience shows that lower prices induce farmers to raise more to make up the loss of dollar income.

The fact is there is no surplus of food in the world; there is a terrible shortage.

The only real solution of our temporary embarrassment of abundance is an expanding economy at home and abroad, and thus the farm problem ultimately involves the philosophy of the two parties.

There are only two ways to restore an economic balance. One, the Republican way, is to balance down. The other, the Democratic way, is to balance up.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

SEN. JOE was literally incoherent after his first clash with Arthur V. Watkins, the frosty-faced Republican Mormon from Utah who is heading the special Senate committee to study the Flanders-Fulbright-Morse charges that McCarthy's conduct warrants Senate "censure."

Apparently incapable of grasping the bewildering fact that he had actually been gaveled down by Watkins, incapable of realizing that he couldn't divert the hearings by counter-charges against Sen. Ed Johnson, the granite-jawed Colorado Democrat, McCarthy summed up the proceedings by telling reporters, "The most-unheard-of thing I ever heard of."

Is Joe Near The End Of The Trail?

The United States, this observer is ready to conclude, is about to get rid of the McCarthy miasma, the nightmarish climate in which a plain political racketeer from Wisconsin, sitting in the Senate in the honored seat of the elder and younger La Follettes, has bullied and smashed his way to national political position in the guise of an unparalleled anti-Communist crusader.

Let us leave untouched the question of whether Sen. Johnson, a formidable man for McCarthy to challenge, actually—as printed—told the Denver Post in a telephone interview that Senate Democratic leaders "loathed" Sen. Joe.

It Happens To Be Correct

The statement happens to be factually correct, and it is equally correct about all but a small group of Republicans. Long ago, in 1950, this reporter sat in the gallery and listened to a concerted Democratic attack on McCarthy, and watched the Republicans, one by one, carefully leave the chamber until no one was left to aid and assist Joe except the now-tamed Sen. Jenner of Indiana.

The late Sen. Tobey (R. N. H.) quietly looked up to the press gallery, smiled a smile of total satisfaction, and got up and walked out toward the very end. He had waited just long enough to be sure that the Democrats were pouring genuine vitriol on McCarthy—summed up in Sen. Matt Neely's phrase, "Somebody is lying like Ananias."

The President of the United States has finally turned his back on McCarthy. Joe's "friends," Lworshak of Idaho and Ferguson of Michigan, publicly state that they want no help from him in their senatorial re-election campaigns. The Chicago Tribune's shallow-minded senator from Illinois, Everett Dirksen, does the best he can—but the best from Dirksen isn't good enough when Len Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee, obviously has got a brutal word from the White House telling him that McCarthy will play no major part in the campaign.

Chalmers Roberts of The Washington Post & Times Herald, writing in The Guild Reporter, tells of a European observer who expressed his fascination at the process by which the American democracy, having given McCarthy his chance, is now chewing up and cutting down to size the terrorist.

Part of the "chewing-up" process was apparent in the Army-McCarthy hearings. Joe overreached himself by challenging Eisenhower's Republican official family and at the same time charging Democrats with "20 years of treason."

Sens. Potter (R.) and McClellan, Symington and Jackson (D.) filed reports that were critical of the Army Department but much more critical of McCarthy and his former chief counsel, the intellectual—but possibly jackass—Roy Cohn. Joe exposed himself, in the televised hearings, by obvious attempts to bully his colleague and run events.

Only desperation could have led McCarthy to assail Ed Johnson of Colorado in the first day of the Watkins hearings. Johnson has nothing to win or lose in the controversy, is retiring from the Senate, is running for governor in his home state, and will almost undoubtedly make the grade. Besides, Johnson has done many favors for other senators; he hasn't lost a fight, one suspects, for the last 10 years.

Johnson helped "chew up" McCarthy by refusing to confirm or deny, at least at the beginning, whether he had been accurately quoted by the Denver Post. He simply insisted that he had never said that he "personally loathed" McCarthy.

A Vote Is Coming Up

The attitude of Watkins, however, seemed to strike McCarthy himself as the unkindest part of the "chewing-up" process.

Here is a Utah senator of deepest Republican conservation. Joe couldn't possibly get away with a pretense that Watkins was "against" anti-Communists, even the loudly self-proclaimed ones.

Joe first tried diversionary tactics against the special committee, in the form of the charge against Johnson. Then he tried his equally familiar "Indian Charlie" tactics. He stormed at Watkins, he kept on trying to talk after he had been told to keep silent. (Joe was taught by an "old Indian" named Charlie, he admitted recently, that when he saw an enemy to start kicking hard and low.)

But diversionary tactics didn't work against the rock-hard Johnson. "Indian Charlie" tactics didn't scare Sen. Watkins. Watkins squelched him.

The plain fact is that the Senate is going to have to vote on "censure" of McCarthy—although some smart-aleck Republicans such as Majority Leader Bill Knowland of California undoubtedly want to delay the vote until after the election.

"The most-unheard-of thing," mumbled Joe, "I ever heard of."

Washington Window—

Hoover Commission Gets Hint To Practice A Little Economy

By Public Affairs Institute

WHEN FORMER Pres. Hoover spoke recently at West Branch, Ia., on his 80th birthday, he talked about one of his favorite subjects: "the growth of a huge centralized federal bureaucracy" and the "great waste of the taxpayers' money."

This was one of the campaign issues on which the Eisenhower Administration rolled to power in 1952. And in the last year and a half, millions of dollars have been spent on more than 50 commissions, study groups, advisory bodies to make recommendations about these millions of dollars that are being wasted and various other problems.

Back in 1946, when the Republicans assumed control of Congress after a long absence, Hoover was selected as chairman of the first of the commissions created to do something about waste and inefficiency in government. It was called the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government.

This was the "first" Hoover Commission. It operated for a year and a half and spent $2 million. Twenty-four task forces were set up to examine in detail all the government agencies. It issued 18 reports.

Out of all this expenditure and effort came a recommendation that the administrative branch of government be reorganized. Many a newspaper story was written about how some $3 billion could be saved annually. No one bothered to check as to whether the results achieved were even a fraction of this amount.

A review of the appropriations requests made by the second Hoover group indicates that such economy-minded men as Rep. Phillips (R. Calif.), chairman of the Independent Offices Appropriations subcommittee, now have doubts about Chairman Hoover's ability to economize in his own backyard.

The second Hoover Commission asked for $1.8 million in a 1954 supplemental appropriations request last February. It had previously received $500,000. The subcommittee cut it down $1.5 million to $300,000 for this reason:

"It is not the intention of the committee to retard in any way the progress of the commission, but it is convinced that there is no urgent need for additional funds in the amount requested at this time. It has therefore included in the bill $300,000 which, together with the unobligated balance, will permit the program planned to continue without interruption until the commission has had the opportunity to review its plans and can present a more definite and precise estimate of actual needs."

It Seems Ironical

In July the second Hoover Commission came back for additional funds under the 1955 Supplemental Appropriation bill. It asked for $553,000. The House subcommittee recommended $497,000, making a total of $2.4 million for the second Hoover group. This is what the subcommittee said:

"The committee is aware of the popularity of this program and is in accord with its purposes, but believes that economies can be accomplished and efforts be made to coordinate the studies of this commission and other agencies and committees to the extent of the reduction indicated."

It seems ironical that in the quest for economy and elimination of alleged waste the former President's own commission is being delicately told that it could stand a little more efficiency and economy itself.

Overseas Inquiry

The Hoover Commission on chopping down the government (formally known as the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government) is setting its sights overseas.

Former Pres. Hoover recently announced formation of a "Task Force on Overseas Economic Operations." It will look into the work of the Foreign Operations Administration, the Point Four program of the Technical Cooperation Administration, the State Dept. and the Commerce Dept.

The chairman is H. W. Prentis, Jr., former president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Industry Councils Gain Support

THE INDUSTRY COUNCIL plan, long advocated by the CIO, "is gradually coming into its own among professional social scientists," according to Msgr. George G. Higgins, assistant director of the Social Action Dept. of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Writing in his weekly column for Catholic newspapers throughout the country, he said the plan is being taken seriously by academicians who 10 years ago "would have ignored it completely or would have given it the once over lightly treatment generally accorded to new ideas thought to be hopelessly impractical."

"One way of keeping tabs on this growing interest in the ICP," he pointed out, "is to leaf through the index of new publications in the field of labor economics, political science, industrial sociology and social ethics.

"To do this, even in a casual way, over a period of two or three years is to be persuaded that the industry council plan is here to stay.

"Whereas it used to be thought of as a 'Catholic' proposal in the narrow sense, it is now being seriously discussed on its merits by a growing number of non-Catholic economists, sociologists and political scientists.

A Field For Experiment

"And while there is still a great deal of opposition to the proposal, it is no longer fashionable in academic and journalistic circles to equate it with Italian Fascism or to characterize it unfavorably as an impractical attempt to reverse the course of history and go back to the Middle Ages.

"On the contrary, the consensus among those who are writing on the subject—and their number is constantly increasing—would seem to be that while it would be undesirable at the present time to establish any type of industry council plan on a large scale, there ought to be 'modest and tentative experimentation with it.'"

The CIO first urged nationwide industrial planning and industry councils in a resolution passed at the 1938 convention. The importance of nationwide democratic planning in basic industry as a long range goal of the CIO was emphasized often by the late CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

"In this year of so-called plenty," he told the 1951 CIO convention in Chicago, "I do not think it is the type of plan we can cast lightly aside.

"Some day in the not too distant future, we may find ourselves confronted with the pendulum swinging in the opposite direction, and no well conceived plans under way to provide full employment for the countless thousands of people who may be forced to walk the streets."

The industry council plan has been bitterly opposed by the Communists and the National Association of Manufacturers alike.

In essence, it provides for a voluntarily executed agreement to set up councils in each industry composed of representatives of labor, other economic groups and the government, to plan ahead for full and expanding production and full employment.

"My employes will always find my door is open to anyone who wishes to see me."

Labor Helps Local Groups In Fight For Better Schools

ACROSS the nation an estimated 9000 citizens' committees—many of them with active labor representation—are waging an uphill fight to improve the schools of their communities.

Their job is complicated by public indifference and the evident disregard of the national Republican Administration for the serious problems of overcrowded schools and the growing reluctance of young people to enter the underpaid teaching profession.

Even before they dreamed of the five-day week, the pioneers of the U. S. labor movement worked towards a free public school system. Often they put aside their own immediate objectives of improved conditions to insure a better educational system for their children.

That tradition lives today in the thousands of citizens' committees on which union men and women serve without any other hope of reward other than seeing their youngsters better educated in better schools. Their contribution is recognized and invited.

"I CAN'T conceive of a truly representative citizens' committee for school improvement which does not include people from the field of labor," said Henry Toy, Jr., executive director of the National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools. He added:

"People in the field of labor are an integral part of any community. We cannot separate them from the rest of the population and say that their responsibility for the welfare of our schools is any more or less than that of any other group.

"The Commission believes that school improvement will only come about when all citizens are aware of the needs of the schools and work together cooperatively for them—using all their varied talents and skills in a devoted effort."

Dir. Leo Perlis of the CIO Community Services Committee is the Commission's secretary. Victor G. Reuther, assistant to the CIO President, is a Commission member.

Americans are becoming more concerned about the crisis facing their schools. Higher enrollment in Parent-Teacher Associations and kindred groups is a hopeful sign. Problems vary from one city to another, but a major headache all seem to share is lack of adequate building facilities.

The biggest hand that citizen groups give their boards of education is in establishing, through survey and other methods, the present and potential building needs and in carrying out campaigns to urge "yes" votes for bond issues or increased school levies.

Educators and laymen alike are coming to the unpleasant realization that the Administration in Washington—more concerned with corporation chiefs than with children—is leaving them to their own devices.

The youngsters will troop back into old, overcrowded schools. Too few teachers will be assigned to the estimated 30.6 million students. More than one-third of all the elementary schools, according to the U. S. Office of Education, are substandard in safety, size and toilet facilities.

Instead of action, the Eisenhower Administration talked about a conference — sometime about November 1955 — after a long series of state conferences has chewed over a too-familiar situation.

FACED with a shortage of 120,000 teachers as school sessions resume, Administration spokesmen tried to dump the problem into the laps of U. S. mothers.

Let career-seeking mothers go into teaching, proposed U. S. Education Commissioner Samuel M. Brownell and Mrs. Alice K. Leopold, who heads the Women's Bureau in the Labor Dept.

The American Federation of Teachers tossed the problem right back to the Administration. Pres. Carl J. Megal told the AFT convention that we are "educationally, politically and economically defunct in leadership."

"Grim as the picture is," Megal said, "it will continue to grow worse unless schools are given federal aid, increased state aid and until the education of American youth is recognized as America's first obligation."

A GRIM PROSPECT—In heavy snow, firemen battle blaze in frame elementary school annex last winter at Cheetktowaga, N. Y. The fire resulted in deaths of 11 sixth grade students, injuries to 19 others. Fire is a continuing peril in overcrowded schools.

Graveyard?

There was a time when children were asked what school they attended.

The school situation is so bad in Minnesota now, said Sen. Humphrey (D.), that they are asked what shift they are on. It seems that Minnesota schools are adding the third shift.

—(PAJ)

Pennies

America spends more on recreation than it does on education of its children, Deputy Commissioner of Education J. Kenneth Little told the National Student Congress.

Less than three cents out of each dollar of national income goes for education, Little reported. He added that today's educational need is "more for fact-facing than for fact-finding"—but the Administration is continuing only its fact-finding policies.

DANGEROUSLY overcrowded schools are depriving U. S. youngsters of proper educational advantages and jeopardizing their chances to live to enjoy next summer's vacation.

With more than one-third of the nation's elementary schools condemned because of obsolescence, the grim fact is that many youngsters freshly scrubbed for school's start this week face the danger of school fire tragedies before next summer.

Almost half of America's schools were over 30 years old in 1951. School building shortages mean part-time schooling for almost a million youngsters.

Two years ago a national survey showed a need for 312,000 new classrooms to accommodate nine million children. Local communities and school districts were able to pay $4.7 billion of the $10.6 billion necessary to house America's greatest assets —its children — in schools that meet minimum safety and sanitary requirements.

THE STEADY increase in the number of enrollments of children is the main reason behind the demand for new buildings. The U. S. Office of Education anticipates that things will be worse instead of better when peak school enrollment is reached in 1957-58.

By 1960 it expects 31.9 million youngsters will be attending school. Soaring birth rates have caused this figure to be revised upward to 36.3 million children.

Nearly a million people have quit teaching jobs in the last 25 years, most of them discouraged by low salaries.

CIO Urges School Aid

USE OF FEDERAL funds to support education has been urged by CIO since its founding convention in 1938.

The 83d Congress was asked to pass "a school construction bill to provide federal aid for a comprehensive, nationwide school construction program."

"No longer can any senator or representative say that we do not need federal aid for school construction if he wishes every school child to have an adequate classroom," said George Guernsey, CIO associate director of education.

CIO asked a minimum yearly rate of $600 million in grants-in-aid to the states.

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther has warned: "If the schools fail because we fail the schools, none of us, rich or poor, will be able to buy our way out of the century we live in or out of the challenge it offers."

Schools Move To End Bias

AMERICAN children of all races began attending schools together in many areas where segregated classrooms were formerly the rule.

Typical was the case of Hobbs, N. M., where one-tenth of the student body is Negro. Talk of de-segregation had aroused threats of possible violence, but integration was completed without incident.

Washington, D. C., moved towards integration as its fall term opened. Communities in five southern states followed suit without waiting for the U. S. Supreme Court to further implement its anti-segregation ruling made earlier this year.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said a survey showed planned integration in West Virginia, Missouri, Arkansas, Maryland and Delaware. A number of cities in states where segregation is optional, also opened the door to mixed classrooms.

Who Laid The Rails To Promontory? —Some Lessons Worth Remembering

By HARRY GERSH
(For JLC Labor Reports)

SCHOOL is about to start and in my son John's class they'll be learning about heroes and battles, about growth and development.

They'll thrill to the stories of Valley Forge and Lake Champlain and Shiloh and Chateau Thierry. They'll be stirred by the stories of the steamboat and pushing the rails to California, about the cotton gin and the telegraph.

All this is good. I want John to have a sense of history, of his own place in the continuity of his nation and people. But I'm afraid he won't get the whole story.

He'll learn about Washington and Grant and Eisenhower. But how about the sacred sergeant who was the very first guy up on Omaha Beach? He'll know about McCormick and the empire builders. But how about the guys who actually laid the rails to Promontory Point?

Of course, it's impossible to put everyone's name into the history books. (Anyway that sergeant's name probably isn't recorded in the Pentagon.) And I don't demand that the specific names be included in the history class. I merely ask that the books reflect the fact that history is not a roll call of big battles and big fortunes. It must include the story of most of us—in all times—whose names are not important.

For instance, they will tell the kids about the invention of the Bessemer furnace and the development of the continuous assembly line, both vital to our industrial development.

But who will tell them about the invention of the 40-hour week, about the men who starved and went to prison and were shot to win decent hours for the American worker?

They'll learn about the Stamp Act and the tea tax and taxation without representation. But what history teacher will tell the story of the development of the union contract, of the winning of industrial freedom?

Homestead, Pa., 1892, should mean something to our kids, and the Pullman strike in 1894, and Lawrence, Mass., 1912, and the sitdowns of the '30's. And when they talk about law and the Supreme Court they ought to include the Danbury Hatter's case and the Sec. 7-A decision along with the Dred Scott case.

Come to think of it, it wouldn't be a bad idea for the public school history teacher to mention the historical fact that the early unions were the major—usually the only—organized force to fight for and win free public education.

Booklets Offered On School Needs

The National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools has prepared a series of booklets on how citizens' groups may organize to assist their communities solve school and teacher shortage problems.

Single copies of the booklets are available without cost from the commission at 2 West 45th Street, New York 36, N. Y.

MEBA: It's A Far Cry From Days Of Paddle-Wheelers

THE OLD—When CIO's oldest union, the Marine Engineers, was formed in 1864, members worked on "river queens" as illustrated by Currier & Ives.

THE NEW—Superliner United States, world's fastest liner, passing the Statue of Liberty. Her engines are the responsibility of MEBA members.

By EUGENE A. KELLEY

FROM PADDLE WHEELS to propellers, from rust-streaked tramp freighters to the sleek record-holding liner United States, men of the CIO Marine Engineers Beneficial Association have kept the nation's ships moving on rivers, lakes and the seven seas.

One of the country's oldest unions, certainly the oldest in CIO, MEBA was founded in January 1864 at Cleveland, O., by a handful of ships' engineers whose packets plied the Great Lakes in the heyday of freight shipping.

DAGGETT

The engineers built their union. After reorganization under the present title, the union held its first convention in February 1875, again at Cleveland where the group had its inception.

Gains For Engineers

It operated as an independent union almost 50 years before it affiliated with the AFL in 1917. Six years later, because of jurisdictional disputes with other crafts, MEBA left the AFL. In 1938 it entered the CIO.

MEBA was formed, according to its first convention, with the object of "mutual benefit, protection and social elevation."

A look at the standard MEBA contract offers convincing proof that those objectives have been met. The union's membership is limited by definition to the licensed personnel who tend the propulsion machinery and other engines aboard ship.

Salaries of chief engineers, for instance, range as high as $1093 a month on some of the larger ships. There's a 10% premium on top of that for ships with diesel engines, another 10% for certain penalty cargoes, and $108 a month extra in lieu of overtime available to other ship personnel.

MEBA's membership now is about 10,000. That's almost half of what it was in World War I and II. Today, hundreds of the ships in which MEBA men sailed are tied up in the mothball fleet or have been transferred to foreign flags although still owned by U. S. shipping firms.

It's a far cry from the Great Lakes packets whose machines were handled by the first MEBA members to the craft that today ply the oceans and U. S. inland waterways. For years the union engineers were licensed to handle steam engines but now many MEBA members have licenses for both steam and diesel.

Much of the union's jurisdiction is organized and covered by the contracts it has with about 200 companies owning dry cargo, passenger ships and tankers.

The toughest holdouts against organization, said Pres. Herbert L. Daggett, are the tanker fleets owned by big oil companies like Gulf, Cities Service, Standard Oil of New Jersey and the Texas Co.

Union officials say their organizing problem is complicated by the short time that tankers lay over in port. Often they dock at a pier on the sea-end of refinery property that's all but inaccessible to MEBA organizers. "Independent" unions, closely tuned to the wishes of the firm's front office, usually represent the men who sail in the company-owned tanker fleets.

CIO Unions Pledge Aid

Help from other CIO affiliates, such as the Oil Workers, has been pledged to MEBA in organizing tanker personnel.

Daggett hopes for success in a drive to organize crews of river craft on the Mississippi and its tributaries. A Rivers Joint Organizing Committee has been set up by MEBA, the CIO Maritime Union and the AFL Masters, Mates & Pilots.

MEBA men tended the powerful engines of the U. S. Lines superliner United States two years ago when it set a new record for Atlantic crossings, bringing the speed pennant to America for the first time in almost 100 years. In more than 90 subsequent crossings, traveling over 287,000 sea miles, the United States has never been slowed or stopped by engine ailments, a tribute to the men who watch her machinery.

Like other unions, MEBA has its problems of unemployment. The ships in the mothball fleet represent lost jobs for the membership. Every U. S. ship transferred to foreign flag registry means the loss of at least four berths.

As a member of the CIO Maritime Committee, MEBA has added its voice of protest against the neglect of the American Merchant Marine. It has denounced the manner in which the merchant fleet has been permitted to decline since the end of the war.

Early Lesson

The tiny group who founded the Marine Engineers Union during the Civil War quickly learned some elementary lessons in trade unionism. When their organization was less than a year old, in 1865, it struck and won a 30% wage increase.

Next season, the Great Lakes shipowners struck back. They blacklisted the union members and succeeded in cutting wages below the original mark. Undaunted, the engineers called for more "steam" in organizing and built their membership until they were a force to be reckoned with.

High Brass

Probably no other CIO union has as much "brass" in its membership as the Marine Engineers. A high percentage of MEBA's men have commissions in the Naval Reserve. There are a fair sprinkling of captains, lots of commanders and scads of lieutenants.

They hold their commissions because of their specialized knowledge below decks and because Uncle Sam requires that a percentage of engineer officers on every ship he subsidizes be officers in the Naval Reserve.

FREIGHTER'S "works" are fixed in tight spaces.

NATIVES at ports of call get seeds from Pat Mozier.

ASHORE AND AFLOAT, MEBA men are active. Pickets at left helped win gains made by union in its 78 years. In center, MEBA Pres. Daggett presents first welfare check to widow of MEBA member. At right, Coast Guard takes off survivors of broken tanker Fort Mercer.

Looking To November—

Howell Stresses 'Big Issues' In Jersey Race

(Another in The CIO News series on the key Senate races.)

By MILTON PLUMB

SEEDS OF reactionary Republican discontent planted in 1951 are blossoming today in the Garden State. Their fruit threatens to infect New Jersey politics with a poison dangerous to democratic ideals and honest elections.

This is happening although both Democratic and Republican nominees for the seat now held by retiring Sen. Hendrickson (R.) have proved themselves far above average candidates in their dedication to democracy.

The Democratic contender, Rep. Howell of Pennington, has an outstanding record in Congress in support of legislation in the public interest. The GOP candidate, ex-Rep. Case has also distinguished himself, although not as consistently. Both have had CIO-PAC backing for the House of Representatives in past elections.

A Campaign Code

Case, moreover, accepted Howell's invitation last April that their coming Senate race be governed by a "code of campaign ethics." Under it, both are pledged to campaign "on the issues," and to "refrain from unfounded personal attacks, directed against the honesty, loyalty and integrity of the other."

With such candidates, the coming race ought to give New Jersey voters a rare opportunity to pick their next Senator solely on his merits and the views he supports. This isn't happening, however, because GOP leaders are insisting on a fight by smears, innuendo, misrepresentation and hate.

To Case's credit, he flatly rejected the McCarthyism of some State Republican leaders and, like Howell, has been made the victim of smears by this party's right wing. On the debit side, however, Case raised no public objections to the decision reached last month at a White House luncheon that the GOP will make an outright bid to get him the votes of New Jersey McCarthyites.

GOP Corruption

The New Jersey Republican machine has been rocked by exposures of corruption in the administration of former GOP Gov. Harold G. Hoffman. After Howell's nomination—which followed the thumping Republicans were handed in last year's gubernatorial race—even New Jersey's Old Guard politicians were convinced that Hendrickson couldn't win re-election.

They persuaded Hendrickson to withdraw and induced Case, who had retired from Congress last year for a $40,000-a-year job with the Ford Foundation, to make the race.

When Case made his first major campaign statement an attack on Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.), however, the GOP in New Jersey split wide open. The right-wing faction which backed the late Sen. Taft (R. O.) for the Presidential nomination in 1951-52 is made up largely of Pro-America organization reactionaries, from whom McCarthy gets most of his support.

This group is now conducting an active campaign either to get Case to withdraw in favor of the candidacy of ex-Rep. Hartley (R.), co-author of the Taft-Hartley Act who has indicated he's available or to bring about Case's defeat.

"We would rather see Howell [elected] who would vote Democratic and be honest about it," GOP Committeeman George Easley, Jr., of Morris County, one of the leaders of the anti-Case movement, declared.

Records Compared

Case said after getting the nomination that he's for the President's program "1000%." The President, in turn, praised Case's record.

The truth is that during the first session of the 83rd Congress, when both Case and Howell were in the House, Howell had a better record of supporting the President than his Republican opponent. The non-partisan Congressional quarterly gave Howell a score of 62% in effective support of the Eisenhower program. Case got only 59% credit.

Nevertheless, at a top strategy meeting Aug. 9, the President, Vice Pres. Nixon and GOP Chairman Leonard Hall decided they wanted to keep the New Jersey Senate seat Republican at any cost. In an effort to overcome the split in Republican ranks inside the state, they agreed to send Sen. Dirksen (R. Ill.), a McCarthy supporter, to campaign for Case.

The Big Issues

This was a clear departure from the original GOP theory that only a liberal campaign could turn the trick against Howell. Henceforth, Republican strategists ruled, the campaign to elect Case would have to be half-Eisenhower, half-McCarthy.

Howell is still determined, however, to wage his campaign to the big issues of a full-production, full-employment economy and world peace. He doubts that McCarthyism will be "fundamental" in the campaign, pointing out that he had opposed the actions of McCarthy long before the Case pronouncement, "although Case got more publicity."

What's more important, Howell believes, are the records he and his opponent have made in past Congresses. On this basis, Howell has a considerable edge.

The voting guide of the CIO Auto Workers for the first session, for example, lists Howell as voting "wrong" only once and being present on 20 of the 21 key votes. Case, on the other hand, voted "wrong" six times and was absent six times on the same crucial issues.

The UAW listed Case as following GOP policy against the public interest in his votes against adequate funds for public power, soil conservation and a strong air force, as well as in his votes favoring the rubber plants giveaway, liquidation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and the attempted GOP patronage grab.

Son of a prominent Trenton banker, Howell began his political career as a Republican. The humanitarian principles of the Roosevelt New Deal led him to shift his party affiliation in 1932, and he became a Democratic county committeeman.

Elected to the Legislature in 1944 and 1945, Howell introduced the original New Jersey Fair Employment Practices Bill.

He was elected to represent the 4th district in Congress in 1948, 1950 and 1952, winning his third term by the largest number of votes ever cast for any candidate in the district's history.

Urged T-H Repeal

One of the most respected members of the House Committee on Education and Labor, Howell has worked hard for a fair labor law to replace Taft-Hartley and has taken the leadership in the fight for better schools.

He won national recognition for his bill to establish a federal fine arts program as a "living" war memorial.

Throughout the last session he battled in the face of Republican indifference for action to alleviate the mounting unemployment in New Jersey and other industrial states.

Besides a public works bill, he sponsored federal legislation to boost unemployment compensation benefits and extend their duration.

FRIEND OF PRESIDENTS—Ability brings Rep. Howell recognition beyond average congressman. Here, he is joined by ex-Pres. Truman. Pres. Eisenhower has called Howell "a distinguished American."

RANKING DEMOCRAT—Prsidential nominee Adlai E. Stevenson (left), Howell and Jose Benitez, Democratic chairman of Puerto Rico, discuss the party's plans for a prosperous, full production economy.

Spitballs

Like all New Jersey Democrats, Rep. Howell supported the Eisenhower legislative program oftener than many Republicans, but he doesn't support the President's claim of a "batting average" on legislation twice as good as Roger Hornsby's.

"Ike was willing to settle for a bunt or sacrifice when a home run was needed," Howell said.

"Hornsby didn't have to spend his time like the President dodging curves thrown by members of his own team."

Precedent

Back in the 1952 campaign, the New Jersey CIO-PAC gained in-plant registration facilities for workers in several industrial centers — an idea which PAC units are pushing in other key states.

This year the Jersey PAC workers have gained extra registration facilities in eight major counties.

STRAIGHT-SHOOTER—He's witnessed atomic bomb explosions, but Howell's interest in adequate defense also leads him to check firsthand the problems of "G. I. Joes," still the backbone of U. S. security.

HUMANITARIAN—Active interest in democracy and the welfare of humanity everywhere brings Howell often to the same speaker's platform with Eleanor Roosevelt, "the first lady of the world."

YOU CAN WIN ELECTIONS—That's the title of 20-minute color movie used in course on practical precinct politics for union members offered by Labor Education Div. of Roosevelt College, Chicago. Featured in bipartisan film are stage and screen actor Melvyn Douglas, left, and Illinois PAC Dir. John Alesia, in doorway at right, along with other union leaders. College sells prints for $150 in color, $75 in black and white.

Fighting Films For PAC Are Offered

'The New Look' Is For Women Voters

A pamphlet, The New Look, aimed principally at interesting the women of CIO in politics, has just been published by the CIO Political Action Committee.

It is addressed not only to feminine CIO members and the wives of male members but to the general public—and especially husbands lucky enough to have CIO members as wives. It shows how politics is a family affair, tells how legislation and government administration affect homes and communities, and sounds the warning, "Never underestimate the power of a woman's vote."

The pamphlet sells for $3 per 100 copies, and may be obtained from the CIO Political Action Committee, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

FIGHTING films for political action are available from CIO's Film Division and are useful aids in training political action committees, livening up membership meetings and convincing community groups of the need for action on the political front.

Films should be ordered at least three weeks in advance, with alternate titles for specific dates. Orders should be sent to the CIO Film Division, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Here are some of the available titles, their running times and rental fees:

You Can Do It—An appeal to individuals to make an effort to vote and participate in community affairs, by the CIO Auto Workers, to stimulate interest in elections. Useful for education work with union, community and high school groups. (11 minutes, rental $2.)

Clinton, A Political Story—One of CIO's television films produced for the 1952 campaign. It shows how one citizen is stirred to political action when her rent is raised arbitrarily. The film gives a good insight into political action techniques. (13 minutes, rental $2.)

Common Ground—Another TV CIO film made for the 1952 campaign. It deals with the interrelationship of prosperity between the farmer and the factory worker. To be used with the CIO pamphlet "Farmers and Workers Win Together." (12 minutes, rental $2.)

They Said Labor Didn't Count—A short labor film that drives home the message that labor must be counted on election day. (8 minutes, rental $1.50.)

Political Parties—Shows organization of a campaign on precinct level and underlines the importance of understanding the issues and the role of parties. (13 minutes, rental $3.)

How We Elect Our Representatives—The story of a new voter registering and participating mildly in a primary and general election. (13 minutes, rental $3.)

Powers of Congress—A voter has a bad dream about life free from congressional control. When he awakens he is anxious to take part in elections. (13 minutes, rental $3.)

'Discord And Drifting' Of GOP Detailed By Gore

INSTEAD of the promised "bold, dynamic program," the GOP record has proved to be "a pattern of discord and confusion, just drifting both at home and abroad."

That's what Sen. Gore (D. Tenn.) said last week in a nationally broadcast Democratic reply to Pres. Eisenhower's recent claim of monumental accomplishments under the GOP 83rd Congress.

Gore gibed at Eisenhower's claim that he had run up an .830 batting average in the recently-adjourned Congress, saying the President had claimed "foul balls" as "clean hits" and had failed to list all the times at bat.

The Tennessee Senator said the Administration "went to bat" 214 times, rather than the mere 64 claimed by the Senate, and figured the GOP batting average on legislation at .252—a long way from .830.

Gore also said the Republicans have quit talking about Congress and are now "seem to be proud to boast that they have maintained the status quo."

Actually, Gore warned, "standing still economically is just as dangerous to our country as slipping backward."

Book Review—

AN OBJECTIVE and hence damning assessment of Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.), his methods and his accomplishments, if any, became available last week with the publication of McCarthy and The Communists, by James Rorty and Moshe Decter.

The two journalists, long accustomed to viewing things objectively instead of with their emotions, undertook the task of analyzing McCarthy's campaign against communism at the behest of the American Committee for Cultural Freedom.

Their investigation and analysis are concerned solely with the period since the junior Senator from Wisconsin became chairman of the Senate Investigating Subcommittee when his party took control of Congress in 1952.

Their findings might be boiled down to one sentence:

Examination Of McCarthy In Action

"McCarthy has been unable to substantiate his charges or advance any solid evidence for them."

Rorty and Decter set up the criteria for judging the effectiveness of an anti-Communist campaign, measure McCarthy's own drive against these criteria, analyze the impact of the McCarthy controversy on traditional American values, then seek to determine "where should we go from here in meeting the security problem posed by the Communist conspiracy."

The criteria are only three: identify the enemy clearly; pinpoint the enemy unmistakably; expose the enemy persistently and relentlessly. Asserting that McCarthy's "pattern and record" rest primarily on his subcommittee's probe of the State Dept.'s Intl. Information Agency, including the Voice of America, and the Army Signal Center at Fort Monmouth, N. J., Rorty and Decter relentlessly examine the pattern and the record in the light of their three standards.

Their conclusion is that set forth above.

Then they turn to McCarthy's methods. They show, citing book and verse, how both the Communists and the Wisconsinite use "Communist methods of political controversy," among which they list 10 as "easily discernible."

These are worth repeating: "The multiple untruth; the abuse of documents; insinuation and innuendo; the slander amalgam; intimidation; attributing significance to the irrelevant; the bluff and the diversionary gambit; the personal spy network; contempt for the law; the unfounded charge of treason."

They conclude that not only is McCarthy not a Communist, but that he isn't interested in running them down—only in the exploitation of any situation to his own advantage—and that the harm he has done to America and democracy is great. They also say he is not a totalitarian—partly because he has no program.

There is, of course, nothing new in the book. But the relevant facts necessary for an objective judgment of the man and his works are all there in 150 pages, plus appendices, and it is easy for the reader to reach his own conclusions—one of which must be that McCarthy is the greatest liar in the U. S.—G.N.L.

McCarthy and The Communists, by James Rorty and Moshe Decter; Beacon Press, Boston, Mass. $1.

'Your Vote Counts'—

Deadlines Set For Voter Registration

MORE THAN 100 million American civilians will be old enough to vote on Election Day, Nov. 2, the Census Bureau reports.

But just how many of them will be able to vote in the coming general elections depends on whether they are registered. In the last five off-year elections only 33.9% to 41.8% have balloted for congressional candidates.

Here is a list of final registration dates in each state where registration is required.

Sept. 8: California.

Sept. 17: Montana and city of Baltimore, Md.

Sept. 23: Ohio.

Sept. 24: New Jersey.

Sept. 27: Arizona, Nevada.

Oct. 1: Massachusetts, Washington.

Oct. 2: Florida, Louisiana, Maryland (except Baltimore City), Oregon, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia.

Oct. 4: Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, New Mexico.

Oct. 9: Connecticut.

Oct. 12: Kansas City, Topeka, and Wichita, Kan., Minnesota.

Oct. 13: Tennessee (for counties over 25,000 only).

Oct. 16: Delaware.

Oct. 18: Colorado, Wyoming.

Oct. 20: Wisconsin.

Oct. 22: Iowa, Kansas (except Kansas City, Topeka and Wichita), Nebraska, Oklahoma, Utah.

Oct. 23: Alabama, New Hampshire (cities, varies in towns), North Carolina, Tennessee (counties under 25,000).

Oct. 25: South Dakota.

Oct. 30: Idaho.

Special Dates Set For N. Y. Voters

In New York State, registration is complicated. Here is the schedule:

Sept. 20: Central registration at county court houses and Board of Election borough offices in New Yory City ends.

Sept. 30, Oct. 1, 4, 5, 8: Registration in voter's election district—3:30 to 10:30 p.m. in New York City and Westchester County, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. in all other cities and villages over 5000.

Oct. 2: Registration in voting district 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. in rural areas and cities and villages under 5000.

Oct. 9: Final registration in voting district—7 a.m. to 10 p.m. in New York City, Westchester County and cities and villages above 5000; 1 p.m. to 10 p.m. in rural areas and cities and villages under 5000.

Absentee ballots must be applied for at time of registration.

Shivers Wins On Ike's Coattails

Gov. Shivers, running on Pres. Eisenhower's coattails, won renomination for a third term in the Texas Democratic second primary last week.

Shivers got some 112,000 fewer votes than he did in 1952 when he bolted the Democrats to support Eisenhower. He got 53.2% of the vote last week—exactly the same percentage Eisenhower got in Texas for President in 1952.

His opponent, Ralph Yarborough, who supported Stevenson, racked up almost 200,000 more votes against Shivers than in the 1952 gubernatorial primary. Yarborough, running as a "loyal Democrat," made his gains despite intensive Republican campaigning for Shivers between primaries, including direct intervention by Pres. Eisenhower on two occasions.

GOP Campaign Fund Reaches 30% Mark

About 30% of the GOP's $3.8 million campaign fund goal has been raised, according to Chairman F. Peavey Heffelfinger of the Republican Finance Committee.

You And Your Money—

Commerce Dept. Income Report Skips Over Farm, Labor Pay Drops

THE AVERAGE income for each man, woman and child in the U. S. reached a record high of $1709 in 1953, according to a recent Commerce Dept. report.

The figure was an increase of 4% over 1952, but the over-all figures fail to tell the entire story, CIO economists were quick to point out.

Per capita personal income is a national average figure, calculated by dividing total income payments received by individuals by the total population.

What the Dept. of Commerce report doesn't show is that per capita income reached a peak in the middle of 1953 and has been falling ever since.

Per capita personal income is lower in August 1954 than it was in August 1953. For the first six months of 1954, total income of individuals was running a little less than 2% below the corresponding 1953 totals.

Farm States Lag Behind

Another fact hidden by the national average figure, but revealed by the state-by-state breakdown also released by the Commerce Dept., is that farm states failed to share in the increase for the country as a whole.

Per capita personal income in Iowa, Idaho, Kansas and Nebraska fell 3% between 1952 and 1953, while the figure in Arkansas and Wyoming remained unchanged. This was during the period of the 4% rise in the national average income figure.

A total of 37 states suffered declines in farm income.

A Big Contrast

The Commerce Dept. report that U. S. per capita income is at an all-time high of $1709 doesn't begin to tell the story of how people make out in individual states.

Highest state figure was $2304, in Delaware. Lowest was Mississippi, less than half the U. S. average with $834. The Southeastern states as a group averaged $1159, only 68% of the figure for the nation as a whole.

The other top states are: Connecticut, $2194; Nevada, $2175; New York, $2158 and the District of Columbia, $2109. Bringing up the rear are these other states: Arkansas, $939; Alabama, $1043; South Carolina, $1095, and North Carolina, $1097.

Other personal income figures released by the Dept. of Commerce reveal the decline in farm and labor incomes in the past year.

Total income for workers has fallen 2.5% in the past year, reflecting lay-offs and short work weeks. In the first half of '54, wages and salaries were $3.5 billion below the same period of '53.

Hours of work in manufacturing industry have fallen from 40.3 in July of 1953 to 39.4 in July of this year. That's a decline of 2.2% while average hourly wages have remained the same. The wage figure, which includes overtime and shift-premium payments, was at $1.80 in July of this year, the same as December 1953.

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

THE 30-YEAR MORTGAGES with lower down payments provided by the Administration's new housing regulations are being lauded by mortgage lenders and builders, but are a poor deal for home buyers.

There is one new provision, for open-end mortgages, that can be a help to home owners if wisely used.

The long mortgages themselves are a bad deal because first the Administration raised the interest rate on FHA mortgages, and now it has stretched out the period of repayment. The higher cost is thus made initially painless. But it is very expensive in the long run.

New Mortgage Plan Costly

In the case of a $10,000 mortgage, the monthly payment including principal, interest and FHA's premium, will be $54 a month (not including property taxes and fire insurance) on a 30-year basis. The same $10,000 mortgage on a 20-year basis would require payments of $67 a month.

ON THE SURFACE this looks attractive to a moderate-income home buyer. His usual tendency is not to study the value of the house or the interest rate and terms of the mortgage, but to ask, "How much do I have to put down and how much a month can I carry it for?" In fact, that's the way houses are often advertised nowadays.

But when you pay off that 30-year mortgage at the rate of $54 a month, you repay a total of $19,440 to clear off your original $10,000 debt. When you pay it off in 20 years, you repay at total of $16,080. On a 30-year mortgage you pay in interest charges alone as much as the house cost to build.

The other reason why the new regulations are harmful to the millions of families still waiting to buy homes is that they substitute easy payments for better value. For a $12,000 new house, the buyer now needs to put down only $1200. On a $6000 older house, a down payment of only $600 is required. Thus the builder and seller are better able to get their asking prices, and the hoped-for downturn in charges for houses is further delayed.

Admittedly, lower down payments are a help to a family that urgently needs a home and has little cash. You simply pay more, as when you buy furniture, cars and other goods with little or no down payment. You may be able to eat your cake and have it too, by insisting on the right of prepayment without penalty.

THE OPEN-END PROVISION that can now be included in FHA mortgages where state laws permit has been available in conventional mortgages for some time. You should try to get it in your mortgage when you buy a house, but avoid using unless really necessary.

The open-end provision means that the lender holding your mortgage will advance you money for repairs and improvements simply by increasing the amount of your mortgage balance. Because the interest rate is the same as on your regular mortgage (4.5 to 6% depending on where you live and whether GI or not), an open-end mortgage is the cheapest way to borrow home-improvement money.

Even though you must pay additional mortgage fees (frequently $25-$30 per $1000 borrowed, depending on where you live), the cost is substantially less than that of one of those notorious FHA home-improvement loans which carry a true interest rate of 10%.

One reason why FHA home-improvement loans are so expensive is that the government includes in the rate a surprisingly large charge for the FHA insurance premium insuring the lender against loss. On a regular FHA mortgage the home-owner pays a premium of 5% on the declining balance of the mortgage. But an FHA improvement loan includes a premium (which goes to FHA) of .75% of the original amount. Since you are paying back the loan each month, but have paid this fee on the original amount, the true rate is approximately double—about 1.5%.

The open-end mortgage has a danger too—on a long mortgage it eventually will pile up more interest cost for you in dollars than a short-term home-improvement loan even at the 10% rate. It's not only how high a rate you pay but how long you hold the money that determines your real cost in dollars. But if you also have the right of repayment, you are protected both ways.

(Copyright 1954, by Sidney Margolius)

CIO Backing Pledged For Chest, United Fund Drives

CIO SUPPORT for the forthcoming 1954 fund drives of the nation's 1800 Community Chests and United Funds has been reaffirmed by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

"Official CIO endorsement of the united way in giving and planning for community services," Reuther said, "is not an expression of a new sentiment.

"It is a logical development of the position that we in CIO took more than 10 years ago, when we established the National CIO Community Services Committee with a program dedicated to meeting the health and welfare needs of our members, their families and their communities.

"As in past years, members of the CIO will be urged to give full cooperation in helping their local Community Chests, United Funds or other united community campaigns to help meet human needs."

The chests and funds will seek $290 million during September, October and November to support 19,500 health, welfare and related agencies.

Reuther also offered congratulations to chests and funds for the "marked progress that has been made in the inclusion of representatives of labor on their staffs and boards."

"It is significant that labor's financial support to health and welfare programs has likewise increased," he added.

"It is the desire and duty of CIO members to participate as citizens and as trade unionists in the volunteer work of these community services which are so essential to the well-being of the American people."

Brewers' Gifts To Crippled Kids Now Total $22,000

GRANTS totaling $22,000 have been made by the CIO Brewery Workers to help crippled children, the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults reported last week.

The latest gift was $1634, recently presented by Joseph E. Brady, the union's coordinator of state councils, to Lawrence J. Linck, executive director of the society. Linck pointed out that thousands of crippled youngsters have been helped through the "generous contributions" of the union's members, many of whom also serve as board members of local Easter Seal societies.

Funds contributed by the Brewery Workers, among other things, have financed a traveling exhibit of miniature equipment intended to help physicians and therapists in training young cripples to use their muscles.

HELPING HANDS—These 23 CIO Steelworkers of Local 2604 in Buffalo did a complete paint job in three hours on house of Mrs. Helen Caputo, widow of a member of the local who "never turned down anyone when they asked for help."

Legion Raps 'Doctors' Lobby'

THE "ANTI-VETERAN crusade" of the American Medical Association was condemned in emphatic terms by the American Legion convention, held in Washington last week.

The Legion struck out at efforts of the "doctors' lobby" to curtail medical care offered by Veterans Administration hospitals.

It charged the AMA's drive indicates "that the medical profession has forsaken its love for humanity and its care for human suffering, to substitute therefore a devotion to dollars."

The Legion declared that "certain cash conscious" AMA leaders are making "a continued unwarranted attack upon veterans as a class."

Old Age Benefit Bill Is Signed

Pres. Eisenhower last week signed the revised Social Security bill which increases retirement benefits and extends coverage to some 10 million persons. Monthly benefits will be increased by from $5 to $23.50.

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

TRAVELING TO KENTUCKY, I had the opportunity to talk to many people, business people as well as union people, who tell me that regardless of the rosy picture painted by the present Administration in Washington, and regardless of the complacent viewpoint of many newspapers and magazines, a downright critical situation exists in the Blue Grass State.

Industry is down. Miners are suffering. Farm income has dropped. Thousands have no knowledge of where their next meal is coming from—and there are no jobs in sight for these people.

The Administration claims it is anti-Communist. So are all sound-thinking people across this country of ours. But unless we get together and sit down to work out our problems, put people to work, give them the chance to earn food and shelter, we are making the conditions in our own land on which communism thrives.

For many long months, CIO has called upon the President to bring together representatives of industry, government and business so that we could tackle our problems. Instead of doing this, the President continues to appear on the radio and in his press conferences as a man unwilling to admit that any problems really exist.

We have seen a great deal of the anti side of this Administration. We have seen little that is positive and helpful. It might be wise for the President and his Administration to consider the words of Bishop Sheil, when he addressed the education conference of the CIO Auto Workers last Spring. This eminent churchman said that it wasn't enough to be anti-Communist. You had to be pro-democracy. The people have been patiently waiting for signs of "pro-democracy" in the Adminstration. Their patience is wearing thin.

SOME GOOD, HEART-WARMING NEWS from Kentucky is the return to public service of Alben Barkley. All of our friends are hopeful he will be sent back to the U. S. Senate to continue his career of distinguished service to his people, and Alben Barkley's people are all the people of the United States as well as his home folks in Kentucky.

Our history books have not yet given sufficient praise to Alben Barkley. As leader of the Senate, in the great years of the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations before his term as Vice President, he managed through his patience, tact, and wisdom to guide more progressive legislation through the Congress than any other man in the history of our legislative body. With Sam Rayburn and John McCormack in the House, Alben Barkley was a member of the greatest team of legislative action that has ever been known in the service of the nation. His campaign is very close to our hearts.

From J. J. Moran, vice president of the Communications Workers, we learn of a fine victory at Indiana Bell Telephone Co. Moran notes that CIO Staffman Nerle Stanton was very helpful in carrying out this successful campaign.

LEE TUCKER, CIO representative in Arkansas, advises that the CIO Clothing Workers won a victory at the Tuf-Nut Garment Manufacturing Co., Little Rock, Ark. Jim Youngdahl, director of organization for ACWA-CIO, had charge of the campaign.

The CIO Electrical Workers continue to win representation rights in plants formerly held by the Communist-dominated UE. IUE scored a fine win at the Anaconda Wire & Cable Co., Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., according to CIO Reg. Dir. Michael Mann.

The victory in New York was in addition to wins over UE at the General Electric plant at Cincinnati, O., and at the Barker-Williams Co., Bristol, Pa., as reported by IUE Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett. In the last named plant, the election is not official until a matter of challenged ballots is settled, but staffmen advise the situation looks very good—as the challenged workers were layoff victims in this once-UE shop.

In a straight union-no union election at Belmet Products, Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., IUE was also victorious by a unanimous vote.

TWU Raps Big Airline Layoff Move

CIO TRANSPORT Workers are strongly protesting layoffs of 1300 members by American Airlines in the wake of a 25-day strike by AFL plane pilots.

Five other unions were invited by TWU-CIO to a joint protest meeting in New York City against what the union called "drastic and unwarranted" layoffs and an attempted speedup of remaining personnel.

TWU Intl. Vice Pres. James F. Horst, director of the Air Transport Div., charged that the layoffs were made "for the sole benefit of the stockholders." He said the union had made a thorough investigation throughout American Airlines' system and found that full flight schedules were being maintained "with the same number of passengers and load of air freight as before the strike."

INVITED to the session were representatives of the Pilots, Airline Dispatchers, Stewards and Stewardesses, all AFL affiliates, Flight Engineers Intl. Association and Airlines Communication Employes Association, independent groups.

TWU represents approximately 6000 American Airlines workers. It instructed remaining workers on the nation's largest air carrier to "do only a fair day's work and resist any form of speedup."

HORST DECLARED that "although our members have been instructed to do a careful and complete maintenance job on all planes, we know that with the greatly reduced personnel the company will have to put some flights into service without the usual proper maintenance."

"It is obvious," he added, "that American Airlines cannot slash maintenance personnel without endangering the safety of the riding public and dangerously speeding up its employes."

Clague Gets New Labor Post

Ewan Clague, former commissioner of labor statistics, has been named as a special assistant to Labor Sec. Mitchell. He will deal with "overall economic and statistical problems" in which the Labor Dept. is concerned.

75,000 Workers Gain In 3 New Bell Pacts

THE HALF-WAY mark in wage negotiations between the CIO Communications Workers and the Bell System was reached last week as three major contracts covering more than 75,000 workers were settled.

CWA now has settled a total of 15 contracts covering more than 150,000 Bell telephone workers.

The latest pacts followed along lines of previous agreements, with wage increases ranging from $1 to $2.50 a week.

THE NEW CONTRACTS covered 52,000 workers in all departments at Southwestern Bell (CWA's largest bargaining unit), 17,000 in all departments at Ohio, Bell, and 6500 Northern California plant workers employed by Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Some details of these settlements:

Ohio Bell: The average wage increase was 4c an hour, while the package, including pension, overtime and sick benefit gains, was 6.5c. Plant worker increases were from $1 to $2.50; traffic workers from $1 to $1.50. Job upgradings and town reclassifications will result in further increases for large groups of workers.

Southwestern: Along with wage hikes comparable to the Ohio settlement, CWA gained shorter hours and higher night differentials in Fort Worth, Houston and Dallas, as well as town reclassifications.

P. T. & T.: Along with the $1.-$2.50 general increase, a $3 hike was gained for building and garage mechanics, carpenters and painters.

Meantime, federal mediators entered bargaining sessions at Buffalo, where 1100 CWA telephone manufacturing workers have been on strike since June 17. Wage offers so far have been below settlements in other Western Electric units.

Aid Compact Approved By NABET

A MUTUAL assistance agreement has been signed by CIO Broadcast Engineers and the independent Radio and Television Employes of Canada, the two largest unions in the Canadian radio and television industry.

NABET represents Canadian Broadcasting Corp. technical employes and the independent group represents office and program workers.

NABET also negotiated the first network contract for office employes covering 120 employes at the Hollywood offices of the American Broadcasting Co.

Wage gains from $10 to $110 monthly were registered retroactive to Jan. 1. The agreement covers all employes except a few supervisors and executive secretaries, and runs till June 30, 1955.

GE Contract Ratified By IUE Board

APPROVAL of the "unsatisfactory" new contract with the General Electric Co. was voted last week by the CIO Electrical Workers GE Conference Board at a meeting in New York.

At the same time, the board served notice that it would adopt a no contract-no work policy, subject to ratification by the members, if satisfactory terms are not reached when the new agreement expires Sept. 15, 1955. The settlement yielded an average wage increase of 5c an hour.

The board denounced GE as "dominated by greed and arrogance," charged it with indulging in an "anti-labor crusade," and called for "a vigorous and continued campaign of organization, education and improving our financial strength, and the fighting out of issues day by day to prepare ourselves for whatever may be ahead."

IN PITTSBURGH, the union's Westinghouse Conference Board set a strike deadline of midnight, Sept. 10, for 55,000 employes of the Westinghouse Electric Corp. in 23 plants in 20 cities unless a contract is agreed upon by that time. Negotiations began last April. IUE-CIO Local 617, at Westinghouse's Sharon, Pa., plant, walked out Aug. 20 in a dispute over unsettled grievances the company refused to arbitrate.

Fire Dept. Bias Ends In Capital

RACIAL segregation in the Washington, D. C., fire department was ordered ended last week, but the move was immediately opposed by a local of the AFL Firefighters Union which represents almost 90% of the firemen.

Transfer of 18 men from overstaffed Negro fire companies to undermanned all-white companies was the first step towards integration. The fire department was the last group of District of Columbia employes to be integrated.

A spokesman for the AFL union said his group would be polled on "unalterable opposition" to mixing races in fire houses.

REGULAR CONFERENCE of CIO secretary-treasurers, held in Atlantic City, brought the money-men together for discussion of mutual problems. CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who presided, is shown at center of head table. At his left is Sec.-Treas. Frank Grasso, Paper Workers; right, Sec.-Treas. William J. Pachler, Utility Workers.

Labor Day Is Another Blue Monday At Elkin

By EUGENE A. KELLEY

IT WAS Labor Day 1954—but in Elkin, N. C., it was just another Monday, just another workday.

Schools were out, the stores and the town's one bank were closed for the holiday, so the hum of machinery from the Chatham Mfg. Co., well known blanket makers, echoed even louder.

It was further evidence, if more were necessary, that Elkin is controlled by the Chatham family. Their influence reaches everywhere, into the schools, the stores, the bank and even into the homes and churches of Chatham employes.

Type Of Despotism

The most that can be said for the Chatham influence is that it has been a sort of benevolent despotism; the least is that it is keeping the town and its environs from progress and enjoyment of the rights supposed to be guaranteed workers by law.

Elkin is a small town. It is only about four square miles in area, its population is around 3000. Located where three counties—Surry, Yadkin and Wilkes —meet, it is the trading center for about 20,000 people.

9-6

Partly because of the Chatham influence, it is more attractive than the average southern mill town. The mill, the only industry of great consequence in Elkin, parallels the muddy Yadkin River. Behind it are the lofty peaks of the Blue Ridge mountains.

Several months ago a spontaneous move towards unionism began among Chatham workers. Interest mounted so swiftly that the CIO Textile Workers assigned two organizers to assist Chatham employes in their efforts to win union representation.

The drive has acquired amazing momentum despite the Chatham influence and direct and indirect pressure against the TWUA-CIO campaign.

Efforts to hire meeting halls or even union office space were thwarted. Today TWUA is meeting in a former store over in Ronda, several miles from Elkin in adjoining Wilkes county.

Rep. Chatham The Boss

Ministers have denounced CIO from their pulpits, businessmen have echoed the Chatham anti-union line. The twice-a-week Elkin Tribune uses front page editorials hammering at the points made inside by TWUA paid advertising.

Head of the Chatham family is Thurmond Chatham (D.), who has represented North Carolina's Fifth District in Congress since 1948. The 58-year-old Chatham is chairman of the blanket mill's board but denies active participation in the firm, leaving that to his sons.

The Tribune, ardent apologist for the Chathams, says the employes "have been treated like part of the family." As in all families, there are family jokes. Chatham workers, all but the teetotalers, laugh as they recall the occasion some months ago when their congressman-boss appeared at the mill in the small hours of the morning in a quite informal state of dress, to check on activities.

Workers don't laugh, though, when they realize that their firm pays cotton mill wages in a woolen and worsted mill. Nor do they think it funny when they compare their pay scales with organized mills. New and heavier workloads, lack of job security and promotion that is dependent on some foreman's whim have not appealed to the workers' sense of humor.

Prefer The Cash

Chatham's encourages quaint practices — like the annual Christmas collection for foremen in which workers write their names opposite the amount of their contribution. One foreman, informed he was being "given" a washing machine, made it plain he preferred the cash.

Workers are forbidden even to discuss the union around the plant. Despite the vigilance of foremen, however, "union talk" goes on. There is almost no anti-union sentiment among the workers; most of it comes from the front office or the business interests of the town.

Tobacco Pays Off

Chatham workers are friendly folks. They drive to work from towns and villages as far as 20 miles away. Most of them own their own homes and do some farming on the side.

"If we've got good homes, it's tobacco got them for us, not the pay over to Chatham's," a worker said.

Tobacco is an important crop in that section of the State. Workers finish their mill shift, then spend long hours in the tobacco fields, planting, cultivating, priming and picking off the broad green leaves.

It's hot, dusty work but it pays off. Tobacco auction prices in the "Belt" are often more important to Elkin workers than the squabbles of world diplomats. They spell the difference between a neat home and a run-down shack.

The Chatham mills have made terrific profits year after year. But wages are lower than at most organized mills, averaging about $1.35 an hour —low even for North Carolina which is 44th among the states wage-wise and was in bottom place until recently.

The National Labor Relations Board is currently investigating a number of unfair labor practice charges brought against the blanket firm by TWUA. The charges were aired by seven employes on a recent visit to Washington where they told a press conference about conditions in Elkin and their plant.

"If there is a plant in the entire U. S. where a union is not needed," the Tribune defensively told its readers, that plant is Chatham's. Going to their work along Chatham Drive, across Chatham Bridge and past the Chatham Hospital, the workers evidently think otherwise.

A HERO IN KOREA, Gilbert F. Wagner hung up his uniform after two weeks Army Reserve duty, all set to become active again in the CIO Textile Workers drive to organize the employes of Chatham Mfg. Co., Elkin, N. C. Plant (right), seen from across Yadkin River, has "Chatham Blankets" sign that dominates night sky.

Tell Tale

Denied indoor meeting places, CIO Textile Workers organizers had to rent fields outside Elkin, the town controlled by the Chatham blanket mill family. Often the organizers and committee cleared brush to provide space.

"The company always knew on Mondays who was at the meetings down by the creek on Sundays," one worker ruefully admitted.

"Anyone who went was kept busy next day scratching chigger bites."

BRIGHT LEAF tobacco is important crop for Chatham workers, who need extra income to make ends meet. Willie Baldwin, Chatham cardroom fixer for 15 years, is helped by rest of his family preparing leaves for curing and sale.

FBI Probe Asked At Chatham Mill

THE FBI has been asked to investigate complaints that Chatham company pressure is denying civil rights to union members in Elkin, N. C.

The national council of Young Men's Christian Associations has been urged to repudiate the action of affiliated "Y's" in Elkin and Kanapolis, which have refused their facilities for union meetings but gladly furnished them for captive audience talks by management.

On complaint of the CIO Textile Workers, the American Civil Liberties Union asked the Justice Dept. to check violations of civil liberties in Elkin, which is dominated by the Chatham mill interests.

Freedom of speech and assembly violations are the basis for the TWUA-CIO complaints.

Union organizers found it impossible to get a site for their meetings in Elkin. Office space was refused them, a closed theater couldn't be hired. School halls couldn't be rented because union talks are considered to be "too controversial" in a section where keeping the company's favor means keeping your job.

PAY STUB for $47 gross after 30 years as muleskinner is shown by Wes Layell (center) to TWUA Rep. Cree Radcliff. Tom Davis looks on.

When TWUA called meetings in fields outside town, the meetings were kept under observation by law enforcement officials, some of whom are known to be on the Chatham payroll.

An effort was made to hold a meeting in the Elkin YMCA, an impressive building next to the mill. Chatham workers are required to contribute annually to the "Y" which was built by the Chatham family. The local "Y" secretary refused use of the facilities. No such denial was made when the company scheduled a meeting during working hours to make an anti-union speech.

TWUA Organizer Paul Swaity was refused membership in the Elkin "Y" although he did graduate work and won a scholarship at George Williams College in Chicago, where "Y" secretaries are trained.

The CIO Community Services Committee has protested vigorously to the national body of the YMCA about the anti-union attitude of the "Y" in places like Elkin. Their reply has been that they cannot control the policies of individual YMCA's.

Job Outlook Fails To Gain
—See Page 3

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., September 13, 1954 Vol. 17, No. 37

The Fight For Congress—

Humphrey Sparks Liberal Drive In Minnesota

(Part of The CIO News election campaign series.)

By MILTON PLUMB

SEN. HUMPHREY (D. Minn.) went to the Minnesota State Fair last week. So did a record-breaking crowd of one million people, practically all of whom knew their Senator was there before leaving.

The dynamic Senator was campaigning for re-election—and he did it, like everything else he does, with a vigorous enthusiasm unrivaled in contemporary politics.

The effectiveness of his campaigning, plus his outstanding leadership of the liberals in the Senate, has already paid off. Less than a year ago, Humphrey was still the No. One Senator the GOP hoped to beat this November. Today, there doesn't appear to be even the slightest chance of that happening.

That's the opinion not only of top Democratic leaders, Minnesota CIO and AFL officials, farmers, newspapermen and other local political experts, but even some Republican members of the Legislature interviewed on an off-the-record basis.

He Learned

Henry Snow is a Minnesota farmer. It was on his farm near Kasson that Candidate Eisenhower in 1952 made his now famous speech promising agriculture a "fair, full share" of the national income—"full parity."

Snow then had never been active in politics. Following the GOP's broken pledge to the farmer, Snow was a delegate this year to his party's convention and he's running for the Legislature.

But his party now is Democratic and he's running as a liberal.

Gains In Polls

It's also backed up by polls which in the past have been exceptionally accurate in Minnesota. A year ago. Humphrey's popularity was rated at about nine votes to five. The most recent shows he'd get over two-thirds of the ballots cast by Minnesota voters—if the election were taking place today.

But Humphrey won't be resting from now until the final balloting. He's no longer "scared," but he's running just as actively.

Today Humphrey realizes that the size of his victory can mean even more to the people of his state than a clear-cut repudiation of the reactionary out-of-state special interests seeking his defeat.

Democratic Gains

Humphrey's growing popularity, plus Minnesotans' resentment over recent GOP policies, now make it look as though he may sweep a new Democratic governor, several congressmen and a liberal Legislature into office with him. Humphrey's working to get the margin of his universally expected victory as high as possible for this reason.

"Things are definitely looking up for the Democratic Farmer-Labor Party in Minnesota," Ray Hemenway, new DFL state chairman, said. "Our organization is more united and active than ever before."

The best evidence of Humphrey's strength and of political trends in Minnesota, however, lies in the complete absence thus far of evidence of use of the $5 million slush fund which reactionary Texas oilmen and other backers of Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) were planning to spend to defeat him. Some of this out-of-state money is still expected to be used against Humphrey in the closing days of the campaign.

Legislative Race

Minnesota is one of two states which does not allow party labels to be used in electing members of the Legislature. This means that candidates run as liberals or conservatives, and organize and run the House and Senate on this basis.

In practice, the liberals are largely DFL and the conservatives GOP. The DFL Party—with strong support from the Minnesota CIO Council—is making an all-out effort to elect a liberal majority to the state House of Representatives.

This year liberal candidates will be running in all but eight districts. Two years ago there were 43 districts in which conservatives had no opposition.

CIO Reg. Dir. Robert Davidson, whose district includes Wisconsin as well as Minnesota, is predicting that the Democrats will pick up about three new seats in Congress in each state and hold all they now have.

"In Minnesota," he adds, "the liberals have an excellent chance of winning control of the lower house in the state Legislature.

Sales Tax Fought

This prediction is based on public reaction to recent exposure of graft in the present Republican state administration and the attempt by conservatives to push a sales tax through the last session of the Legislature. The latter was blocked by liberal leader Fred Cina.

Other factors which point to a strong liberal Democratic trend are the new GOP farm policy, which has resulted in a big jump in membership in the Minnesota Farmers Union over the last two years; unemployment, which is more than double that reported in the state a year ago, and Republican "trickle down" economics of "hard"-to-get money and tax relief only for the rich.

Labor also has been aroused over the "right-to-scab" bill dropped in the hopper last year and the failure of the conservative-Republican state administration to do anything about the rapid rise in exhaustions of unemployment compensation benefits.

Congress Lineup

Among incumbent congressmen, Reps. Weir, McCarthy, Marshall and Blatnik (all DFL) have been given CIO-PAC endorsement and seem certain of re-election, if the anticipated heavy vote turns out. In the 1st district Bob Olson (DFL) will at least give Rep. Andresen (R.) a tough battle.

PAC has also endorsed DFL Probate Judge Douglas Hunt over Rep. Andersen (R.) in the 7th and Anders Thompson (DFL), of the Minneapolis school board, against Rep. Judd (R.) in the 5th.

Liberal DFL hopes are also considerably brightened by the strong nominee which the party has named as its candidate for governor. He's Attorney Orville Freeman, wounded and decorated ex-Marine, who got 45% of the vote in 1952.

Since last January, a statewide PAC steering committee made up of representatives of all CIO international unions and councils has been conducting an intensive registration campaign. In Hennepin County, the names of all registered voters were checked against CIO membership lists and those not registered were personally urged to do so in plant drives.

The result: 22,000 more are registered voters in Minneapolis this year than ever before.

The kick-off of Minnesota PAC's active campaigning will be a "Bean Feed" fund-raising drive in Minneapolis Sept. 25, with Adlai Stevenson the featured speaker.

RAINY DAYS don't halt campaigning. At the Twin Cities Ford plant line forms in the rain behind UAW-CIO Local 879 Committeeman Ralph Smith to wish Sen. Humphrey (D.) success in his drive for reelection to Congress.

Humphrey Gains Among Women

CROSSING party lines, several organizations have been formed which find many Minnesota Republicans working side-by-side with Democrats to keep Sen. Humphrey in Washington.

These include Minnesota Women for Humphrey, with Mrs. J. K. Moen of Minneapolis as chairwoman; an all-Negro Committee of 1000 for Humphrey, originating at the Phyllis Wheatley Settlement House; and a Small Businessmen for Humphrey Committee.

As for the farmers, their feelings about Humphrey were expressed in typical fashion by Lother Wolter, of Norwood, who farms in the heart of a usually solid Republican area.

Wolter said he "sure" will vote DFL this year and that others in his district also are changing. The reason, he said, is that conditions for the farmers "aren't as good as they were" under the Democrats.

The Minneapolis Star and Tribune has been periodically polling farm sentiment about Humphrey. It's been going up steadily. The last poll shows Humphrey getting two-thirds of the farm vote. The over-all poll results:

	March	May	July
Humphrey	49 pct.	55 pct.	59 pct.
Bjornson....	34 pct.	34 pct.	30 pct.

CAMPAIGNING—Minnesota CIO Pres. Robert Hess (left) listens as Sen. Humphrey hears from Mr. and Mrs. Eric Tappe how GOP cut in dairy price supports hurt farmers in left photo. CIO Reg. Dir. Robert Davidson (second from left in center photo) and Orville Freeman, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, confer. Right: Sally Luther, former ANG member now in Legislature, mans Democratic booth at State Fair.

N

ONE CHANGE IN THE SOUTH — When schools opened last week, segregation rules were dropped at Fort Myer, Va., near Washington. Army took over the school after the county refused to end bias. With notable exception of Baltimore, most Southern cities have failed to comply with Supreme Court decision against segregation.

N. Y. Gubernatorial Race Wide Open As Dewey Bows Out of Contest

A digest of developments in the political campaigns follows:

NEW YORK: A hot fight for the governorship was shaping up last week in the wake of Gov. Dewey's declaration that he will not be a candidate for a fourth term—or for any other political office.

The Republican State Executive Committee voted to recommend the nomination of Sen. Ives to the forthcoming State convention; he agreed to accept if named. The Democratic race was wide open.

Many party leaders were swinging behind Averell Harriman, former Mutual Security Administrator, in preference to Rep. Roosevelt, who has won wide support from CIO unions. Mayor Wagner of New York City, whose candidacy was being pushed, definitely took himself out of the race.

NEW JERSEY: Four Democratic congressional candidates were endorsed by the State CIO Political Action Committee. They were:

Rep. Howell, who will face former Rep. Case (R.) for the Senate seat being vacated by Sen. Hendrickson (R.), and who had PAC endorsement regularly since he was first elected in 1948 from the 4th Dist.; Rep. Williams, 6th Dist.; Rep. Sieminski, 13th Dist., and Charles Joelson, 8th Dist.

SOUTH CAROLINA: The Democratic State Executive Committee nominated State Sen. Edgar A. Brown, a supporter of Adlai Stevenson in 1952 and a member of the Democratic National Committee, for a full U. S. Senate term to succeed the late Sen. Maybank, who died suddenly on Sept. 1.

The State committee's finding that it was too late for a special primary election resulted in a decision to run as a write-in candidate by former Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, presidential nominee of the States Rights party in the 1948 national election. Gov. Byrnes appointed Charles E. Daniel, an Eisenhower Democrat and a wealthy contractor, to fill the unexpired portion of Maybank's term.

ARIZONA: Former Sen. McFarland, Fair Deal Senate majority leader, scored an impressive victory in the Democratic primary fight for the gubernatorial nomination. He will oppose Gov. Pyle (R.), who is seeking his third two-year term.

GEORGIA: In a fight in which abolition of segregation in public schools was the main issue, Lt. Gov. Marvin Griffin defeated eight opponents in the Democratic primary to win the nomination for governor. He had the blessing of Gov. Talmadge, and flatly endorsed Talmadge's plan to abolish public schools, if necessary, to preserve segregation.

In Democratic congressional races, Rep. Wheeler appeared defeated in his bid for another term from the 4th Dist. by Mrs. Iris Blitch. Rep. Davis won again in the 5th Dist.

PENNSYLVANIA: The State CIO Council endorsed three Democratic candidates for statewide offices, Pres. Harry Boyer announced. They are State Sen. George M. Leader for Governor, Roy E. Forman for Lieutenant-Governor, and Genevieve Blatt for Secretary of Internal Affairs.

(The foreign policy issues in the election; Page 8.)

In Texas, They Just Do Things Better—

They said it was a heavy turnout of voters in the recent runoff election for governor in Texas but nobody knew just how heavy it was.

In Houston, the district attorney of Harris County is investigating a precinct in which 115% of the registered voters cast their ballots. —(PAI)

Cash Dividend Payments Hit $4.8 Billion

WHILE millions of workers were jobless, on part time or fearful of layoffs, the 5500 corporations which make public their cash dividend payments piled up enough profits to give their stockholders $4.8 billion in the first seven months of 1954, the Commerce Dept. reported last week.

The total was 5% higher than for the same period last year, the department said. The reporting companies represent about two-thirds of all cash dividends.

Payments by manufacturing industries as a whole were 3.5% above a year ago, while the yield in non-manufacturing fields increased by 7%.

Top CIO Leaders To Meet Oct. 4-6

The CIO Executive Committee will meet Monday, Oct. 4, and the CIO Executive Board on Oct. 5 and 6 in CIO national headquarters in Washington.

Jobless Figures Still Sidle Along

THE ECONOMY floundered still deeper into stagnation in August, the latest figures on employment and unemployment announced by the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the Census Bureau showed last week.

There were minor seasonal improvements—smaller than normal—within a narrow range, the fourth successive month of inertia. The Census Bureau, reflecting the Eisenhower Administration's pollyanna attitiude, called the picture "stable."

But unemployment, despite a decline of 101,000 to 3,245,000 was still in the neighborhood of 5% of the work force and 2.5 times as much as in August 1953.

And employment showed a net gain of only 128,000. Even the government admitted the changes are not significant.

THE BRIGHTEST SPOT in the report, for what little it is worth, was a pickup of 240,000 in factory jobs to a total of 15.9 million. The best gains were in the non-durable goods industries, such as textiles and apparel.

The best showing in the durable goods field was chalked up by electrical machinery, where the joint announcement said the increase in jobs was "especially sharp." But the hard-hit automobile, home appliance and similar industries showed a continuing decline.

Agricultural employment fell 600,000—about an average drop for this time of year—to 6.9 million.

The Census Bureau also made public the results of a survey it undertook in May which showed that 2.4 million workers were in part-time jobs during that month because of the recession. The number was twice what it was before the recession set in during mid-1953, the bureau said.

Meantime, rising unemployment was hitting two midwestern areas particularly hard.

IN MILWAUKEE, the CIO Brewery Workers reported a wave of layoffs several weeks in advance of the usual seasonal decline.

With 460 men dropped on top of 1000 laid off last November and never recalled, the prospects are for a record low of 3000 jobs this winter, according to Corresponding-Recording Sec. John Schmitt of BW-CIO Local 9.

In Missouri, the unemployment situation has reached such proportions that Gov. Donnelly (D.) appealed to Pres. Eisenhower to channel aid into the State and the metropolitan areas of St. Louis and Kansas City.

DONNELLY acted after Mayor Raymond R. Tucker of St. Louis and Mayor William E. Kemp of Kansas City reported sharp increases in exhausted unemployment compensation benefits, and threatened exhaustion of public and private relief funds.

"The gaunt spectre of unemployment will not disappear because it is ignored," Donnelly wrote. "Let us not bury our heads in the sand. This, Mr. President, is not a political issue but a matter of bread and butter to thousands upon thousands of Americans whose lot is harsh today, and whose need will be tremendously aggravated as winter sets in."

Rep. Kelley Warns Of New T-H Drive

Growing unemployment is setting the stage for a situation in which unions for the first time may feel the full destructive power of the Taft-Hartley Act, Rep. Kelley (D., Pa.) warned a Labor Day audience at Lewistown, Pa.

"While the act has hurt many unions in many ways, its full force and effect have not yet been felt," he said.

"Now we are reaching this critical stage. Unemployment is a major national crisis. If this condition continues, you will see more and more anti-labor employers trying to use Taft-Hartley to destroy unions. They need vast unemployment to succeed. We are now in the midst of vast unemployment."

URW Signs New Pact At Firestone

THE LAST of the Big Four rubber firms fell in line last week when the CIO Rubber Workers reached a new two-year agreement with the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., ending a 24-day strike of 25,000 members at eight plants.

With the full contract open, the union and the company settled 89 issues in dispute.

The company agreed to the industry pattern of 6.5c an hour in general wage increases, with the possibility that negotiations on wage inequities at the plant level may add another 1c to 2c. Other improved contract clauses include seniority, holidays, vacations, grievances and abritrations.

Other settlements negotiated by the Rubber Workers include those at the Armstrong Cork Co., Lancaster, Pa., with a package of 7c an hour; General Tire & Rubber Co., Akron, O., and Waco, Tex., wage increase of 6.5c, and Mohawk Rubber Co., Akron, 6c.

'A Sidewise Drift' Seems Ahead

THE "GLOOM and Doom Club" recruited a new and eminently respectable member the other day when the Committee on Economic Trends and Policies of the U. S. Savings & Loan League bolted the Administration-led prosperity bandwagon.

Like the rest of the club members, it doesn't think the country's economy is going to pot by the end of the year. Likewise, it has come to the conclusion that "the adjustment has not yet run its course."

"We therefore predict," it said, "a sidewise to moderately downward drift in the general level of business activity during the reminder of the year."

The oracle, whose past prophecies have been remarkably accurate, spoke shortly before the Wall Street Journal printed an article detailing how more and more Americans—many of them with no other source of income—are dipping into their savings accounts, cashing their savings bonds or closing out their insurance policies.

In the first six months of 1954, the article relates, withdrawals from savings accounts were 4% higher than in 1953, with one New York bank reporting 5000 closed accounts by the end of the summer—twice as many as in all of 1953. In June, the Treasury redeemed $579 million in savings bonds, 10% more than the year before and 26% more than in May.

Life insurance companies in the first six months gave $418.7 millions to customers who cashed in their policies, a 22% increase in a year. In addition, they loaned policyholders $355 million, or 27% more than in the previous year.

The 'Flat Wallet' Era

GOP strategists have dusted off Herbert Hoover's coattails so their candidates can ride them along with Eisenhower's. A recent Milwaukee Journal editorial on Hoover's 80th birthday speech follows in part:

In his presidency, Herbert Hoover stood with banks falling all about him . . . predicting the end of poverty and an upsurge of employment "in 60 days." He proved then he was no prophet.

Now a quarter of century later, Hoover proves that he also lacks the ability to look back and understand what he has seen. In his home state of Iowa, he attempted to explain the years since 1932.

It was the speech of a man who ignores the forces that erupted after the suffering and destruction of World War I, blazed up again in World War II, and are simmering today even in the jungles of Asia and Africa.

The basic trouble in Herbert Hoover's world is that he still thinks as he did in the 20's, that the U. S. can live in happy isolation.

As he sees it, all that has happened is the work of evil men, particularly Democrats who turned him out of office. This is no new attitude.

In 1931, in Indianapolis, on one of those rare days when he was admitting that perhaps the economy wasn't exactly healthy, Hoover said that the trouble was the result of World War I which "had come on during a Democratic Administration."

In Iowa, where Hoover spoke, corn was down to 30c a bushel when Hoover was pooh-poohing depression. Wheat was under 50c. Thousands of farms were being foreclosed.

If more than a handful of people lined up, passers-by asked whether it was a bank failure or a bread line. Here was the soup kitchen, "flat wallet" era. The apple, sold on corners by jobless men, was its symbol.

A 1931 Chicago survey showed that working girls were earning under 25c an hour, one-fourth of them under 10c. Servants worked for board and room and $10 a month. And these were the lucky ones with jobs.

Factory chimneys stood smokeless. Stock prices fell. General Motors dropped from 72¾ to 7⅝, Radio Corp. from 101 to 2½, U. S. Steel from 261¾ to 21¼ while Hoover was in the White House. Bankruptcies were everywhere. Wages were down 60%, production below 50%.

Hoover didn't cause all that. But he thought for a long time that if he ignored it, as he would have us turn our backs on the world today, all our troubles would go away.

He was talking then, in the 1932 campaign, about the same greatest issue—not food and jobs but "individualism vs. regimentation." Hoover still doesn't realize, as he didn't realize in 1932, that the common man will no longer lie down and roll over when the uncommon man snaps his finger.

Democratic presidents didn't create this present restless world any more than Hoover created the depression. But these men have recognized the world, as they have had to, and with the help of forward, not backward looking Republicans, have been trying to live in it, to help solve its problems, to adjust this country to things as they are.

They know that stalwart individualism, the uncommon man, trust in our heritage are fine—but not enough. Hoover says they are enough. And he adds that "if anyone rises to say that all this is reactionary, you may class him as either fuzzy-minded or an ignorant enemy of free men."

Here is intolerance indeed, political bigotry personified, belief in hiding your head in the sands. Here is what branded Hoover as one of the most unsuccessful of our Presidents. The world has passed him by.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS

Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII September 13, 1954 No. 37

First Lesson Of The Fall Term

In Other Words—

Strike In A Soviet Slave Labor Camp

For seven years Brigitte Gerland was a prisoner at the huge Russian slave labor camp at Vorkuta, some 2000 miles northeast of Moscow and above the Arctic Circle. This account of a strike among the miners there, just before she left in the summer of 1953, was included in testimony on forced labor presented to the UN Economic & Social Commission by the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

By BRIGITTE GERLAND

WHEN BERIA fell from power in Moscow, the time seemed right to go into action. During the night of July 19 orders were passed from the strike committee that had been set up to the workers that nobody was to work the next day.

I myself was in the women's section, and those who did not work down in the pits did not take part in the strike. Because of this, I cannot say with certainty if, on that very first day, the strike was observed by all the prisoners. But it is undeniable that from that day onwards everything was at a standstill.

No more coal trains set out on their daily journey to Leningrad. A fortnight later, when I was repatriated, the railway tracks were still idle.

Those in charge of the camp must have been taken unawares by this unparalleled event: suddenly they could not deliver their quota of prisoner manpower to the mines in return for the contract price of 60 rubles a working day per man and no food provided by the mine.

Velvet Gloves At First

They must have been ordered to use velvet gloves at first. Higher officials realized what possible repercussions might result from a revolt of this kind in so sensitive a nerve center as an important mining district. Large concerns in Leningrad came to a standstill when no more coal arrived from Vorkuta.

A few days later a special delegation from Moscow arrived. It took a definite position on certain demands presented by the prisoners and especially on their demand to be released soon, with the understanding that they would agree to continue to work in the mines for a certain time after their release.

The delegation refused this request, as well as one asking for a revision of the whole system of running the camp. The prisoners realized then that there was no hope of getting back their freedom. They were prepared to work at Vorkuta, but they wished to live there in normal circumstances, leading a family life and not confined by barbed wire entanglements and guarded like galley slaves.

The strikers did not yield. They adamantly refused to work. A thorough-going revolt broke out (I learned later) in one of the camps, where the prisoners got rid of those in charge and replaced them by their own officials. They suggested to the head of the police (MWD) that he withdraw his troops from the camp to avoid incidents. They substituted their own police.

The strike did not release any of the prisoners at Vorkuta. Despite this, the events constitute one of the most powerful demonstrations since the Soviet came to power in the country. It was all the more significant because it was known about in Leningrad at once (for the consignments of coal were expected in vain) and because in Leningrad the workers showed the greatest sympathy with the strikers.

MAP shows location of Soviet slave labor camp at Vorkuta in the Arctic, 2000 miles northeast of Moscow.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

MOST OF THE DEMOCRATIC professionals around town think that Atty.-Gen. Brownell has missed the boat in his rumored grand jury indictments of former Truman Administration officials.

The Democrats take the viewpoint that last-minute political indictments are likely to backfire, and that time has come close to running out on Brownell.

Still, it may be useful to record that a very careful reporter, Charles Bartlett of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times, wrote as recently as Aug. 2 that the GOP high command was preparing "drastic steps" to win the congressional election in November, "including a few that are not in the highest tradition of partisian politics."

The specific "persistent rumors" that Bartlett reported were that grand jury indictments already had been obtained against former Sec. of the Treasury John Snyder, former Undersec. Edward Foley and the former legal chief of the Internal Revenue Bureau, Charles Oliphant.

Bartlett, a careful reporter with news sources in this capital that are not to be discounted, also suggested that the purported "indictments" would remain sealed until September, and that this "timing" would make it impossible for the charges to go on trial before the Nov. 2 election.

The Political Purpose

He wrote that the Justice Dept. insisted it was doing everything possible to speed up "prosecution" of Democratic predecessors, but that "other Administration officials have been more candid" in admitting that the real objective was to hit the Democrats when it might hurt worst politically.

All of this, of course, is in the lingo of newsmen "unprivileged." The repetition of it here is unprivileged. That is, there is at this writing no public record of the indictment of Snyder, Foley or Oliphant.

The point is that repeating these rumors is not malicious or designed to harm the gentlemen. It is intended merely to call attention to some Washington gossip which, whether true or untrue, has now been kicking around for a couple of months—and to build a platform on which to peg a few truths about Brownell.

It may be utterly incorrect that Brownell has ever dreamed about some political indictments. But a lot of people in the Justice Dept. have.

This reporter, in the course of a discussion with a Brownell functionary about the abominable misuse of the Harry Dexter White "case," was told that that there were a "lot of these things" kicking around and that "they had to be brought out."

FDR Didn't Try The Old Guard

It is not recalled that when Roosevelt came to power in 1933 he wasted energy on political indictments of the Hoover Administration's subordinates—not even Andy Mellon and his tax kickbacks to corporations including his own. Roosevelt was too busy with constructive measures, and besides it has not been the habit in partisan American life for a victorious party to try to put its beaten adversaries in prison.

A new approach may be initiated by the Republicans, who fed on bitterness in 20 years out of power and gradually persuaded themselves that they were the only honest and patriotic people left.

Democratic professionals, to repeat, are now inclined to take the attitude that the Eisenhower Administration may belatedly have abandoned any schemes to try to win the next election by indicting—but not trying—some of their Democratic predecessors before Nov. 2.

They are further inclined to argue that if Brownell is "misguided" enough to attempt some political indictments, the people's sympathies will violently shift to the victims, not the prosecutors.

One would like to think that Pres. Eisenhower may have played a decisive part in the apparent shift in GOP campaign tactics. The President has undoubtedly knocked down Brownell in private—although never in public—on previous occasions. (He knocked Brownell, specifically, on the question of whether he personally believed that Truman would have knowingly and maliciously "promoted" a Communist spy.)

The trouble here is that Eisenhower knocks down Brownell only after he has let the Attorney General get in some partisan licks.

★ A fortunate cross-section of American women is having the chance, before Sept. 22 in Los Angeles, to meet the bigwigs of the National Federation of Republican Women. The GOP ladies left Washington last week for an 11-day cross-country tour, "stopping all along the way," traveling democratically in an air conditioned chartered Greyhound bus.

Tax Dodge

Review of the tax exempt status of Facts Forum, radio-TV program, has been demanded by Rep. Hays (D. O.), ranking Democrat on a special House Committee that investigated tax-free foundations.

Facts Forum is largely financed by H. L. Hunt, reactionary Texas oil millionaire, and has been charged with presenting "both sides of one side" of issues. It promotes the views of Hunt and Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) and Hays says it fosters "the technique of smear."

Detroit CIO-AFL Rally Hears Reuther, Williams Blister GOP

By TED OGAR
Editor, Michigan CIO News

CIO AND AFL closed ranks in Detroit's Labor Day celebration to hit hard at unemployment and to pledge a vigorous, unified political action campaign.

More than 75,000 members of both bodies marched side by side down the Motor City's main street carrying placards demanding action on jobs and calling for the election of Democratic candidates in November.

Spearheading the CIO contingent was Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO and of the Auto Workers, who later told a joint rally that "the whole question of freedom hinges on the solution of the unemployment problem."

Speaking in historic Cadillac Square, Reuther told the sun-scorched crowd that "we've got to find a way for full employment in peace time." The Republican Administration won't, he added.

"THE REPUBLICAN Party is incapable of leadership in this crisis," he said, "because it has never learned to think in terms of human values and can operate only in beat with the stock ticker.

"It gave tax relief to those who didn't need it and denied it to those who did. I challenge Sen. Ferguson (R. Mich.) to deny that the General Motors Corp. got more out of the tax bill than all the 450,000 GM workers put together."

He said that people are without jobs not because we don't know how to put them to work, "but because they don't have enough purchasing power."

"Next spring," Reuther added, "we're going to sit down at the bargaining table in Detroit and we're going to have a guaranteed annual wage before we're through."

Pres. Frank X. Martel of the AFL Detroit and Wayne County Federation of Labor, pledged "a greater degree of political unity in this campaign than there ever has been before."

THE ROASTING of Republicans was continued by Gov. G. Mennen Williams (D.), seeking an unprecedented fourth term, who declared that "shortsighted GOP policy has brought about a lopsided distribution of wealth." The solution, he said, lies not at the bargaining table but rather at the ballot box.

"You cannot strike against a government policy which reduces the purchasing power of your customers—the farmers," Williams pointed out.

"You cannot picket against continued high taxes on automobiles. You cannot send your shop committees to Washington to bargain with a Congress which cuts taxes of those who need it least, and denies relief to the poor.

"You must fight this fight not as union members, but as citizens when you go to the polls in November."

This appeal was echoed by Patrick V. McNamara, Democratic candidate opposing Ferguson in the latter's election fight.

Fraternal

When Wayne County CIO Council Pres. Mike Novak introduced Detroit's Labor Day queens to the joint rally, Wayne county AFL Pres. Frank X. Martel rushed over to buss Miss CIO.

Governor G. Mennen Williams, standing nearby, leaned over and shouted: "Hey, Frank, what about the no-raiding pact?"

Burke Urges More Concern For Labor

LABOR'S achievements have earned it the right to better government representation of its interests, Sen. Burke (D.) told the Portsmouth (O.) CIO Council's 18th annual Labor Day celebration.

"Labor's progress," he said, "is the reason why the American standard of living has risen so steadily over the years."

Burke, who fills the Senate seat made vacant by the death of the late Sen. Taft (R.), is a candidate to succeed himself.

MOST OF THE progress that organized labor has achieved in the last generation, he pointed out, came under Democratic national administrations. The Democratic party, he added, still represents the best interests of the worker.

Beirne Hits GOP For Give-Aways

THE 'BROOMS' the Republicans took to Washington to clean up the "mess associated with the giving of refrigerators and deep freezes" were poorly made, Pres. Joseph A. Beirne of the CIO Communications Workers told the annual Labor Day picnic of the Los Angeles CIO Council.

"Instead of refrigerators and deep freezes," he told 15,000 men, women and children, "they are now giving away our timber, our natural resources, our atomic power, our oil . . . "

In discussing the significance of Labor Day to the organized labor movement, Beirne said that behind the primary job of negotiating contracts "lies the need to realize and understand the responsibilties we have."

"WE MUST CONTINUE to carry on those things that were given us by our predecessors, keeping them strong because we understand our heritage," he declared. "We are proud to be Americans.

"The CIO will do its part in keeping America strong and awake."

The theme of the picnic, "Full Employment Through Political Action," brought numerous political leaders to the scene. Joining Beirne at the top of the speakers' list was Rep. Edmondson (D. Okla.), who also attacked the Eisenhower Administration.

"The 'great crusade' of 1952 has become the 'great retreat' of 1954," he declared, "and the 'great crusade' has been the great disappointment of American labor."

He cited the GOP treatment of the National Labor Relations Board as an example of the Administration's anti-labor bias.

"They are packing the NLRB with men opposed throughout their history to organized labor," Edmondson said. "These men reflect an entirely different and hostile attitude toward labor."

Endorsed candidates introduced by Sec.-Treas. Albert T. Lunceford of the council included Rep. Doyle, candidate for reelection; James Roosevelt, also a congressional candidate, and Edward Roybal, campaigning for lieutenant governor.

Prior to the picnic the Los Angeles Catholic Labor Institute sponsored a Labor Day breakfast at which Beirne was the principal speaker. CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin L. DeShetler was chairman.

GOOD labor-management relations of CIO Steelworkers Local 2172 and U. S. Steel Products Div. of U. S. Steel Corp. in Los Angeles won presentation of Catholic Labor Institute's Father Thomas Coogan Award from Cardinal McIntyre. Here CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin L. DeShetler (right) looks over citation with Local Pres. George E. Ryan (left), and the firm's Vice Pres. Allen E. Klieves.

Tomorrow's Factories Are Here Today With A

'Push-Button' Production Spreading Through Industry

(First article in a series.)

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

A NEW WORD is in our midst—new at least to most of us, though it has been used for some time by industrial engineers, scientists and management, and occasionally by labor spokesmen.

The word is automation, and it deals with a subject of great concern to the trade union movement. For it may mean some amazing changes in matters that affect all of us who work for a living, particularly in big industry and big offices.

Although the word itself is of comparative recent vintage in its current use, hundreds of thousands of CIO members and workers in industry in general have come up against what it stands for—on their own jobs.

As protection of the welfare of the nation's workers is a basic function of the trade union movement, it is most important for labor to know what is going on in industry.

If we are in the midst of a "second industrial revolution," sweeping us toward ever greater automatic control in production, with robot machines taking over more and more jobs formerly done by human beings, it may mean some changes or shifts in emphasis on union problems and policies.

Better Jobs

The swing to automatic factory operation is creating new and more highly paid jobs in the production of new machines while at the same time it is doing away with less skilled operating jobs, according to Vice Pres. Ray H. Sullivan, of the Ford Motor Co.

"The hand trucker of today replaced by a conveyor belt," the Wall Street Journal quoted the cheerful Sullivan as saying, "might become tomorrow's electronic engineer."

Automation is the word now being widely used for the movement toward automatic control in general. It was apparently adopted first by industrial engineers of the Ford Motor Co. to define what D. S. Harder, vice-president for manufacturing, called "a new concept, a philosophy, of manufacturing."

At a recent conference on automation at Davenport, Ia., Harder said that the "working definition" of automation as used at Ford's is "the automatic handling of parts between progressive production processes." That is, it's a way of transferring materials automatically from machine to machine.

Actually it is more than transferring, he explained, and quoted a more comprehensive definition given by W. E. Brainard, of Hughes Aircraft, in the February 1954 issue of Production magazine:

"Automation is a philosophy of design, it is a manufacturing method, and it is control within a machine."

There is no general agreement, however, as to the meaning of the word. It means different things to different people.

Some regard it as "a fancy word for mechanization." Others mean by it "completely self-regulating production," or "a fully automatic plant." An oil refinery is sometimes considered as the "ultimate in automation," though in the strict definition of the word it isn't.

A Strict Definition

"Automation, if defined strictly as electronic or magnetic control of complete-sequence operations, is quite rare," says an article on "Push-Button Labor," in the August 1954 Fortune magazine.

In whatever sense it is meant, automation is a convenient word, and will probably continue to be widely used more or less loosely to designate modern mechanization and automatic control.

For the trend has been greatly speeded up since the end of the war in Korea, and devices and methods formerly utilized largely for military purposes are now being used in private industry.

One of the most widely publicized examples of automation illustrating this trend is the Ford engine plant and foundry near Cleveland, which CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther has mentioned often.

Sensational stories about the marvels at work there have appeared in many publications. A Wall Street Journal writer who visited it wrote:

"Engine blocks are machined without the touch of a human hand. An electronic brain, containing 27 miles of wire, helps mastermind operations. Signal lights on control boards flash warnings when a tool is wearing out and needs replacement. Red, green and yellow pushbuttons control myriad manufacturing steps."

The Cleveland Plant

He reported that "it takes only three machines and nine men to drill the necessary oil holes in a crankshaft." With conventional machine methods, 29 machines and 39 men were needed to do the same job. And he quotes the foundry manager as saying:

"Ours is the only foundry in the world where the molding sand used to make castings is never touched by human hands except maybe out of curiosity."

U. S. News & World Report (Dec. 4, 1953) headlines a story on the same plant:

"Push-button Plant: It's here. Machines do the work and man looks on. An inside look at the latest thing in industry—a whole factory run largely by electric 'brains' and mechanical 'hands'."

"An automatic factory, a manufacturing plant with few production workers, is an actuality, not just a theory, in the automobile industry today," says the article. "In this factory, operating now, even the work for push buttons is showing a decline. They are displaced by electric 'brains'—complicated marvels that are tireless, faster then human beings, less prone to error and never grouchy."

The Big Question

After describing other machines that have displaced human labor, the article says that the big question is whether automation will bring serious technological unemployment in the auto industry, the nation's largest manufacturing industry, and in other industries going in for it.

"If automation works as well as expected, and spreads fast, it seems almost sure to cause some important labor-displacement problems," states the article. "But its backers say that it also can produce more jobs in the end than it may abolish. Backers say, too, that automation will bring an increase in the production of goods that will raise living standards for all Americans to a level hardly imagined today."

There are, of course, many other ou standing instances of the spread of aut mation.

Electrical Example

In the electrical industry, Westinghou started a new $45 million appliance pla last year for the manufacture mostly refrigerators and freezers. The compone parts of units will travel over 27 mil of conveyors, through automatic enan elling and assembling devices, and whisked through an automatic cratir machine.

General Electric was also reported have set up a similarly mechanized pla on a 942-acre site outside of Louisvill where parts in process are to be shuttl over 42 miles of conveyors.

Various new devices in the packir industry, such as the "hide-puller" m chine, which replaces the most high skilled and highly paid man in the be killing room, are reported by Fortune:

"Stripping away the entire hide from t carcass without cutting the skin is t most delicate operation in the plant. Wi the new machine, a semi-skilled m makes a single cut in the breast of t animal and the 'hide-puller' skins t animal as simply as slipping off a shirt."

"This is correct as far as it goes," says Lyle Cooper, research director for

IN THE OIL INDUSTRY automatic control has been going on at a fast pa for a decade. Refineries today employ 10,000 fewer men than six years ag Above is the control board in the Carter Oil Co. refinery at Billings, Mon

"CAT CRACKER" unit in Deep Rock refinery, Cushing, Okla., is operated from control building showin in lower foreground.

CIO Views On Automation—

Share Benefits With Labor

THE CIO does not oppose automation or other technological improvements.

Some people have the mistaken notion that it does. But it does have very strong opinions about industry sharing the benefits both with the worker, in higher wages and shorter hours—and the consumer, in lower prices and more and better products.

It insists that "workers should rightfully share adequately in the benefits of the increased productivity of the national economy as a whole."

CIO Pres. Walter Reuther, after describing before a CIO convention the marvelous new machines of the Ford engine plant in Cleveland, asked:

"Is that good or bad? That depends on whether the machines work for the people or whether they work against the people. The machines are good as long as we get the benefits of the machines by higher living standards and shorter work hours.

"Our struggle is not to stop machines. Our struggle is to see to it that the workers get the benefit of these better machines and the more efficient techniques that develop in industry."

In his New Year's Day statement Reuther said: "The program of the CIO in 1954 will be one devoted to placing the benefits of our great technology at the disposal of all the people, so that all may share in the abundance that America can produce."

And in testimony before a congressional committee last spring, he said: "We of the CIO believe that full employment and full production are possible in peace time if we demonstrate the good sense to gear our productive capacity and our developing technology to the practical challenge of satisfying the tremendous unfilled needs of the American people."

AUTOMATIC MACHINER does aw lightened the work for the operato land engine plant, a showpiece of ne

utomation—So Are New Problems For Labor

CONVEYOR SYSTEM in Ford's ultra-modern engine plant at Cleveland—first in the auto industry—moves six-cylinder overhead valve engines without manual handling. Mechanical arms also set up engines for assemblers.

Way To Survival

"No, the way to survival does not lie backward. Our fathers have tasted of the tree of knowledge, and even though its fruit is bitter in our mouths, the angel with the flashing sword stands behind us. We must continue to invent and to earn bread not merely by the sweat of our brows, but by the metabolism of our brains.:"

(Norbert Wiener, in The Human Use of Human Beings.)

the CIO Packinghouse Workers, "but it affects more operations than those mentioned, and is not as automatic as indicated. It has to be guided by an operator."

The oil industry has always been highly mechanized. Automation, in the sense of electronic controls, is more recent, but during the past decade it has developed at an accelerated speed.

"A man may work for months on a pipeline, or in a refinery, or even in the production fields and never see nor touch oil," says Ray Davidson, CIO Oil Workers publicity director.

One man sitting in an office at the El Segundo (Calif.) refinery of Standard Oil of California, which processes some 125,000 barrels of oil daily, gauges many times that amount of oil and refined products in storage.

"He can tell at a glance how much of what is where," says Davidson.

with some hard and heavy jobs. It has of this crankshaft lathe at Ford's Cleve- industrial technique.

In the chemical industry, automatic control is not particularly new, although some outstanding recent developments have taken place.

The Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Co., for example, a division of Union Carbide & Carbon Corp., is reported to have the "world's first robot coal miner," at its works near Charleston, W. Va. Here it extracts, out of bituminous coal, gases and other substances used in making such varied products as plastics, explosives, drugs, vitamins, paints and other things.

The rubber industry, states Ralph Bergman, acting research director for the CIO Rubber Workers, for some time has been using automatic controlled machines such as the Banbury, which weighs the different components to be mixed in the machine and then automatically performs the mixing operation for the required length of time. There is also the Bag-O-Matic curing machine, which vulcanizes the semi-finished tire into a finished product.

The Longest History

Formerly a tire had to be shaped by one operation and then cured in a second operation. The Bag-O-Matic performs both steps at once and in addition, automatically times the curing cycle and adjusts the temperature and pressure.

But it is the telephone industry, of course, where the longest history of advancing automatic control has taken place, and where great displacement of labor has occurred.

"To us in the telephone industry," said Pres. Joseph A. Beirne of the CIO Communications Workers, "automation isn't something away off in the future—nor is it something just starting to be a problem. In our industry it has been with us for 30 or more years."

Back in 1920, just before the start of the Bell System's dial conversion program, Beirne said, there were 36 telephones per employee. At the close of last year, there were 69.2 phones per employee—an increase of 92.2% over the period.

Fortune magazine reports in its August 1954 issue that the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., "is now ready to set up inter-region and even coast-to-coast dialing, with automatic accounting and billing machines replacing operators on tabulations."

"For the future it promises message transmission by 'microwave' relays, which eliminate the need for telephone lines . ." the magazine adds.

(A later article will tell more about how automation has affected CIO unions and members, and what some CIO officials think about it.)

The Age Of Robots Long Predicted

THE LEGEND of a mechanical man who can perform work endlessly, efficiently and tirelessly but has no soul and finally revolts and destroys his creator, has been used often in past times to symbolize mankind's fear of mechanical advance.

There's the old Jewish legend of the Golem, the exploits of the Frankenstein monster, and the play by the Czech dramatist, Karl Capek, called R.U.R., which satirizes the effect of the machine age on human beings. It was first produced in translated form in this country in 1922 and it is still popular among little theater and amateur groups.

The letters R.U.R. stand for Rossum's Universal Robots, the name of the factory that made and sold mechanical men and women workers—robots—who were like flesh and blood human beings but had no emotion, no soul. They knew only how to turn out an unlimited amount of flawless work of all kinds.

The word robot taken from the play has become a familiar term in the language and today is used often as another word for automatic control, automation, push button labor, "electric brains," and other terms adopted to talk of the marvels of modern production methods.

Sounds Like Scientists

Derived from the Czech robota meaning compulsory service or work, it has come to mean "any automatic apparatus or device that performs functions ordinarily ascribed to human beings, or operates with what appears to be almost human intelligence."

R.U.R. makes quite fascinating reading today, for the characters often say things strikingly like remarks made by some of the scientists and industrial engineers of today, who are concerned with making machines that will do what human beings can do, but do it better and faster.

"Well, anyone who has looked into human anatomy," says the factory manager in R.U.R., "will have seen at once that man is too complicated, and that a good engineer could make him more simply. So young Rossum began to overhaul anatomy and tried to see what could be left out or simplified . . ."

Our scientists and industrial engineers of today, do in fact, study anatomy in figuring out how to construct automatic machines. Prof. Norbert Wiener of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology—an authority on the subject of "communication" in automatic control—discusses the analogy between machines and living organisms at length in his book, "The Human Use of Human Beings." The nervous system and the automatic machine, he explains, are in some respects fundamentally alike.

Seems Small Stuff

An article on the subject of "Information" as the "lifeblood" of automatic control (Scientific American, September '52), says that instruments like those of the human body are needed—"memory devices like the brain and control devices like the reflex networks in the nervous system—to handle information for automatic control."

On the question of replacing human labor with machines, however, the R.U.R. manager's boast that "one robot can replace two and a half workingmen," seems small stuff indeed in the light of what the complicated automatic machines of today can do in replacing manpower.

Time often gives a strange twist to the ideas of an imaginative writer who forecasts in dim outline a future development, by bringing it to pass far beyond his wildest dreams—but usually with very different results from those he expected.

Capek, for instance, was concerned with

TELEPHONE industry has been undergoing automation for 30 years. In 1920 there were 36 telephones per employe. In 1953 there were 69.2, a 92% increase.

the degradation of the worker who seemed, in the development of mass production and the assembly line, in danger of being turned into a machine by the repetitive, monotonous functions of his job. But what has actually happened is that rather than the human individual being turned into a machine, the machine is becoming more and more like a human being. What Capek used as a device to dramatize his idea, has, in a modified way, come to pass.

But the automatic machines of today—and the future—has already created, and will continue to create, its own tremendous social problems that must be faced and solved at least in some degree, if the old legend of the machine that turned upon its creator and destroyed him is not finally to come true.

The Individual Pays

These problems, of course, have long been with us. Changes in industrial production methods such as the advance of automatic machines don't spring up over night. They grow gradually, and adjustment to the changes can take place with little notice paid to them, if they proceed slowly enough.

Even if they don't happen all at once on an extensive scale, such changes can cause great misery to individuals caught in them helplessly and unaware. A man who loses his job without warning because an automatic machine has been installed in his plant, may suffer as much anguish as one whose home has been destroyed by a flood or hurricane, yet he is not likely to get any public sympathy or help.

He is left to adjust himself and his family as best he can. This may mean selling his home at a loss, taking his children out of school, moving to a new town and a new industry and losing his accumulated seniority and pension benefits.

For, if left to run wild, the "second industrial revolution," as the trend toward increasing automatic control has been called, could cause as many woes as the first industrial revolution which brought the machine into manufacturing and destroyed the skills of many thousands of workers.

Eroded Brains

"We cannot afford to erode the brains of the country as we have eroded its soil. We must not be serfs, written down as property in the books of our entrepreneurs. We need a system in which variability and adaptability are at a premium and not at a discount . . . If man is to continue to exist, he must not be an afterthought to business."

(Norbert Wiener, in The Human Use of Human Beings.)

Issues In The Election—

GOP's 'Peace' Cry Is Phony As A $9 Bill

"PEACE, progress and prosperity" is the slogan of the Republicans as they head into the showdown weeks of the 1954 congressional elections.

The "prosperity" part of that slogan is mocked by the cold steel furnaces around Pittsburgh, the gaunt mill towns of New England and the silent auto assembly lines around Detroit.

And the "peace" part was almost drowned out in the dim of gunfire last week as a U. S. Navy patrol plane was shot down in the Sea of Japan off Soviet Siberia and as U. S. officers were killed on a Chinese Nationalist island off the Red China coast.

Once again there was little "peace" within the Republican's own camp—they were engaged in another tug-of-war over foreign policy. California's Sen. Knowland, the GOP majority leader—demanded that the U. S. break off diplomatic relations with the Russians. His plea got a polite but firm refusal from the Summer White House in Denver.

'Progress' On Slogans

About the only part of the GOP slogan that could be justified was the "progress" business. The slogan shops of the GOP were running overtime trying to keep up with with switches in foreign policy.

"Massive retaliation" was swiftly outdated, "preventive war" had only a brief span as the GOP elephant twitched nervously down the foreign policy road. The bedeviled beast was goaded from one side by the realities of the world situation and from the the other by Old Guard "go-it-alone" theorists.

The shifting foreign policy of the Eisenhower Administration is actually giving encouragement to the Communists it seeks to contain. Communism, the world learned in Indo-China, advances when the free world is divided and U. S. world leadership is indecisive, contradictory and confused. It retreats when the free world is united under firm and decisive U. S. leadership.

Such leadership under the Democratic Administration has saved millions of people and vast economic resources from communism in Iran, Greece, Berlin and Korea.

The Republican's foreign policy troubles are not new. They pre-date the 1952 election campaign, when the facts were deliberately garbled; they have continued through 20 months of the Eisenhower Administration.

"I Hear There's Something Wrong With Your Morale"

"What's Our Firm, Unswerving Asia Policy This Week?"

The late Sen. Vandenberg (R. Mich.) was disarmingly frank when he told the New York Times in April 1952:

"The Republican Party has this dilemma, if it does not cooperate in the world, it will be blamed for destroying the peace . . . If it cooperates too much with the Democratic Administration, it will be accused of having no foreign policy of its own. Therefore, as I see it, we must cooperate in the theater where we could lose everything, which is in Europe, and oppose the Administration in the Far East, where there is no solution that I can think of anyway."

Most Republicans since then have gone along without any solution in mind and from force of habit have opposed the Admininstration even though it is their own.

In support of this irresponsible strategy the GOP set out to rewrite Chinese history. Republican demagogues still go around the country telling people that "the Democrats lost China to Communism."

The China Record

In the first place, China was never ours to lose. The U. S. always supported China's national aspirations for independence. The Democrats made every effort to prevent China from falling into the hands of the Communists.

This country sent a total of $2 billion in aid to Nationalist China and the Chiang Kai-Shek government. Most of the terms of this aid were written into the China Aid Act of 1948 by the GOP-dominated 80th Congress.

According to Sen. Connally (D. Tex.) in 1950, "so much of our aid was sold to the Communists by Chiang's corrupt lieutenants that the Communists came to look on the U. S. as their quartermaster and Chiang as their supply sergeant."

The most influential single factor in the conduct of our foreign policy in recent years is the China Lobby. It serves the interests of Nationalist China, now confined to Formosa and small nearby islands.

The China Lobby casts a strong spell over several American magazines and radio and TV commentators. A number of prominent Republican leaders for reasons best known to themselves have followed Chiang's devious line; among them Vice Pres. Nixon and Sens. Knowland, Bridges (N.H.), Mundt (S.D.), McCarthy (Wis.) and Rep. Judd (Minn.)

These powerful friends in Congress have always managed to prevent any investigation of the China Lobby.

The Indo-China Test

Republicans failed to meet the test of Indo-China, attempting a bluff that was called by the Reds. The GOP weakness was in marked contrast to the determined stand against Soviet aggression in Korea which later was to be labeled by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York as "bungling our country into war."

On June 27, 1950, Pres. Truman called in a bipartisan committee of eight Democrats and five Republicans before ordering U. S. support for Korea and using the Seventh Fleet to screen Formosa from Communist attack.

"There Goes The Ball Game"

That same day, Knowland stated on the Senate floor that the President "should have the overwhelming support of all Americans regardless of their partisan affiliation." A few days later the GOP again applauded when Gen. MacArthur was authorized to use ground troops in Korea.

Candidate Eisenhower knew in his campaign days the danger of bluff and bluster in foreign relations. "Bluster in words could here mean national humiliation," he told a Salt Lake City audience in October 1952.

"So, too, would meek appeasement in deeds," he said then. "The way to true national security is something different from either extreme: Quiet firmness in words, effective strength in purpose, in productivity and in arms,"

The Eisenhower Record

This was a paraphrase of Pres. Theodore Roosevelt's warning that in time of peril "we should speak softly but carry a big stick." The Eisenhower record since campaign days led Chester Bowles, former ambassador to India, to remark that the new method is to "talk loudly and carry a putter."

The Chicago Daily News, staunchly Republican, declared in May that "the most shocking disappointment of the Eisenhower Administration has been the amazing conflict of views expressed by the President, the Vice President, the Secretary of State, the responsible Republican leaders on the situation in Indo-China . . . the spokesmen for this Administration have alternately steered a course between bluster and backdown that has left the world confused and bewildered."

Back in March, Nixon asked a national TV audience: "Isn't it wonderful, finally, to have a Secretary of State who isn't taken in by the Communists, who stands up to them?" In April, the President said "we simply cannot afford to lose Indo-China to the Communists . . ."

By July, after U. S. foreign policy had been given its most resounding setback in history at Geneva, with a large part of Indo-China turned over to the Communists, his party's own Secretary of State was being assailed by Knowland. He termed the Geneva agreement "one of the great Communist victories of the present decade."

Small wonder, then, the man in the street hearing the GOP slogan of "Peace, progress and prosperity" agrees. They're wonderful, but where are they.?

Fumbling

Adlai E. Stevenson, 1952 Democratic presidential candidate, blasted GOP foreign policy fumbling last week at Harrisburg, Pa.

Eisenhower's policy, Stevenson said, "wallows aimlessly and dangerously while a bunch of bickering helmsmen quarrel at the wheel—I mean the full time and part time secretaries of state.

"Instead of foreign policies we seem to have slogan policies—Dulles sound and Knowland fury, signifying nothing and accomplishing less."

Bluff, Bombast

Advancing Communist armies in Asia were stopped and Western Europe was solidified against the Communists during five years of Democratic party government, Rep. Roosevelt (D. N. Y.) told a Buffalo audience.

But in the 20 months since the Republicans came to power, once again the Communist offensive is in full swing, he said.

"Instead of a foreign policy, we have slogans. Instead of forceful, determined resistance to world communism," Roosevelt asserted, "we have bombast and bluff."

'Know-Nothings' Role Hit

CHARGES that Pres. Eisenhower's "appeasement" of Old Guard "Know-Nothing" Republicans has undermined U. S. foreign policy and nudged this nation "remorselessly" closer to war were leveled by the Democratic National Committee.

The committee called upon the President to substitute a non-partisan policy of "real" containment of Communist aggression in place of "slogans" and "bluffing."

"Muffle the tough talk," the President was advised, "and instead put the energy behind tough measures."

A new "American coalition" of Eisenhower Republicans, Democrats and the American public was urged to preserve the free world's strength and unity.

The GOP right wing, the Democrats charged, distracted and misdirected the government by its "ability to bully the Administration." Majority Leader Knowland (Calif.), Sens. McCarthy (Wis.), Dirksen (Ill.) and Jenner (Ind.) were named as leaders of the "Know-Nothings."

In the current issue of The Democratic Digest, official party magazine, the committee called for a re-evaluation of U. S. foreign policy in the light of the defeat at the Geneva conference.

It proposed two immediate steps:

Reversal of the trend towards military retrenchment and revival of free world economic cooperation using America's potential in a war against world hunger, "a war in which the Communists cannot begin to compete."

Democratic "loyal opposition" in Congress would support Eisenhower in a non-partisan policy, the committee said. But, it added, the Administration must stop basing its policy decisions on "what will be politically palatable to the Old Guard."

"Cold Wave"

PAC Handbook

The above article was prepared from material in the 1954 Handbook of the CIO Political Action Committee. Copies are available at $3 each from CIO-PAC, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

CIO Councils In Action

CIO'S STORY of how "Farmers and Workers Win Together" is being told by CIO councils at display booths at county and state fairs as summer draws to a close—and the election campaigns warm up.

One of the most successful displays was staged by the Crawford County, Pa., CIO Council at the week-long county fair. CIO gave the children visiting the fair some 5000 balloons, each labeled "CIO," while 14,000 copies of The CIO News and various PAC leaflets were distributed.

At Crown Point, Ind., the Lake County CIO Council distributed 15,000 pieces of literature at the big Lake County Central States Fair. CIO's display was described as "the most popular booth at the fair." And the Minnesota CIO Council has arranged for booths at three more fairs, bringing its total to 18.

No Alibis

The Wisconsin CIO Council is pushing for a big vote in the Sept. 14 primary and a high registration for the Nov. 2 election with this reminder:

"The old proverb says: 'Don't alibi in December, vote in September and November.' Your job and your family's welfare are at stake. Do you want corrupt politicians or public-minded ones? The answer rests with you—if you register and vote."

- On the East Coast, the New Jersey CIO Council has won extra registration facilities in eight counties, to boost voter sign-ups before the Sept. 23 deadline. Extra facilities were requested by Council Pres. Paul Krebs.
- The Greater Cincinnati CIO Council and the CIO Clothing Workers Joint Board are pushing a joint registration drive, taking voters to the Board of Election office to register during lunch hours.
- In Buffalo, N. Y., the Erie County CIO-PAC recently held a constitutional convention, marking return of the local PAC to the Council's jurisdiction. The PAC unit had operated independently in recent years.
- The Illinois CIO Council recently held a campaign planning conference of representatives of all CIO international unions in the state.
- "Every vote counts," the Pennsylvania CIO Political Action Committee emphasized in a recent leaflet showing close votes in recent congressional and legislative races. The Council offers full voting records on the Keystone State's members of Congress and state lawmakers.
- "PAC is your only and final answer to unemployment," Pres. Charles M. Schultz of the Wisconsin CIO Council told the recent State CIO Institute at Madison.
- The Flint, Mich., CIO Council has won city council approval for a door-to-door registration drive, and will assign 30 trained registrars to the canvass beginning in mid-September. Said Council Pres. Norman Bully: "Don't wait for someone to come to your house. Register now and get ready for that big election."
- In the Detroit area, the Wayne County CIO Council is considering seeking establishment of a federal surplus food distribution plan to aid the 175,000 unemployed workers in the motor capital. Mike Morasco, Council CSC chairman, recently visited Johnstown, Pa., to see how the food distribution plan works.
- The Michigan CIO Council has joined with the AFL, state and city governments and business groups to co-sponsor formation of a "New Products, New Methods and Patents Exhibit." The non-profit organization will seek diversification of the state's industries.
- A testimonial dinner honoring Carl Holderman, state labor commissioner and former New Jersey CIO Council president, will be held in Newark on Sept. 19. Speakers will include CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, Gov. Robert B. Meyner and Arbiter David Cole.

Kansas CIO Hears Businessman In Debate On Open Shop Drive

A "NEW LOOK" in union conventions was unveiled when the Kansas State CIO Council recently met in Hutchinson, Kan. Two aspects of the "new look" were:

- Attendance as special guests of officers of the State Farm Bureau and Farmers Union, as well as a number of farm families.
- A debate on the floor between a State Chamber of Commerce representative and CIO officials over the open shop "right to scab" law which is coming up in the next session of the Legislature.

The Kansas CIO long has sparkplugged a program of farm-labor relations through a series of community meetings held throughout the state. Its success was reflected in the attendance at the convention of Pres. H. A. Prager and Vice Pres. W. I. Boone of the State Farm Bureau and of Pres. Martin Byrne and former Pres. Eugene Fortune of the State Farmers Union.

DEBATE over the so-called "right to work" measure—Kansas is one of several states where employers are pushing for it—was a highlight of the CIO convention.

L. E. Weiss appeared for the State Chamber of Commerce, on invitation of the Council. In the hour and a half debate, he argued that the measure would protect "the basic American liberties."

4 Scholarships Granted Teachers

The Kansas CIO Council did something practical about helping the schools, granting $100 scholarships to help four education students complete their training as teachers at Emporia State Teachers College.

"Why shouldn't we?" asked Council Sec.-Treas. James Yount. "The working people we represent have a larger proportion of children than most groups. We're vitally interested in having good schools and plenty of teachers."

The scholarship winners were Miss Annette Follett, Goodland; Miss Arneida Gunier, Overland Park; Miss Patricia Warta, Ellis; and Steve Luebbe, Topeka.

Council Sec.-Treas. James Yount replied that "right to work" is a misnomer for the business-backed legislation which would destroy all forms of union security.

"It is not an honest approach to the question," he said. "Those for the bill are trying to sell the people on a slogan. They turn out reams of red, white and blue literature and quote patriotic slogans all over the place."

Yount made a point-by-point criticism of the anti-union measure, and jibed at the Chamber of Commerce representative:

"There is only one country in the world that provides an absolute right to work and that is the Soviet Union. We don't want any part of it."

Speakers included Russell Letner, Auto Workers Reg. 5 director; Del Garst, CIO regional director; and Joe Glazer, Rubber Workers education director.

HIGHLIGHTS of the legislative program adopted by the convention, along with opposition to the "right to scab" bill, were support for proposals to raise workmen's compensation benefits from $28 to $38 a week and to remove the present $28 limit on unemployment benefits. The Council also urged an expanded state program for aid to blind and handicapped workers.

Some 350 delegates and guests, representing 35,000 CIO members, attended the convention in Hutchinson. Pres. Stanley Hubbard, of the Communications Workers, was re-elected.

Correction On Guatemala Report

An article in the Sept. 6 issue of The CIO News inadvertently read so as to make it appear that the Comite Nacional de Reorganizacion (CNRS) and the Federacion Autonomo Sindical (FAS), provisional Guatemalan labor centers, had joined forces in the face of government repression. The article should have read that it was the railroad workers' unions of the two bodies which merged.

British Unions Reject Commie Bid

AN ATTEMPT to force the international free labor movement into cooperation with Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions was overwhelmingly voted down after bitter debate at the 86th annual British Trades Union Congress last week.

However, another resolution approving the rearming of West Germany under international safeguards won a bare majority vote of four million to 3.6 million.

This is not enough, observers declared, to make it part of the policy the Labor Party will develop at its meeting later this month. Many TUC unions will participate in the political sessions.

'Don't Judge Us By Our Hotheads'

The fraternal delegate of the Canadian Trades & Labor Congress to the annual British Trades Union Congress proved a "good neighbor" indeed when he cautioned the convention to judge the U. S. on something "more substantial" than what Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) says.

"Many thousands of people across the Atlantic," A. T. Alsbury told his hosts, "abhor McCarthyism as much as anyone in this hall. Unfortunately, all too often screaming headlines are devoted to the hotheads, blockheads and empty heads on both sides of the Atlantic."

The vote on rejecting a motion calling for discussions by the TUC and the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions with the WFTU was 5.9 million against and 1.8 million for. The resolution bore the stamp of the powerful Amalgamated Engineering Union.

An amendment instructing the TUC General Council to initiate talks with Russian and Chinese union leaders on establishing amicable relations and reviving the British-Soviet trade union committee was also defeated.

The votes were taken after Gen. Sec. Arthur Deakin, of the Transport & General Workers Union, vigorously urged defeat and took the occasion to denounce Labor Party leaders, including former Prime Minister Clement Attlee, for visits to Communist countries.

British TUC Gets Warning Against Bids From Commies

WHEN the British Trades Union Congress met in convention last week, the delegates had before them a recent statement of the General Council bluntly stating that "unity" of the free labor movement with Communist unionism is impossible.

The statement originally was addressed to the Electrical Trades Union, which has strong Communist elements in its leadership. The ETC had submitted a resolution aimed at pushing the TUC and the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions into unity talks with the Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions.

The General Council statement reviewed the relations of the TUC and other free national labor centers with the WFTU, recalling that WFTU cries for unity "followed the failure of the Communists to destroy the workers' democratic forces from the outside."

While the ICFTU is "trying to build free and independent trade unionism," the statement asserted, the WFTU can only try "to develop trade unionism as an adjunct to Communist power and policy."

"At times like the present," the statement concluded, "when there is a strong desire for international negotiations to lessen differences which exist, there are people of good will who speak of unity, joint consultation and negotiation without a knowledge of the facts.

"In international matters the policy of the Congress has clearly and consistently encouraged all possibilities of effective negotiation. It has supported negotiations between governments responsible for policy. Trade union movements that are free and independent can also negotiate to form their own policy.

"But neither the ICFTU nor the TUC can seriously consider proposals for negotiation with organizations which have no power to negotiate."

Workers Defense League To Honor Labor Priest

A PRIEST who championed the rights of striking sugar cane field workers last year will receive the 1954 Clendenin Award for distinguished service to labor's rights.

Rev. Jerome A. Drolet, pastor of St. Charles church, Thibodaux, La., will get the award Oct. 9 in New York City from the non-political, anti-Communist Workers Defense League.

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, Archbishop Bernard J. Sheil of Chicago Catholic archdiocese and Pres. A. J. Hayes of the AFL Machinists are co-chairman of the award event.

Fr. Drolet has also aided packing house, marine and other workers in their struggles to improve their economic conditions. He is active in the work of the Catholic Committee of the South.

REV. JEROME A. DROLET

For The Ladies—

Block Meetings Are An Opportunity For Women Doing Good PAC Job

By ESTHER MURRAY
(CIO-PAC Field Representative)

THIS YEAR, as never before, political campaigners are making special efforts to get closer to the voter—closer than the radio, closer than television—and the answer has been found in the neighborhood or block meeting.

Mrs. Murray

Voters like it, because it provides an opportunity for a face to face meeting with the man who wants their votes, in a situation where they can ask questions and give the candidates their views.

While this is not a new technique, its renewed popularity this year gives us CIO women an opportunity to do a good PAC job in a most pleasant role, that of hostess.

These get-togethers can be as elaborate or simple as occasion demands, but the formula which many of our women have found easy and effective goes something like this:

One woman asks her neighbor to drop in at a set time with the definite promise that the meeting won't last more than an hour. Guests are urged to bring the children if baby sitters are scarce and are assured they needn't dress up—slacks, house dresses or aprons are perfectly all right.

When the guests arrive, the first quarter-hour is spent in getting acquainted and perhaps reading literature supplied by the candidate. When he arrives he talks for 15 minutes and spends another 15 minutes answering questions, leaving when the half-hour is up.

For the last quarter-hour the women are given an opportunity to volunteer for campaign work. This may be distributing literature, opening one's home for another neighborhood meeting, working at campaign headquarters or otherwise taking an active part in the campaign.

Family Conferences Set

So successful was the first Family Participation Conference sponsored recently by CIO unions in Fort Dodge, Ia., that they've scheduled a second PAC family rally for Oct. 2.

The first conference brought together 33 delegates—28 of them housewives and five unionists from Auto, Electrical, Packinghouse and Chemical locals. Local unions have been asked to double their delegations for the next conference.

Other scheduled Family Participation Conferences include: Sept. 25 at Des Moines, Ia.; Sept. 25-26 at Los Angeles; and Oct. 7-8 at Dayton, O.

Another Look At New Housing Law

(Last week Sidney Margolius in his syndicated "How To Buy" column looked at one aspect of the new housing act provisions on long-term mortgages. Here is another viewpoint more nearly in accord with the needs of CIO members who must consider themselves as producers as well as consumers—The Editor.)

CIO has always taken the position that working people should have the very best shelter they can afford and that the federal government has a responsibility to see that its citizens have decent, comfortable housing.

To get a home for himself and his family, the worker has two choices—to buy or to rent. Except in the largest metropolitan areas, he is usually better off to build his own home or to buy an already built house.

In order to do either, he almost always needs a low down payment and should get the best house he will be able to afford in month to month payments on his mortgage. The new provisions of the housing act have raised the interest rates on FHA mortgages but have reduced the down payments and extended the mortgage life to 30 years.

Since his mortgage payments will, in a sense, be considered as rent, the worker needs a mortgage term of the longest duration at the lowest repayment rates to the point where lengthening the mortgage period no longer appreciably reduces the monthly payments.

The long-term mortgage of 30 years actually presents no bugaboo because the life of the average mortgage in the U. S. has never exceeded 10 years and is currently much less. Housing needs change for families, workers move from choice or necessity to follow their jobs and other factors contribute to the mobility of our population.

What is needed for workers in a housing act and what may be more imperative if our sagging economy does not start to climb, is a government-sponsored form of moratorium on lapsed mortgage repayments if a worker is jobless.

CIO has concerned itself with government policies which would make it easier for workers to purchase or build homes. There is twofold reasoning for this: First, that decently housed workers are better workers and better citizens and, second, that the housing industry is an important factor in determining the well-being of the nation's economy.

Farmers Got Less From Crop Sales

Farmers got 4% less on crop and livestock sales during the first eight months of the year than they did in the same period last year, the Agriculture Dept. said last week. The volume of marketings was "nearly the same," amounting to $17.4 billion.

National Health Fund Urged By Beirne To Unify Drives

A UNITED national appeal by private health agencies was urged last week by Joseph A. Beirne to end the "waste, inefficiency, confusion and duplication of separate drives."

Beirne, chairman of the CIO Community Services Committee, called upon the polio, heart, cancer, mental health, cerebral palsy and other private health organizations to set up a National Health Fund.

Such a fund, he said, should make "one appeal a year—and that the funds raised should be allocated by a responsible and representative group of citizens on the basis of relative needs."

Beirne's call for the extension of the federated giving-united fund principle from the community to the national basis was voiced on the opening of the United Good Neighbor Fund Drive at Tacoma, Wash. The CSC chairman also is a CIO vice president and president of the CIO Communications Workers.

The CSC chairman also urged united funds to maintain an open door policy on research and experimentation by voluntary agencies, saying: "Federated fund-raising frustrates itself unless it is coupled with sound community planning and responsible community-wide budgeting."

Give A Buck To PAC —The Job You Save May Be Your Own

"I'm joining the Union! The boss wants me to work by standard time, while the others observe daylight saving hours!"

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

A CLOSE READER asks a question of importance to moderate-income families: How much insurance does a family need?

Your Insurance And Social Security

Your own insurance should be integrated with your family's potential social security payments. Many families still don't realize Social Security includes payments to the family of a covered worker if he dies.

Two investigators from Cornell University surveyed wage-earners in one medium-sized town, Elmira, N. Y., and found only 39% knew their families were eligible for social security in case of death of the breadwinner (some even knew little or nothing about such long-established programs for their protections as workmen's compensation and even unemployment insurance.)

But even the recently-increased social-security benefits will not completely provide for a bereaved family. The steps in your own insurance program should be:

1. Alert your wife and older children to the fact they are entitled to social security payments if anything happens to you, but must apply at the social security office in your area. Payments will not arrive automatically. Look up the address in your phone book or ask the nearest post office. See that your wife has a record of your social security number.

2. Estimate your family's income need if it were left without its breadwinner.

3. Estimate your family's potential social security payments, as shown below.

FAMILY'S INCOME NEED: How much income your family might need depends on its size; age (little kids need protection longer); its accustomed living standard and how much education you want to assure your children; your wife's own work experience that might help her earn money when the children no longer need her care, and where you live—city living is more expensive.

For example, here is a fairly typical budget for a widow with two children, based on living-cost studies in large cities:

	Weekly Cost
Food	$20.00
Rent, Heat	13.00
Utilities	2.50
Clothing, Upkeep	6.00
Home Equipment, Repairs	4.50
Medical Care	3.00
Personal Care	1.50
Transportation	3.00
Advancement, Gifts, Recreation	3.50
TOTAL	$57.00

Thus, such a family might need about $250 a month, while both children were still dependent.

ESTIMATING SOCIAL SECURITY: To calculate your own potential benefits, first figure out your average monthly wage since 1950. The new amendments to social security now permit you to discard up to five years of low or no earnings, which is a help because periods of unemployment drag down your average monthly wage on which social security benefits are based.

You can count all wages up to $3600 each year from 1950 to '54, and up to $4200 of income in each year after 1954. After you calculate your average monthly wage, under the just-enacted social security formula you calculate your "primary benefit" by taking 55% of the first $110 of your average monthly wage, and adding 20% of the next $240.

Take a man who has earned about $300 a month since 1950, which has been approximately the average industrial wage since that time. To calculate his primary benefit, take 55% of the first $110, which is $60.50, and 20% of the remainder of $190 in this case, which is $38. His primary benefit is $98.50.

A widow with a dependent child or children under 18 in her care gets three-fourths of the primary benefit, or in this case, $73.90. Each dependent child also gets half the primary benefit, plus an additional one-fourth distributed among the children. If this man has two children, his family would get $197.10 a month. In contrast, we calculated above that a family of three would need perhaps $250 a month for even a very modest standard of living.

(Copyright 1954 by Sidney Margolius.)

'Housewives Paying More'

PRICES RECEIVED by Oregon farmers are down 14% since the present Administration took office while "Oregon housewives are paying more at the supermarket," Richard L. Neuberger, Democratic candidate for the Senate, said last week.

"Middle men, processors and food brokers are making off with the consumer's dollar while the income of the farmer steadily drops," he said.

"The profits of meat packers rose 97% during 1953—at the expense of the housewife and farmer."

Speaking before the Yamhill County Grange, Neuberger said that rigid price supports should have been continued at 90% of parity "to prevent a farm depression which ultimately could engulf every city and town in America in joblessness."

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

GREAT CHANGES are taking place in Florida, where I attended the fifth annual convention of the State Industrial Union Council in Miami Beach on Sept. 3-5.

This state is no longer as we once thought it: "A playground for the wealthy." Slowly but steadily it is becoming industrialized. And with the coming of industry, so is the CIO growing in the "Sunshine State."

The Florida CIO Council is not as big in numbers as some of our councils in other states, but it is active and is making a terrific impression on Florida life.

Preceding the convention, the executive board of the Council gave a "get-together" dinner for CIO officers and representatives, and Florida leaders in politics and education. Numbering approximately 100, the group included the mayor of Miami Beach, the city manager of Miami, the Dade County sheriff, circuit judge, the newly-elected representatives to Congress and the Florida House of Representatives, the speaker-elect of the Florida House, and professors from the University of Miami.

ALL OF THESE PEOPLE proved by word and action that they have great respect for the CIO in Florida. Many of these public officials were supported at the election polls by the Council's Political Action Committee. This simply proves that our people have been doing their duty in the political arena.

And credit for building this fine Council must go to some of those who helped to build it from its struggling infancy.

The Council was formed by Bill Smith, now one of my field assistants, when he was State CIO director in Florida. It was helped through its early years by Charlie Cowl, now of the Steelworkers staff, who succeeded Smith as state director. And now in its maturity the organization is headed most capably by Bill Grogan, Transport Workers Union representative, who was re-elected president this year without opposition.

At present the Council is given full cooperation by Reg. Dir. Charlie Gillman of Atlanta and his Florida field assistant, Joe Moore. These are only a few of the leaders who have helped to build the Florida Council; there are many more. But the real credit goes to all the members, past and present, who have done a real job.

ANOTHER DEVELOPMENT that distinguishes present-day Florida from the former "rich man's playground" is the fact that thousands upon thousands of people of moderate means are now able to retire and stretch out their last years under the Florida sun, many of them from plants, mills and factories under contract with CIO unions.

That these people have these blessings is due to two things: The growth and work of our CIO unions and the liberal legislation enacted over the past 20 years. Particularly am I thinking of our negotiated pension plans and social security.

A majority of the present Congress likes neither of these things. If such a majority is again elected it will be bolder than it has been during the past two years. It is entirely possible that we can lose all of our liberal laws that are so beneficial to the great mass of the population.

It is up to all of us to work as diligently and as resourcefully as is within our power from now until Nov. 2 to assure that the next Congress will be one concerned with the great majority of the population rather than with the privileged few.

BROTHER GUS FABER, international secretary-treasurer of the CIO Transport Workers, reports a victory among school bus operators of the Jay Vee Transportation Co., New York City.

From Assistant CIO Reg. Dir. Bob Edwards we learn of a victory for the CIO Furniture Workers at the General Furniture Co., Columbus, O. CIO Rep. Ben Stahl was in charge of the drive.

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Cronin reports a victory for the CIO Brewery Workers at Pabst Brewing Co. Sanitation Dept., Peoria, Ill.

Reginald Brown, regional director for the CIO Utility Workers, sends word of a victory for his organization at the Wilkinsburg Penn Water Authority (clerical force), Wilkinsburg, Pa.

CIO Reg. Dir. Michael Mann reports a victory of the CIO Steelworkers at Tube Reducing Corp., Wallington, N. J.

The CIO Electrical Workers continue to score organizational victory after victory. The latest report includes wins at Donnelly Electric, Jamaica Plains and Hingham, Mass., 112-48; Bellmet Co., Brooklyn, N. Y. (against UE) 24-0. Word also comes that workers of Continental Electric Co., Jersey City, N. J., have voted to disaffiliate from UE and to join IUE-CIO by a vote of 168 to 0.

Celler Again Blasts McLeod

ANOTHER demand that Scott McLeod, State Dept. security chief, be fired for "ineptitude and failure" in handling the U. S. refugee program was made by Rep. Celler (D. N. Y.).

Less than a score of fugitives from Communist countries have been granted asylum here, Celler charged, although this is one of the "primary purposes" of the program. He blasted McLeod's "caterpillar pace" and said only 8010 visas have been issued and only 819 refugees admitted.

The program was set up last year to admit 209,000 refugees by 1956. McLeod, a former FBI agent, complained that admission of refugees has been hampered by red tape. Earlier he said the program was delayed while his own investigators were being checked as security risks.

Curran Hits GOP Labor Board Rule Striking At Hiring Halls

THE CIO Maritime Union, harassed by GOP-dominated National Labor Relations Board interpretations of the Taft-Hartley Act, has opened membership to all qualified seamen.

With unemployemnt mounting, the union had closed its books to new members last November. This meant an end to the previous practice, inaugurated at the end of World War II, of issuing trip cards to 125 non-union members a month.

This move, NMU Pres. Joseph N. Curran explained to members, the NLRB chose to regard as making the union hiring hall illegal.

"The new board," he said, "took the position that the seniority employment protections set up by the last board will not be recognized, and it is rapidly reversing most of the decisions made previously that were favorable to labor.

"They have, in the past number of months, been accepting charges against the hiring practices of our union from elements who are well organized and who are being handled by persons whose sole interest is to harass and destroy the union."

He said the National Council determined at a recent emergency meeting that the union had no alternative to opening the membership rolls.

"OPENING the books," he added, "will place the union in a better position to fight the anti-union attack being made against us under the anti-union Taft-Hartley Law."

He said that the National Council recognized that "whether we like it or not, the Taft-Hartey Act is now being administered by 'Big Business' and the Republican party."

"They will leave no stone unturned in their efforts to weaken and destroy the labor movement," he went on, "and until such time as this anti-labor law is repealed or amended, it is the task of the officials of the union to protect the welfare of our members as best they can . . .

"WHEN THE UNION is attacked, we take steps to protect it. This will be the best guarantee that our union will remain strong, and be a large factor in the political action necessary to elect a favorable Administration into office and, eventually, the repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act."

Candidates for membership in the NMU must be U. S. citizens or have first papers; have six months sea time and the recommendation of the crews of ships upon which they have sailed; possess validated seaman's documents; pay a $50 initiation fee and dues for the current period, and apply for union membership books through port agents or port patrolmen.

The experience requirement does not preclude the inexperienced from obtaining jobs.

Riffe Flays GOP Rule At Florida CIO

"AN UNFRIENDLY national Administration" was attacked by CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe at the fifth annual convention of the Florida CIO Council in Miami Beach.

Nevertheless, he said, "we have gone forward in the hardest year the CIO has yet faced."

Riffe warned that "no matter what certain newspapers and the Administration say, the unemployment situation is serious."

He flayed GOP officials for rejecting CIO proposals to help build schools, roads and hospitals, noting that thousands of children are attending schools that are little more than "chicken shacks."

"NOT ONLY has the Administration taken away the oil lands," Riffe declared, "but before their four years are up they may very well give away the great TVA and destroy all the progressive legislation of the past 20 years unless we elect a Congress concerned with the majority of the people."

Council Pres. William J. Grogan introduced Ted Davis, speaker-elect of the Florida House of Representatives, who promised action on the offshore foreign labor problem that has depressed wages and conditions of native workers in agriculture industries.

CIO Reg. Dir. Charles H. Gillman urged delegates to visit their congressional delegation "to acquaint them with our program."

ASSISTANT Dir. of CIO Councils Carl McPeak spoke against segregation, saying "we cannot deny freedom and democracy in the U. S. and expect to promote them abroad."

Pres. Max Greenberg of the CIO Retail-Wholesale Union gave a special address.

Re-elected with Grogan was Vice Pres. Roy Armstrong. John Murray was named secretary-treasurer to succeed Barney Bayless, who declined to run.

Bias Ban On U. S. Contract Work Tightened By Ike

DISCRIMINATION bans on work performed by contractors for the federal government have been tightened.

An executive order was signed by Pres. Eisenhower last week implementing the recommendations of his Committee on Government Contracts. CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther is a member of the 15-man committee and is represented by George L-P Weaver, director of the CIO Civil Rights Committee.

The new order requires that a conspicuous notice be posted on the work site by every contractor doing business with the government to notify workers and job seekers that the contractor operates under a non-discrimination clause.

Each contract and sub-contract written with the government must now contain a ban on discrimination in employment, upgrading, demotion, transfer, recruitment, pay rates and other forms of compensation, and selection for training, including apprenticeship.

The committee said the new order represents the Administration's continuing effort to bar discrimination in businesses which supply the government with $30 billion in goods and services each year.

Lacey, 'A Gallant Pioneer' Of UAW, Dies On Labor Day

MICHAEL Lacey, co-director of the CIO Auto Workers Reg. 1 and a veteran of the famous Homestead steel strike of 1919, died of a heart attack in Detroit on Labor Day. He was 57.

Born in Ireland, Lacey came to this country as a youth and was an early member of the UAW-CIO.

He served four terms as president of Local 235 at the Chevrolet gear and axle plant, beginning in 1942, followed by two years as an international representative of the union.

In 1947, he was elected to the UAW International Executive Board from the union's largest region, a post he held until his death. He won a reputation as a tireless organizer, and three years ago headed the successful membership campaign at the then gangster-infected Detroit-Michigan Stove Co.

"Michael Lacey was one of the gallant pioneers of the labor movement," said the union's four top officers. "His entire life was devoted to improving the lot of working men. All who knew him well respected and admired him.

"Thousands of UAW-CIO members share our sense of personal loss. No man could have a finer monument than the respect of thousands of men and women with whom and for whom he had worked all his life. Michael Lacey has that monument."

He is survived by his widow, Margaret, and two sons. Funeral services were held Sept. 9 in Precious Blood Church, Detroit.

Carpet Firm Moves South

PURCHASE of a new, one-story, air-conditioned velvet carpet weaving mill in Liberty, S. C., was announced last week by Alexander Smith, Inc., and will put the bulk of the firm's production in the South.

Earlier this year the company announced the closing of its sprawling century-old plant in Yonkers, N. Y., where it was the main industry. Axminster carpet weaving will be shifted to Greenville, Miss., where another new plant was bought by the firm.

Several thousand CIO Textile Workers will lose their jobs when the Yonkers plant closes.

'Wetback' Crisis Is Worse Under GOP, Knight Warns

By MARVIN ZELDIN
Oil Worker Assistant Editor

LEGISLATION to make it illegal for U. S. employers to hire or transport "wetbacks" has again been called for by organized labor.

Spokesman for labor at a recent hearing in Denver of the U. S. section of the Joint Migratory Labor Commission was O. A. Knight, a CIO vice president and chairman of the CIO Latin American Affairs Committee.

Knight, also president of the CIO Oil Workers, told the commission that the "wetback" situation is actually worse now under the Eisenhower Administration's treaty with Mexico.

Knight told the commission that the problems of the legal migrant workers cannot be solved until the question of the illegal migrants — or "wetbacks" — is taken care of.

He called for enactment by the next Congress of bills to make employers liable to fines for employing "wetbacks" and to provide for confiscation of trucks or boats used to transport "wetbacks."

O. A. KNIGHT
"Wetback" flood is growing

BOTH measures were introduced in Congress June 21 at the request of Atty.-Gen. Brownell. He did nothing, however, to back up his earlier promise to U. S. labor groups that he'd press for enactment of the bills. Congress adjourned without passing them.

Stations for recruiting legal migrants, Knight explained, have been moved from the interior of Mexico to the border. Thousands of Mexican workers therefore converge on these border stations. But few are hired legally.

The thousands of Mexican workers who do not get jobs legally then become "wetbacks"—they cross the Rio Grande and enter the U. S. illegally and easily from the convenient border stations.

Knight called for the return of these recruiting stations to the interior, to make it more difficult instead of easier for "wetbacks" to enter the U. S., and for tightening of the U. S. border patrol.

TURNING to the question of legal Mexican migrant workers, the CIO officer said there must be a more careful determination of the need for these workers. He also criticized the present law permitting employers themselves to determine the "prevailing rate."

The law should be changed to give labor a voice on the commissions which set rates, Knight declared.

He also suggested that labor be given the right to recommend people to serve on the top migratory labor commissions and that labor have a voice in future migrant labor treaty negotiations with Mexico.

GOP Stalling Hit By Morse

THE FAILURE of Congress to pass the so-called "wetback" control bills "rests squarely on the shoulders of the Eisenhower Administration," according to Sen. Morse (Ind. Ore.).

Morse noted that, only a few hours before adjournment of Congress, Atty.-Gen. Brownell, had written Pres. H. L. Mitchell of the AFL Agricultural Workers Union that "we are doing everything possible to attain the enactment of these bills into law at the current session of Congress."

He charged that the Republicans have been trying to shift responsibility for "inaction" by saying that the Democrats were blocking them, and added:

"This is as abject a passing of the buck for failure without one scintilla of evidence to support it as any I've seen in my political life."

MOCK ARBITRATION session was a feature of CIO Education Dept. training institute at Springfield (Mass.) College. Arbitrator George Paul of Connecticut University Labor-Management School (second from left) found for union, but students voted for management's presentation.

Labor's World—

Canadian Jobless Up 91%—CCL Asks Special Session

DESPITE a slight recent improvement in official employment statistics, the number of Canadians without jobs and looking for them is 91% higher than a year ago, Sec.-Treas. Donald MacDonald, of the Canadian Congress of Labor, pointed out last week.

"The latest figures emphasize the continued seriousness of the situation," he said, "and fully warrant the calling of a special session of Parliament."

The improvement for the month ending July 22 fell "far short of the optimistic predictions which government spokesmen have been making," he said.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported 263,515 jobless, with the unemployed in Windsor, Ont., 227% higher than the year prior; Fort William-Port Arthur, Ont., 149%; Toronto, 110%; Edmonton, Alta., 100%, and Montreal, 85%.

IN ANOTHER connection, MacDonald called on the government to take the necessary steps to bring about an improvement in the textile industry, which is nearly as badly off as its U. S. counterpart.

Some 30 Canadian textile mills have closed since 1951, he said, costing 27,000 of the industry's 100,000 work force their jobs and threatening many smaller communities with economic disaster.

The recent sharp increase in Canada's consumers' price index, announced last week, MacDonald said "justifies the efforts being made by many unions to gain wage increases."

Most of the increase was attributed to higher food costs, constituting a particularly hard blow to workers on short time, the unemployed and those who have exhausted unemployment compensation benefits, he added.

Tunisia

Negotiations looking toward the establishment of autonomy for Tunisia were opened with France last week after the French had ordered the release of some nationalist political prisoners for whose freedom the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions has been pressing; lifting part of the state of siege, and restoration of the legal status of the Neo-Destour Party, the country's strongest nationalist political party, which was dissolved in 1938.

Migrants In Michigan—

Chicken Coops Are Packed --With Farm Workers' Kids

"EVERY TIME a chicken coop is passed, a pause is necessitated to see if chicks or children trot out.

"A swaying old barn in which a farmer will not park his new tractor may house four or five families of migratory laborers."

That's what Emery Biro reported in the Wage Earner, published in Detroit by the Association of Catholic Trade Unionists. He accompanied Pres. Gabriel Torres of the Migratory Workers Defense League on a tour of the state, investigating the conditions of migrant farm workers.

Biro pointed out that there are an estimated 70,000 migrant laborers in the state. These are divided into:

- The national or offshore migrants who are brought into the state under U. S. government contract.
- The out-state migrants.
- The in-state migrants.

Biro said the national migrants are "legally robbed" and "usually come from Mexico or the British West Indies on the promise of 'Big Money' in this country."

He said that at the Capec camp "one man worked 139 hours and received $48 clear, an average of 34c an hour."

"You walk into one of the shacks," Biro continued. "It's a three-room affair. One room 9x12 holds six men, another room 12x12 holds eight men, and the other room is bare and serves as the lounge for their cocktail parties."

He said the out-state migrant has "the worst plight of all." Biro pointed out, "He lives in chicken coops and tents. His children are uneducated and he is not eligible for any federal or county aid in case of illness or serious injury. He works for about 65 to 75c per hour and usually moves about every two or three days."

They'll Need Psychiatrist For This One

What goes on in the minds of government officials when they make minimum wage decisions under the Walsh-Healey Act?

That's what cotton textile manufacturers would like to know.

Their lawyers have asked the government several questions aimed at getting information about all off-the-record conferences or meetings that may have influenced the late Labor Sec. Maurice J. Tobin in making such a decision.

The decision raised the minimum wage to be paid by cotton mills for government contract work from 85c to $1 an hour.

The textile manufacturers are trying to prove that Tobin favored unions when he issued the wage order as one of the last acts of the Truman Administration in January 1953. A month later, mill operators got a court order holding up the $1 wage minimum.

The Federal District Court for the District of Columbia will have to decide whether the government must answer the six questions to which it objected. It pointed out that any bias must be established from the official record on which the order was based.

Government lawyers said that as long ago as 1906 the Supreme Court held that cabinet officers and other executive branch officers could not be questioned by the courts as to how they arrived at their administrative decisions.

"It is not the function of the court to examine the administrator's mental processes," the government told the court.

A case which the Donnelly Garment Co. brought against the National Labor Relations Board was cited. The Supreme Court then held that to sustain a ruling of bias "it would be necessary to be able to demonstrate from the record to a moral certainty the existence of such a mental state. The presumption is all the other way."

UAW Plans Job Parley In Detroit

A NATIONAL economic conference has been scheduled by the CIO Auto Workers for Nov. 19 and 20 in Detroit, with proposed demands to be served on employers when contracts expire next year the major topic.

Approximately 2000 delegates from more than 1000 locals are expected to attend.

The conference in addition to discussing economic matters will examine the results of the Nov. 2 elections, and prepare for legislative campaigns to secure the enactment of approved legislation at all levels.

One of the pressing economic items the conference is expected to tackle is unemployment and under-employment, which has hit the auto industry particularly hard. The guaranteed annual wage also will be discussed.

Reports On 4 CIO Meetings
—See Pages 2, 9, 10, 12

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., September 20, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 38

New Drive Against Labor Planned

Retail Union Gets Reuther Warning To Clean House

—Stories On Page 3

Politics Is In The Air— As the last of the primaries were held and Democrats in Maine upset the Republicans to win the governorship, political action moved to the fore. Throughout the nation, CIO-PAC units are lending a hand in key campaigns for Congress, doing a job on getting voters registered. At top: Sen. Douglas (D.), at mike, and Rep. Price (D.) address Labor Day rally at Granite City, Ill., where CIO Steelworkers are on a two-day week. Douglas blasted GOP inaction on unemployment. At bottom: Connecticut CIO-PAC workers check city directories and voting lists in statewide registration drive to sign up 109,000 non-registered factory workers. (See Pages 6, 7, 8.)

Chemical Workers Okay Merger With OWIU

By GERVASE N. LOVE

AFTER nearly three days of soul-searching debate, delegates to the seventh constitional convention of the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers in St. Louis last week voted overwhelmingly to merge with the CIO Oil Workers.

The tally was 667 to 192, a margin of practically 3.5 to 1.

The move has the wholehearted endorsement of the National CIO, which sees in it an end to countless jurisdictional disputes between the two unions created by the gradual blending of the two industries into one, and the steady disappearance of an increasingly vague border line.

The action was the culmination of months of work during which the officers and executive boards of the two unions met both alone and with CIO officials headed by Pres. Walter P. Reuther, and a rank-and-file committee of 12 members from each group drew up a tentative constitution.

The Next Step

The next step will take place in Cleveland, where the Oil Workers will hold their convention beginning Nov. 15 and are scheduled to act on the proposal. If they too approve, a joint convention will be held soon after at which a new CIO Oil & Chemical Workers will be formally organized with a nucleus of close to 200,000 members.

Reuther hailed the UGCCW action as the first step toward organizing a million U. S. and Canadian workers in the petrochemical and allied fields into a powerful union capable of dealing with the giants of the industry. Other CIO officials also expressed gratification at the vote.

MERGER DEBATED.—Proposals for amalgamation of CIO's Chemical Workers and Oil Workers were the big issue at UGCCW convention. At left: OWIU Pres. O. A. Knight, UGCCW Pres. Elwood Swisher, and CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther. At right: Local 495 delegates and guests from Radford, Va., discuss pros and cons of merger plan.

The delegates acted after hearing strong appeals for approval of the merger resolution—first business to hit the convention floor — from Reuther, UGCCW Pres. Elwood Swisher, and OWIU Pres. O. A. Knight.

Nearly three-score delegates spoke for or against it—and often they continued the argument far into the night in hotel room conferences and district caucuses.

Roberts Buchanan, of Cleveland, director of the union's Dist. 8, called a special caucus of "those who are opposed to the merger in its present form and those who are confused — the whole convention ought to come." After the vote, he pledged himself to carry out the will of the majority.

Reuther spoke at a special session the night of Sept. 13 called only to hear him. He started out by flatly denying rumors that he was promoting the merger to pay off a political debt, declaring "I don't owe anybody a thing politically."

He bluntly told the delegates that the National CIO was not satisfied with the returns from the money it has been giving the UGCCW to help it organize. Too often, he said, the funds have been dissipated in jurisdictional disputes or because of internal union politics.

Organizing Job

"All I can say is," he continued, "that if you ever get really involved in the job of organizing the basic chemical industry, you're all going to be so busy you won't have time to play politics.

"You can't make progress in bargaining until you organize Dupont and the Union Carbide & Chemical Corp. You can't make progress in a basic industry by organizing the little fellows. You have to organize the big boys.

"Your union alone cannot muster the strength to take on the task of organizing Dupont. But the CIO working with you, if you can get together, can find the tools to take them on, just as we took on General Motors, Ford, steel and the rubber industry."

Reuther said that if the merger were approved, he would ask other CIO unions to contribute, with the National CIO, to a special fund to finance organization.

Knight drew a parallel between the problems of the OWIU and those of the UGCCW. Both industries are expanding into each other's fields, he said, and there is a growing concentration of power in huge firms, with the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey occupying a position much like that of Dupont in chemicals.

None of the giants in either industry, he pointed out, is organized in a legitimate union.

He expressed the belief that if the UGCCW approved the merger, the OWIU also would.

Sec.-Treas. Cecil Martin, leading off for the opposition, stressed the union's financial position, which he said was at its best, and its organizing record.

Swisher reviewed the merger discussions and outlined the proposed plan in detail. He stressed the advantages in strength and resources it offered, and cited its opportunities for improvements in organizing, servicing and education.

"Look to your hearts, look to your God," he said, "and I think you'll receive the answer that for the good of the union, you'll vote in favor of the merger."

PAC Work Urged

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, National Dir. Jack Kroll of the CIO Political Action Committee, and Rep. Lenor Sullivan (D. Mo.), other convention speakers, urged the union to increase its activity in the political field and help elect a Democratic Congress in November.

"There is a trade union reason for being politically active," said Carey. "That is the desire to elect public servants who will make this a better land for all the people. Because, as we all know, what's good for America is good for the CIO."

Swisher was reelected president over Joseph Applebaum, of St. Louis. Buchanan defeated Vice Pres. Joseph Joy's bid for another term. Martin eked out a victory over John Curran, Long Island City, N. Y., director of the union's Dist. 3

Give A Buck To PAC —The Job You Save May Be Your Own

Chemical Parley Backs IUE Strike

Unanimous support for the 5000 members of CIO Electrical Workers Local 1104, on strike at the Wagner Electric Co. in St. Louis, was voted by delegates to the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers Convention.

The union is seeking wage increases of 7.5c an hour for production workers and 5c for maintenance employes. The walkout started the day the convention opened.

Burke Gets PAC Support

THE OHIO CIO-PAC last week recommended election of Sen. Burke (D. O.) as the best qualified senatorial candidate.

The PAC unit decided to make no recommendation in the gubernatorial race between Frank Lausche, Democratic incumbent, and James Rhodes, his Republican opponent.

Support also was voted for nine congressional candidates, four candidates for state office, and two candidates for the Ohio Supreme Court. Action was delayed on recommendations in 14 other congressional districts.

Among incumbent Democratic congressmen support for re-election were Reps. Hays, Kirwan and Feigert.

'Creeping Hooverism' Hit As Kentucky CIO Backs Barkley

LASHING out at the "creeping Hooverism" of the Eisenhower Administration, the Kentucky CIO Political Action Committee last week unanimously endorsed Alben W. Barkley's candidacy for the U. S. Senate.

The Kentucky PAC praised the long record of public service of "the Veep" in which "he has shown on every occasion that he is indeed a 100% representative of all the people."

Barkley's "knowledge, experience and ability" are "sorely" needed in the Senate, the Kentucky PAC said.

Also endorsed were four Democratic congressional candidates in those districts where there is competition. Those supported are: Harrison Robertson, 3rd; Brent Spence, 5th; John Watts, 6th and Carl Perkins, 7th.

ALBEN W. BARKLEY
"The Veep" Endorsed

Political Action Is On The Griddle . . .

. . . and The CIO News in a series of first-hand exclusive reports will tell the story of the fight for Congress--the key Senate races and the close House contests--and the several gubernatorial battles.

For the next several weeks, staff members of The CIO News and special correspondents will report on the important contests in all sections of the nation.

Going beyond the usual press reports, these special features will tell what workers and farmers think about politics, what CIO-PAC workers are doing to help "Even the Score in '54." You'll want to read The CIO News from now to Election Day--and in the year ahead.

Just clip and mail this coupon:

The CIO News
718 Jackson Place, N.W.
Washington 6, D. C.

☐ Send me The CIO News for a year; I enclose $1.

☐ Send me information on group subscription and bundle rates.

Name .....

Local Union ..... International Union .....

Home Address .....

City ..... State .....

New Drive Against Labor Planned

A TOP Chamber of Commerce official, planted inside the Eisenhower Administration, has revealed big business plans for reactionary legislation in 1955.

Speaking before a Chamber of Commerce meeting in Kansas City, Mo., Undersecretary of Commerce Lothair Teetor, in the Eisenhower Administration for less than a year, itemized the business lobby's plans to fight for:

1. Changes in the Taft-Hartley Act to encourage right-to-scab laws in the various states;

2. Revamping of unemployment compensation laws in order to please "conservative states righters"; and

3. Additional cuts in income taxes for upper-bracket taxpayers only.

Teetor sharply criticized one Eisenhower action and predicted the Commerce Dept. would fight against it in the future.

At the same time, he exposed the Commerce Dept.'s fight for a labor law which would be worse than Taft-Hartley. He predicted that Taft-Hartley amendments submitted to the next Congress by the Administration would be so reactionary they would have "the unanimous support of the state chambers of commerce."

Teetor, a 57-year-old business executive, was chairman of the board of Perfect Circle Co., a piston ring manufacturer in Hagerstown, Ind., when he was appointed by Eisenhower in October 1953.

Previously a member of the Indiana Legislature, he was president of that State's Chamber of Commerce and a director and top policy maker of the National Association of Manufacturers from 1942 until his government appointment.

In his prepared speech to the Council of State Chambers of Commerce, Teetor said "the attitude of this Administration" toward "all business" is "one of complete friendliness."

Detailing that "friendliness," the Commerce Dept. executive bitterly criticized the Eisenhower Administration for its proposal to widen the coverage of unemployment compensation to include employes of smaller firms. The Commerce Dept., he said, agreed with business organizations that coverage should not be widened by federal action.

The Eisenhower Administration has been calling this action, which Teetor deplored, a "victory."

Business, he said, had won a major victory in the revision of the tax laws. But, he added, "there is still much to be done."

It was in the area of labor law that Teetor most clearly exposed Commerce Dept. intervention into a field which the President had repeatedly said was solely within the jurisdiction of the Labor Dept.

Teetor bragged about the Commerce Dept. lobbying for two of the most controversial, anti-labor sections of the Eisenhower labor message: the so-called secret strike ballot and the states rights amendment.

He admitted that the secret ballot proposal was a publicity-getting vehicle but that the states rights proposal was "by far the more important."

The President had publicly said the states rights issue needs "more study" but Teetor said the right-to-scab proposals would be lobbied for by the Commerce Dept., would please big business, and added "we are hopeful" the amendments will pass Congress — a Republican Congress, that is.

Strong Letter From Reuther—

Retail Union Gets Rackets Warning

CHARGES of racketeering in union welfare funds, made last week against officials of five New York City locals of the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union, brought a prompt demand for a cleanup from CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

The allegations, admitted in four cases, were unearthed during an investigation into the operation of union welfare funds by the New York State Insurance Dept.

Reuther's cleanup notice was served on the union's international president, Max Greenberg. Expressing "deep concern at newspaper reports of obvious malpractices" which the local officials admitted, and declaring they "cannot be condoned by any decent trade union," Reuther wrote Greenberg:

"The National CIO, in years past, has concerned itself with Communist domination of affiliated unions. The National CIO has the same moral obligation to concern itself with evidence of racketeering in its affiliated unions.

"So far as the CIO is concerned, we do not recognize any 'autonomous right' to practice the corruption of crime or communism. We in the CIO cannot and will not tolerate crooks or Communists."

Reuther called upon Greenberg, as RWDSU president, "to take prompt remedial action against the local officials involved." The matter has been placed on the agenda of the CIO Executive Committee and Executive Board meetings the first week in October.

After receipt of Reuther's warning, RWDSU officials moved swiftly to take corrective measures. Greenberg promptly suspended seven of the local union officials accused of maladministration and placed three locals under administrators.

In further steps to meet the situation, RWDSU officials held a lengthy night session with officers of the New York State CIO.

The RWDSU locals and their officials who admitted, in whole or in part, receiving large sums in one form or another from the welfare funds are:

Local 923, Culinary, Bar & Grill Employes, 1200 members, Pres. Samuel Rosenzweig.

Local 394, United Auto Parts & Accessory Workers, 440 members, Pres. Robert J. Stanlea and Sec.-Treas. Vincent J. LaGuardia.

Local 377, United Service Employes, Stanlea and LaGuardia as "co-managers" of the welfare fund, and Pres. Ernest J. Dumas.

Local 563, Shoe Service Union, 800 members, Manager Joseph Procopio, who also is an international vice president.

In addition, Pres. Michael Werner and Sec.-Treas. Michael Sackman, of the 1400-member Local 1115, Restaurant, Luncheonette & Soft Drink Employes, who cannot be found by the investigators, were charged with drawing $32,760 a year in compensation from the welfare fund and spending most of their time on vacations.

The admitted charges included excessive salaries, expense allowances and other payments from the funds to union officials and their appointees, resulting in dissipation of disproportionate shares of the income on overhead while benefits to members were at moderate rates.

Nixon Sticks Foot In His Mouth— Maine Elects Democratic Governor

By EUGENE A. KELLEY

JUBILANT Maine Democrats hailed the election last week of Edmund S. Muskie as governor of that rock-ribbed Republican State as the beginning of the two-party system in Maine and the start of a national trend.

Muskie's victory was even more significant because of Vice Pres. Nixon's recent plea for a solid GOP turnout as "the first major test of the Eisenhower administration" in a GOP state. Nixon vacationed in Maine and dangled one foot in the state's politics and the other in his mouth with over-optimistic prediction.

WITH vigorous CIO backing generously acknowledged by party leaders, Muskie shattered tradition to become the first Democrat to win the governership since the 1934 Roosevelt landslide swept the late Louis M. Brann into office.

The Democratic tide slashed at the margin of incumbent Sen. Smith, reducing it to 40,000—less than half the majority by which she won in 1948.

Maine's three GOP congressmen retained their seats but their leads were far less than expected. In the key 1st Dist., Rep. Hale (R.) squeezed out Democrat James Oliver by less than 4000 votes.

Muskie, a 39-year-old Waterville lawyer, defeated Gov. Burton M. Cross, first GOP Governor in recent years to lose his bid for a second term.

Spearheaded by the CIO Textile Workers, the Maine CIO Council began intensive political activity shortly after their June convention, where Muskie was a speaker.

The Maine AFL convention endorsed Cross but other groups, like the Portland Central Labor Union, campaigned vigorously for Muskie. Had there been united labor effort throughout the state, it is believed that two Democratic congressmen might have been elected.

MAINE CIO Sec.-Treas. Denis J. Blais pointed to the heavy majorities scored by Muskie in organized areas like Lewiston and Biddeford as proof of CIO activity.

Thousands of letters were mailed and on election day CIO members furnished scores of cars to take voters to the polls.

Cross failed to carry Augusta, his home town, and Muskie rolled up majorities in 12 of the state's 16 counties, including Mrs. Smith's. Even Portland—Maine's largest city, with 18,000 Republicans registered to 5000 Democrats—gave Muskie a sizable majority.

Atty. Frank M. Coffin, Democratic state chairman, told The CIO News that labor participation in the contest had been excellent and "particularly helpful in key areas."

Carroll Is Victor In Colorado Primary

Highlights of primary elections held last week in nine states:

Former Rep. John A. Carroll won an easy victory over Quigg Newton, Denver's Mayor, in the race for the Democratic nomination for Senator from Colorado.

In Wisconsin, William Proxmire was nominated again as Democratic opponent of Gov. Walter Kohler.

In New Hampshire, Sen. Upton was defeated for the Republican senatorial nomination—and thus virtually for the election—by Rep. Cotton.

In Massachusetts, Foster Furcolo got a 100,000 plurality in his race for Democratic nominee for the Senate, opposing Sen. Saltonstall (R.),

CITATION—For "furthering the cause of salesmanship in promoting full employment in a peace-time economy," CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther last week received Applause Award from Pres. Joseph L. Wood (right) and the Sales Executive Club of New York. Wood praised Reuther for his "outspoken, tireless efforts to provide full employment."

Text Of Reuther's Letter To Retail President

Here is the text of the letter from CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther to Pres. Max Greenberg of the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union:

I HAVE READ with deep concern newspaper reports of obvious malpractices by certain local officials of the Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union, in connection with the administration of welfare funds.

According to the reports of official hearings by the New York Insurance Dept., officials of a number of local unions of your international organization have admitted to practices which cannot be condoned by any decent trade union.

Welfare funds administered by union officials are a sacred trust. The funds are set up for the specific purpose of creating security and health protection for the members of the organization and their families. It is shocking beyond words to find any single instance of these funds being used as a special financial preserve with which to enrich the officers of the union or the administrators of the welfare fund.

I have always been proud of the CIO's record of integrity, and its freedom from this or any other type of corruption and racketeering.

Through the years, the Congress of Industrial Organizations has adopted, and reaffirmed as CIO policy, a Statement of Ethical Practices, which asserts, "the determination of the CIO and its affiliated unions to wage war on unethical practices within and without the trade union movement . . ."

That statement of CIO policy will not be—so long as I serve the CIO as its President—a

(Continued on Page 11)

Teetor Should Go!

Who speaks for the Eisenhower Administration on labor matters? The President, or Sec. of Labor Mitchell, or an obscure State Chambers of Commerce spokesman named Lothair Teetor, who has been Assistant Secretary of Commerce for 11 months?

It's a valid question in view of the astounding speech made recently by this business executive (see page 3). So far, those remarks have gone unchallenged by the vacationing President.

Assistant Sec. of Commerce Teetor doesn't agree with his Chief Executive. Speaking as an Eisenhower appointee, he boasts to his big business pals that the Commerce Dept. played an "important part" in the drafting of Taft-Hartley amendments—though that had been officially denied.

He bewails the fact that even limited improvements in unemployment compensation coverage were adopted. What Pres. Eisenhower hailed as a "victory," this strange Commerce Dept. official labels a "defeat" for "conservatives."

He pleads for a system under which the states would be given an incentive to adopt more stringent anti-labor laws than the national Taft-Hartley Act. He distorts the truth completely in maintaining that "states are powerless to act in virtually any situation involving labor union activities."

Workers, reading the Teetor speech, can only conclude that it is a bold effort by the most conservative section of big business to gain control over all Administration policy on labor-management relations.

The Teetor program would spell chaos and disruption of peaceful labor-management relationships throughout the country. His remarks will go far to undermine completely the status of the Labor Dept.

The Administration—if it wants labor-management peace and harmony, if it wants order rather than chaos in its own family—should fire Teetor—and quickly.

Sheer Coincidence?

There's so much in the daily papers these days, it's sometimes hard to get perspective. For instance, last week:

1. A hurricane hit Maine.
2. A Democrat was elected governor of Maine.
3. Pres. Eisenhower declared Maine to be a "disaster area."

May To September

In May, when the earth was green and warm from the rays of the spring sun, the Republicans basked in the glory of their tax bill.

Big breaks for corporations and the wealthy were all right—they'd provide incentives for business that would help everybody.

Now, as autumn's cool breezes sweep over the land, the GOP is less emotional about it all. For the "incentives" were voted—but the business pickup didn't materialize.

So, standing in the long shadows, the GOP big businessmen are carefully explaining: the tax bill wasn't really an incentive at all, and you shouldn't expect miracles from one little law.

Moral of the story: the tax bill was a grab by the wealthy, just as the CIO said and as the Republicans tried to deny.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS

Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII September 20, 1954 No. 38

Hurricane Electorate

In Other Words—

A Chapter From Labor History

The role that Catholics and the Catholic Church have played in the U. S. labor movement is reviewed in a detailed study by Rita Joseph and Robert L. Reynolds in the current issue of Jubilee, national Catholic monthly magazine. One historical excerpt follows:

By RITA JOSEPH and ROBERT L. REYNOLDS

THE GRAND MASTER Workman of the Knights of Labor was Terence V. Powderly, a Catholic. Powderly, who later left the church and died a Mason, in 1886 was perhaps the most powerful labor leader the country had seen.

Because of scattered acts of violence and the secret aspects of the organization, the Knights had been condemned in Canada by Quebec's Cardinal Taschereau. His action was upheld by the Holy Office.

Fearing that a similar condemnation might occur in the U. S., Powderly went to Archbishop James Gibbons of Baltimore, the most influential man in the American hierarchy, to explain the real nature and purpose of his union. He managed to win a resourceful, determined and foresighted advocate in Gibbons, who invited Powderly to address a meeting of the 12 Archbishops. All but two were satisfied after hearing Powderly, strongly backed by Gibbons himself, argue that the dangers to Catholics who joined the Knights were largely imaginary.

Gibbons Pleaded Case

In the spring of 1887, when Gibbons went to Rome to receive the red hat of a cardinal, he pleaded the cause of the Knights of Labor at the Vatican. With the support of England's Cardinal Manning, he won his case. Instead of condemning the organization, Pope Leo XIII found no objection.

The importance of Gibbons' action, as far as Catholic participation in the labor movement is concerned, is difficult to over-emphasize. As Gibbons himself later said:

"While many bishops were alarmed at what they considered the revolutionary tendencies (of certain workingmen's associations), many other bishops, including Cardinal Manning and myself, were equally alarmed at the prospect of the church being presented before our age as the friend of the powerful rich and the enemy of the helpless poor; for not only would such an alliance, or even apparent alliance, have done the church untold harm, but it would have been the bouleversement of our whole history.

"Moreover, to us it seemed that such a thing could never take place. The one body in the world which had been the protector of the poor and the weak for nearly 1800 years could not possibly desert these same classes in their hour of need."

SOCIAL JUSTICE—The late Philip Murray, CIO and Steelworkers president (left), and former Atty.-Gen. McGrath receive Msgr. John A. Ryan Awards from Bishop Bernard J. Sheil (center).

Sheil To Get Award

The Sidney Hillman Foundation this week will present its sixth annual award for meritorious public service to the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, Catholic Auxiliary Bishop of Chicago.

Sheil has been an outspoken critic of McCarthyism as a phony anti-communism. Speaking individually at the CIO Auto Workers education conference in Chicago, he dubbed Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) a "city slicker from Appleton."

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

PRES. EISENHOWER'S advisers have instructed him that he must constantly denounce the "prophets of gloom and doom"—the economists and others who think that the country is still gripped by an "Eisenhower recession."

But the Budget Bureau came out on Sept. 14 with some figures on government receipts and expenditures in the current fiscal year that confessed the recession without ever specifically admitting it.

The key figure is a sharp decline in government revenue estimates from $62.7 billion last January, when the President sent up his first guess on the fiscal situation, to a September estimate of $59.3 billion in revenue.

The difference between January and September figures reveals that the Budget Bureau and the Treasury Department are now admitting that they overestimated government tax receipts, at the beginning of the calendar year, by $3.4 billion.

The Trouble

From Adlai E. Stevenson's recent address in Harrisburg, Pa., one of the states hardest hit by unemployment:

"The trouble with slogans like 'conservative in economic matters and liberal in human affairs' is that they set several million men and women out of work as 'economic matter'—some statistics and a line on a graph—something to be conservative about—and not as a 'human affair'."

We can "blame" Congress for $1.2 billion of this sum. Congress insisted on cutting excise taxes, over token Eisenhower opposition, to this extent.

What about the remaining $2.2 billion? The answer is simple, although there wasn't a candid word in the government's formal press release to disclose it.

Treasury Sec. Humphrey and Budget Dir. Hughes confessed that the level of business activity has dropped—that corporations, farmers and wage-earning taxpayers won't be paying as much in taxes as was guessed last January.

They won't be paying as much corporation and individual income taxes because they won't be making as much money on which to pay taxes.

Hughes of the Budget Bureau indicated to reporters that the President wasn't very happy about the figures—but that after all the facts had to be made public, because the government couldn't be in the position of trying to deceive people.

This is correct, and the President deserves respect for his recognition of the government's responsibility to tell the truth. Still, the dominant factor is that it wouldn't make sense to try to continue a bluff.

The actual concrete figures on tax collections and government expenditures would have to be published at the conclusion of the fiscal year on June 30, 1955. When a gross error has been made in the guess of January 1954, it probably makes better sense politically, as well as in the realm of integrity, to start straightening out the record as soon as possible.

The unemployed or underemployed steelworkers, farm implement workers and auto workers may not be personally aided by the Administration's confession that eight months ago it seriously misguessed the extent of the business and farm recession.

They certainly will not be cheered by the Administration's attempt to hide the significance of the facts even while formally confessing them.

Still, we now have it on the record—business and farm activity has declined so sharply that government tax revenues which in January were estimated at a relatively high figure are now estimated at $3.4 billion less.

'Balanced' Budget Looks Dubious

There is another point to be made here—a matter involving the federal debt and the budget deficit.

Eisenhower told Congress last January that he anticipated in the current fiscal year a relatively modest budget deficit of $2.9 billion. Humphrey and Hughes on Sept. 14 kicked this estimate up to $4.7 billion—even though Congress slashed Eisenhower spending proposals by $1.6 billion.

The question may well be raised whether the President, in his four years of office, will ever have a "balanced" budget, even though he and Congress together keep cutting expenditures.

Eisenhower has slashed spending in many ways, including the military ground forces, to something approaching the bare bone. Orders have gone to Cabinet members to hold down spending below even the levels appropriated by Congress.

Still, Humphrey and Hughes admit that the red-ink columns are likely to grow longer rather than shorter. It is small wonder that the "efficient" businessmen running the government were willing to accept a "temporary" $6 billion increase in the legal national debt limit. If they hadn't accepted the "compromise," Eisenhower would have had to call a special session of Congress—perhaps, shockingly for the GOP, before the election—for a showdown fight.

If the President and the "efficient" businessmen recognized the facts about the potential expansion of the American standard of living, they wouldn't be worried about temporary deficits and wouldn't be trying to kill federal government activity in the field of full employment.

★ An anonymous reporter, observing the scene as Len Hall and Steve Mitchell prepared to sign their code of "fair election practices," remarked: "This is the first platform in history on which two national committee chairmen were invited to commit perjury in public at the same time."

Issues In The Election—

After Ike's Promises On T-H, All We Got Was Double Talk

(Second in a series of articles on issues in the election campaign.)

EVERY YEAR since 1948 the Taft-Hartley Act has been a major election issue and 1954 will be no exception despite the glib promises of Pres. Eisenhower.

Taft-Hartley was passed in 1947 by the Republican-dominated 80th Congress. It amended the Wagner Act of 1935 which had put the fundamental rights of organized labor on a legal basis. It substituted 30 packed pages of legalistic double-talk for a fairly simple 12-page document.

The double-talk and the double meaning have been intensified since the Eisenhower Administration rode into power—partly with the support of union members who were impressed by his campaign statements.

Candidate Eisenhower told the AFL convention Sept. 17, 1952: "America wants no law licensing union-busting. Neither do I."

Nine days less than a year after taking office Eisenhower revealed his labor policy—to make Taft-Hartley worse than ever.

The Same Old Meat Ax

It wasn't the first indication that the GOP elephant carried no olive branch in its trunk for labor. It was just a meat ax carefully camouflaged for the campaign.

Six months after taking office Eisenhower succumbed to pressure from his reactionary allies and withdrew the Taft-Hartley changes recommended by Labor Sec. Durkin. Durkin quit, new and more severe Taft-Hartley changes were channeled through the White House up to Capitol Hill.

The "fair and just" treatment which Candidate Eisenhower promised had been forgotten by the time he listed the 14 points on which he wanted Taft-Hartley changed. Included among these was a new gimmick—to require balloting after a strike was in progress to see if it should be continued, the balloting to be conducted by the government.

Labor Sec. Mitchell, who succeeded Durkin, told the last CIO convention that he (and presumably the President) favored a Taft-Hartley amendment that would "minimize the amount of government intervention in labor disputes."

The day that Eisenhower made his anti-labor policies public Mitchell held a press conference where he was asked by a CIO News reporter if he thought government-run strike voting was minimizing intervention. He admitted he did not.

Taft-Hartley is still on the law books today—unamended by even a single comma or word. No thanks for this are due the GOP or the President. Organized labor was forced to fight not for repeal or modification as in other years, but to keep the reactionaries in the Republican Party from making the act worse.

On May 7 the Senate rejected consideration of the Eisenhower-backed bill to amend Taft-Hartley. This had the effect of preventing any further action on the bill by the 83rd Congress.

All 48 Democrats lined up solidly for recommittal—although two of these votes were paired. The 46 Democratic votes, plus three Republican votes (Langer, Malone and Young) and Independent Morse, were more than sufficient to return the bill to committee.

The recommittal vote followed a full week of debate, principally on the "states rights" amendments which could have meant almost complete abdication of federal rights in the field of labor relations.

Although the vote to send Taft-Hartley's amendments back to committee was considered a victory for the liberal, pro-labor side, the basic issues surrounding Taft-Hartley still remain.

Labor will continue to insist that both Houses of Congress resume consideration of ways to make the labor law "fair and just" as Eisenhower promised.

The Labor Board Moves In

Rebuffed in its attempt to stiffen Taft-Hartley by legislation, the Eisenhower Administration had another string to its bow. And it continued to launch arrows at the heart of unions and working people. The Administration was able to do this through control of the National Labor Relations Board.

The conservatives who drafted Taft-Hartley had foreseen this opportunity. Business Week magazine had predicted Dec. 18, 1948, that "given a few million unemployed in America, given an Administration in Washington which was not pro-union, the Taft-Hartley Act conceivably would wreck the labor movement."

Eisenhower got control of the Labor Board by appointing a new Republican majority of three men—all of whom had anti-labor backgrounds:

Guy Farmer, the new chairman of the NLRB, is an attorney who formerly represented employers in cases before the board he now heads.

Philip Rodgers is a former employe of the Senate appointed to that job by the late Sen. Taft, the co-author of the act bearing his name.

Albert C. Beeson, the latest appointee, who told the Senate he had dropped all his connections with a California chemical firm even though it was revealed he was still getting a pension from the firm and had an agreement to return to the firm after his service on the board.

Numerous Democratic senators refused to vote for Beeson's confirmation. Among these was Sen. Neely (D. W. Va.) who asserted he woud not vote "for anyone who is an infamous liar by his own statements." Beeson won confirmation by a narrow 45 to 42 vote.

The new board promptly announced a program of replacing staff members in what it called "policy positions." All this has created considerable doubt whether the board is still an independent, non-partisan agency, free of political influences as intended by Congress.

Some of the decisions handed down by the GOP-dominated board have removed almost all doubts in this quarter as precedent after precedent has been shattered. It has revised Taft-Hartley by "re-examination" of previous decisions.

The Octopus Has Grown New Tentacles

Facts From PAC

This article was prepared from material in the 1954 Handbook of the CIO Political Action Committee. Copies of the Handbook are available at $3 each from the CIO-PAC, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Changing The Law

Here are five new "interpretations" of the Taft-Hartley Act by the Eisenhower-appointed majority on the National Labor Relations Board which have made "a bad act worse" despite congressional refusal to change the law at the past session:

- Narrow the right of a union to strike by requiring an additional "cooling-off" period beyond the 60 days required by Taft-Hartley.
- Cut off millions of small business employes from any protection of the law by reducing the jurisdiction of the board.
- Permit employers to question individual workers on whether they have joined a union or want to join a union.
- Encourage members of an employers' association to lock out union workers when the union has called a strike against only one employer in the association.
- Curtail unions of a fair opportunity to answer anti-labor arguments made by an employer to a captive audience of his workers.

The Fight For Congress

Douglas Wages Uphill Fight Ag

Slush Fund Aids Lobbyist Meek

By MILTON PLUMB

THE PRAIRIE STATE has two official nicknames. Illinois is also sometimes known as the Sucker State, and this year the Republican Party and its reactionary rulers hope to pin this tag on the state's nine million people.

By all standards, Sen. Douglas (D.) has been recognized throughout the nation as one of our best Senators. Washington newspapermen have voted him "the most able." He's been honored many times by national magazines, universities and non-partisan organizations for his service.

Another Campaign Exclusive

Yet today, as The Wall Street Journal acknowledges, "Douglas is the Republicans' No. One political target for Nov. 2. That's why Ike picked Springfield to open his campaign for a GOP Congress next year."

Already there are signs that the estimated $5 million slush fund which Texas oilmen and others earlier had earmarked to defeat Sen. Humphrey (D. Minn.), who appears to be unbeatable, has been diverted to Illinois. The election in Minnesota wasn't for sale, but the GOP hopes the Sucker State one has a price tag.

A Stacked Deck

If Douglas were running nationally, there's little doubt about it. He'd be overwhelmingly re-elected to a second term in the Senate. But Illinois is a traditionally Republican state, and Douglas—as of now—faces an uphill fight.

Virtually all of the cards are stacked against him. His Republican opponent, Joseph Meek, long a lobbyist for the business interests, has seemingly limitless funds, whereas Douglas is running on such a tight budget that no literature about him was available at booths his supporters set up at Labor Day outings.

And all of the so-called organs of public opinion—the large newspapers, bill boards, radio and TV programs—are dominated by his opponent. Money gives Meek control over the last three, and the Illinois press, like Pres. Eisenhower, has put the Republican Party ahead of even the most meritorious Democrat.

Douglas has had the enmity of Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the powerful Chicago Tribune and actual Republican boss of Illinois, ever since his election in 1948. In that year, he defeated the Tribune's "pet errand boy," C. Wayland (Curly) Brooks, by a plurality of 407,000 votes.

Pres. Eisenhower, on the other hand, has endorsed Meek, who is an isolationist and has fought most of the things the President advocates. The President also opened the Republican Party's drive for control of the 84th Congress at the Illinois State Fair with an attack on Douglas as one of the "prophets of gloom and doom."

Meek sat on the platform with the President, who later posed with him in a cordial handshake.

Despite these odds, however, the Democrats are not writing off their chances of ultimate victory in the Illinois Senate race. In fact, wiser heads among the Republicans are frankly worried over evidences that a strong Democratic trend is beginning to set in throughout the state.

Republican attacks upon Douglas for his demands that the Administration do something about growing unemployment are beginning to backfire. It is difficult, despite the best soap-advertising techniques in the world, to convince an unemployed worker or a profitless farmer that they—as the GOP is trying to put it—"never had it so good."

The facts are that unemployment has reached distress proportions in some areas of the state, and even these official state figures fail to take into account the many thousands of workers now on half-ime or less.

Farmers Are Muttering

Illinois farmers, who produce the second largest crop of corn in the nation, are openly muttering about the GOP's cut in price supports at a time when drought has already wiped out a large portion of their income.

At Republican night in Bethalto, where the town is celebrating its centennial, Meek was booed by a supposedly friendly audience when he criticized Douglas' concern over unemployment. Douglas followed him to the same platform on Labor Day and drew heavy applause when he again demanded that the government act to insure a prosperous economy.

Douglas launched his campaign at Labor Day rallies in East St. Louis, Granite City, South Roxana, and Bethalto. Despite 120-degree heat, crowds estimated to total at least 75,000 turned out to cheer him.

On the same day, Meek urged union members to "fight with all their might" against labor leaders, whom he called "fawning sycophants." He called on labor to avoid "unproductive strikes, restrictions on production, curbing the influx of apprentices, and higher dollar wage rates without relation to productivity."

In contrast, Douglas' remarks were directed against the new Republican National Labor Relations Board which, he charged, is "packed with members hostile to labor."

"This board has ruled that it is all right for an employer to question workers about union membership provided he does not openly threaten them," he said. "The facts are that such questioning is in its very nature coercive and should be as illegal as an employer demanding to know of an employee how he is to vote."

Rep. Price (D.) of East St. Louis introduced Douglas to the rallies. He praised Douglas' record and warned it is time for the Eisenhower Administration to "stop whistling in the dark" and do something about the inflationary trend, higher living costs, increasing unemployment and decreasing pay roll and agricultural income.

The theme of Douglas' campaign was handed to him by the record of the Republican 83rd Congress. He calls the battle against him one of "the special interests against the people," and his audiences indicated clearly they knew what he meant.

Douglas' Labor Day began at a breakfast conference with CIO leaders from Madison and St. Clair Counties in East St. Louis. Robert Krumm, legislative director of the East St. Louis CIO Council, outlined plans for raising money through "Citizens to Re-elect Paul Douglas" Clubs, and Council Pres. Bill Mites pledged all-out support.

Told Of Layoffs

Gene Mayer, CIO Chemical Workers international representative, told Douglas of forthcoming layoffs at the nearby Monsanto Chemical plant. Walter Love, CIO Steelworkers subdistrict director at Granite City, reported that the American Steel Co. in East St. Louis was completely closed, and the Granite City Steel Co. is working two days a week.

From then until midnight and a train to Chicago, Douglas campaigned throughout nearby communities. His caravan

LABOR DAY was Paul Douglas Day in southwestern Illinois, climaxing (left) in hearty acclaim for the Senator at Bethalto, where his opponent was booed when he praised "Eisenhower prosperity." In Granite City (center), Douglas leads Labor Day parade before 20,00 ing up latest official Illinois Labor De ployment in East St. Louis industrial

One Of Meek's Charges Proves To Be A Dud

Smarting under Democratic exposure of his use of Texas oil money to underwrite his campaign, Joseph T. Meek, GOP nominee opposing Sen. Douglas (D. Ill.), recently tried to hit back by blasting one of the Senator's aides.

The latter, Frank McNaughton, resigned a $22,000-a-year job with Time-Life to handle Douglas' campaign publicity at a big cut in salary. Why, Meek wanted to know, should he be criticized for taking Texas money when Douglas has "an Easterner" working for him.

McNaughton, the "Easterner," however, happens to have been born and raised only 30 miles away from the Meek birthplace in Illinois.

DESPITE 120-degree sun, a crowd of 30,000 turned out for Labor Day parade and talk by Douglas (left) in East St. Louis. The Senator's morning begins (center) at conference in Broadview Hotel with CIO officials of East St. Louis. At South Roxana rally, Democratic Rep. Price (right) was cheered by crowd of 10,000 when he introduced Douglas as "the nation's best and most capable member of the U. S. Senate."

ainst Big Money Boys

. "Who's right?" he asks (right), hold-
t. report which shows over 7% unem-rea, with more lay-offs coming.

'Fair Elections Code' Gets Party Approval

A "fair elections practices declaration" condemning "base appeals to racial and religious bigotry" has been approved by top Democratic and Republican Party leaders.

The declaration was suggestion by a number of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish clergy and laymen, and was approved by Democratic Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell and GOP Chairman Leonard Hall at a joint press conference in Washington.

The "fair elections" code may be tested in two states: The Douglas vs. Meek race in Illinois, and the Howell vs. Case contest in New Jersey (where GOP nominee Case is the target for GOP McCarthyite attacks).

traveled about 125 miles accompanied by the sirens of police escorts on the highways and the drums and bugles of the bands of the two-hour long parades he led.

Luncheon was tendered by AFL leaders, also united behind Douglas. For supper, Madison County Farmer Jim Reilly served up one of his prize hogs in the Senator's honor. Reilly, who operates a 312-acre farm, pointed out the drought-blighted corn he had planted and told of the loss he is taking on falling cattle prices as well.

There's no doubt how he'll be voting this fall, and he predicts many of his neighbors will do likewise. Some of them at the dinner added "Amen to that!"

CIO Help Pledged

Illinois CIO leaders feted Douglas the next evening at a dinner in Chicago kicking off the 1954 political action of the State CIO Council. Pres. Joseph Germano, who also is a CIO Steelworkers district director, told the Senator that the 300,000 CIO members in Illinois "will do everything humanly possible" to help win his re-election.

"There's no problem of labor's choice between the candidates," Germano said. "There isn't one thing that labor's for that Meek's for. If it's only a question of money, Paul Douglas is lost, but we in the CIO are going to do everything possible to offset Meek's money by hard work."

Council Vice Pres. Pat Greathouse, who is a CIO Auto Workers regional director, told Douglas that CIO members are working actively in his behalf throughout the state. He added:

"It isn't that we're doing this for Paul Douglas. He's the one who's doing the favor for the people of this state."

(Next week: A report on Michigan, one of a series of exclusive on-the-scene photo-stories which will be featured in The CIO News from now to Election Day.)

ALL NINE Democratic representatives from Illinois in the 83rd Congress are expected to be back again next year, with only three facing marginal races on Nov. 2.

There are at least seven GOP seats, however, which may be filled by Democrats.

Here's a district-by-district summary of the Illinois congressional fight:

Cook County

1st District—Rep. Dawson (D.), incumbent, has strong CIO-PAC backing and should win easily.

2nd District—Rep. O'Hara (D.), who established an outstanding record in his first term in Congress, is given a better than 50-50 chance for re-election.

3rd District—Cook County PAC and the Illinois CIO Council PAC have endorsed James Murray, an attorney and a Democrat. He's given a good chance to unseat Rep. Busbey (R.).

4th District—Former Rep. William Rowan (D.), with PAC's endorsement, is given a good chance to return to Congress by defeating Rep. McVey (R.).

5th District—Rep. Kluczynski (D.), with his usual backing by PAC, is virtually assured of re-election by his continued near-perfect voting record in Congress.

6th District—Rep. O'Brien (D.), again PAC-endorsed, faces virtually the same situation as his colleague in the 5th.

7th District—A 100% voting record during his first partial term in Congress gives Rep. Bowler (D.) a safe grip on his seat for next year. He is running with PAC backing.

8th District—PAC-endorsed Rep. Gordon (D.) is regarded as safe.

9th District—Able Rep. Yates (D.), carrying PAC's endorsement, is waging a hard fight for re-election in this marginal district and his prospects are regarded as very good.

10th District—Rep. Hoffman (R.) cast all "wrong" votes on key issues in the 83rd Congress, according to the CIO Electrical Workers' voting guide, but he's regarded as assured of re-election.

11th District—PAC is backing Harry H. Semrow (D.) against Rep. Sheehan (R.), with a good chance that a Democratic sweep will mean the latter's defeat.

12th District—The situation is like that in the 11th with PAC-endorsed Charles A. Boyle (D.) opposing Rep. Jonas (R.).

Outstate

13th District—Rep. Church (R.) seems certain of re-election.

14th District—Rep. Reed (R.) is likely again to win this Republican stronghold.

15th District—Rep. Mason (R.) is considered virtually re-elected.

16th District—Ditto for Rep. Allen (R.).

17th District—Ditto for Rep. Arends (R.).

18th District—Rep. Velde (R.), who as usual turned in an all "wrong" voting record in the 83rd Congress according to labor voting guides, may go down to defeat this year. He's opposed by Howard S. Rooney (D.).

19th District—Rep. Chipperfield (R.) seems certain of re-election.

20th District—Rep. Simpson (R.) ditto.

21st District—Rep. Mack (D.), with PAC backing, is given a better than 50-50 chance of again carrying this district.

22nd District—Rep. Springer (R.), whom the recent CIO Electrical Workers' voting guide gives the best record of any Republican member of the Illinois delegation (6 "wrong", 4 "right"), is regarded as "safe."

23rd District—PAC-backed Albert R. Imle (D.) is rated a very good chance of defeating Rep. Vursell.

24th District—Rep. Bishop (R.) may go down to defeat before Kenneth J. Gray (D.) because of GOP farm policies.

25th District—Rep. Price (D.), PAC backed, is virtually certain of re-election.

SEN. DOUGLAS delivers major address at Bethalto Centenial Night during his campaign for re-election to a well-earned second term.

REPRESENTATIVES of CIO unions greet the Senator in Chicago, where organized labor is giving him solid support and is working actively.

CHICAGO PAC workers Bob Levin and John Alesia meet with Rep. O'Hara, who compiled an exceptional record during his first term in the House.

KEY LEADERS of CIO's political action in Illinois discuss plans with Douglas at Morrison Hotel. Left to right, Auto Dir. Pat Greathouse, CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Cronin, Douglas and Steelworkers Dir. Joe Germano.

The State Campaigns—

Connecticut PAC Skips The Blarney In Voter Drive

By HERMAN WOLF
Special Correspondent

IF CONNECTICUT has new faces in Congress and at the State Capitol next year, one reason will be the CIO-PAC's new political look.

Not satisfied with waiting until "just before election time," the State CIO-PAC leaders—headed by Pres. Mitchell Sviridoff, Assistant Pres. Daniel J. Gallagher and Sec.-Treas. John J. Driscoll—last year made intensive studies of past successes and failures.

Thus there evolved, in cooperation with national CIO-PAC, new methods to put labor's political activity on a more scientific basis.

What Voters Think

The immediate result was a preliminary three-point program, which has been carefully executed to lay a foundation for the final six weeks of strenuous campaigning. Here are the three points:

1. Securing accurate data on what voters are really thinking, not "what we think they think."
2. Putting together basic facts on State election issues similar to the National CIO-PAC's Fact Book.
3. Gathering the names of non-registered workers, so as to pin-point later activity to get them registered.

As part of this new approach to political action "minus the ballyhoo and blarney," an independent, impartial research group was engaged to discover the voters' views on basic issues.

Result Of Poll

They conducted an opinion poll "in depth" among all income groups covering national as well as State issues.

One significant finding showed that 60% of Connecticut voters have no party preference on "state issues," and it is these people whose votes will be decisive in electing the next governor.

Questions included such State issues as education, housing, highways, the three per cent sales tax, extension of unemployment compensation benefits, re-organizing the State government and re-writing the State Constitution.

On education, 84% wanted to spend more money on schools; and when they were asked how to raise it, almost a third said they would be glad to pay more taxes for this purpose. In addition to the 31% who said "increased taxes," another 28% thought "government economies" would help.

National Issues

National issues covered included taxation, foreign policy, recession or prosperity, and McCarthyism and Communists in government. Almost twice as many persons favored income tax cuts to increase purchasing power, rather than corporation tax cuts as incentives to business.

As to what were considered the most important election issues, the voters selected as follows:

State program for better schools, highways and housing	38%
Recession or prosperity	24%
Communists in government and McCarthyism	16%
Personalities of candidates	10%
3% Sales Tax	3%
Re-organization of state government	3%
No Opinion	5%

With the completed poll as a guide for its research program, CIO-PAC secured the best outside independent experts available to prepare special reports on a number of State issues.

These reports have been issued to union leaders and other interested citizens as a Connecticut Political Issues Fact Book. There have been so many requests for the book from educators and other community leaders, that two printings have already been exhausted.

One of the State's leading newspapers, with over 100,000 circulation, is now running the Fact Book in serial form.

What can this mean on election day?

It could mean a better congressional delegation from Connecticut, and putting Democrat Abe Ribicoff in the Governor's chair.

1. A voter registration survey covering all Connecticut has been conducted by the State CIO-PAC in drive for big vote on Nov. 2. First step was to check city directories to bring lists up to date.

2. Next came the canvass of ward voting lists to determine who was eligible, who needed to register. Canvass determined that 72% of 365,000 industrial workers were registered.

PAC Is A Public Service

By MITCHELL SVIRIDOFF
President, Connecticut State CIO and CIO-PAC

This week 25 billboards in key spots in industrial Connecticut carry the CIO-PAC's public service message urging people to "Check Up Now!" and to make sure that they are registered to vote.

These billboards are another demonstration of a year-round public relations job the CIO carries on in this State, so that all residents will know that "their interests are our interests" and that "our members are citizens just like themselves."

In our political activities, reaching the State's one million voters, we raise money, operate special headquarters and sometimes even distribute upwards of 200,000 leaflets within a 72-hour period. Of course we endorse candidates and work for their election, but we never "tell" anyone how to vote, nor do we claim that we can "deliver" a labor vote.

Along with many civic groups, we have arranged for additional registration days this year, and have convinced election officials in major cities to come directly into school buildings and firehouses, so as to register people as new voters in their own neighborhoods where they work and live.

In 1952 Connecticut turned out at the polls the largest percentage of eligible voters of any State. This year we hope to repeat this performance, and we hope also that CIO-PAC endorsed candidates will get a majority of these votes.

THE CONNECTICUT CIO-PAC knows where 109,123 non-registered industrially-employed persons live and work—and knows exactly who must be reached if an effective registration job is to be done for the 1954 election.

To get these names, the State PAC financed perhaps the most ambitious voter registration survey ever conducted, dealing with the voting habits of an entire state.

The names of more than 1.5 million Connecticut residents were checked in city directories covering 54 cities and towns. This is approximately 75% of the total State population.

Plenty Of Work

More than 50 full and part time workers spent over 10,000 man-and woman-hours during a six-months period to cull the non-voters from among 365,096 names of industrial workers, which were copied from the city directories on to 3 x 5" printed forms, coded and prepared in triplicate.

After noting home address, occupation, place of employment and wife's name on the forms, they were sorted by town, street number and election district—and then checked against master voting lists.

The final result showed 255,973 persons, or 72%, were registered voters.

On the forms of the other 28%, home telephone numbers were added, and registration teams throughout the State are now hunting up some 109,000 workers to make them new voters.

It's a double-hunt operation, too, because one of the forms has been sorted by place of employment, so registration scouts now know who their targets are right on the job in 524 different factories.

The Best Job

When registration began in earnest this September, newspapers throughout Connecticut credited the CIO with doing the best job—and often, the only organized job—in their cities. Everywhere, people came in to register, the press reported, holding postcards from CIO in their hands.

CIO-PAC now has more than 15 offices open, manned full-time, and cooperating with other labor and political groups.

3. Statewide registration survey for PAC was directed by Mrs. Dorthea Glynn.

4. The big paper work job of checking results of Connecticut CIO-PAC's statewide voter survey was carried out by more than 50 full and part-time workers. Here students from Storrs work on survey returns.

5. Final results were some 365,000 cards which indicated where to concentrate registration drive.

Wage Talks In Canada Deadlocked

CANADIAN labor-management relations are now the worst in 10 years.

Despite high profits, Canada's "big business" industries are fighting union demands for higher wages and improved working conditions.

Ford of Canada and CIO Auto Workers negotiators are deadlocked as a result of the rejection of UAW demands for increases of 15c hourly and fringe benefits. A strike vote among 10,000 workers was set for Sept. 19.

COMPANY CLAIMS that the boost would destroy the company's "competitive position" have been countered by UAW statements pointing to the company's big $202 million profits last year, most of which is being used to build up the company's reserves and plant.

The CIO Steelworkers, who have been conducting a drive to bring Canada's steel wages in line with those of the United States, have also found efforts to negotiate new contracts stymied.

Management contends that steel productivity in Canada is not as high as that in the United States, yet steel union officials point to big steel profits and contend that the companies can well afford the boost.

Steel workers have authorized their unions to call a strike if negotiations break down completely,

THE CIO Packinghouse Workers are at the pre-conciliation stage in their negotiations with the huge Canada Packers, Ltd.

One of the factors that has complicated the struggle is the Canadian system, under which various labor disputes, although for the most part nation-wide in scope, must be settled under 10 different provincial labor codes.

A conciliation proposal in one province may differ sharply from one in another province. When this happens, a new fight may develop as each side seeks to establish whichever provincial proposal is most favorable to it as the basis for a nation-wide agreement. —(PAI)

DIPLOMA held by Adele Marie Kelly, Glass Workers Local 95, Ottawa, Ill., means she has just been graduated from Ohio CIO Council summer school at Ohio University.

Shipyard Wage Talks Resumed

After a month's recess, the CIO Shipbuilding Workers last week resumed contract negotiations in New York City with the Bethlehem Steel Co. shipyard division.

Politics Was Main Issue At N. Y. State CIO Meet

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

POLITICAL action was the issue all the way at the New York State CIO Council's three-day convention in Albany.

Meeting in the midst of a series of fast-breaking political announcements, the thousand delegates reflected the excitement that swept the Empire State over the impending retirement of Gov. Tom Dewey and the prospect of a hard-fought campaign for a successor.

Throughout the sessions, it was clear that officers and the big majority of delegates were united in support of Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. With all but a handful of delegates agreeing, the convention gave young FDR its endorsement on the second day of the meeting.

Presented to the convention by Pres. Louis Hollander as "a great son of a great President, and great in his own name," Roosevelt revealed that he would place his name before the state convention Sept. 21-22.

ALSO A CANDIDATE is another leading liberal, Averell Harriman—a leading figure in the Administrations of FDR and of Harry Truman. A number of state Democratic party officials, particularly in New York City, and Sen. Lehman, have come out for Harriman.

A number of the CIO officials voiced their support for young Roosevelt, both on his record and on their belief he would make the most effective candidate for the governorship in the race against Sen. Irving Ives (R.), who will have the GOP nomination.

Roosevelt said his candidacy "is based on the deep and fundamental convinction that we, the people, must return our state government after 12 long years, to the service and interests of our people. With that conviction, we can win the election."

Throughout the meeting, a number of CIO leaders took the speaker's stand to voice criticism of GOP policies in Washington and in New York State.

PRES. JACOB POTOFSKY of the CIO Clothing Workers sharply criticized the President and the GOP Congress for a program "to make the rich richer" while neglecting the needs of wage earners, small businessmen, professional people and farmers.

Mark The Date

Pres. John Grogan of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers derided the Eisenhower Administration's statements on the condition of the national economy. He told the New York CIO convention:

"Back last year, they said 'watch April.' Then Sec. of Commerce Weeks said: 'watch May.' Then Arthur Burns, a great economist who advises the President, said: 'watch November.'

"Yes, sir—the Republicans had better watch November — because the Democrats are going to take the Senate and the House."

Describing unemployment as "tragic, senseless waste that means human misery," Potofsky said:

"An Administration which likes to claim it is liberal in human affairs turned its back to this vital human problem . . .

"What 'prosperity' and 'bold hope' has the Administration brought to the millions of unemployed in this country, to the hundreds of thousands of unemployed steel workers, miners, auto workers and textile workers . . . or to the quarter of a million unemployed here in New York State?"

Pres. Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union lashed out at policies of the Eisenhower and Dewey Administrations—both of which, he said, are not truly responsive to the people's needs.

"We have a good general in the White House, but he's still taking orders—this time from big business," Curran said.

Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers—who heads the New York City CIO Council—criticized New York Democratic Party leaders and their handling of pre-campaign activities, and urged a greater role for labor in state politics.

Hollander and Sec.-Treas. Harold Garno were reelected without opposition. An increase in Council per capita from 1c a month to 2c was approved by the delegates.

SHARP CRITICISM of the New York County Medical Society was voiced in a resolution dealing with the doctors' group's attacks on the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York, to which many union members belong. It said a handful of doctors is attempting to use a "veto power" over the public's efforts to bring down the high cost of medicine.

The Council offered a program to help stem the flow of industry away from New York State to lower wage areas.

World Council Of Churches Hails Role Of Trade Unions

THE RECENT assembly of the World Council of Churches praised the role of trade unions "in fighting exploitation" and improving conditions of labor.

Some 1600 delegates from 163 Protestant, Orthodox and other denominations (except the Roman Catholic) participated in the conference in Evanston, Ill. On the relations of religion and labor, the conference said:

"We welcome the role of responsible trade unions in fighting exploitation and promoting a humane environment for workers, and also the growing cooperation between labor and management to increase the material resources available for human welfare.

"Serious problems arise from the great importance of organized groups, such as trade unions and associations of employers, farmers or professional people.

"Christians can bear witness that these groups must be responsible to their members, and that the members must participate responsibly in the organization."

On wider economic questions, another statement by the World Council of Churches said in part:

"The Church . . . should be especially concerned with the following moral implications of economic life: The state must do those things for the economy that private industry cannot do properly, such as planning for urban development, etc.

"The churches must never fail to recognize that the worker should have a status in society which accords with his responsibilities and his human dignity."

Steel Union Presses Drive Against Bias

THE CIO Steelworkers have taken a major step designed to strengthen the union's continuing fight to achieve full civil rights for all workers.

Pres. David J. McDonald, in a letter to all district directors, staff representatives and local unions, has fully detailed the USA-CIO's policy of outright opposition to all forms of racial discrimination.

The letter also was signed by Sec.-Treas. I. W. Abel and Vice-Pres. James G. Thimmes.

The official letter, which also discussed federal statutes dealing with the union's legal obligations as interpreted by General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg, contained the following instructions:

- No union official is permitted to ratify or approve a contract which provides for racial discrimination.
- No union official is permitted to approve any "side bar agreement, written or oral," which results in discriminatory practices.
- Union officials must process grievances, through to the arbitration step, in behalf of employes discriminated against because of race, creed, color or national origin.
- Immediate steps must be taken to "eliminate any discriminatory practices whenever such practices come to the knowledge of district directors, representatives, or local unions."

McDONALD'S LETTER pointed out that "this union stands unequivocally opposed to discrimination of any sort, shape or form. That policy applies specifically to discrimination in employment."

"Any collective bargaining contract," the union leader said, "which either by its terms or its actual operation permits discrimination on account of race, creed, color or nationality violates the policy of this union."

McDonald said it was likewise the union's "legal duty" to fight job discrimination. He pointed out that as the exclusive bargaining representative of employes in a bargaining unit "it is the union's legal duty to represent every employe in that unit fairly and equally, and in such a manner that no discrimination results."

Textile Sends $1000 To Japan Strikers

"HANDS ACROSS the sea" is more than just a phrase for the 7000 workers—most of them young girls—who have been on strike since last Spring at the Ohmi Silk Mills in Japan.

Last week their strike fund was reinforced with $1000 contributed by the CIO Textile Workers, who declared "your efforts to break down industrial feudalism deserve not only the support of workers throughout the world but of all believers in democracy."

TWUA officers at the same time appealed to Premier Shugeru Yoshida of Japan to investigate the lengthy dispute.

"Investigation by your government will demonstrate," the textile union said, "that there are many violations of the Japanese labor law as well as of the workers' right to organize."

The cable to Japan's Premier by TWUA Pres. Emil Rieve, Executive Vice Pres. William Pollack and Sec.-Treas. John Chupka said "these strikers are fighting against conditions which are inadmissible in a democratic society."

Conditions in the Ohmi mills in a half dozen Japanese cities are no better than a century ago, according to the Japanese Federation of Textile Workers Unions.

Assistance for the Japanese strikers has been organized by the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions and its affiliated Intl. Federation of Textile Workers' Associations.

Brewery Workers Gains Reported By Feller

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

ALTHOUGH the period since its last convention has been one of the most trying in the 68-year history of the Brewery Workers, the union has come out of it safely and its ranks are more strongly united than ever.

So reported Pres. Karl F. Feller to the union's 33d biennial convention, held last week in Detroit. More than 250 delegates, representing 75,000 members in the brewing and allied industries in the U. S. and Canada, attended.

"Just don't wait another '54 years before you come again," Exec. Sec. James L. O'Neill of the Brewery Workers Michigan State Council, said. He referred to two previous Brewery Workers' conventions in Detroit—the first in 1887, the second in 1900.

Hear CIO Leaders

Leading convention speakers included CIO Pres. Walter Reuther, Michigan CIO Pres. August Scholle, CIO Reg. Dir. Herbert McCreedy from Detroit and Richard Leonard, National CIO representative substituting for CIO Executive Vice Pres. John Riffe. Outside speakers were Gov. G. Mennen Williams and Rep. Rabaut (D. Mich.).

Reuther told the delegates that he felt very much at home among the brewery workers, as it was his father's, Valentine Reuther's, old union. (The elder Reuther once was business agent for the Brewery Workers in Wheeling, W. Va.)

Pledge Of Support

"When I come to your convention, it's like coming home," he recalled. "We used to get the Brewery Workers three times a day—at every meal—when I was a kid."

Speaking of recent attempts of the AFL Teamsters to take over the Brewery Workers, Reuther promised that the CIO would stand behind them in meeting the threats of any "empire builders" trying to raid their union.

Urging the membership to back the officers, he added:

"You can't have a strong union unless the rank and file give the officers their loyalty and support."

In his keynote speech and report to the convention, Feller spoke frankly of the tumultuous times the union has endured in recent months under the raiding tactics of the Teamsters—long a guerilla-fighting foe of the Brewery Workers, and one of the major reasons for the union leaving the AFL and joining the CIO in 1946.

Looking back on the campaign of the last year conducted by the Teamsters, with the help of dissident elements in the union who "made a deal with Dave Beck" (the Teamsters' president) and his men, Feller said that their attempts to "plant seeds of suspicion, doubt and hate in the minds of the membership," fell flat and their "sinister intrigues" failed.

"The New York City Teamster agents swarmed like flies all over the country threatening, persuading and promising the moon to local union officers and members," reported Feller.

"In city after city the disruptive work of this wrecking crew met with failure as the international union, with the firm and unwavering support and assistance of the CIO and the cooperation of loyal brewery workers, successfully resisted the enemy on every front."

The claims of these agents that 30,000 members went to the Teamsters were "preposterous," and the record proved it, Feller said.

A careful check of per capita tax records showed that since June 1953, the BWU lost to the Teamsters a total of 7935 members in seven New York City locals; six locals in Albany, Utica and Rochester together; one in Bridgeport, Conn., and one in Newark, N. J.

In Buffalo, N. Y., Feller's report stated, "the secession move was beaten back and we retained our position as representative of all the brewery workers in that city, as a result of an NLRB election."

Today, he assured the delegates, the union "stands more firm and united than ever before. Its ties with the CIO have been multiplied and strengthened through a year of close collaboration against the Teamsters."

Feller urged the delegates "to air any suspicion or doubts" they might have in their minds on the floor of the convention so that all might leave confident and determined to continue the work of strengthening the union.

Contract Gains

In spite of the time and effort consumed in fighting back the raiders and secessionists, the union has forged ahead in winning benefits for its members, Feller reported.

Wages of brewers have been increased by 116% and bottlers 134% since 1940. In the yeast industry, they have risen 118%, and in the soft drink industry, 117%, his report said.

HONORED GUESTS at Brewery Workers convention: Mich. Gov. "Soapy" Williams ties one of his famous polka-dot ties on Pres. Karl Feller. Six-year-old Rhonda Lyn Smith, crippled from birth, shown with a representative of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, presents a citation of appreciation to Feller for the union's generous contributions to the Society's work in rehabilitating afflicted.

Not An Old School Tie In The House When Soapy Spoke

WHEN GENIAL and good lookin' Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, wearing his famous green polka-dot tie, came to the Brewery Workers convention and looked out at his audience, he saw thousands of spots before his eyes.

Every person in the big hall was wearing a replica of the Governor's tie in his honor.

Williams' speech was warm and friendly, and for the most part in a light vein that delighted the delegates. He told them that his nickname "Soapy," which came from his mother's side of the family, might not impress brewery workers.

They might like the nickname his father once had better—"Pickle" Williams (not "pickled" Williams, added the Governor)—as pickles go well with beer.

After thanking the delegates for honoring him by "appearing in those beautiful ties," Williams said he was gratified even though the edge had been blunted a bit on his own little stunt. He'd had the honor of giving his "trade mark" to kings and presidents, Williams said, and then he gave one to Karl Feller, union president.

Pulling a green polka-dot tie out of his pocket, the Governor examined it, reported it had a union label, at which the convention applauded loudly, and tied it carefully around Feller's neck.

Rear View

"What's wrong with the Washington picture?" CIO Pres. Walter Reuther drew loud applause and laughter at the Brewery Workers convention with this answer:

"The little men of big business have the wheel, but they have only a rear view mirror in their cars. They know where they're coming from but they don't know where they're going."

Milwaukee Is Biggest Local

THE LARGEST delegation at the CIO Brewery Workers convention, naturally enough, came from Milwaukee, Wis.—top brewing center of the U. S.

Not only was Milwaukee's Local 9 the biggest local represented at the convention—it is also the biggest local union in the brewing industry in the world.

Local 9 is an amalgamated industrial union with an active membership of some 8000. Its members are employed as brewers, bottlers, drivers. Some work in the malt, yeast and soft drinks industries. Others work in grain elevators, warehouses, and in corn milling and flour plants.

This big local has 13 contracts with 19 companies, and wages and working conditions are among the best in the country. The great majority of the workers are covered by a contarct with the "Big Six" Milwaukee brewers and one distributor.

The union won a new contract with the Milwaukee brewers after a determined 11-week strike last year, during which CIO unions from industrial areas throughout Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan gave a stirring demonstration of support.

Terms of the strike-won contract provided a wage increase and benefits amounting to something over 63c an hour, and brought the average wage in the breweries to about $2.23 an hour.

TOP OFFICERS of the Brewery Workers Union (from left) are Sec.-Treas. Arthur Gildea, Coordinator of State Councils Joseph Brady, Organizing Dir. Thomas Rusch and Pres. Karl F. Feller.

Where, Oh Where Are Those Robins?

Where are those birds of Spring, the ones which were going to signal prosperity and an end to unemployment?

Their arrival several times was postponed by GOP Administration spokesmen, but now fall's at hand, the birds are flying South, and employment expectations aren't looking any better. For example:

- New claims for unemployment compensation benefits are climbing. In the first week of September, they climbed by 60%, blamed in part by the Labor Dept. on layoffs in storm damaged New England plants, also on auto cutbacks. The week's figure was 268,000, up by 23,000 over the week before.
- The heavy industry states still are hardest hit. Entirely apart from New England, the Wall Street Journal (surely no advocate of "gloom and doom") finds unemployment benefit claims are rising in 12 key states from New York to California. In Pennsylvania, the number of new claims rose by 11%.
- Auto industry dropped to the lowest point in 10 months, with model changeovers in full swing. The Michigan Employment Security Commission (which usually underestimates its predictions) said unemployment may reach 300,000 in the state this month. The Detroit total may hit 225,000 or 15% of the labor force.

Criticism of the accuracy of Census Bureau and Commerce Dept. employment figures was voiced by the conservative Interstate Conference of Employment Security Administrators, a group with which labor frequently has tangled on improving federal employment legislation.

The state agencies' group said the Census unemployment figures "have gone seriously astray," not given an accurate picture of the economic situation.

Prediction: The American Statistical Association, meeting in Montreal, was told that even a small increase in production in the latter months of the year will not bring a decline in unemployment.

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

TRAVELING THROUGH the steel centers of Pennsylvania last week, I found that the sorry facts of our current unemployment problem are evident everywhere.

No fine words can hide the picture of men out of work, families suffering. We have a right to continue to ask the Administration in Washington: "When are you going to do something about this situation?"

It would seem that the people of Maine tired of waiting for the Administration to take action. They took their own kind of action, democratic action, in their recent election. The people are speaking out for the kind of government they want, and their voices will yet be heard in the nation's capital.

A wire from Boyd Payton, Southern director of organization for the CIO Textile Workers, reports a major victory at Tuxedo, N. C. Staffmen Bernard Ward and Ted Rhodes participated in this election, which saw a great majority of the more than 300 workers at the Green River Mills, a combed yarn plant, select TWUA-CIO their collective bargaining representative.

I have pointed out many times how difficult are the problems in organizing the unorganized textile workers of this nation. Boyd Payton and his staff deserve our highest commendation for the steady, patient manner in which they continue their efforts in the face of grave problems.

CIO OIL WORKERS' Sec.-Treas. T. M. McCormick reports three election victories for his union: Allby Asphalt & Refining Corp., Hammond, Ind.; Bryton Chemical Co., Trainer, Pa.; and the terminal of the Sinclair Refining Co., Macungie, Pa.

Al Hartnett's office brings further news of the CIO Electrical Workers' unceasing effort to drive the Communist-dominated UE out of our industrial life. We reported once before that the workers at Stacey Machine Works, Inc., Agawam, Mass., had voted to disaffiliate from UE and return to the CIO. That action has now been followed by an NLRB election, in which 61 out of 65 workers voting reaffirmed their previous action.

In addition to this victory, IUE-CIO won at General Screw Products, Inc., Milwaukee, Wis. The shop now becomes part of IUE-CIO Amalgamated Local 1142. Workers of two other plants chose IUE-CIO: New Cassel Electronics, Long Island, N. Y.; and Electrical Engineering Equipment Co., Chicago, Ill.

In a representation election at the Faberge, Inc., plant at Ridgefield, N. J., workers chose the CIO Chemical Workers to represent them, according to a report from Elwood D. Swisher, UCGWA president and director of organization.

The CIO Retail-Wholesale Workers are continuing their aggressive organizational activities throughout the nation. George De Nucci, CIO regional director, reports that at McClellan's Home Dairy, Lancaster, O., RWDSU-CIO was overwhelmingly selected as collective bargaining agent.

State Fact-Finders Take Over As IWA Votes To End Strike

STRIKING West Coast members of the CIO Woodworkers have voted to submit their dispute to a seven-man fact finding committee and return to work.

The Portland headquarters of the union announced that the members had voted 59% to 41% in a secret referendum for acceptance of the proposal advanced jointly by the governors of Oregon and Washington.

Under the terms of the agreement, the fact-finding committee will not have the power to make a final and binding decision. However, the board's recommendations will be made public, if either the unions or employers fail to adopt them.

On the fact-finding panel will be two members from labor, two from industry and two public members, one each from the states involved. The chairman, also a public member, will vote only in the case of a tie and will be jointly appointed by the two governors.

The AFL Sawmill and Lumber Workers, who went on strike at the same time as the IWA-CIO and who previously had accepted this proposal, will name one of the labor members. The other will be chosen by the IWA.

The IWA said the workers will return to their jobs as individual employers agree to the proposal. Earlier, industry organizations involved had predicted all employers would agree to submission of the dispute to a fact-finding board.

AT THE SAME TIME, the IWA announced that locals involved in the dispute with the giant Weyerhaeuser Corp., voting in a separate referndum, had accepted the offer submitted by that company.

Weyerhaeuser, whose wage pattern had been 5c ahead of the industry, offered an additional 2.5c, creating a 7.5c wage pattern. This offer was accepted by an 82% vote, the IWA said.

Repeal Of New Jersey Ban On Utility Tieups Asked

REPEAL of New Jersey's law outlawing strikes in public utilities has been recommended by a special committee named by Gov. Robert B. Meyner.

The committee pointed out that the measure is of "doubtful constitutionality" under U. S. Supreme Court decisions and has failed to prevent utility tieups since enactment eight years ago.

The CIO Communications Workers—directly affected by the law—urged that a repealer be presented to the New Jersey Legislature, which will meet shortly.

CWA Pres. Joseph A. Beirne, who also is a CIO vice president, called for early legislative action on repeal of the anti-strike law.

The New Jersey report was drawn up by a nine-man labor-management-public committee headed by Arbiter David L. Cole.

Instead of the state seizure and operation of utilities, the report urged emphasis on traditional methods of collective bargaining, reinforced by operations of the State Board of Mediation.

The report also urged the Legislature to reaffirm support of collective bargaining as "the most efficient means of resolving labor disputes."

Lone dissent to the report came from Luke A. Kiernan, Jr., counsel for the Public Service Electric & Gas Co.—Jersey's biggest private utility.

Old North Church Drive Is Backed

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther has been named a sponsor of the committee created to raise funds to restore an historic Boston building damaged by Hurricane Carol last month.

The storm wrecked the steeple of Old North Church, famed as the spot where signal lights alerted Paul Revere to the advance of the British toward Lexington and Concord in the hours just before the American Revolution started.

Reuther and other Americans are sponsors of the campaign to raise funds to restore the damaged steeple.

Rhodes Blast Chatham At Big Elkin TWUA Rally

THE POWERFUL anti-labor boss of Elkin, N. C., was unable recently to stop his employes from hearing a pro-union speaker, Rep. Rhodes (D. Pa.).

Barred from any meeting place in Elkin—a mill town dominated by Rep. Chatham, owner of the anti-labor Chatham Blanket Co.—Rhodes delivered his blistering attack on his fellow congressman in an old store building in near-by Ronda.

More than 500 Chatham workers, openly defying the company, roared their approval of Rhodes' blast at the North Carolina lawmaker for denying his employes the right of assembly and the right to form a labor union.

Stressing "the dangers to American institutions from the very persons who give lip service to these ideals but in practice stifle free speech and suppress the right to organize," the Pennsylvania Democrat said:

"We have a struggle today which must not be underestimated. It must be fought with every fiber of our being. It is the fight against Communism and every other sort of totalitarianism which would rob free men of their rights and starve men's souls in the famine spots of degradation and humiliation."

Pointedly attacking Chatham, Rhodes said:

"We can no more give a stamp of approval to refusal of a meeting place here than we can to destruction of human dignity in countries other than ours. Freedom is our most precious possession. We must guard it every second."

Rhodes also attacked YMCA officials who have barred union meetings in the Y, to which Chatham workers have contributed for years.

CIO Textile Worker officials reported that a majority of the Chatham workers have signed union application cards. It is expected that a petition for an NLRB election will be filed shortly.

More About Letter To Retail

(Continued from Page 3)

deadletter statement. I have said time and again that I will fight corruption wherever I find it—within or without the labor movement.

I believe that the union official who preys upon the rights or funds of union members has no place in the labor movement and should be sent to jail.

It has been a matter of deep concern to me that, during the past three days, there has been no statement from you or other responsible officials of the Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union concerning these shocking revelations and admissions before the Insurance Dept. of New York State.

It is clear that this situation requires prompt remedial action by the international officers of your union.

The National CIO, in years past, has concerned itself with Communist domination of affiliated unions. The National CIO has the same moral obligation to concern itself with evidence of racketeering in its affiliated unions.

So far as the CIO is concerned, we do not recognize any "autonomous right" to practice the corruption of crime or Communism. We in the CIO cannot and will not tolerate crooks or Communists in the labor movement.

Accordingly, I call upon you, as president of the Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union, to take prompt remedial action against the local officials involved in the malpractices disclosed at these hearings. I am placing this matter on the agenda of the meetings of the Executive Committee and the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations at our Headquarters in Washington on Oct. 4-5; and I will expect a full report of the corrective action taken by your union against the individuals named in these hearings and any others against whom there is a legitimate charge of racketeering or maladministration.

On the basis of that report, the Executive Committee and the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations will make a determination as to their future course of action in this matter."

Pay, Pensions Boosted At Westinghouse

THREE HOURS before a strike deadline, the Westinghouse Corp. last week came to terms with the CIO Electrical Workers on a new contract, calling for average wage increases of 5c an hour.

The two-year contract, with a one-year reopener, also includes improved pension benefits for the 50,000 IUE members in 23 locals in the Westinghouse chain.

Wage increases will be retroactive to July 1. Earlier Westinghouse had insisted on an Aug. 1 retroactivity date, but capitulated just before the Sept. 10 strike deadline.

UNDER the contract, wage increases will run from 3.5c to 7c an hour, with equivalent raises for salaried employes.

Westinghouse also increased its contribution for pensions from $1.60 to $1.70 a week for each worker. The new IUE contract includes a provision guaranteeing workers who are already retired all future increases in federal social security improvements.

Under the new pension provision, a worker retiring at age 65 after 30 years of service will receive a pension of $159.50 per month.

Vandercook Shifts As DST Ends

The seasonal end of Daylight Savings Time will cause some changes in broadcast times of the CIO-sponsored nightly newscast. "John W. Vandercook and the News," the American Broadcasting Co. reports.

In Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, ABC reports, Daylight Saving Time will not end on Sept. 25, as is the case in other areas of the country where the clocks were changed several months ago.

Those states will observe "fast time" until Oct. 31, thus putting the Vandercook show on the air one hour later in all three states.

At the same time, ABC announced the addition of station WSOO in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to the network carrying the Vandercook show. There the CIO-sponsored broadcast will be on the air at 10:45 p.m., starting Oct. 4.

Give A Buck To PAC —The Job You Save May Be Your Own

Rubber Workers Strengthen Defense Fund

By EUGENE A. KELLEY

ECHOES of the recent strikes against two major rubber companies were heard during the 19th annual convention of the CIO Rubber Workers last week in Boston.

The URW-CIO constitution was amended to provide a 50c monthly dues increase for a strike and defense fund.

In another major step the union ended issues pending several years by voting to hold conventions every two years and to elect local union offcers for two-year terms.

Buckmaster Re-elected

Pres. L. S. Buckmaster, who was reelected without opposition, lauded Goodyear and Firestone workers who "bore the brunt of this fight" and the U. S. Rubber and Goodrich locals "who held themselves in ready reserve."

The strikes, Buckmaster reported, demonstrated many valuable lessons. One, he said, was that "the present political climate favors the employer. The cards are stacked in his favor."

The second, he continued, was that "a good union is the best insurance a worker can have against a bad employer and the best guarantee that a good employer stays good."

Buckmaster assailed the Eisenhower Administration for "distorted and inaccurate reports on the economic facts of life, and silly predictions on when economic recovery may be expected." He told the 600 delegates who represented URW's 186,000 members:

"The President of the U. S. continues to fiddle while the economic fires die out. Someone has suggested it is just as possible to fiddle with a fly rod or a golf club as with a fiddle as Nero is supposed to have done."

Chester Bowles, former Ambassador to India, warned that "the great ideas of our country" may be used against us.

"This can happen unless we get into tune with mankind and the aspirations of mankind," Bowles said.

He said the U. S. had been moving backwards rapidly and dangerously during these last two years. He called on the nation to get into "the great tradition of the American liberal movement and to reach across the oceans and into the hearts of mankind."

Bowles urged expansion of our domestic economy with more jobs and security for workers. He added "it is not enough to be almost as good this year as we were in 1953."

Reelected with Buckmaster were Vice Pres. Joseph W. Childs and Sec.-Treas. Desmond Walker.

The sessions upheld Buckmaster's prediction it would be "a hard-working convention." In addition, an evening session featured discussion of political issues led by URW Education Dir. Joe Glazer, Hy Bookbinder of the CIO Legislative Dept., and Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., of Harvard University.

"FOOLS ECONOMIC PARADISE" was the way CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther (left photo) described nation's economy to 19th annual convention of CIO Rubber Workers in Boston. Convention badge is pinned on Reuther by URW Sec. Treas. Desmond Walker in second photo. From left are Organization Dir. Fleet Perrine, Gen. Pres. L. S. Buckmaster, Reuther, Walker and Vice Pres. Joseph W. Childs. Convention voted biennial sessions and dues increase.

Labor's Fight On Reds Hailed

Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston told the Rubber Workers convention the fact "that communism has not penetrated deeply into the life and institutions of our country is due in no small measure to the energetic and responsible efforts of organized labor to make social justice and social charity living realities in our economic life."

"Your struggle to secure decent wages, hours and conditions of work, your removal of labor from the market place as a mere commodity, your insistence that a man is still a man, in spite of the color of his skin—have made for a sound, stable America well able to resist the cancerous germ of Communist poisoning," the Archbishop said.

Murray Memorial Presents Grant To Church Council

PRESENTATION of a $200,000 grant by the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation to the National Council of Churches of Christ was made at a ceremony last week in New York City.

Emil Rieve, chairman of the Foundation and president of the CIO Textile Workers, led the CIO group participating in the ceremonies.

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and Bishop William C. Martin, president of the National Council of Churches, also participated.

The church group will use the $200,000 grant "on behalf of the practical application of religious principles to the everyday world of economic life."

The Council of Churches is the central body of most Protestant denominations in the U. S.

'Scholarships For Peace' Plan Urged By Ruether

A BOLD program of "scholarships for peace" was proposed by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther to the Rubber Workers convention.

He suggested scholarships so that young men and women might study medicine, engineering or the teaching profession with the provision that upon graduation they serve overseas as "technical missionaries."

"They would go overseas not with guns or tanks or flamethrowers but with medical kits, slide rules and textbooks," he said, "and the more of these we sent to the underprivileged countries of the world, the fewer young men we would have to send to fight communism in distant lands."

Reuther flayed the Administration and the recently-adjourned Congress.

"No one can call it a do-nothing Congress," the CIO head asserted. "It did a lot for business but almost nothing for the people. It didn't do much for the people but it did an awful lot to them."

Reuther praised URW officers and said the CIO was trying to build teamwork in the leadership on top and solidarity in the ranks. With this combination, he declared, "No corporation or group of reactionaries can beat us."

In attacking the Administration's foreign policy, Reuther said the U. S. "should bring back the millionaires who represent us as ambassadors overseas and put them back in the Union League clubs where they belong."

"Then we should send some plain dirt farmers and some workers in overalls to represent us truly with the people of other countries," he added.

Pointing to the economic picture, he said the GOP had failed to do anything about improving unemployment insurance. "Franklin Roosevelt gave us the insurance, the Republicans gave us the unemployment," he quipped.

Reuther later told a press conference passage of a $1.25 minimum wage law would help New England and prevent its textile communities from becoming "ghost towns."

Vandercook Heard On Voice

THE VOICE of Amercia chose excerpts from John W. Vandercook's Labor Day broadcast for a special holiday broadcast beamed across the Iron Curtain.

Vandercook's tribute, part of his nightly newscast over the American Broadcasting Co. network, highlighted the Voice of America's special broadcast.

The CIO sponsors Vandercook's five-night-a-week news commentary.

Storms Idle Thousands In New England Steel, Textile Mills

THOUSANDS of New England CIO members faced involuntary idleness last week in the wake of the second devastating hurricane to hit the area within 11 days.

Crippled power lines and raging flood waters kept plants closed for periods of from one or two days to more than two weeks.

Particularly hard hit were textile plants in Fall River and New Bedford, Mass. and steel fabricating plants in Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Hurricane Carol struck the area Aug. 31, and while repairs were being made, Hurricane Edna added further destruction. Damage amounted to nearly $500 million, and loss of life from the two blows was close to 100.

CIO Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson has asked CIO councils in New England to demand that power and telephone lines be carried underground to avoid future hardship. State legislatures will be asked to insure that there will be no repetition of power failures such as occurred in the two storms, affecting more than two million families.

Edna's blast was the fifth hurricane to hit the New England states in 16 years. Thompson noted that wind and rain had knocked out hundreds of thousands of telephones in that region.

Thompson anticipated objections to burying phone and power cables because of the cost but said "no amount of arguing about costs can overcome the hardships that the people have suffered due to the lack of power for preserving and cooking food."

"I hope that your state CIO council will meet this challenge head-on," Thompson said, "by demanding legislation be passed that any public utility company desiring to operate . . . will first give consideration to the needs of the people, rather than the profit motive.

"If the public utility companies find it would create financial difficulties to put their wires and cables underground then the federal government should be called upon to assist financially, because this is truly a federal problem."

Thompson called upon the state councils to enlist the aid of congressmen and senators in cutting red tape so that proper financial aid would be forthcoming for the utility companies. He indicated that he had already received promises of support for his proposal from some Democratic members of Congress from New England.

As the area dug itself from under flood-borne silt or cleared trees from fallen power lines, CIO members from other states were helping with the tremendous job.

Particularly active were telephone line crews from as far away as Maryland and Midwest States, members of the CIO Communications Workers who were rushed to New England to assist with the job of restoring service.

Out-of-state members of the CIO Utility Workers also were called in for utility repairs.

Even the Score in '54 Give a Buck to PAC

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., September 27, 1954 Vol. 17, No. 39

Steelworkers Urge Unity Now

—See Pages 2-3

THE STEEL UNION MEETS—Pres. David J. McDonald (right) of the CIO Steelworkers confers with Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes (left) and Sec.-Treas. I. W. Abel on convention platform at Atlantic City during USA-CIO's big convention. In a major convention address, McDonald called for a determined effort to gain U. S. labor unity as the 2500 delegates cheered enthusiastically. (Stories and more pictures on Pages 2-3.)

THE BIG LOOK—"Check up now! To vote you must be registered." That's what the Connecticut CIO-PAC is advising in public service billboards throughout the State. Examining the board (from left) are Herman Wolf, State PAC publicity aide, Pres. Mitchell Sviridoff of State CIO Council and PAC, and Sec.-Treas. John J. Driscoll. The billboards are part of a political action program "minus the ballyhoo and blarney" in Connecticut.

Steel Union Urges End To 'Critical' Layoffs

WITH STEEL industry production off one-third from last year, the CIO Steelworkers issued a special report on "Steelworkers and the National Economy" which called for a dramatic program of economic recovery.

Some 227,100 steelworkers were jobless on Aug. 15, the report said, and an additional 195,225 were working part time. The situation in Canada was described as "equally critical."

Pres. David J. McDonald, in the report, said the country is obviously facing "something more than a harmless routine inventory problem" when the entire economy stops growing and "in fact begins to deteriorate because a whole series of industries find that production has been exceeding sales."

Because of continuing rises in productivity and constantly growing population, the union report pointed out, "our economic system must create more jobs each year."

Noting claims that 1954 is the second best year in the nation's economic history, McDonald said "second best is never good enough in a growing nation like ours, whose economy must expand every year if America is to remain prosperous."

The 1954 recessionary gap, the union said, has already cost America about $30 billion—the difference between the rate of gross national product this spring and the rate if the economy had operated at a full employment level.

To meet the situation, the union proposed a seven-point program which paralleled CIO's economic program for the nation. It called for:

1. An enlightened wage policy by management, to keep pace with rising productivity.

2. A rise in minimum wages.

3. Social security coverage for the disabled and still further raises in benefits, to supplement the "humanitarian advances" voted by Congress this year.

4. Big increases in unemployment compensation benefits and in the duration of benefit payments.

5. Opposition to "granting unwarranted special favors" in tax bills of corporations, while supporting "every reasonable proposal to encourage business enterprise."

6. Construction of two million homes a year to improve the housing of low and moderate income families.

7. A big public works program.

ATLANTIC CITY SCENES — Listening through earphones to translator's report, these Dutch unionists (left) were among the guests at CIO Steelworkers convention. At right, a group of women delegates and guests tramp along the Boardwalk.

Clint Golden Gets A Hand From Old, New Friends

CLINTON S. GOLDEN, one of the founding officials of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in 1936, received a warm welcome from the USA-CIO delegates.

Golden, now a Harvard professor and director of the University's Trade Union program, presided during the convention discussion of the officers' report.

Hailing the "opportunity to see new faces," Golden said: "The only permanent thing in a free society such as ours is change. We've got to find better, new ways of improving the relationships between labor and management."

Welfare Benefits Boosted In Two USA Settlements

BETTER social insurance agreements with U. S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel will provide an additional $350 million in benefits in the next two years for CIO Steelworkers, the convention was told.

Programs worked out with the two firms a few days prior to the convention will become effective Nov. 1. They are financed by equal contributions from employers and workers totaling about 9c an hour. The settlements are expected to open the way for similar agreements with some 2000 other steelmaking and associated companies.

Union officials disclosed the programs for raising life insurance on employes from $1000 to an average of $3700, while sickness and accident benefits will go from the present $26 a week to $40. Surgical benefits also have been improved.

Hospitalization payments will increase from $6 a day for a private room to $10, with the length of stay stretched from a maximum of 70 to 120 days.

Expert Warns Unions Must Plan To Meet Challenge Of Automation

AUTOMATION—the use of automatic machinery, automatically controlled—is rapidly moving into industry and will require careful planning by both labor and management, a leading expert told the USA-CIO convention.

Prof. Gordon Brown of Massachusetts Institute of Technology warned the 3000 attentive delegates that "the real problem is too often dismissed by saying: automation will displace labor, but since it will create up-graded jobs, everything will be lovely."

"I hear too little," Brown said, "about how the worker who is displaced moves into the upgraded job."

Looking ahead—not very far, he indicated—Brown said that "flexibility and versatility of the working man to perform widely varying tasks seems more and more likely to be at a premium."

"CREATING the opportunity for both oldsters and youngsters to move into a better job—an upgraded job—may become an issue of importance comparable with that of higher wages in a job classification that soon may not exist," he added.

Management, he declared, might help solve the problem of "technical upgrading of workers" by "widespread use of on-the-job training, well in advance of the introduction of a new automatic process or technique."

PROF. GORDON BROWN

Labor, according to the MIT expert, must ensure that it is continuously informed on technical advances, that it is represented in the technical societies, that it "should face up to the reality of job upgrading, for the fluidity of the times requires mobility of policies affecting labor in the fields of automation."

Automation, Brown declared, "will mushroom, and we couldn't stop it even if we wanted to."

The truly important thing about automation, Brown pointed out, is that "our jobs will change." He explained:

"FOR EXAMPLE, the introduction of TV into the steel industry so that a remote operator may determine the state of a melt in a furnace eliminates a host of simple instruments. But a TV system is vastly more complicated technically than the thermometers or pyrometers which it displaces.

"The displaced instrument maker or instrument maintenance man needs a higher level of skill to qualify as an electronics technician or TV maintenance man."

USA Pres. David J. McDonald, referring to the same problem, told the convention that on-the-line production workers are decreasing, while the number of engineers and technicians is growing.

"We'll have to organize them into the steel union or we'll have a smaller union," McDonald said.

(More on automation, Page 8.)

Labor Help On School Integration Asked By NAACP

ORGANIZED labor can play a major part in helping solve the "serious internal problems" arising out of opposition to the Supreme Court decision against school segregation, the steel convention was told by Walter White of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

White's speech was delivered by Herbert Hill of the NAACP, because of White's illness.

Describing a number of moves designed to offset the court decision, White's speech said that "all these fantasies are merely tactics of desperation, to postpone as long as possible the inevitable day of integration —when we as a nation will, in education, jobs, housing, government and moral principle, be truly indivisible."

The USA-CIO civil rights resolution renewed a pledge to work for the "emancipation" of all who are denied their basic rights and to make meaningful the constitutional guarantee of equality.

Steel Board Raps Welfare Racketeers

Union officials and employers who have "betrayed their trust" by dipping into union welfare insurance funds were roundly condemned by the CIO Steelworkers' Executive Board at a meeting on the eve of the union's Atlantic City convention.

Noting that the Steelworkers have negotiated contracts which involve the expenditure of $175 million in insurance funds annually, the resolution added:

"Neither the employer nor the union nor any of its representatives receives any money whatsoever from these funds for administrative or other purposes whatsoever."

Reuther Sends Greetings From CIO

The following greeting was sent by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther to Pres. David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers on opening of the USA-CIO convention in Atlantic City:

ON BEHALF of the officers and members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, I am privileged to send to you and to all the members of the United Steelworkers of America-CIO our sincere fraternal greetings and warmest best wishes on the occasion of your seventh biennial convention.

As you assemble in convention, the officers and members of your great union, the United Steelworkers of America, can justly be proud of your outstanding accomplishments and achievements.

You have contributed mightily to the welfare of steel workers and their families and to the well-being of all Americans. The sound and constructive programs of your union for labor and America are recognized not only throughout our country but throughout the entire free world.

We in the CIO are confident that the United Steelworkers of America-CIO will continue in the forefront of labor's struggle to win a fuller measure of economic and social justice and that under your leadership, as under the leadership of our beloved Philip Murray, your great union will continue to contribute its maximum strength and solidarity to the cause of peace, freedom, justice and human brotherhood.

I hope that you will transmit to the delegates the cordial good wishes of all of the members of the CIO for a most successful and fruitful convention.

Steelworkers Urge Labor Unity Now

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

A MILLION and a quarter strong, and proud of their organizing and economic achievements, the CIO Steelworkers last week voiced emphatic approval of proposals for achieving quick organic unity between the CIO and AFL.

Three thousand delegates to the union's seventh constitutional convention, at Atlantic City Sept. 20-24, roared approval of a major policy resolution which said that "organic unity can be achieved now and it is not necessary to wait for the indefinite future."

USA-CIO Pres. David J. McDonald, presiding at his first union convention since the death of Philip Murray, was ill for two days. But he returned to the podium Thursday, and—in a major speech on the unity question—discussed not only the question of a future united labor federation but the relationship of the Steelworkers with the CIO.

CONVENTION IN ACTION—Steelworkers Pres. David J. McDonald (left, first photo) congratulates Gov. Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey, who praised labor's constructive role in State. Center: Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes (on left) and Sec.-Treas. I. W. Abel (on right) chat with C. B. Essuman, from Africa's Gold Coast, and a Dutch unionist. At right: Atomic energy was discussed by Thomas E. Murray, member of Atomic Energy Commission, with Thimmes.

Press Reports Derided

He derided stories in the press and on the radio that the union has been contemplating a departure from the CIO.

McDonald described these stories as "figments of the imagination" and labeled them as products of would-be playwrights in the field of journalism who seek to build the drama of conflict in writing about labor.

Perhaps, he said, he had made a mistake in not having been more forthright with the newspaper writers, but he said they have to "have their fun."

Interrupted several times by applause from the delegates, McDonald made these points:

1. Working people want labor unity, and its achievement will help labor and the nation.

2. Organic unity can be quickly achieved, and the steel union "will laugh at the excuse makers" if unity is not quickly forthcoming.

3. CIO, having organized the unorganized and won acceptance of the industrial union philosophy by the AFL leadership, has fulfilled its original mission, as defined by John L. Lewis, CIO's first president, and by the late Philip Murray.

McDonald, a member of the CIO's Unity Committee—which developed the CIO-AFL No Raiding Agreement early last year—also suggested there would be room in the unified organization for Railway Brotherhoods and the Miners.

In the course of his hour-long address, McDonald spoke frankly of differences of outlook within the CIO, and outlined a number of policies the USA-CIO would be advocating.

'Senior Partners'

Asserting that the union has an "investment" of $17,472,732.59 in CIO through per capita payments and gifts since 1936, McDonald said:

"We're going to get something for this investment. We don't want to be treated as junior partners but rather as senior partners."

One of those objectives would be immediate organic unity, for McDonald added that "talking about a wait of two or three years is bunk . . . . we can sit down with the AFL and work this out in a matter of weeks."

To achieve that, he maintained, the CIO would have to give up the idea of "part-time officers."

Saying it wasn't a matter of personalities but of organization principles, McDonald recalled he had discussed these matters with CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey. He had also argued the matter unsuccessfully with Murray, for 12 years head of the Steelworkers and the CIO.

McDonald also discussed the "mistaken idea" that "the CIO is the parent of the United Steelworkers—it is not —it is the servant of the Steelworkers, the Auto Workers, the Clothing Workers and all the other unions."

What he described as "believers in Pan-Unionism"—a phrase he did not explain—"would like to subvert the CIO to make us all its servants," he said. The steel union will be affiliated to CIO but not subservient, he said.

McDonald offered the delegates a rough sketch plan for labor unity, cautioning that it was subject to refinement and improvement.

It proposed acceptance of the "principle of voluntarism" at all levels of the new federation. Under that principle, he said, unions could decide to affiliate or to remain outside. Unions in the same general field could merge or maintain their own identities, he suggested.

Basic Philosophy

Earlier in the week, McDonald set forth to the delegates his definition of the steel union's basic philosophy. He described it as a form of "mutual trusteeship" attitude—which he differentiated from destructive Marxism or greedy bread-and-butter unionism.

In his view, McDonald said, both the working force that is management and the working force that is labor have obligations as mutual trustees of the factory enterprise to protect the common interest, improve wages and productivity, and benefit the increasing number of small shareowners.

The convention heard words of praise from Sec. of Labor Mitchell, who looked with pride to the record of the Labor Dept. under his direction. Another speaker was Stanley Ruttenberg, CIO research and education director.

Thomas Murray, member of the Atomic Energy Commission, said that atomic energy can be employed for peaceful uses to a degree little realized by the general public.

The convention renewed its support of the CIO Political Action Committee, of which McDonald is secretary-treasurer, and called for the election of an 84th Congress more responsive than its predecessor to the needs of the American public.

A 14-point legislative program urged repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, a progressive tax policy, a strengthened program of civil liberties and civil rights, federal aid to education, a national health insurance program, improved social security, higher minimum wages, a big government housing program, regional development of river resources, and more adequate congressional procedures to protect the rights of witnesses.

Back Annual Wage

The union pledged itself to work "unremittingly" to achieve guaranteed annual wage plans in the industry.

The foreign policy resolution urged the government to provide "effective leadership in unifying our people in the struggle against Communist totalitarians."

It voted to "endorse and support" McDonald's efforts to promote expanded international trade.

The union adopted a number of constitutional changes, including a ban on Communists as members.

Other speakers included Harry Douglas, of the British Iron & Steel Trades Confederation; Laurie Short of the Australian Ironworkers; Dr. Clifford Keene of the Kaiser Foundation Health Plan; Lester B. Pearson, Canadian Foreign Affairs Minister; and Ezra Hayut, labor attache of the Israel Embassy in Washington.

45,000 Gain Pension Benefits

A special report covering the five years since the Steelworkers first pension-welfare agreement, signed in 1949, revealed that:

1. Some 45,000 Steelworkers have retired on a pension, either after reaching the age of 65 or for disability before that age.

2. Life insurance, sick benefits, hospital and surgical benefits valued at over half a billion dollars have been distributed to Steelworkers and their families.

The new agreement negotiated last summer will provide benefits amounting to $350,000,000 for Steelworkers and their families during the next two years. Over 90% of the membership is covered by union-negotiated insurance plans and over 80% by pension arrangements.

The Best Way To Honor Philip Murray's Memory

CIO Steelworkers paid a warm tribute to "their founder and leader," the late Philip Murray, in a special memorial service.

Philip Murray

District Dir. Joseph Molony of Buffalo, N. Y., read a resolution that expressed the love and appreciation of the men and women of the steel industry for their departed colleague.

Then Msgr. George Higgins, assistant director of the Social Action Dept. of the National Catholic Welfare Council, took the speaker's stand to "talk about his friend and teacher, Phil Murray." As the auditorium lights snapped off, spotlights played on the podium and on a huge American flag at the back of the stage. Slowly, the flag moved up to reveal a tremendous portrait photograph of the deceased union leader.

Msgr. Higgins described Murray as "a remarkably great American — an exemplary Christian gentleman—a perfect example of a practicising Christian and a practical progressive labor leader."

Citing the great contributions of the 19th Century Cardinal Gibbons, Msgr. Higgins told the delegates that his work had been a necessary prelude to Murray's career.

"Cardinal Gibbons made it possible for an exemplary Catholic like Murray to emerge as a leader of labor," he said. Had there developed a cleavage between the church and the labor movement—as occurred in some parts of Europe—"Murray might have been lost to the church or he might have been isolated from the labor movement," Msgr. Higgins declared.

Recounting some of Murray's great contributions to labor in America, and his warm personality as an individual, Msgr. Higgins singled out for praise the statement of ethical practices first adopted by the CIO in 1950.

He described that statement, which has been reaffirmed at subsequent CIO conventions, as a landmark not only for labor but for other types of organizations.

The best way for labor to honor the memory of Philip Murray, he concluded, would be to observe the "spirit and letter" of that Murray-sponsored statement.

Who Are Dixon & Yates?

"What's going on in the Tennessee Valley, anyway?" The CIO News asked editorially a few weeks ago. "Why the tremendous anxiety to take care of the Dixon-Yates utility firm?"

Those questions were prompted by the GOP Administration's frantic drive to shoehorn a path for high-rate utilities into the Tennessee Valley area. That path was charted by means of a complicated deal involving the Atomic Energy Commission, TVA and Dixon-Yates for an exchange of power. Its net effect is (1) to hamstring TVA in the Memphis area, (2) to give sumptuous tax favors to a private utility and (3) to swat all of the nation's taxpayers over the next 25 years with a $140 million bill for higher power costs.

"What's going on in the Tennessee Valley, anyway?" becomes a more urgent question with the revelation last week of the double-entry bookkeeping of the power subsidiaries of Dixon-Yates in the South.

Down in Jackson, Miss., Sec.-Treas. J. D. Stientenroth of the Mississippi Power & Light Co.—a corporate subsidiary linked to Dixon-Yates officers—lifted part of the curtain on private utility rate-gouging operations. Before he got fired for his bluntness, Stientenroth said that Mississippi power users are saddled with excessive utility rates because the company is "dominated" by New York financial interests.

The private utility officer said that the Middle South Utilities, Inc.—operating through subsidiaries in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi—regards those states as "a colonial empire to a certain group of Wall Streeters." And then Stientenroth charged that the Middle South utilities keep "at least two sets of books"—one the regular set and another for tax purposes.

The president of Middle South Utilities is Edgar H. Dixon. The same Mr. Dixon is part of the Dixon-Yates combine so favored by the Administration.

The whole messy affair indicates that the big private utilities haven't changed much since the days of Sam Insull—and neither have the Republican give-away politicians. The entire matter, as Sen. Kefauver (D. Tenn.) and Rep. Celler (D. N. Y.) have suggested, should be looked into by the Securities & Exchange Commission.

As we've said before: We think it's time for a good impartial, official investigation of the whole Dixon-Yates deal.

A Guest Editorial

Commenting on CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther's recent warning to the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union to clean house of welfare fund racketeers, the New York Times declared editorially.

"Pres. Reuther of the CIO deserves the thanks of the public—and especially of the 12 million union members who draw benefits from union welfare funds—for his prompt and decisive crackdown on officials whose activities the State Insurance Dept.'s investigation has brought to light . . . The amount of government regulation and control of labor unions—undesirable unless necessary—depends largely on labor's ability to clean its own house and keep it clean."

Triple Talk

How long do the Republicans think they can fool the farmers? Two years ago Candidate Eisenhower several times promised "full parity, 100% parity" on farm prices—but the GOP 83rd Congress blew that sky high. Now Vice Pres. Richard Nixon is back at the same old stand, again promising that 100% parity is "a major objective of the Administration." How long do the Republicans think they can fool the farmers?

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS
Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director
Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII September 27, 1954 No. 39

Foot Of The Class

In Other Words—

Your Rights And The Fifth Amendment

"Fifth Amendment Communist" is one of the epithets of current American politics, and even Joe McCarthy has been called a "Fifth Amendment Senator" for refusing to testify about his high-flying finances. Behind the current politics, the Fifth Amendment is a keystone of each American's civil rights and protection against dictatorial government, says Dean Erwin N. Griswold of the Harvard Law School. A digest of his speech:

By ERWIN N. GRISWOLD

THE FIFTH Amendment contains a number of provisions which are commonplace. It is the source of our constitutional rule that serious criminal charges must be made by indictment of a grand jury.

It provides against double jeopardy, against the taking of property without due process of law, against the taking of property for public use without just compensation.

Along with these other provisions is the phrase which has currently come to the fore: "No person . . . shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

Historians can trace the origin of this privilege back to the Twelfth Century. It was apparently standard practice not only to make suspected persons give evidence against themselves, but also to use torture to make the accused speak. As we think of the development of the privilege, we should not overlook its close connection with the struggle to eliminate torture as a governmental policy.

Our Debt To A Stubborn Man

We owe the privilege of today to freeborn John Lilburn, a cantankerous person, the sort to whom we owe much for many of our basic rights.

In 1637, he was haled before the star chamber on a charge of having imported certain heretical and seditious books. He refused to take the oath to answer truly, and the council of the star chamber condemned him to be whipped and pilloried for his boldness in refusing to take a legal oath without which many offenses might go undiscovered and unpunished. The sentence was carried out.

But Lilburn persisted. He filed a petition with Parliament and, in 1641, the House of Commons voted that the sentence was illegal and against the liberty of the subject. Later, the House of Lords concurred and ordered an indemnity of £3000 paid to him, a very large sum in those days. This event seems to have been enough to establish the privilege against self-incrimination as part of the common law.

The privilege came to this continent as part of the legal heritage of our early settlers. Some trace of it is to be found in Massachusetts as early as 1637. The privilege was included in the Virginia Bill of Rights of 1776 and later was included in the proposals made by Congress which became the Fifth Amendment to the federal Constitution in 1791. It has been there unchanged ever since.

A Landmark Of Freedom

A good many efforts have been made to rationalize the privilege, to explain why it is a desirable or essential part of our basic law.

I would suggest that the privilege against self-incrimination is one of the great landmarks in man's struggle to make himself civilized.

Its establishment is closely linked historically with the abolition of torture—the torture once used by honest and conscientious public servants as a means of obtaining information about crimes which could not otherwise be disclosed.

We want none of that today, I am sure. For a very similar reason, we do not make even the most hardened criminal sign his own death warrant, or dig his grave, or pull the lever that springs the trap on which he stands. If a man has done wrong, he should be punished. But the evidence against him must be produced and evaluated by a proper court in a fair trial.

Neither torture, nor death, nor the threat of punishment such as imprisonment for contempt should be used to compel him to provide the evidence to accuse or to convict himself.

If his crime is a serious one, laborious police work may be required to prove it, by other evidence. Sometimes no other evidence can be found. But for about three centuries in the Anglo-American legal system we have accepted the standard that even then we do not compel the accused to provide the evidence.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

IT IS JUST possible that Pres. Eisenhower's awed worship of the private utilities and his distaste for federal public power will become a critical election issue.

The now notorious proposed Dixon-Yates contract, through which Eisenhower's slick advisers intended to start slicing down the Tennessee Valley Authority, has stirred a political storm of respectable potentialities.

Storm Over Dixon & Yates

The President, many months ago, startled the country by bluntly saying that the "expansion" of TVA would be a prime example of what he called "creeping Socialism."

The TVA country, at least, was equally startled when it suddenly discovered that the Budget Bureau, acting on instructions from the President, had "directed" the Atomic Energy Commission to sign a contract with the Dixon-Yates private utility syndicate to furnish the TVA with privately-generated power from a new plant to be constructed at West Memphis, Ark.

Certain facts quickly became known: that the majority of AEC members and of TVA members had never approved this proposal, that the pretense that the AEC "needed" the power was a complete phony, since actually the Dixon-Yates power would merely be forced upon the TVA to serve TVA's own customers in the Memphis, Tenn., area.

Still the Eisenhower Administration insisted on bulling through the contract. The fundamental effect would be to serve notice that no more federal money would be lent the TVA to build its own power facilities.

It would also serve notice that the Administration policy was to "fence in" TVA with a network of privately-constructed generated plants financed by government contracts, with the taxpayer still footing the bill but the private utilities getting guarantees of construction costs, tax payments, profit, and eventual ownership, at higher costs than TVA would spend.

Some other facts were less well known. As of Sept. 17, at least four variations of the proposed AEC contract with the Dixon-Yates syndicate had been submitted to members of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, which now under law has the right and responsibility of "reviewing" the proposals to protect the public interest.

There is an association of cooperatives, representing millions of dollars of investment and the soul and spirit of TVA, vitally interested in the costs of TVA power. The hundreds of thousands of people involved in these cooperatives have asked for copies of the various proposed Dixon-Yates contracts—and have been flatly turned down by the Budget Bureau.

Now It's A Hot Potato

On Sept. 21 and Sept. 22 several events occurred which made the Dixon-Yates deal a genuine hot potato for the Administration.

A long-time official of the Mississippi Power & Light Co., a subsidiary controlled by the "Dixon" of Dixon-Yates, one Edgar H. Dixon of Middle South Utilities, Inc., charged publicly that "Wall Street" control was milking western Mississippi customers.

Gov. Clement of Tennessee wired Eisenhower reporting an official of the Arkansas Power & Light Co., another Dixon subsidiary, had charged that the industry was milking its Arkansas customers for the benefit of preferred stockholders.

The Mississippi Power & Light Co. rebel, one J. D. Stietenroth, asked the Securities & Exchange Commission for permission to withdraw his financial statements designed to support the Dixon-Yates proposal to build the West Memphis plant. Said Stietenroth, long secretary-treasurer of MP&L, he was "under the domination of others" when he filed these financial statements.

Eisenhower is a military man. Perhaps he does not realize how the people rebelled, nearly a quarter of a century ago, when the late Sen. George Norris and others exposed the fact that private utilities were subsidizing teachers, subsidizing textbooks, defending extortionate profits by charging that any enemy of extortion was a "Socialist."

He ought to realize that a Republican, Theodore Roosevelt, was the father of federal public power and of conservation, and that Norris, another Republican, fought most successfully for public power. It is an unhappy thing to see him rejecting, in his insistence on hemming in TVA, the best traditions of his own party.

Press Agent Loses Out Again

The President has struck another blow, obviously merely by coindence, at our favorite Republican public relations man in Washington. Ever since Eisenhower began running in 1952, this public relations man has taken a financial beating.

He had a tidelands oil account and another account to attack "socialized medicine." He lost both accounts; why should the tidelands state-righters and the doctors' lobby pay him money to obtain what they would get free from Eisenhower?

He got a new account fighting an increase in tariff rates on Swiss watch movements—and the President, in the only occasion of the kind where he has acted as a high-tariff Republican, raised the rates. The Swiss promptly cancelled their contract with their American spokesmen. Strike three for our favorite GOP public relations man, who worked 15 years to get the Republicans back in office and found himself somewhat underemployed as a result of the Republican success.

Issues In The Election—

GOP Big Contributors Collected Plenty Under New Tax Law

(Third in a series of articles on 1954 campaign issues.)

UNDISMAYED by the nation's experience with tax policies which 25 years ago brought on the greatest depression in history, the Eisenhower Administration has again cast its lot with the "trickle down" theory of taxation.

The history of the income tax, based on capacity to pay, dates back to Feb. 25, 1913, when it became the 16th Amendment to the Constitution. It is the only system that is both fair and consistently good for the U. S. economy.

Sound economists hold that national prosperity does not depend on the "rich getting richer" through fatter profits and higher personal incomes. Prosperity comes from increased purchasing power in the hands of the great majority of families in the low and middle income groups.

The Republicans, tragically, never believed this theory even in the face of the lessons taught by the Great Depression. The GOP has consistently favored tax relief for high income groups on the theory that such benefits will eventually "trickle down."

An Exact Parallel

The elephant may never forget; but, also, the Republican elephant never seems to learn. Thirty years ago, Pres. Coolidge told the people: "The business of this country is business." In January 1953 Defense Sec. Wilson told Congress: "What's good for General Motors is good for the country."

The personal appeals of Pres. Eisenhower resulted in passage of the 1954 tax laws, a wholesale re-shuffle of the Internal Revenue Code which dealt tax favors by the basketload to the rich and a few crumbs of relief to low income groups.

"Businessmen contributed heavily to the Eisenhower campaign," wrote Columnist Thomas L. Stokes. "They expected policies to be shaped to their advantage . . . It was only natural that this business Administration's tax policies . . . should be weighted for business."

A whole world of difference exists between the philosophies of Candidate Eisenhower stumping the country and Pres. Eisenhower begging Congress to pass his soak-the-poor tax laws.

In Des Moines, Ia., on Sept. 18, 1952, the GOP's candidate asked: "Who pays the taxes to run the government? The people in the lower income must pay . . ." A few days later in Fort Wayne, Ind., he gave the impression his heart was wrung because "an American family with $3500 of income is paying 25% of it in taxes."

The Few Get Most

But when Eisenhower as President—after listening to those whose contributions financed his campaign—advanced his tax program, more than 90% of the tax reductions were for the corporations and the wealthy families. Only about one-twentieth was for the average taxpayer.

Eisenhower planned to cut up the tax reduction dollar this way: Corporations would get 64c, families earning more than $5000 would get 30c, the under-$5000 group would get only 6c.

Congress had some other ideas and the tax bill came out of the GOP-controlled 83rd Congress this way: Corporations, 73c; families getting over $5000, 18c; the under-$5000 group, 9c.

Facing an irate electorate that feels short-changed by Congress, GOP politicians are claiming the biggest tax cuts—$7.4 billion—in history. The facts are that the Democrats enacted 81%—$6 billion—of that cut and that the GOP blocked an additional $3 billion in tax cuts by extending some excise taxes which were due to expire.

Small wonder, then, that the GOP finance committee in 1953 made a bold bid for campaign contributions from corporations of 10% of their 1954 tax savings.

Unequal Proportions

Facts From PAC

This article was prepared from material in the 1954 Handbook of the CIO Political Action Committee. Copies of the Handbook are available at $3 each from the CIO-PAC, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Over and over while Congress pondered his tax bill, Eisenhower expressed concern for the "double taxation" on stock dividends. That this "double taxation" was "double doubletalk" meant nothing; the coupon-clippers were destined for a tax break.

Under Eisenhower's dividend tax credit plan a family of husband, wife and two children, whose income of $5000 comes from stock dividends, pays a tax of $328. The same family would pay a tax of $420 if the same income came from wages.

The CIO had the support of many Democrats in its fight against imperiling the nation through a return to the "trickle down" tax theory. It urged that tax loopholes should be plugged and the additional revenue diverted to the U. S. Treasury instead of the vaults of corporations.

The Democrats proposed an increase in personal exemptions from $600 to $800, saving seven million taxpayers from making returns. It would have relieved the tax burden of low-income families and put more money in the hands of consumers to buy more goods to make more jobs.

Ike Opposed Cut

Eisenhower vigorously opposed this, making a special telecast from the White House to argue that "everybody ought to pay taxes." The nation "couldn't afford" to exempt a large bloc of taxpayers by raising their personal exemptions, Eisenhower claimed.

The nation could "afford," however, to give tax relief to corporations and wealthy families whose income comes from stock dividends. The dividend tax loss to the government is estimated at $204 million the first year, $362 million thereafter. By contrast, the various sops thrown to low income groups for child care expenses, taxation of annuities and foster children total only $150 million.

House Minority Leader Rayburn (Tex.) summed it up when he called the Eisenhower tax program "a bill written to carry out the campaign promises and campaign pledges to some of the big contributors."

Look Who Goes In For Deficits

THE FEDERAL budget is still out of balance despite the pledges of Pres. Eisenhower and a chorus of Republican politicians.

In fact, it is now more out of balance than ever, thanks to GOP give-aways and tax reductions for the rich. The sad truth came to light only recently when Administration officials were forced to admit their guesses on federal income were 'way off.

"We can reduce our budget. We can cut down taxes. We can live within our means," said Candidate Eisenhower at Jefferson City, Mo., on Sept. 20, 1952.

"Our goal is a balanced budget," the GOP platform trumpted in 1952.

Instead, under the Eisenhower Administration—

- The national debt went up by over $9 billion (the highest since World War II) in the last half of 1953.
- There was a deficit of $3 billion for the 1954 fiscal year which ended June 30.
- There is a deliberately planned deficit of $2.9 billion for fiscal 1955.

The Job You Save May Be Your Own! Register, Give A Buck To PAC, Vote!

The State Campaigns

'Soapy's' No Bubble, Michigan

By MILTON PLUMB

HIGH-PRICED GOP hawkers may have a monopoly on political "soap-selling" in the U. S. this year, but in Michigan "soapy" is a word forbidden to all Republicans.

The reason is the State's outstanding governor, G. Mennen Williams, a Democrat, whose nickname of "Soapy" is a Michigan by-word.

Williams already has set a precedent in being the only Michigan Democrat elected to three consecutive terms in the State House. This year he's running for a fourth.

Another Campaign Exclusive

As of now, he's so far out in front that, although he had no opposition in the primary, more than 426,000 insisted on turning out to vote for him anyhow. That was almost as much as the votes cast for the four contenders for the GOP nomination combined.

Michigan Democrats are banking on the overwhelming popularity of their chief executive to overcome the severe blow their party suffered when former Sen. Blair Moody (D.) died suddenly after the closing date for primary filing. All political experts were giving Moody a big edge of certain re-election over Sen. Ferguson (R.) at the time of his death.

GOP Running Scared

The fact that only one other candidate had filed for the Democratic Senate nomination meant that, upon Moody's death, he was automatically nominated. That nominee is Patrick V. McNamara, veteran AFL labor leader, successful businessman and long-time servant in Detroit government.

Out-of-state political analysts, who had never heard of McNamara, immediately conceded the election to Ferguson. Inside Michigan, however, it's a different story. Despite unlimited campaign funds, Ferguson is running "scared" and admits it.

When the shock of Moody's death had passed, Michigan Democrats realized that their nominee for the Senate, although not nearly as well known as Moody, was a man of proven ability. Far from being an unknown, he has been prominently identified with public service for the people of the entire state for more than three decades.

McNamara's career began back in 1920, when the late Frank Murphy, the state's brilliant ex-governor and liberal former Supreme Court Justice, was president of the Michigan Old Age Pension League. He picked the young McNamara as the League's executive secretary.

McNamara went on to distinguish himself in other important public posts, including service as area rent director for OPA during World War II, a time of critical housing shortage in Michigan. His rent administration attracted national attention for its efficiency, and many of his decisions were adopted as the national pattern.

In 1945 he was elected to the Detroit City Council and immediately took on the real estate lobby when he voted to condemn undeveloped property for multiple housing developments.

McNamara now is serving his sixth year as a member of the Detroit Board of Education. He has long been an active champion of greater federal aid for the nation's ailing school systems and cited the failure of the GOP Administration to provide funds for construction of public schools as one of the major reasons for his candidacy at the time he entered the primary.

One Cause Of Lay-offs

A hard campaigner, McNamara is taking his battle for progressive government into nearly all Michigan counties.

The chief issues, as he sees them, are Michigan's growing unemployment, which he says started with Republican "sledgehammer hard money policies," the Administration's negative labor record, and the breakdown of U. S. relations with the rest of the free world.

For 18 of the last 21 years, McNamara has been the unpaid president of Pipe Fitters Union Local 636, AFL. Since 1921, he also has been an executive with various contracting companies in the Detroit area and is now vice-president of the Stanley-Carter Co.

In an interview with The CIO News, Williams expressed his complete satisfaction and support of McNamara as Moody's substitute. He said that the underlying strength of the Democratic Party in Michigan was shown by the fact that a strong candidate was available to step into the breech filled by Moody's death.

"The political climate in Michigan is ripe for a Democratic victory which will carry into office not only the top of the ticket — the governor and Senate nominees — but also an increased number of congressmen, members of a Democratic state administration, and a Democratic House of Representatives in Lansing," the governor said.

"This victory will be achieved, of course, only if the Democrats organize to get people registered and out to vote on election day."

Williams is running on his record during his six years as governor, in which, despite a hostile Republican Legislature, he pushed through an impressive program of social legislation. The latter includes improvements in unemployment and workmen's compensation benefits, old age benefits, mental health and children's services, aid to farmers and conservation measures.

Gain New Industries

His program of business encouragement brought 66 new industries into the state during his administration. Moreover, Williams did not share the national Republican Administration's lack of concern over unemployment and through his Governor's Emergency Defense Contracts Commission succeeded in getting for Michigan over one-third of the defense orders assigned to 53 areas of high unemployment in 1952.

Williams also fought for the state's interests in Washington by seeking to protect the farmers against the Administration's "discriminatory program," and asking that excise tax on autos be removed "to help put 100,000 workers back on the job."

"The reason for the governor's popularity," CIO Reg. Dir. Herbert McCreedy believes, "is that he tries to do a good government job administratively for all segments of the community. He won't play politics by putting the interests of different groups ahead of the common good."

Roy Reuther, PAC director of the CIO Auto Workers, predicts that several new PAC-supported candidates will be serving in Congress next year.

And August Scholle, Michigan CIO Council president, is confident of the governor's re-election and adds:

"If present conditions of high unemployment continue and accelerate, McNamara will be in the Senate."

(Next week: The campaign in Pennsylvania and the Rocky Mountain States.)

"EVERYBODY LOSES when somebody loses a job," the banners proclaim in CIO-AFL Labor Day parade in Detroit. And they also suggested the remedy: "Vote Election Day." Featured speakers, besides CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, included (right) three top Democratic candidates in state this N to right) Ph Williams, w Namara, no

Home To Roost

As chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee Michigan's Sen. Ferguson (R.) has played a major part in shaping GOP policies affecting the present state of the economy.

Now that he's up for re-election, those policies are coming home to roost.

The Michigan Employment Security Commission, which usually underestimates future unemployment, has predicted that the number of jobless in Ferguson's own state may reach 300,000 in September. In Detroit alone, unemployment is expected to jump to 225,000, or 15% of the work force.

Unionist

Patrick J. McNamara, Democratic nominee for the Senate, was a leader in the movement for industrial unionism which led to the formation of the CIO Auto Workers.

He was the first state president of the Automobile Workers of America, the original organization of workers in the auto industry created in 1934 under the NRA. This later became part of UAW-CIO.

The first secretary of the same organization was R. J. Thomas, former UAW president and now assistant to CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe.

POLITICAL ACTION by CIO-PAC brings together former Probate Judge Martha Griffiths, Democratic candidate for Congress in the 17th Dist. (left), CIO Reg. Dir. Herbert T. McCreedy and Michigan CIO Pres. August Scholle. In center picture, to right of Gov. Williams and McNamara, are Wayne County CIO Council officers Mike Novak, Al Barbour, Alex Fuller and Joseph Ptaszynski. At Solidarity House, Rep. Machrowicz (D.), right, discusses plans for his campaign with Anna J. Pastu crats; CIO Auto Workers R in the Legislature, and UAW Democrats hope to pick up s ovember. Giving the sign of their expected victory are (left ilip A. Hart, nominee for lieutenant-governor, Gov. G. Mennen ho seeks unprecedented fourth term, and Patrick V. Mc- minee for U. S. Senate.

GOP Learns To Its Sorrow

MICHIGAN Democrats this year are not only seeking to hold the five congressional seats they now have, but also to pick up several new congressmen.

In addition, with Gov. G. Mennen Williams stressing that the political climate in Michigan is ripe for the election of a Democratic House in the Legislature, the biggest legislative shake-up since the New Deal sweep of 1932 is in prospect.

The latter will take place even if the GOP manages to keep control, because retirements, deaths, primary casualties, and shifts have left the chairmanships of six major Senate and 11 top House committees open. Both Houses will have new Labor Committee chairmen. Constitutional provisions have added two new seats in the Senate and 10 in the House.

Rabaut Faces Battle

In Wayne County, incumbent Democratic Reps. Machrowicz, Rabaut, Dingell and Lesinski are all expected to win easily, with Rabaut facing the toughest battle. In Wayne's 13th Dist., where former State Sen. Charles Diggs, Jr., defeated Rep. O'Brien in the Democratic primary, the situation is regarded as a toss-up. CIO-PAC has endorsed all Wayne County Democrats.

Hard fights are being waged against Republican Reps. Meader, Hoffman, Bentley, Thompson and Cederberg. Their Democratic opponents, all with PAC endorsements, are, respectively, Henry Owens, Michigan State Normal College professor; Gordon A. Elferdink, Clarence Smazel, Theodore E. A. Engstrom, and William E. Kelly.

Possible upsets are also foreseen by some experts in the 3rd, 5th and 11th Dists. In the latter, PAC-backed Harold Benton, popular veteran, opposes freshman Rep. Knox (R.), whom the CIO Electrical Workers' voting guide credited with all "wrong" votes on key issues during the 83rd Congress. The district has been Democratic in the past.

There will be a new congressman from the 3rd Dist., where the recent death of Rep. Shafer (R.), internal GOP differences, and farm discontent may combine to send Charles E. Wickett (D.) to the House. In the 5th, Robert McAllister, Grand Rapids attorney, is waging a hard fight, with PAC backing, against Rep. Ford (R.).

2 Strong Candidates

Two exceptionally strong candidates are opposing reactionary Reps. Wolcott and Dondero (both R.). The serious unemployment situation in the 18th Dist. may be enough to elect Paul Sutton, a charter member of the AFL Screen Actors Guild and active unionist.

In the 7th Dist., Wolcott, darling of the real estate lobby, is finding Dr. Ira D. McCoy the strongest opposition he's ever encountered. McCoy was the first physician honored by the Disabled American Veterans, and he's making much of Wolcott's scuttling of the public housing program. GOP farm policies will hurt Wolcott, too, for income from beans grown in the district has dropped sharply.

Most likely Democratic victories, according to a survey by Congressional Quarterly, will be in the 6th, 12th and 17th Dists., now represented by GOP Reps. Clardy, Bennett and Oakman.

Michigan Auxiliaries Go In For PAC Work In A Big Way

THE WOMEN of CIO in Michigan have taken to politics in a big way. They're doing everything in their power to make sure that women voters are neither confused nor misguided when they go to the polls this November.

At least 10 women's conferences, where issues in the coming elections will be thoroughly discussed, will be held before the balloting, Mrs. Lillian Sherwood, president of the National CIO Auxiliaries, reports.

In addition, all individual auxiliaries throughout the state are concentrating on registration drives during September. Next month's meetings will feature discussion of election issues and explanations of ballots and voting machines. CIO-PAC-endorsed candidates are being invited to attend.

Typical of the auxiliaries' program was the recent meeting in Traverse City sponsored by the Grand Traverse CIO Council and its auxiliary. Meeting in groups to shape a continuing program for CIO wives, the ladies recommended more political education for women and increased volunteer political work.

As a result, the Council recruited workers for registration, telephone canvassers, poll watchers, election board workers and hostesses for coffee hours.

CIO women in Grand Rapids also have given strong support to the PAC drive and on Primary Day a group of 30 CIO wives distributed cards and literature at the polls.

Campaign Handbook For '54 Published By ADA

THE LIBERAL viewpoint on major issues and a practical "how-to-do-it" section on political action are features of a campaign handbook for 1954 published under sponsorship of Americans for Democratic Action.

szka, leader of 1st Dist. Demo- ep. Ed Carey, minority leader -CIO PAC Dir. Roy Reuther. everal congressional seats.

Guide to Politics—1954 is the title of the volume published by Dial Press and edited by Quincy Howe and Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

The "issues" section contains 14 articles by prominent American liberals. Among them are: Full Employment, by Leon H. Keyserling; Social Security-Old Age, Unemployment and Sickness, by Arthur J. Altmeyer; Farm Surplus and Farm Income, by Sen. Humphrey (D. Minn.); Public Resources and Private Profit, by Sen. Morse (Ind. Ore.); The U. S. and the U. N., by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt; Labor, Management and Government, by Sen. Murray (D. Mont.).

The section on American Politics is an exposition of techniques of successful political action. The text, illustrated with cartoons and diagrams, is designed to contain a maximum of practical information.

The final section of Guide to Politics consists of up-to-date facts on voting records, election statistics, etc.

Guide to Politics—1954, Dial Press, $1.50 for union members ($1 each for 25 or more) from ADA, 1341 Connecticut Ave., N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

GET the FACTS

. . . and spread the word. Here's ammunition from CIO-PAC for '54—

Just check the list of publications you want, sign your name and address, enclose payment, tear out this ad and mail to:

CIO Political Action Committee
718 Jackson Place, N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

Books and Pamphlets

1954 Political Action Handbook. The fourth edition of PAC's Speakers Handbook supplemented from time to time so that it is always up to date. Price for union members, $1.50.

☐ Send me _____ copies, sub-total price _____.

The New Look, a pamphlet intended principally to show CIO women how politics is a family affair, how legislation at all levels affects home and community life. Price, $3 per 100.

☐ Send me _____ copies, sub-total price_____.

'54 Facts. The palm sized pamphlets that tell the story, a point to a page, of some of the main issues of the day. '54 Facts—Jobs. '54 Facts—Social Security. '54 Facts—Farmers. Price, $3 per 100.

☐ Send me _____ copies of Jobs, _____ copies of Social Security, _____ copies of Farmers, sub-total price _____.

Roll Call. Pocket magazine sized pamphlets that tell the story behind the roll call on a particular issue . . . what it means . . . why it's important to you . . . and how your congressman voted.

Roll Call-Majority Rule tells the story of the fight in 1953 for a rule to end filibusters in the Senate.

Roll Call-Giveaway tells the story of the fight to save the off-shore oil for the people of the United States. Price, $3 per 100.

☐ Send me _____ copies of Majority Rule, _____ of Giveaway, sub-total price _____.

Registration Manual, a how-to-do it manual on methods of conducting a registration campaign. Price, $5 per 100.

☐ Send me _____ copies, sub-total price_____.

Leaflets

Politics Is Your Baby, Too, a leaflet, addressed to the housewife and the woman trade union member, explaining what politics means to them. Price, $.50 per 100.

☐ Sent me_____copies, sub-total price_____.

Everything We Have, which tells in words and pictures how workers and farmers produce everything we have and should work together for mutual protection. Price, $3 per 100.

☐ Send me _____ copies, sub-total price _____.

What Is PAC, the basic pamphlet to answer the basic questions on what PAC is, what it does, and how it works. Free.

☐ Send me _____ copies.

Inside Story of Your PAC Dollar, a reprint of an old favorite that tells what happens to the dollar the member gives to PAC and how it comes back to him many-fold in the form of better government. (Ready soon.) Free.

☐ Send me _____ copies.

Speak Up For Prosperity, a handbill that tells what the Administration's thinking is on unemployment and urges people to speak up—the job they save may be their own. Free.

☐ Send me _____ copies.

Posters

Register Today So You Can Vote For a Better Tomorrow, a large 17x22 inch poster that pictures a family registering. Price, $10 per 100.

☐ Send me _____ copies, sub-total price _____.

Your Vote Is The One That Counts is a large size (17x22) poster and also comes in red, white and blue, in a small (8½x11) size. One series urges registration, the other urges voting. Free while they last.

☐ Send me _____ copies large size, _____ copies small size.

Periodicals

Political Action of the Week is a weekly, four-page newsletter that rounds up political developments during the week.

☐ Please enter my subscription, $1 a year.

TOTAL ORDER: $_____ (Check or money order enclosed.)

Name: .....

Local Union: .....

International Union: .....

Street Address: .....

City & State: .....

Tomorrow's Factories Are Here Today—

Saving Jobs Is Top Problem With Automation

"HELLO GIRLS" are a diminishing group under the automatic advance in the telephone industry. Many toll calls, such as these operators handle, are now dialed automatically. Tool-control board in Ford's new Cleveland engine plant flashes warning light to job setter.

(Second article of a series)

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

CIO UNIONS have long been feeling the effects of the new machinery and techniques which have been steadily introduced in recent years into industries where our members work.

So far these changes, only in a small degree, have been what strictly can be called automation, but they do have some of the same effects predicted under extensive use of automatic-controlled machines.

Many CIOers are therefore inclined to look upon automation as just a heavier dose of the same thing they've already been taking for quite a while.

Loss of jobs on a tremendous scale tops the list of problems presented by the spread of automation. Experiences of several CIO unions with jurisdiction in industries where technological improvements have been advancing rapidly indicates that is indeed what happens.

Example Of Oil

In the highly-automated oil refinery industry, employment has declined steadily in recent years.

A study by the CIO Oil Workers shows that in 1948 there were 147,000 production workers engaged in petroleum refining. In 1951 there were 143,000, and in April 1954 there were only 137,000—a drop of 10,000 in less than six years. At the same time refinery production rose 22% above 1948.

Assuming that expansion continues without recession or depression, the union estimates that by '58 another 5000 refinery workers will be out of the industry. If expansion should level off or take a nose dive, this figure could well be 10,000, the union reports.

The CIO Communications Workers is another union which has also felt the heavy effects of automatic progress over a period of years.

The tremendous expansion of the telephone industry has tended to hide the fact that the huge increase in manhour productivity has meant a big drop in the employment rate. Today the number of telephones per employe has nearly doubled in a little over 30 years.

The union's experience in trying to get a fair share of the increased productivity for the workers in the industry illustrates one of labor's big problems concerning technological improvements in industry. In the CWA's case, the story does not have a happy ending.

Stockholders Benefit

"We have looked at automation as providing the opportunity for increasing wages, shortening hours of work and at the same time, lowering the cost of the service to the subscriber," says CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne.

"But it hasn't worked out that way. In the telephone industry the biggest bite of increased productivity per employe has gone to the stockholders."

In terms of real wages, Beirne adds, wage levels have increased very little. While the stockholders have been well taken care of, he points out, "the customer and the employe have fared less well. Today with 80% of all local telephone calls handled mechanically, with many toll calls handled in the same way—and with more to come—telephone workers' real wages are a little better than they were 30 or more years ago."

Another serious problem that automation presents—loss of skills and the down-grading of formerly skilled workers—is also already a headache.

Automation—meaning "electric brain" control of various processes—is not yet a trend in the steel industry, but certain technical improvements have in many cases broken down the skills of once skilled workers, says Otis Brubaker, CIO Steelworkers' research director.

Men with technical know-how may replace skilled steel workers, forcing them to take semi-skilled or unskilled work.

The CIO Shoe Workers union reports that one of its important demands in negotiating contracts is trying to keep the average hourly earnings up when new machines with a higher output per manhour are introduced. Workers in the industry are today producing more shoes per manhour worked than ever before.

USW Pres. Russell Taylor said that the union doesn't oppose introduction of new improved machines, but does oppose cutting the job rate on the new machines. The companies, he said, want to pay semi-skilled or unskilled rates for jobs previously rated as skilled, and the union is fighting bitterly to prevent this.

Wage Rates Narrow

The CIO Packinghouse Workers points out that in the packing industry the gap between skilled and unskilled wages has narrowed from 65% in 1937-40 to 37% in 1952-53, and that percentage differentials for the semi-skilled have also decreased.

At the CIO Brewery Workers convention held recently in Detroit, Pres. Karl Feller reported on the introduction of new machinery and devices in the industry which have increased output and reduced manpower.

He listed the automatic soaker feeder, the fork lift truck, the carton sealer, high-speed bottle shop machinery and improved conveyor systems as among the improvements that "have effected drastic changes in the industry."

Almost all CIO unions now are facing problems involving improvements in industry that foreshadow what may happen later on a much greater scale under the spread of automation.

As to what to do about it, they agree in general with the "double-pronged" solution given in the Brewery Workers' report:

"On the one hand, the hours of labor must be shortened, and on the other, the worker must share in the increased productivity of industry by obtaining, in the form of wages, insurance, pensions and other benefits, his fair share of the industrial output."

(Next: What are some of industries' future plans on automation?)

UAW Study

The CIO Auto Workers—whose members work in an industry where the trend toward automation already has a good start and will continue at an increased pace—at its last convention set up a special committee to study the new technological developments in the industries under its jurisdiction.

Automation and a host of other new developments "hold tremendous possibilities for good or evil," a convention resolution said. "Properly used, they can advance by many years the realization in America of man's age-old dream of an economy of abundance . . ."

'As Explosive As A-Bomb'

IN CONSIDERING problems produced by automation—the trend toward greater automatic control in industry and business—unions and management tend naturally to view the matter from two different directions.

Unions—concerned with the wellbeing of their members—look at the development from the human side—what it will do to people. Management mostly approaches it from the point of view of the profits that increased productivity through automation will bring.

A good example illustrating these two points of view is found in some remarks made recently by two men on opposite sides. Vice-Pres. Philip R. Marvin of Commonwealth Engineering Co., in discussing "Automatic Machines at Work—Present and Future," in the new magazine, Automation, said:

"Productivity is industry's key word. Profits stem from productive operations. Businessmen recognize this and concentrate on studying ways of increasing productivity. For over 100 years engineers have been developing automatic operations to increase productivity and to offset rising costs."

Said CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey in a speech last April before an annual production conference of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce:

"What will happen if 25 to 50% of the workers in a plant are displaced by automatic tools? What is the responsibility of management and labor in such a situation? I believe that our attitude should be to welcome these developments but to insist that the benefits be distributed equitably among workers, the owners and the public.

"If greed and selfishness rule, the owners might make a very greatly increased profit, but it would be at the expense of everybody else. Our whole society would have to pay for it in terrible dislocations and suffering.

"We want to see from industry more scrupulous examination of this problem of improved technology and especially of the automatic factory. We want to know what management proposes to do to handle this development which, in its way, is just as explosive as the atomic bomb."

It's fortunate, Carey added, that some managers do "view these problems with a social vision and know that all sections of our society must share widely in the benefits of cost reduction if we are to avoid disaster."

The Push

Total U. S. output in all goods and services in 1953 dollars has nearly doubled since 1939, rising from $187.9 billion to $267.2 billion in '53. And it is estimated that by '56 the total will reach $410 billion. But employment figures meantime have not kept up at the same rate. Neither has the growth in population.

Output per manhour of work or efficiency of production in the non-governmental part of the economy increased at the overall rate of 3.2% a year from 1933-53, but in '53 it increased 4.7%.

Another Storm Warning Failed To Work

Excerpts from a weekly news letter to his constituents by Rep. Kelley (D. Pa.) on the employment situation follow:

By REP. AUGUSTINE KELLEY

Rep. Kelley

It is just about a year since the economy started to go downhill in what has since become a sickening slide into great unemployment and widespread distress.

We are now told that this plunge has ended, and that things are stabilized. This is counted by the Repulbican Administration in Washington as a great achievement. Actually, it represents one of the greatest failures of a national administration in many years.

For months earlier this year we were told the "upturn" was about to start. First, the President said it would show up after Easter. Later, we were told to watch for a big upturn after the Fourth of July. Then we were advised to wait for Labor Day.

The Secretary of Labor now says the outlook seems to be for "stability" and some moderate increase in employment "in the months ahead."

This, then, seems to be the calibre of "prosperity" the GOP plans to brag about in the fall campaign. But here's an interesting fact about prosperity in the Pittsburgh area:

According to the Dept. of Labor's latest report on unemployment compensation benefits, there is more unemployment in the Pittsburgh labor market area than in any of the states except Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and California. It has about the same amount as Tennessee, and just a few thousand less than Kentucky.

In other words, in four counties of western Pennsylvania, we have more unemployment than in every state except nine big ones. And Pennsylvania as a state leads the whole nation in unemployment.

This is prosperity?

Some New England officials have attacked the U. S. Weather Bureau for failing to provide proper warning of the violence of Hurricane Carol. While I sympathize with the protest, I am deeply disturbed by the failure of another and much more significant storm warning system we are supposed to have, and that is the machinery under the Full Employment Act for counteracting economic storms.

This law, passed by the Democrats in 1946, was supposed to enable the President to prepare for recession or depression through a storm warning system operated by the Council of Economic Advisers.

The first thing the Eisenhower Administration did when it took office was to abolish the Council. It later re-established the agency. But if this agency predicted last July or August that we were heading into mass unemployment, the President never let on. And so, after a full year of downturn, he has taken no effective counter-steps.

Protest To Ike On Jobs—

Missouri CIO Urges State Election Reform

DELEGATES to the Missouri CIO Council convention, held at Jefferson City, called for sweeping state election reforms.

A resolution urged elimination of the voting in the primaries on a party ticket, adoption of voting machines and representation in the Legislature on the basis of population rather than land area.

Pres. Eisenhower and Congress were requested to take immediate steps to increase national production and provide for full employment.

Rep. Bolling (D. Mo.), blamed Eisenhower for the failure of Congress to enact legislation to serve the interest of the people.

"I HAVE been told that it is politically unwise to blame Ike," Bolling said, "but I am going to do so. The President showed that when he wanted to 'crack the whip' he could obtain passage of legislation. But he failed to crack the whip for most of his program that would have benefited the people.

"They (the Republicans) tell us proudly that 1954 was almost as good as 1953. That actually is a tragic failure. Our labor force is expanding about 700,000 a year. Technological advances are displacing over a million workers a year. That would mean eight million unemployed within four years just from standing still."

Other convention speakers included R. J. Thomas, assistant to CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe, and Carl McPeak, assistant CIO director of councils.

The convention also asked the State CIO Council Executive Board to seek a convention site where there would be no segregation of Negro delegates. It urged repeal of the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act, and enactment of S. 2585 and H. R. 6820, aimed at removing "the inequities and discrimination from our basic immigration and naturalization laws."

Hubert Dalton, Steelworkers, and James A. Davis, Auto Workers, were unopposed for president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, and were re-elected by acclamation.

REP. BOLLING

'Stomach Communism' Gaining In Italy, CIO Director Warns

By DON SMITH

ITALY is going Communist unless something is done in a hurry—and it may be too late, CIO Reg. Dir. George DeNucci of the Ohio-West Virginia area said on his return from a two-month tour of the land of his birth.

"On the basis of what I saw and heard," he said, "Italy will eventually vote Communist unless the democratic forces there cast aside their own ambitions and selfish desires for power and money."

DeNucci returned recently after visiting the town where he was born, Capracotta, and touring Italy from the heel of the boot to the north. He made a special effort to talk with the average farmer or worker, and summarized his impressions in a report to the Foreign Operations Administration.

"The Italians are not going into the Communist camp for ideological reasons," he said. "With them it's purely 'stomach communism'—lack of bread, lack of jobs and lack of security."

HE BLAMED Italy's tendency to swing to the Reds on dishonest politicians, large landowners and the wealthy. The U. S. has done about all it can, he went on, and the real job of salvation must be done by the people and their government.

If Italy is to be kept on the side of the free world, DeNucci said, the government must:

Joint Efforts Of Free Unions Urged

A combined effort by Italy's Christian Democratic Party and the two free trade union groups, the Italian Confederation of Trade Unions and the Italian Union of Labor, to block the Communists from gaining control of the country's hill provinces was proposed by CIO Reg. Dir. George DeNucci.

The two trade union centers, both affiliated to the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions, were once far apart. They have been working more closely, however, since the CIO and AFL jointly urged them to merge or at least work together in the fight against the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor.

Resist the pressure of the landlords against land reform and speed up the program; make special efforts to reduce the high illiteracy, and increase communication between government and people; enact legislation to compel employers to engage in genuine collective bargaining, and insist that workers benefit from increased productivity.

"Eighty per cent of the politicians are dishonest," he maintained. "The landlords are doing everything they can to stop the land reform program. The land has not been distributed to those who need it.

"The very rich refuse to invest their money in new businesses which would create new jobs. They are playing it safe. They suspect a change and are putting their money away in banks in other countries—Switzerland and the U. S.

"Not only that, they prevent foreign capital from doing the job for them."

DeNucci said the Italians are tired of being what they call "beasts of the field."

"They want to be part of the government," he said. "They want to own their own land and enjoy the dignity of ownership. They want to retain what they grow and not have to give up a good portion of it to an absentee landlord."

HE EXPLAINED the toleration of communism in a country almost 100% Catholic by the fact that the Reds have convinced too many people they will not interfere with the practice of religion if they gain power.

"The people see members of the Communist Party in church on Sunday," he explained. "The Communists are playing the religious angle very cleverly. They even help out with the church chores to show the people they have nothing against the church."

When he reminded the people that it might be the last chance if the Reds take over, he said they told him:

"What's liberty to me—the right to starve?"

ROUTE of two-month tour of Italy is described by CIO Reg. Dir. George DeNucci (right) to Sec.-Treas. Jacob Clayman of the Ohio Council after his return to this country. Italy is going Communist, DeNucci warned, unless speedy steps are taken.

CIO Joins 50 Groups In Urging A Stronger UN

FIFTY national organizations, including the CIO, have laid down a 12-point program for the U. S. delegation to the General Assembly of the United Nations which opened sessions last week in New York.

The proposals, developed at a meeting called by the American Association for the United Nations, included a suggestion that the U. S. and other nations make full use of the UN; enactment of an effective collective security program; perseverance in seeking an enforceable disarmament plan; creation of an atomic energy pool under the UN, and special U. S. aid for the technical assistance program.

The meeting also asked the U. S. to make clear its opposition to colonialism and its support of the declaration of human rights; opposed the seating of Red China "until such time as valid conditions are fulfilled;" asked that the fighting in the Straits of Formosa be brought to the attention of the UN, and that Formosa and the mainland of China not be united by force.

The CIO was represented by Daniel Benedict, associate director of the International Affairs Dept., and William Kemsley, representative of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions to the UN.

Slave Labor Goods Ban Is Asked By CIO

THE CIO has asked that the U. S. demand that products manufactured by forced labor be outlawed from international trade.

CIO Research and Education Dir. Stanley H. Ruttenberg told a government sponsored panel on proposed revision of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) that the issue should be on the agenda at the group's meeting in Geneva in November.

The U. S. should indicate that it looks forward "to the regulation or suppression of international trade in the product of forced labor in the same manner, and under the same degree of opprobrium, as is the case with narcotics and white slavery," Ruttenberg said.

You And Your Money—

GOP Farm Policy Squeezes Both Ends —Housewives Hit Along With Farmers

HERE'S A WARNING for housewives, who are wondering what will happen to the price tags on the grocery store shelves as the Administration's "swat the farmers" farm price bill moves into full effect in the months ahead:

"The record shows that the Eisenhower Administration, ever since it took office, has acted consistently to force farm prices to fall. This policy has been devised by and for the 'middlemen,' who now control federal agricultural policy. Their aim is increased profits and increased control over agricultural markets.

"Consumers have not and will not benefit from the Administration's drive to cheapen the prices received by farmers."

That warning came from the National Farmers Union, in a review of the Administration's farm policies and how they are shaped by the farm processors and wholesalers — whose high profit record is reflected in the recent climb in the Bureau of Labor Statistics Consumer Price Index.

THE FARMERS UNION'S warning that farm income is going down—which means less sales and fewer jobs for city workers—was echoed in a recent Agriculture Dept. report. The report said that farm income from crop and livestock sales in the first eight months of this year was down 4%. Net farm income in the first half of '54 was at an annual rate of $12.5 billion, down from $13.3 billion in the same period a year ago—a loss of almost a billion dollars.

In contrast, the big chain stores with whom the housewife deals are doing okay, thank you. Safeway Stores, Inc., for example, reported that its earnings in the first 24 weeks of this year were $6.6 million, an increase of almost $500,000 over a year ago.

Dairy processing corporation profits are skyrocketing—milk prices didn't come down after dairy price supports were lopped. The Borden Co. has declared a 10% stock dividend in addition to its usual 60c quarterly cash dividend. National Dairy's first half earnings were up 20% this year.

PRICE SCISSORS—Chart from Farmers Union Newsletter shows how farm income is going down while food profits are going up.

"The processors," the NFU pointed out in its Washington Newsletter, "have kept food prices to consumers high and rigid, pocketing most of the reduction in what they pay to farmers."

Citing the price "scissors"—the gap between what farmers pay and what they receive—the NFU bulletin warned that "the real mission assigned to the Eisenhower Administration's farm policies by the 'middlemen' whom it serves is to widen the 'middle' and squeeze both ends—both the farmer and the consumer."

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

THIS DEPARTMENT previously pointed out that the recent increases in social security still leave gaps in family protection, which you have to close up by other insurance or savings:

More On Your Insurance Needs

A widow with two children needs about $250 a month for a modest standard of living at present costs. A woman with one child needs about 23% less, or about $192.50 a month, and with three children, about 19% more, or $297.50.

In contrast, maximum total payment to the surviving family of a person covered by social security, is $200 a month, or 80% of the workers' average monthly wage, whichever is less. Below are typical payments; note that in most cases the gap between family need and actual payment runs at least about $50 a month:

If Avg. Monthly Wage* Was	Widow And 1 Child	Widow And 2	Widow And 3
$200	$117.80	$157.10	$160.00
250	132.80	177.20	200.00
300	147.80	197.10	200.00
350	162.80	200.00	200.00

(*After drop-out of up to five years of lowest (or no) earnings.)
(Earnings over $300 ($3600 a year) can be included in the monthly average beginning with 1955.)

THE OTHER GAP in social security family benefits is that when the last child is 18, benefits stop completely until the widow herself reaches 65, when she then can apply for her payment. Unless the widow is to depend completely on her own earings during the interim (and aging women have even more difficulty than men in finding work) some provision should be made for at least a small income during that period.

Now here is how much life insurance or savings would be needed to supplement social security or other pensions for a bereaved family, assuming moderate interest earnings of 2.5% (many insurance companies guarantee 2.5% to 3% interest earnings on insurance proceeds, while other safe investments like savings accounts and "E" bonds pay similar rates):

To provide:	Requires about in insurance:
$50 month for 20 years	$ 9500
$50 month for 30 years	14,000
$100 month for 20 years	19,000
$100 month for 30 years	28,000
$37.50 month for a young wife's lifetime	9500
$75.00 month for wife's lifetime	19,000

YOU DON'T NEED $14,000 in actual insurance and other savings. You may have an investment in your house which can be turned into cash or will help keep down your family's housing cost so its insurance need is correspondingly less. Your own savings and any insurance or death benefit provided in your union contract also make up part of the $14,000.

But the only way most moderate income families can afford the $10,000 or more of insurance needed to supplement social security family benefits is to (1) concentrate all life insurance on the breadwinner instead of dispersing it on various members of the family, and (2) buy low-cost renewable term insurance, preferably on a group basis.

Most young fathers can carry $10,000 of term insurance for less than $100 a year cost after deducting dividends. As you get older the cost of term insurance raises. But as a man's family grows up, his need for insurance diminishes, and he can reduce the amount he carries, thus holding his cost level.

(Copyright 1954 by Sidney Margolius)

A New Look - - And Not By Dior

By ESTHER MURRAY
CIO-PAC Field Representative

HAVE YOU HEARD about the New Look? Paris designers had nothing to do with it, but it's bound to interest every woman who sees it.

It's an attractive little booklet put out by CIO-PAC and it tells the story, mostly in pictures, of how women have advanced from that quaint Old Look (knee-length bathing suits, wash tubs, outdoor plumbing and that woman's - place-is-in - the-home philosophy) to the New Look.

Mrs. Murray

The New Look, of course, is the result of women having the vote. It includes the flair with which women have taken on jobs in almost every industry and profession; the neat, trim aspect of modern homes with modern conveniences; that happy look of mothers with more time and money to spend on their children.

But if the New Look is to develop into broader vistas and become a more permanent part of our lives, there's still work to be done and the little book tells us how. The formula is summed up on the very last page: "Never underestimate the power of a woman's . . . VOTE!"

(Individual copies of the new PAC booklet for women, "The New Look," will be mailed free. Bundle copies are $3 per 100, from CIO-PAC, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.)

There was a spirit of trailblazing at the Rubber Workers convention as delegates from 11 of the union's 15 auxiliaries put their heads together to discuss better organization and better programs.

They decided that what they wanted was a more closely knit organization and accordingly set up the Council of the Ladies Auxiliaries of the CIO Rubber Workers. Their program will stress education, political action and social welfare.

Mrs. Lena House, Akron, was named chairman; Mrs. Lorain Winrich, Eau Claire, Wis., vice president, and Mrs. Clara Parish, Toronto, Canada, secretary.

FAMILY PARLEYS: The Greater Los Angeles CIO Council announced that its family participation PAC conference is set for Oct. 2-3. Similar meetings will be held Oct. 9 at Tulsa, sponsored by the Oklahoma State CIO Council, and Oct. 16 in La Crosse, Wis., sponsored by the County IUC.

UAW Local Aids Kohler Kids

FORTY-EIGHT families of strikers at the Kohler Co. have been "adopted" by Amalgamated Local 155 in Detroit, the CIO Auto Workers largest tool and die local.

UAW-CIO Local 833 has been on strike at the bathroom fixtures plant in Kohler, Wis., since Apr. 5, when negotiations with the union-hating firm broke down.

Pres. Russell Leach of Local 155, accompanied by Robert Croaker and Steve Yokich, visited strike headquarters to pledge assistance as long as the strike continues. An original gift of $3000 by Local 155 is being supplemented by another $8907 in contributions.

The adopted families will get $25 weekly checks in addition to their food vouchers and other assistance.

Leach invited two Kohler strike families to visit Detroit on an expense-paid basis to address Local 155's meetings on behalf of the strikers and to visit some of the giant auto and parts plants "to see real industrial democracy in action."

Fall Institute Set For D. C. Workers

A FALL institute for workers in the District of Columbia area will be held Oct. 1 to 3 at The Farm, Germantown, Md., under the auspices of the Washington Association for Workers' Education.

Instructors will include H. H. Bookbinder, of the National CIO Legislative Dept.; Stuart P. Brock, of the CIO Education Dept.; Harry Pollak, of the International Affairs Dept., and Joseph Lisi, of the CIO Auto Workers.

Leader Of Auxiliaries Dies

MRS. BERTHA PERRIN, of Warren, O., secretary-treasurer of the National CIO Auxiliaries since 1948 and for many years president of the Ohio Council of the Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, died last week.

Known to thousands of CIO members as "Ma" Perrin, she was a familiar figure at conventions and an ardent CIO booster.

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe, and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey sent a telegram to the family saying they were "shocked and grieved."

" 'Ma' Perrin, as we all fondly called her, was a real trade unionist," they said. "Her valiant spirit and her devotion to the cause of labor won her countless friends who will mourn her death. 'Ma' Perrin was a great asset to the American labor movement, but she was first of all a lady. We shall always miss her."

MRS. BERTHA PERRIN

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

ATLANTIC CITY—During the past week I have been in Atlantic City at one of the great deliberative meetings of American labor, the convention of the United Steelworkers of America, CIO.

It was a privilege and an inspiration to meet with the men and women delegates from the hundreds of Steelworkers Union locals across our land, to meet with Pres. David J. McDonald and the other officers again, and to watch them work together in putting in shape the USA-CIO's program for the months ahead.

The delegates and officers came to Atlantic City fresh from another great victory around the bargaining table. Through the amicable processes of collective bargaining, and the strength of a union with more than one million members, they were able to persuade the management of hundreds of basic steel and fabricating plants across the United States and Canada to grant substantial wage increases and other significant contract improvements.

The strength of the Steelworkers Union in the economic field was reflected in another matter—the integrity of our unions and the determination of CIO to oppose corrupt racketeers who are as much a danger to American unionism as the Communist extremists against whom we acted a few years ago.

It was good to note that the USA-CIO Eexecutive Board condemned those who have mismanaged union welfare funds for having "betrayed their trust"—a trust placed in them by union men and women. That is a condemnation in which we all do share.

The convention got off to a good start with the keynote address of Pres. McDonald. As subsequent sessions considered the various economic, legislative and political action problems confronting the USA-CIO particularly and all of our unions generally, I was impressed by two things.

One impression was the great feeling of unity which prevails among the delegates and officers. And the second impression was a rightful feeling of pride in the accomplishments of the Steelworkers Union and of the entire CIO labor movement.

A real fighting and progressive program, a program that will help solve many of the programs which the Steelworkers face daily, was the goal of the USA-CIO delegates here. As I watched the drafting of that program, I once again felt the great honor and privilege to be a member of the United Steelworkers of America and to participate in the activities of their convention.

Here is a digest of recent reports to the CIO Organizational Dept. on representation election victories:

ANOTHER VICTORY in the South has been chalked up by the CIO Electrical Workers. IUE-CIO Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett reports recognition has been won at the Electrical Service Co. at Greenville, Tex.

From the West Coast, CIO Reg. 13 Dir. Irwin L. DeShetler reports an overwhelming victory for the CIO Oil Workers at the Filtrol Corp. plant in Los Angeles. OWIU Reg. Dir. Charles Armin advised the vote was 285 for OWIU to 12 for no union. OWIU Rep. George Cody was in charge.

Direct recognition was won for NABET (National Association of Broadcast Employes & Technicians) at Station KLAS-TV in Las Vegas, Nev., DeShetler also reports. CIO Rep. Syd Rose said three out of five Las Vegas radio stations already have been organized, and NABET now is campaigning to make it 100%.

In the South, the hard-driving Intl. Woodworkers of America have won collective bargaining rights at the Maxwell Brothers, Inc., plant in Jasper, Fla., after a tough organizing campaign. The vote was 69 to 41.

Three victories for the CIO Auto Workers in the New York City-New Jersey area are reported by CIO Reg. 2 Dir. Michael Mann. The UAW bargaining gains were at Chrysler New York City Co., New York City; American Smelting & Refining Co., Federated Metals Div., Newark, N. J.; and Hersh Motor Car Co., Inc., Elizabeth, N. J.

KKK

"Everything in the book" was thrown at the CIO Woodworkers in a recent organizing drive at Maxwell Brothers, Jasper, Fla.

IWA Field Rep. James R. Cochran reports that "Ku Klux Klan leaflets were placed around on the jobs" in an effort to intimidate Negro workers, while Elry George, a Negro unionist, was arrested on a frame-up charge. Nevertheless, IWA won the election.

RWDSU Seizes Five Locals Over Welfare Fund Scandals

FIVE locals of the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union were under international administration last week as top officials moved swiftly to halt shameful abuses of welfare funds by local officers and employes.

Six officers of the local unions, all in New York City, were suspended by the international as a result of disclosures of huge salaries, free vacations, lavish expense accounts and other benefits made during an investigation of union welfare funds by the New York State Insurance Dept.

RWDSU Pres. Max Greenberg acted under the spur of a virtual ultimatum from CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther to clean house or face action by the CIO Executive Committee and CIO Executive Board at their meetings next week.

Four of the locals were seized without opposition. They were Local 377, United Service Employes; Local 394, United Auto Parts & Accessory Workers; Local 563, United Shoe Service Workers, and Local 1115, Restaurant, Luncheonette & Soft Drink Employes.

AT THE OFFICE of Local 923, United Culinary, Bar & Grill Employes, two women employes attempted to bar RWDSU Sec.-Treas. Martin Kyne, Organizational Dir. Alvin Heaps, Intl. Rep. Daniel Klein and other international representatives.

They locked a door in an effort to keep the delegation from the lush office of Local Pres. Samuel Rosenzweig, but Heaps and Klein crashed it and Kyne formally took over.

Rosenzweig arrived a few minutes later but was not allowed to enter. He threatened legal action, declared he had neither been before the executive board nor indicted by a grand jury, and asserted that "hoodlums, gorillas and Communists have taken over the union by force."

ROZENZWEIG admitted at the Insurance Dept. hearings that he drew $41,000 from the local and its welfare fund last year.

Pres. Milton Weihrauch of the CIO Electrical Workers Dist. 4, representing 80,000 members in Metropolitan New York and North Jersey, asked the probers for an opportunity to testify on the district's welfare fund.

The scandals already disclosed, he said, have given the impression that "all or most" union funds are poorly run or milked by union officials, whereas the reverse is true. Dist. 4's fund, jointly administered by labor and management, is more typical, he said.

Meantime, a Senate Labor subcommittee headed by Sen. Ives (R. N.Y.) laid plans for an objective inquiry into reported abuses of union welfare funds in which Reuther and AFL Pres. George Meany have promised to cooperate. A House Labor subcommittee opened public hearings in Los Angeles last week.

NEW CONTROL—A workman changes lock at Culinary Local 923 office in New York after local was put under RWDSU administrator.

Stone Union Elects Scott

THE MEMBERSHIP of the CIO Stone Workers has reelected Pres. Sam H. Scott and Sec.-Treas. John C. Lawson, who were unopposed.

Lewis R. Lowry, director of USAPWA-CIO Dist. 3, led a field of seven candidates to win the vice-presidency.

He received 1940 votes, with his nearest opponent, Robert W. Kurtz, getting 1157 votes. Former Vice Pres. W. John Mitchell, who ran third, got 1053 votes.

The new vice president, who took office Sept. 1, has served as director of Dist. 3 since 1946.

12c Pay Package Won At Bethlehem Yards

EXTENDED negotiations with the Bethlehem Steel Co. shipbuilding division—the industry's key firm—gained 16,000 CIO Shipbuilding Workers a 12c-an-hour package increase.

Covered by the agreement are yards in East Boston and Quincy, Mass.; two in Brooklyn; Staten Island, N. Y.; Hoboken, N. J.; Key Highway, Baltimore, and Sparrows Point, Md.

Wages were increased 5c an hour, of which 3c is effective Sept. 20 and 2c on Nov. 1. The union also won several considerable improvements in the social security, health and life insurance program through increased company contributions.

These contract advances included:

- Minimum monthly pensions for the total and permanently disabled were raised from $50 to $75.
- Blue Cross and Blue Shield coverage was extended from 70 to 120 days, with dependents included if desired by the employe.
- Life insurance increases brought the range of benefits to $3000-$5500.
- Sickness and accident benefits were hiked from $26 to $40 a week for the prevailing 26 weeks.
- Pensions were raised from $100 to $140 a month, with the provision that all Social Security increases be added after Nov. 1.
- Premiums on all life insurance held by pensioners will be fully paid by the company.

The new agreement will run to Aug. 1, 1956, with a wage reopener after one year. However, the pension provisions are for three years. Both the workers and the company contribute to health and life insurance.

THE NEGOTIATIONS, which began early in June, were disrupted twice when the company representatives walked out. A strike was averted when the Federal Conciliation Service appealed to the company and the unions to continue the talks.

The union was represented by the 16-man Bethlehem Atlantic Coast Committee headed by Pres. John J. Grogan, Vice Pres. Andrew J. Pettis and Sec.-Treas. Ross D. Blood.

Despite the consummation of the key agreement, IUMSWA-CIO last week was meeting stiff resistance in trying to reach settlements with 30 other shipbuilding firms on the Atlantic Coast and Great Lakes.

Textile Asks 10c At Viscose

BENEFITS totaling about 10c an hour will be sought by the CIO Textile Workers when it reopens its contract with American Viscose Corp. on Nov. 30. About 10,000 workers in seven plants will be affected.

Wesley W. Cook, TWUA-CIO synthetic yarn division director, said that "in view of the unsettled conditions in the textile industry" the union has decided "to press only for a modest wage increase plus certain improvements in working conditions."

Plants involved are at Meadville, Lewiston and Marcus Hook, Pa., Front Royal and Roanoke, Va., and Parkersburg and Nitro, W. Va.

96% Favor Strike At Canadian Ford

With more than 5500 balloting, 96.6% favored a strike by Local 200 of the CIO Auto Workers against the Ford Motor Co. at Windsor, Ont., to enforce contract demands.

Coming CIO Conventions

The following is a list of coming CIO conventions for the remainder of the year:

IUE-CIO, Sept. 27-Oct. 1, Di-Lido Hotel, Miami Beach, Fla.

Canadian Congress of Labor, Sept. 27-Oct. 1, Royal York Hotel, Toronto, Can.

Marine & Shipbuilding Union, Oct. 4, Asbury Park, N. J.

NABET Oct. 6-8, Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, Calif.

Georgia State IUC, Oct. 8-10, Dempsey Hotel, Macon, Ga.

Colorado State IUC, Oct. 9-10, Albany Hotel, Denver, Colo.

Virginia State IUC, Oct. 14-16, Nansemont Hotel, Ocean View, Va.

Wisconsin State IUC, Oct. 21-24, Milwaukee, Wis.

Utility Workers, Oct. 21-24, Sheraton-Plaza Hotel, Boston, Mass.

North Carolina State IUC, Oct. 29-31, Raleigh, N. C.

Kentucky State IUC, Oct. 30-31, Henry Clay Hotel, Ashland, Ky.

Massachusetts State IUC, Nov. 11-13, Bradford Hotel, Boston, Mass.

Oil Workers, Nov. 15, Cleveland, O.

Maryland State IUC, Nov. 18-20, Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C.

UAW-CIO Economic Conference, Nov. 19-20, Detroit, Mich.

Minnesota State IUC, Nov. 19-21, Nicollet Hotel, Minneapolis, Minn.

National CIO, Dec. 6-10, Statler Hotel, Los Angeles, Calif.

PRESENTATION of Philip Murray Memorial Foundation gift of $200,000 to National Council of Churches was made (left) by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther to Bishop William C. Martin, Council president, at New York luncheon. Center: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, of Foundation Public Advisory Board, speaks. Right: Steelworkers Pres. David J. McDonald hands scroll to Dr. Roy G. Ross, Council secretary.

Accurate Job Reports Urged By Reuther

ANOTHER PLEA for more accuracy in federal statistics on unemployment went from CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther to Sec. of Labor Mitchell last week.

Again asking that the Bureau of Employment Security avoid "optimistic misrepresentations" of the number of jobless who are receiving unemployment compensation, Reuther renewed the CIO request that the number of workers who have exhausted their benefit rights be obtained from the states and published each week.

"The purpose of this wholly reasonable request," he wrote Mitchell, "is to round out your weekly reports, so that we and the press and others might be able to distinguish between an encouraging reduction in the number of insured unemployed which results from rehiring, and a discouraging reduction due in large part to the exhaustion of benefit rights."

He explained that reports for the weeks ending Aug. 7 and Aug. 14, for example, cited declines in insured unemployment and said that increased employment was "chiefly responsible," while exhaustions merely "contributed."

"Limited data on exhaustions . . . appear to be in direct conflict with the phrases quoted," he added. "In each of the four weeks ending Aug. 28, the number of workers exhausting benefit rights in only eight states amounted to half or more of the decline in insured unemployment in all 48 states."

Reuther Hails MESA Vote To Affiliate

CIO GAINED a new affiliate last week, the Mechanics Educational Society of America, and CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther predicted "even greater trade union successs" for the 52,000-member union.

Discussions on CIO affiliation by the independent mechanics union have been under way for some time. They reached a decision at a New York meeting last week of the MESA's 150-member national administrative committee, which voted unanimously for affiliation.

A charter was issued a few days later by Reuther, under authority of CIO Executive Board action last spring.

REUTHER praised the "long and proud history of militant trade unionism" of the MESA, promised it "full autonomy and organizational structure," and said "exact jurisdiction" lines will be worked out shortly.

The MESA was formed 22 years ago. It represents mechanics, tool and die makers, and engineers in 127 metal working plants, mostly in Michigan and Ohio. The move to bring it into CIO was led by Pres. George White, Vice Pres. Emil Petitto and Sec. Matthew Smith.

Give A Buck To PAC —The Job You Save May Be Your Own

Christian Economic Principles Voiced By Church Council

PRECEDENT has been established with adoption of a declaration of Christian principles for economic life by the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A.

The 4000-word statement said "free democratic institutions are clearly superior to any form of totalitarianism."

It set forth as a basic Christian principle that "all resources of the earth—such as land and water and mineral deposits, which under the laws of men become private or public property—are gifts of God, and every form of ownership or use of such property should be kept under such scrutiny that it may not distort the purpose of God's creation."

The declaration decried all economic practices and institutions that tend to divide men as to race, nation or class, because they spread un-Christian "false pride, covetousness and bitterness."

The proclamation upheld freedom as another basic value entering into all human relations, asserting that real freedom in the Christian view is expressed in the Scriptural words: "We must obey God rather than men."

Pension Hike At Ford Is Won By UAW

HIGHER pension benefits for many retired Ford workers, ranging from $5 to $13.50, have been negotiated.

Dir. Ken Bannon of the CIO Auto Workers' Ford Dept. said the plan was subject to Treasury Dept. approval. The pension boost was requested by the UAW-CIO because of increased social security payments due next month.

Under the revision, most of the 1182 retired Ford workers covered by Optional Plan B, which called for a monthly payment of $125 including social security, will not have the company-paid portion of the pension cut back to offset the social security increase. Instead, they will get the benefit of the boost in old-age payments.

The revision in Plan B does not affect some 800 retired Ford employes who come under Plan A, which is not linked with social security payments.

IUE Strikes At Emerson Plants

About 2000 CIO Electrical Workers are striking at the St. Louis, Mo., and Washington, Ill., plants of the Emerson Electric Mfg. Co. to back their wage increase demands of 5c for production workers and 7c for maintenance workers.

CIO Greets AFL Parley On Raid Ban

FRATERNAL best wishes from the officers and members of the CIO were sent to the AFL convention in Los Angeles last week by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

The ratification of the no-raiding agreement between the two groups was described by Reuther as "a heartening trend toward the elimination of friction within the American labor movement."

"On the foundation of this agreement, I hope that the representatives of our two organizations may strengthen the bonds of fraternal friendship and set the foundation for future unity," Reuther wrote AFL Pres. George Meany.

MEANY in a keynote statement said the time was fast approaching "when we should get to the problem of unity and see if we cannot bring real unity to the American trade union movement."

The AFL urged Congress to cut the basic work-week in U. S. industry to 35 hours.

Sec. of Labor Mitchell criticized the AFL for not giving the Administration's labor record "a fair appraisal," to which Meany replied:

"You don't flip your cigar ashes on the floor when you are visiting friends, you don't throw lighted matches around carelessly. And you don't bring termites in and plant them in the foundation of the house."

CIO-PAC Joins In 'Fair Politics' Code

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, as chairman of the Political Action Committee, and Jack Kroll, National CIO-PAC director, last week joined in backing the "fair campaign practices" code which has received Democratic and Republican Party support:

THE CIO Political Action Committee is happy to subscribe to the code of fair campaign practices as promulgated by the Fair Campaign Practices Committee.

We are proud of the role we have played in the past in laying stress upon fundamentals of democratic discussion; namely the examination of the issue and the record of the candidate upon that issue. We will continue to stress these fundamentals.

The CIO and CIO-PAC have been in the forefront of the fight against appeals to prejudice, against the spreading of material which, without justification, attacks the loyalty or patriotism of any candidate, and against dishonest and unethical practices which tend to corrupt the electoral system. We shall continue to stay in the forefront of this fight.

The CIO-PAC has as its basic tenet the belief that every eligible citizen has a duty to exercise his judgment at the polls on election day. We will in the future, as we have in the past, bend every effort to the end that the greatest number of people possible cast their ballots on election day.

We believe it is the moral obligation of America as a leader among the free peoples of the world to make our democracy a shining symbol of freedom. This cannot be so if, in the determination of our national policy, we abandon the principles of decency, honesty and fair play which are the very hallmarks of democracy.

The end can never justify the means and we reject and repudiate any political philosophy which holds otherwise.

School Bias Hearing Set

HEARINGS will begin before the U. S. Supreme Court on Dec. 6 on detailed decrees to enforce the historic ruling issued last spring that outlawed segregation in public schools.

A big question to be settled then is whether states now practicing segregation should be given a substantial "grace period" to comply with the ruling. The court took notice in its decree of the sweeping impact of the decision.

George Kane Dies

George F. Kane, 44, sub-regional director of the CIO Auto Workers in Trenton, N. J., and eastern Pennsylvania, died recently in Trenton. Kane had been a member of the UAW-CIO staff since 1941.

Even the Score in '54 Give a Buck to PAC

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., October 4, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 40

It's Getting Late!

Your Vote Won't Count— If You Can't Be Counted

Check Your State Deadline— Register Today! Vote On Nov. 2!

North And South, CIO Leads The Way

In the deep South and in the farming states, CIO unions and councils are setting the pace in new fields of human and community relations.

For the first time, CIO's long-standing fair play policies were demonstrated at an international union convention in Miami Beach (photo below), as delegates to CIO Electrical Workers convention met in the South on a basis of equality. (More pictures and stories on Page 3.)

"Partners in production" was the theme of Nebraska CIO Council's booth (left) at State Fair in Lincoln. More than 50,000 fair visitors registered at CIO booth, typical of work of CIO councils in many farm states. (Nebraska CIO warned on farm recession; see Page 9.)

Labor-Hating Teetor Named To Defense Manpower Group

SIGN OF THE TIMES –It's like the Thirties all over again, as big Detroit super market seeks business by advertising "we accept welfare orders."

ANOTHER plum has been tossed by the Eisenhower Administration into the lap of Assistant Sec. of Commerce Lothair Teetor, the man who recently revealed big business plans for a new legislative drive against labor.

Teetor was named as a member of the Office of Defense Mobilization's inter-agency Manpower Policy committee, the top strategy group that decides who works where and why in time of defense emergency.

Named as Teetor's alternate was John J. Kilcullen, assistant general counsel for the Commerce Dept.

LABOR SEC. Mitchell charged that Teetor was not speaking for the Administration when he made his recent anti-labor speech. Mitchell was asked at the CIO Electrical Workers convention last week if Teetor was reflecting Administration policy when he called for state control of labor relations.

"Categorically no," Mitchell snapped angrily.

Later, Mitchell at a press conference in Washington, said he would be "disturbed" if Commerce Sec. Weeks' opinions on labor matters "gained ascendancy" in the Administration.

HE SAID "we do not believe that the anti-trust laws should be extended to labor unions," which the Commerce Dept. is considering.

"The anti-trust laws are designed to handle a corporate problem," Mitchell continued. "We have developed other methods of handling labor relations, and it seems to me if there is an abuse that should be corrected, that should be done through labor legislation and not anti-trust legislation."

The CIO News editorially demanded that Teetor be fired after his recent speech in which he assured a Chamber of Commerce meeting in Kansas City, Mo., that Commerce Dept. proposals to worsen Taft-Hartley would be so reactionary they would have "the unanimous support of the State Chamber of Commerce."

INSTEAD, the Administration placed him on a board which plots manpower use and studies recommendations of ODM's national labor-management manpower policy committee. Among its functions, the group lays down Selective Service policy.

Teetor, a 57-year-old executive, was chairman of the board of the Perfect Circle Co., piston ring manufacturer; president of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce and a director and top policy maker of the National Association of Manufacturers from 1942 until the time of his appointment to the GOP "team."

The appointment of Teetor to the manpower policy committee came after the Commerce Dept. clamored for representation as a spokesman for industry and production. The Labor Dept. is represented on the committee, but unions aren't.

Teetor made it plain in his Kansas City speech that he has the interests of business uppermost. He criticized the Eisenhower Administration's own proposal to widen unemployment compensation coverage. The Commerce Dept., he said, agreed with business organizations that coverage should not be widened by federal action.

The CIO Looks At The 83rd Congress

THE STORY of the 83rd Congress in terms of the public interest has been put on the record by the CIO Legislative Dept., in its new publication, Report on Congress: The CIO Looks at the 83rd Congress.

This 64-page illustrated booklet tells the behind-the-scenes maneuvers, the political strategy, and the clash of basic party principles as they came to the fore in the legislative activities on Capitol Hill during the first Eisenhower Congress.

Included also are a number of "key" votes on major issues, showing how the two major parties lined up on questions affecting the public interest. In addition, the appendix includes the detailed roll call on seven representative issues of national interest.

Besides a preface by Robert Oliver, director of the CIO Legislative Committee, there are major sections devoted to "trickle-down" economics, labor legislation, give-aways, and farm measures.

Copies of the booklet may be obtained from the CIO Legislative Committee, 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington 6, D. C. Individual copies are free; prices for bulk orders are available on request.

UPWA Gains 7c Pattern In New Swift Contract

WAGE BOOSTS and other benefits totaling 7-8c an hour have been won by the CIO Packinghouse Workers in negotiations with Swift & Co.

A 5c general increase was effective Sept. 20 at 39 Swift packing plants, making the basic male wage rate $1.55 an hour.

Another 1.5c increase was agreed to for women workers to narrow the wage gap between male and female workers to 3.5c. About 15% of Swift employes are women.

UPWA-CIO Pres. Ralph Helstein anticipated the settlement with Swift would be a "patternmaker" for the rest of the industry. He said that negotiations had been "the most difficult and involved we have had in many years."

Helstein blamed "the political atmosphere of big business control of an Administration dedicated to higher profits for people who already have big profits."

The AFL Meat Cutters & Butcher Workmen worked with UPWA during negotiations and negotiated a similar settlement with Swift.

Under the agreement, all existing inter-plant inequities will be adjusted upward. Increases of 2.5c at the firm's southern plants will reduce and in some cases eliminate geographical wage differentials.

Company-paid hospitalization benefits will be broadened by the settlement and vacations for employes with 25 years of service were raised to four weeks.

4000 Jobs Periled By N. Y. Transit Cuts, TWU Warns

DRASTIC CUTS in the operation of New York City's transit system proposed by the Transit Authority will eliminate 4000 jobs, the CIO Transport Workers charged last week.

TWU-CIO Pres. Michael J. Quill and Pres. Matthew Guinan of TWU-CIO Local 100 have asked Brooklyn Borough Pres. Cashmore for union representation at his meeting with the Transit Authority to discuss a public hearing on the proposed slashes.

THE UNION claimed that the jobs would be eliminated through the demolition of the Third Avenue Elevated, a 10% layoff in every department of the system, reductions in car maintenance and in several other ways.

"In the interest of 40,000 men and women who operate the city transit system, we request representation at the meeting between yourself and the Transit Authority relative to setting up the public hearing," Quill and Guinan wired Cashmore.

"We insist that the workers must have full consideration in any discussion of these unwise and unnecessary service cuts."

The two TWU leaders earlier called on Mayor Wagner and the Board of Estimate to order a public hearing to "unmask before the citizens of this city the sabotage of municipal transportation now being attempted by the Transit Authority."

The union has its own program against layoffs. It includes mobilizing public support to fight dismantling of the Third Avenue Elevated, immediate construction of a Second Avenue subway, blocking all speed-up, and organizing riders' resistance to cuts in subway and bus service.

New CIO Report Gives Record On 11 Ousted Unions

THE FULL RECORD of the CIO's expulsion of 11 Communist-dominated unions in 1949 and 1950 is presented in a new booklet compiled by the CIO Publicity Dept.

Reports of the Executive Board committees set up to investigate charges of Communist infiltration into the union leadership, convention resolutions and the action taken in the cases of the offending unions are detailed for the first time in a single volume.

Copies of the official reports, titled the Expulsion of Communist-Dominated Organizations from the CIO, are available at 15c each from the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

The Latest In Fringe Benefits Poses Absentee Problems

Want a swim instead of a raise?

Employers in the Philadelphia area are being tempted with the idea that a swimming pool may somehow help solve labor-management problems.

Taking a full-page ad in a local paper, the Sylvan swimming pool firm urged employers to build a pool at the plant—and call it a "fringe benefit."

A list of benefits suggested by the advertiser sounded as though it had been inspired by a medicine man's spiel. Swimming pools, the ad suggested, improve morale, promote fraternity, and make the plant a more attractive place in which to work.

We can hear it now: A union demand that the swimming pool be lengthened by 25 feet.

★

INDUSTRIAL scenery if the idea above goes over may include views like this of showgirl Kalan Tan. →

CWA Signs 2 Bell Pacts; Strike Voted In The South

TWO MORE Bell system units—Indiana and Mountain States—have signed new contracts with the CIO Communications Workers, bringing to 21 the number of Bell companies agreements covering more than 200,000 employes.

The Mountain States settlement affects 14,830 accounting, traffic and plant workers in the Rockies area from the Canadian to the Mexican borders. The Indiana agreement covers over 7000 workers.

Bell settlements thus far have featured an increase of $1-$1.50 a week, shortened schedules in traffic departments and $1-$2.50 a week in the plant operations.

A walkout of 49,275 Southern Bell workers in nine states was a prospect after a strike vote passed overwhelmingly and the walkout received executive board sanction. There also was a possibility of strike action in four Chesapeake and Potomac companies — Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

CWA also settled for 1300 workers of American Cable & Radio Co. in the U. S. and Hawaii, winning a 6c an hour pay raise, 30-35 hour week, equal pay for equal work, a standard country-wide rate for the same job and good grievance machinery.

Steel Merger Plan Rejected

The proposed merger of Bethlehem Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube was turned down last week by the Justice Dept.

Atty.-Gen. Brownell said that the law prohibits any merger "where in any line of commerce in any section of the country, the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition, to tend to create a monopoly."

IUE Looks To Record, Plans To Better It

By AL ZACK

THE CIO Electrical Workers are not content with a year of major victories in representation elections, at the collective bargaining table and in other phases of union life.

They are determined to better that record.

That was the mood of the sixth annual convention of the IUE-CIO, held in Miami Beach, Fla., last week. All resolutions and decisions were keyed to that determination.

The 600 delegates, attending the first convention of a CIO union in the deep South, were quietly proud of another major accomplishment. They had broken the segregation barrier in a major southern city.

Without complications, delegates of all races, creeds and color, were housed in the swank hotels of the famous resort city and Mayor Harold Shapiro, who welcomed the convention, expressed his satisfaction at seeing a CIO union able to hold a convention in the South.

A Record Of Growth

Opening the sessions, Pres. James B. Carey, who is also CIO secretary-treasurer, looked back over an amazing five-year record of IUE growth. In that time, the union has effectively smashed the Communist-dominated United Electrical Workers, which represented a half million workers when CIO expelled it in 1949.

In those five years, the IUE has grown to a membership of over 400,000 and is now CIO's third largest union. During the past year it won 93 new groups of electrical workers and the UE's strength is at its lowest point in history.

In those same years, Carey reported, the IUE had won economic gains amounting to better than 55c an hour—in higher wages, better holidays, and vacations and pension and insurance programs.

Oragnizing Campaigns Set

But, Carey and other IUE officers advised the delegates, they shouldn't be satisfied. In resolutions adopted unanimously and with enthusiasm, the delegates set themselves a major organizations campaign for the coming year, designed to organize unorganized workers in their shops, organize salaried workers in the major electrical chains, organize unorganized plants and runaway shops, and sink the UE.

Immediately moving to implement its continuing drive to liberate workers from the UE's Communist yoke, IUE organizers handbilled UE's despondent convention in New York, urging UE locals to abandon that sinking ship and join the IUE.

A no-contract, no-work policy was adopted for relations with the General Electric Co. Delegates voted to throw the union's entire resources behind locals in GE shops. A resolution called for "a plan of action against GE's fight against the union."

The firm was charged with making "apparent efforts to destroy collective bargaining as such." The present GE contract covering more than 100,000 workers expires next Sept. 15.

Expressing their satisfaction at the leadership of Carey and Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett, the convention unanimously, with a rising vote of confidence, reelected both to two-year terms.

The convention also endorsed Carey's candidacy for re-election as CIO secretary-treasurer for his 16th term.

GOP Rule Hit

The delegates were vocal and tough in their condemnation of the 83rd Congress and the Eisenhower Administration. Recounting the toll of lost jobs, lost earnings and a skidding economy, which had resulted from congressional and Administration policies, the convention said:

"We will not have full employment if the Administration continues to be dominated by big businessmen who cannot see beyond their narrow, selfish interests."

The more than 600 delegates unanimously adopted a nine-point domestic program which called for:

Increasing consumer purchasing power, equitable sharing of the tax burden; vast expansion in the construction of schools, hospitals, roads, dams and other public works; guaranteeing the farmer a fairer share of the national income; preserving and developing the nation's natural resources for the benefit of all the people;

Adoption of an import-export program which will both improve international trade and American employment opportunities; preserve and promote full civil liberties; expand and improve America's educational system to meet the needs of a dynamic democracy; and repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, with adoption of equitable labor relations statutes.

The delegates pledged themselves to an all-out campaign for PAC bucks and for an intensive doorbell-ringing drive to promote registration and a big liberal vote on Nov. 2.

The convention's major scheduled speaker, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, was unable to attend due to illness. Other major speakers were former Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida, Sen. Neely (D. W. Va.) and Pres. Joseph Beirne of the CIO Communications Workers.

Pepper delivered a blistering attack on the Eisenhower Administration, accusing it of scuttling campaign promises and achieving the highest unemployment since the last Republican Administration.

In a direct slap at Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.), Pepper referred to the Senate bipartisan committee censure motion just recommended to the senate. He urged that "we get rid of those un-American tactics which undermine our freedom."

Stop The Give-Aways

Neely delivered a blistering attack on the President and the Administration, calling upon labor to help elect a "liberal, Democratic congress" on Nov. 2.

This, the lawmaker said, is necessary to "prevent Eisenhower and the gang around him" from "giving away more of the people's wealth . . . and driving our country to the depression depths of the early '30s."

Beirne warned that labor must not ignore "corporate fascism," an "evil just as bad as Communism."

He charged that corporations in America have more rights and privileges than people, and said today's arrogance and hate demonstrated by corporation leaders is no accident, the CWA president said, but result from the changed political atmosphere of the past two years and the new sense of power corporate officials now have.

Another convention speaker, Rep. Celler (D. N.Y.), said that if the Democrats regain control of Congress and he resumes as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, the policies of General Electric, General Motors and of Sec. of Defense Wilson (former GM president), will be investigated.

A resolution detailing the IUE-CIO's position on health and welfare insurance, adopted unanimously, backed CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther in his drive against a corrupt local union official who "feathers his own nest" with union welfare funds. Such officials, the convention voted, "belong in jail."

UNANSWERED QUESTIONS—Sec. of Labor Mitchell offered CIO Electrical Workers delegates the answers to questions on the GOP Administration's program, but there were plenty of hands raised for more questions (first and second photos) when he got finished at Miami Beach. Delegates admired Mitchell's courage but he failed to win any converts. At right: Pres. James B. Carey, who also is CIO secretary-treasurer, and IUE Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett, after they were reelected without opposition to lead CIO's third largest union on big tasks during the year ahead.

Leadership

The CIO Electrical Workers, first CIO union to support Walter Reuther's candidacy as CIO president two years ago, is proud of that decision.

Reuther has displayed "integrity, militancy, democratic convictions and leadership qualities" the convention said in a resolution adopted by a unanimous, standing vote of the applauding delegates.

The delegates also unanimously voted to support Reuther if he seeks a third term as CIO president.

No Shortcuts

Thurgood Marshall, counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the IUE-CIO convention there are "no shortcuts, no simple solutions" in the fight against discrimination.

"It is a full-time fight, just as you must fight full-time for your union," he said. "America must be opposed to racial bigotry, not just to answer Radio Moscow but because it is unlawful and downright immoral."

Mitchell Sweats It Out, Fails To Win Convert

THAT OLD GOP slogan, which claims that "workers like the Eisenhower labor record even if their leaders oppose it," fell flat on its face at the CIO Electrical Workers convention.

Sec. of Labor Mitchell made an unprecedented appearance, offering to answer questions on the record of the Administration, instead of delivering a "canned speech."

Seventy minutes later, visibly sweating and with a sea of hands still trying to attract IUE Pres. James B. Carey's attention, the Mitchell cross-examination ended.

He had won the admiration of the delegates for what Carey called his "courage"; he had exercised all his charm and painted the Eisenhower record in its best possible light. But newsmen agreed he hadn't won a single convert.

Through their questions, the rank-and-file delegates demonstrated a thorough knowledge of the Eisenhower record and the legislative failures of the 83rd Congress.

From Taft-Hartley through minimum wages to the problem of runaway shops, the delegates asked hard questions and firmly but politely registered their disagreement with Mitchell's attempts to excuse the Administration.

At one point, the big, burly Secretary of Labor, with an infectious grin, received hearty applause.

In his brief opening remarks, Mitchell highly praised Carey and the IUE for its fight against Communist infiltration of unions. Taking a deep breath and peering over his horn rimmed glasses, Mitchell added:

"You can be proud you were fighting communism long before Joe McCarthy ever heard of it."

It was the first time a Cabinet officer had openly tangled with the Wisconsin Senator. Mitchell refused to amplify his statement when reporters questioned him later.

In other answers, Mitchell said:

1. Minimum wages are too low and must be raised, with expanded coverage. Mitchell said such a proposal would be forthcoming shortly. (He voiced a similar promise a year ago at the CIO convention.)

2. Unemployment compensation must be increased and benefit duration lengthened, but the job is a state-level one. "We need your cooperation," Mitchell said, evidently referring to the big business campaign against this avowed Administration proposal.

3. The Administration's Taft-Hartley proposals were "fair and just" and the Democrats scuttled them. Mitchell did not explain how the 1954 amendments could be considered pro-labor when every bona fide union had called them "worse than T-H."

4. The Administration recognized the problems caused by runaway plants but he "didn't know" what could be done to meet the problem. Carey popped to his feet with the suggestion that the Administration could stop giving tax amortization breaks to such companies.

Cause For Celebration

It's five years now since the Intl. Union of Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers was created to bring militant and democratic trade unionism to the workers of one of the nation's most important industries.

In those five years, the IUE-CIO, under the leadership of Pres. James B. Carey and his fellow officers, has grown in numbers—so that it is now by far the dominant union in its field. And it has also grown in internal strength and unity into a mature and established organization to promote the welfare of its members.

IUE-CIO convention delegates are justly angry at the tactics and policies of the General Electric Co., that colossus of the electronics field. GE's advertising would have the public believe that the company looks only to the future.

Indeed the scientists of the GE laboratories can be justly proud of their inventions and the new processes they have developed.

But GE's labor relations policy—in contrast—is geared to the past, not to the future. It is a throwback to the gaslight, gas-pipe era. It is based on refusal to accept the responsibility for frank and honest collective bargaining. GE promotes discord rather than a fair relationship with the union of its employes.

So it's natural that the IUE-CIO is promising a showdown fight with GE unless that attitude changes. Between now and next September, when the present contract expires, GE would do well to give its labor relations policy a scientific analysis in its laboratories. Perhaps then it could start building for the future.

'Hasn't Scratched Yet'

We see by the papers that Pres. Eisenhower has nominated Neil McElroy, president of Proctor & Gamble Co., to be chairman of the White House Conference on Education—one of the series of talk fests which the GOP Administration is planning instead of effective action to build more schools.

Come to think of it, considering all the soft soap we've heard from Sec. Oveta Culp Hobby against federal aid for education, it's appropriate that a soap manufacturer is going to head the White House conference.

The P. & G. slogan—"It floats"—would be inappropriate for that meeting. Here's another slogan that's more fitting: "Hasn't scratched yet."

Which Is Which?

When the GOP won the 1952 election, it promised the Administration's left hand would always know what the right hand is doing. Those who believed that campaign line must be disappointed—and as confused as we.

For example, Asst. Sec. of Commerce Lothair Teetor says the Administration really favors turning over power to legislate all phases of labor-management relations to the states.

But Sec. of Labor Mitchell says "categorically, no"—when asked if Teetor speaks for the Administration on that issue.

For a second example, Sec. of Commerce Weeks is pushing a scheme, long favored by anti-union interests, to bring labor under the anti-trust statutes. But Sec. of Labor Mitchell is reported in the press to be opposed.

The statements of Sec. Mitchell and Sec. Weeks don't clarify the situation at all; they merely indicate that they disagree sharply, as members of the "team."

Who sets policy on labor matters in the Administration? You pay your money and you take your guess.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS
Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director
Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII October 4, 1954 No. 40

Merrily We Roll Along

In Other Words—

A Report On Soviet Anti-Semitism

Here are excerpts from testimony on continuing, virulent anti-Semitism in the Communist countries by Pres. Irving M. Engel of the American Jewish Committee before a House committee investigating Communist aggression:

By IRVING M. ENGEL

AT THE END of the 40's and in the early 50's, Communist parties and governments, on orders from Moscow, began to organize anti-Semitic campaigns openly.

Irving M. Engel

Party and state officials of Jewish origin were ousted from their positions and arrested in systematic purges. At first these purges did not stress the Jewishness of the victims; their organizers relied upon the Jewish-sounding names to convey their message.

A parallel campaign in the Soviet Union victimized thousands of Jewish intellectuals accused of political unreliability. They were charged with both "cosmopolitanism" and "Jewish nationalism," their originally Jewish-sounding names being added in brackets where the victims had adopted Russian names.

The impact of these denunciations on the popular mind can easily be imagined. The epithets "cosmopolitan," "alien," "rootless," "wandering," used to denote persons of Jewish origin, evoked hateful stereotypes of anti-Semitic propaganda.

In November 1952, an openly anti-Semitic trial was conducted in Prague, Czechoslovakia. Rudolph Slansky, a Jew, and 13 co-defendants, 10 of them of Jewish origin, were tried for treason, sabotage, espionage, murder; they were forced to confess and were executed or sentenced to prison for life.

The victims, all Communists of long standing, were falsely described as Zionists or Jewish nationalists, though they had renounced the Jewish religion and all ties with the Jewish community in their youth and had opposed Zionism and any kind of Jewish nationalism throughout their adult lives.

It was absolutely clear that the word "Zionist" was simply a substitute for "Jew." The word "Jewish" was used profusely throughout the proceedings.

Slansky and his co-defendants were accused of every possible crime and some that were impossible. They had to confess responsibility for all the failures and crimes of the Communist regime. And they were accused not as individuals but as members of a worldwide Jewish conspiracy. Thus the Jews—all Jews—were made scapegoats against whom the resentment and hatred of the oppressed population was to be directed.

In January 1953, false accusations against Moscow doctors who "confessed" to having murdered Soviet statesmen on orders from Washington and Israel added new fuel to the fire. Thousands of Jewish doctors were arrested in the Soviet Union, in Hungary and other satellite countries.

Purge Drive Is Continuing

The Communist Party of East Germany, where only a few Jews were left, even accused some of its non-Jewish leaders of being in the service of the worldwide Jewish conspiracy. The Communist-imposed leaders of the Jewish religious community in Hungary went to jail, together with government officials of Jewish origin. In Rumania, the demotion of the former Foreign Minister, Ana Pauker, began a new wave of purges and anti-Jewish demonstrations.

This anti-Semitic drive by no means stopped when the Soviet, after the death of Stalin and for reasons connected with the intra-party struggle, was forced to admit that the charges against the Moscow doctors were false. Except for the doctors who were the principals, none of the thousands of victims was rehabilitated.

In Slovakia, the former leaders of the Slovak Communist Party, friends of former Foreign Minister Vlado Clementis, non-Jews, were forced in a spectacular trial in April 1954 to confess they had furthered the criminal activities of "Zionists" and "Jewish capitalists."

The prosecution of Jews is, of course, only a part of the general policy of terror and suppression under which all nations of the Soviet orbit, all victims of Communist aggressions, are suffering. Certainly it is not the enslaved nations of Eastern Europe but their Moscow masters and their native Communist leaders who are responsible.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

THE CORRECT WAY to assess the new situation regarding Sen. McCarthy is to return to what many felt, four years ago, to be the truth: That McCarthy was a mere racketeer in anti-communism and that so-called "decent" Republicans who encouraged him were actually indecent political scallywags.

The Eisenhower Administration turned its face against McCarthy many months ago, when Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams and Atty.-Gen. Brownell decided that Joe's raids on Ike himself could not be endured.

The Watkins subcommittee hit McCarthy a deadly hammer-blow. Joe and his colleagues, his friends and his counsel, may talk all they wish about "unfairness." They may file as many countercharges as they wish against McCarthy's senatorial enemies. But the hammer-blow has been struck.

The Watkins subcommittee quickly showed McCarthy that it would not be bullied—and once the element of bullying is removed from the McCarthy technique, the man himself seems less formidable.

There were six members of the Watkins subcommittee—three Republicans and three Democrats—and they voted unanimously that McCarthy should be "censured" on three counts—his refusal to discuss his finances with an official Senate group, his violent language against another Republican, Sen. Hendrickson (N. J.), and his violent abuse of Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker.

Some of McCarthy's grossest offenses against the Eisenhower Administration, such as his televised invitations to low-level federal government screwballs to hand him confidential information about their associates, were passed over by the Watkins subcommittee.

This was, technically, wise. It would be very difficult for the Senate to vote formally that it had no "right" to confidential Executive Dept. information—even though most senators understand very well that they really have few "rights" in this field.

Still, the Watkins subcommittee has voted to recommend "censure" on two full counts and part of a third. It is hard to see how Senate Majority Leader Knowland has gained anything, besides his sense of shock, by postponing the Senate vote on the censure resolutions until Nov. 8, six days after the elections.

★ ★ ★

GOP Brought It On Itself

Not a single Republican or Democratic senatorial nominee will be allowed to escape repeated questions, between now and Nov. 2, regarding his position on "censure." Everyone in Illinois will know in advance, for example, how Sen. Douglas (D.) will vote—and everyone will know that his opponent, Joseph T. Meek, pretends to be "for" both Eisenhower and McCarthy but that Sen. Dirksen, the shallow subservient of Old Guard Republicanism is loudly pro-McCarthy.

The "decent" Republicans brought McCarthyism on themselves as a curse. The late Sen. Taft in 1950 encouraged Joe to keep bringing up "cases," and that if one fell down, to bring up another.

Eisenhower cut out of a 1952 campaign speech in Wisconsin a section praising Gen. George C. Marshall, one of McCarthy's targets and whipping boys. Eisenhower was persuaded that there was nothing wrong with McCarthyism—until it was turned against himself.

This history could be ignored if, even now, a substantial part of the GOP congressional campaign were not based on McCarthyism.

The ruthless Republican leaders are perfectly willing to sink McCarthy—after the election—if they have to, but also are persistent in using Joe's "ism" themselves.

★ ★ ★

Dirty Work By Tricky Dick

The Republican speakers no longer use Dean Acheson's name as an oratorical snarl. They no longer charge that Truman and Gen. Marshall deliberately "sold out" China.

Their terms now are more gentle and more generalized. With Vice Pres. Nixon as an example, they are still trying to make capital out of a sly, snide allegation that the people who led us in the past were "soft" toward Communism.

Using Nixon, again, as an example, the GOP campaigners insist on pretending that many of the people they have fired from the federal government, or people who have resigned from the government, were dangerous "security risks." The pretense is a total fraud.

The Eisenhower Administration is getting ready to slaughter McCarthy as an individual. But Nixon and its other low-level orators still employ the techniques which McCarthy formalized.

It was true in 1950 and it is true in 1954 that Joe is a political racketeer in the anti-Communist field—but the "decent" GOP leaders who egged him on, until he began to bother them, have much to answer with their consciences.

Prediction

"A strong Democratic tide" which may gain control of both houses of Congress was reported last week by Rep. Magnuson (D. Wash.). Among the reasons:

"The GOP, by its impossible promises and extravagant condemnation of the Democrats in 1952, set itself up for a rather violent reaction in 1954. Most of its promises stand unredeemed.

"When a political party succeeds in selling the voters an Aladdin with a magic lamp, it must expect trouble when the lamp fails to produce the advertised genie."

Issues In The Election—

'A Small Depression,' N.Y. Banker Said, Would Be 'Desirable'—Is It?

(This is the fourth in a series of articles on issues in the congressional election campaign.)

AGAINST A BACKGROUND of darkened factories and smokeless chimneys, GOP campaign leaders pour on the soothing syrup of optimism, predicting an upturn in employment bye and bye.

For example, Pres. Eisenhower told the country Aug. 12 that "the recent decline in economic activity has come to a halt." A few days later, encouraged by the magic of his own words, he caroled: "We are in a mild general upswing."

The accompaniment for all this was the shuffling steps of the 3.2 million jobless (the government's own figures) trudging in search of work or moving ahead in columns to collect unemployment checks. And that doesn't count the tens of thousands on short hours.

If you listened hard you could almost hear the rustle of savings bonds being cashed or the soft swish of withdrawal slips at the banks where folks were dipping into savings accounts.

But The Facts Don't Rhyme

The sloganeers of the Republican organization are busy in the background writing new choruses, trying to get "June" and "moon" and "boom" to rhyme with "November."

The strident, offbeat noise in the background was the government's own Bureau of Employment Security, reciting the growing list of industrial areas where unemployment is mounting and conditions are worsening.

The other day, the BES tacked the names of Charleston, W. Va., and Muskegon, Mich., to the list of sections where "very substantial" (12% of the work force) unemployment exists. There are nine of these. Forty-two areas have "substantial" (6%-12%) unemployment, 94 smaller areas with over 6%, 81 with "moderate" unemployment. Seventeen areas have a "balanced" labor supply. It's been months since there were any areas with more jobs than workers.

Two years ago, Candidate Eisenhower knew that the specter of Hoover's depression rode the campaign train with him. He felt it was necessary to allay the suspicions of Americans who had come to equate Republican policies with no jobs and hard times.

Some Promises Are Recalled

"Never again must the crime of mass unemployment be visited on our people," he told a Worcester, Mass., audience on Oct. 20, 1952.

A few days later he pledged "to have the finest brains that this country affords assembled in Washington . . . watching for the first indistinct signs of approaching depression or recession."

In New York City's garment district two years ago last week, the GOP candidate promised an America with "all working men and women at a high level of employment at a high level of wages" and "jobs without fear of depression."

After the election, Republican hard money policies curtailed purchasing power and unemployment set in on a dangerous scale. A Republican-controlled Congress closed its eyes to the Employment Act of 1946, which declares:

"It is the continuing policy and responsibility of the federal government . . . to promote maximum employment, production and purchasing power."

In 1953 a combined total of $370 billion in purchasing power was needed to have full scale production and to keep our work force fully employed. Each year 700,000 new workers are added to the labor force. Other workers are displaced by increased productivity. Thus, about $15 billion in purchasing power must be added to the U. S. economy each year just to stay even.

Cuts in government spending, production drops and other factors caused top economists to estimate the 1954 purchasing power at $355 billion instead of the $385 billion necessary to sustain full employment. That $30 billion deficit spelled real trouble to everyone except the Republican Party and its leaders.

Those who called attention to the economic storm signals drew strong reaction from Republican officialdom. Eisenhower called for "faith" which he said could not be shaken "by the self-appointed peddlers of gloom and doom."

Sounds Like '29 Again

This sounded ominously and suspiciously like Hoover's 1929 pronouncement that "any lack of confidence in the economic future or the basic strength of business in the U. S. is foolish."

Big business, which liberally financed the Republican campaigns, was instrumental in holding back government measures to alleviate the swelling tide of joblessness. Some of its spokesmen thought unemployment would hurt unions and their bargaining power. Their own position would not be hurt because a friendly Congress was to give them tax favors to compensate for reduced business incomes.

Vice Pres. Murray Shields of the Bank of Manhattan told the New York Times (Sept. 23, 1953): "A small corrective depression is very possible and perhaps even desirable."

When the situation could no longer be completely ignored, the GOP countered with the claim that the 1954 recession was "not as bad" as the 1949 setback. True, there were 3.4 million unemployed in 1949. That year, the economy failed to expand and consequently unemployment rose by 1.4 million.

Worse Now Than In '49

But this recession is worse for several reasons. In the average month of 1949, 5.5% of the total civilian labor force was unemployed. In February 1954 5.9% were jobless. Also, the cost of living was lower than in 1954. Also, the rate of rise in unemployment was higher this year than in 1949.

There is no lack of "faith" on the part of the American people, but "faith" historically is supposed to be accompanied by "good works."

As CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther in February 1954 told the Joint Committee on the Economic Report:

"There is nothing fundamentally wrong with the American economy that an increase in the purchasing power in the hands of millions of American families won't cure."

"It Never Existed And I Killed It"

Facts From PAC

This article is based on the 1954 Handbook of the CIO Political Action Committee. Copies of the Handbook are available at $1.50 each for union members from the CIO-PAC, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington, 6, D. C.

Program For Prosperity

To meet the present unemployment situation and to prevent its spread, CIO recommends a basic national economic program to reverse the tide of recession and return the country to full employment. The program consists of these 10 points:

- Tax relief for the great majority of taxpayers.
- Minimum wage increase to $1.25 an hour.
- Strengthened collective bargaining.
- Increased unemployment compensation.
- Expanded federal housing program.
- Improved social security.
- Continued high farm price supports.
- Expansion credit for small and medium-size business.
- Planned federal public works programs.
- Accelerated public works on the local and state levels.

The Job You Save May Be Your Own! Register, Give A Buck To PAC, Vote!

The State Campaigns

Layoffs, Sales Tax Are Top Pe

By JOSEPH WALSH
Special Correspondent

Another Campaign Exclusive

EVEN BEFORE the political hurricane hit the GOP in Maine, Pennsylvania political observers were sighting a Democratic year in the Keystone State, which has had but one Democratic governor since 1894 and none since 1938.

A wave of optimism is sweeping the state, especially among dozens of hard-working CIO-PAC units, that Nov. 2 will bring victory to State Sen. George M. Leader of York, who is making a whirlwind campaign for governor, and for his Democratic running mates for lieutenant governor, secretary of internal affairs and three places on the State Supreme Court.

Prospects also are that the Democrats will get a foothold in the General Assembly, long dominated by the GOP and the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association. Half of the 50 State senators are up for re-election. PAC leaders have confidence that the lead of 32 to 18 held by the Republicans in the 1953 session will be reduced.

Sales Tax Is Issue

Some of the reasons for this Democratic optimism are:

1. Aroused farmers and small businessmen in the rural areas are sore at the whole GOP for the cut in income handed them by the Eisenhower-Benson farm program.

CIO workers for PAC, especially at booths in fairs, report that farmers are cordial and cooperative. Leader, a successful farmer and poultry raiser, has attracted amazing support to the Democrats from small farmers who generally have been conservative Republicans.

2. Disruption, amounting almost to chaos, within the Republican Party and disgust with the Administration of Gov. John S. Fine, climaxed last year by imposition of a sales tax for the first time in history.

The sales tax is the key campaign issue to date. Democrats have pledged to rescind it. The GOP nominee, Lieut. Gov. Lloyd Wood, vacillated early in the race but the party platform committee settled the matter by demanding that the unpopular tax be retained. Leader predicts that the GOP will increase the levy above the 1c rate if they win.

3. Unprecedented trade union support for the entire Democratic ticket, especially in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. All branches of labor have been demanding for months that the Republicans at Harrisburg and Washington face up to the widespread unemployment problem and do something to improve the unemployment situation. This issue promises to become increasingly acute, as the fund has been dwindling and the Fine Administration is being pushed into reducing the benefits. Leader is demanding that Fine and Wood reveal amounts paid to employers in refunds and tax credits.

4. Probably the brightest augury is a reorganized and revitalized State Democratic Party. State Sen. Joseph E. Barr, Pittsburgh, is chairman, and Matthew McCloskey, big Philadelphia contractor, is personally heading a successful fund-raising campaign.

5. A contrasting lack of unity in the Republican machine in various sections, especially in Pittsburgh where GOP Dist. Atty. James Malone is waging a vendetta against Fine.

6. Withdrawal from the GOP ranks of State Sen. John C. Miller, of Aliquippa, member of the CIO Steelworkers and sensational vote-getter in 1952 when he advanced from the House to the upper chamber from Beaver and Lawrence Counties.

Tosses A Bombshell

He tossed a bombshell by coming out for Leader and the Democrats, stating: "The sordid story of Republican misrule in Pennsylvania will reveal the shame and despair of decent, self-respecting people in the Republican Party who, like me, have seen the complete breakdown of political integrity."

In the 83rd Congress, Republicans held 19 seats to 11 for the Democrats. Two years ago, five of these 19 GOP congressmen squeaked through on 53% of the vote or less. This year they and their party mates, especially in the areas where unemployment is widespread, are "running scared."

Leader has proved a colorful candidate. Only 36, with a University of Pennsylvania degree and brilliant war service on the Navy Carrier Randolph in the Pacific, Leader appeals to a varied section of the State's population.

A veteran State senator, he has always given solid support to labor and liberal legislation.

Leader came out slugging when he opened his campaign through the 67 counties early in the summer. He demanded that Fine and Wood present facts on the State's muddled financial picture and has charged them with building their political patronage machine with public money, showing favortism to manufacturers — "passing the cost on to the people in extortionate taxes."

Running with Leader are Roy E. Furman for lieutenant governor, Speaker of the House under former Gov. George Earle; and Genevieve Blatt of Pittsburgh, an attorney, for secretary of internal affiairs. Two Democratic supreme court justices seeking reelection, are F. Clair Ross and Chester Rhodes.

Labor has been demanding in vain that Fine call a special meeting of the Legislature to improve the unemployment compensation law. Nearly 400,000 are unemployed in Pennsylvania, the relief rolls are growing weekly and more than 650,000 people are seeking surplus foods.

The refunds and tax credits permitted employers over the last 10 years, by the law Wood sponsored when he was in the Legislature, are estimated to total at least $200 million—a tidy sum which could be used to pay larger benefits, and eliminate the possibility of reductions.

"It's time for a change in Harrisburg" has become more than a campaign slogan to PAC workers. It's a prediction of things to come on the second day of November—without a hurricane.

"IT IS CLEARLY TIME for a sweeping change in Harrisburg" is the Democrats' slogan in Pennsylvania. From left are Pres. Joseph T. Kelley of the Philadelphia CIO Council; George M. Leader, Democratic candidate for Governor; Pres. Harry Boyer and Sec. Harry Block of the State CIO Council. CIO is conducting a vigorous PAC drive in the State.

WORKERS AND FARMERS join to help cratic candidate for the Pennsylvania Asse Crawford County dairy farm. With him fron Crawford County PAC chairman; Sec. Mab and Clifford Moore, PAC committeeman of

Scorecard On The Lawmakers

The record of Pennsylvania's congressmen—19 Republicans and 11 Democrats—was summed up in a recent Pennsylvania CIO-PAC bulletin. Covering 18 issues ranging from taxes and jobless benefits to tidelands oil and foreign aid, there were these results:

	Right	Wrong
REPUBLICANS	70	241
DEMOCRATS	160	26

Notice that Democrats voted RIGHT more than 6 to 1, while Republicans voted WRONG about 3.5 to 1 on the issues important to all the people. It's time for a change in Congress!

Labor Gets Over In Fa

EARLY in the Pennsylvania campaign, CIO-PAC workers discovered something: farmers and rural residents had changed their attitude toward unions and labor programs.

The result has been closer working alliances, notably in areas where rural communities are close to industrial towns that are feeling the pinch of short work weeks, joblessness, and exhausted unemployment compensation benefits.

Typical of these closer working arrangements was PAC activity at county fairs in two widely separated sections of the State — Crawford and Venango Counties in the northwest, and Bucks and Lehigh Counties in the southeast. The CIO booths were crowded at all times, and the small farm owners showed a cordiality not seen in other years.

Dollar Drive Gains

Responses of CIO members to the PAC dollar drive have also been reported at new highs. In four northwest counties, Venango, Crawford and Erie—the 68 locals of the CIO Steelworkers achieved a 100% goal early in the campaign.

The Shenango Valley CIO

ALTOONA BREADLINE — Unemployed CIO Railroad Workers—laid off at the big Altoona, Pa., shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad—wait for distribution of surplus food coupons. redeemable in canned meats, cheese, butter and dried milk.

Proving Mr. Dooley Right

AWAY BACK before the radio and television comm ators began shaping public thinking, a gifted writer, Peter Finley Dunne, created a newspaper column character called "Mister Dooley."

Mr. Dooley is remembered best for two famous commentaries:

One was that the open shop is the employers' ideal as a factory "where the doors are kept open so the non-union guy can come in to replace the organized worker for less wages."

The other was about public officials responding to the will of the people: "The Supreme Court pays a lot of attention to the latest election returns."

Nov. 2 is the day that American workers can prove Mister Dooley was right on both counts.

You and your fellow-members can do something other than groan and gripe about the "Give-Away Republican Congress."

You can increase your PAC activity and help elect a new and liberal Congress. Get out the vote on Nov. 2—every single one in your plant, your home, and your precinct.

nnsylvania Issues

elect John G. Moeller, Demombly, seated on tractor at his n left are Paul Clulow, western el Smith, County CIO Council, eastern Crawford County.

Its Story
rm Areas

Council in midsummer introduced a new stunt by assigning girls to unemployment compensation claim offices at Sharon, Grove City and Greenville.

The idea: to buttonhole the unemployed and persuade them to register. The PAC provided transportation to registration headquarters, and the voters' eligibility lists grew impressively as a result.

One of the congressional races on which PAC leaders are concentrating is the Bucks-Lehigh district, now represented by Rep. King (R.), a wealthy farmer. A recipient of agricultural program benefits himself, King has aroused resentment of small farmers by his opposition to them in Congress.

Example Of Work

CIO leaders in Bristol and Allentown united their efforts in early summer to carry PAC programs to the farmers on behalf of a liberal young Democratic lawyer, John P. Fullam, of Doylestown.

The Philadelphia CIO-PAC in 1954 offers an example of efficiency and hard work. Techniques have been improved since CIO block workers helped Mayor Joseph Clark and the Democrats gain control several years ago.

Early this year, PAC leaders installed modern business machines and punched cards to translate local membership lists into effective registration eligibility rosters.

More than 75,000 members' names were checked and vigorous registration drives were waged on an in-plant and precinct basis. The cards are used to mail PAC leaflets to members' homes.

Philadelphia PAC leaders, headed by Council Pres. Joseph T. Kelley, are not waiting for November to get the door bell ringing and get-out-the-vote program under way. More than 600 members completed intensive training courses during the summer, and the precinct campaign has been under way for weeks.

"CIO-PAC is now an all-year-round, day-by-day job in Philadelphia," said Kelley, "and you can bet your life it will pay off."

Women Are Pitching In--

By ESTHER MURRAY
CIO-PAC Field Representative

THERE'S PLENTY of evidence that our CIO women are not resting on their laurels when it comes to "pitching in with hands and hearts."

Mrs. Murray

Ever since our first Washington conference on "Family Participation in Political Action" last January, CIO council and local union auxiliaries throughout the nation have been planning and participating in similar local and area meetings. By mid-October, some 25 such family participation meetings will have been held.

"Why do you bother with housewives?" I was asked last week during a discussion of the PAC family participation program by Miss Ilse Rosenbaum, an organizer for the German Office Workers Union.

'This Is Wonderful'

Miss Rosenbaum was deeply interested in our efforts to draw union wives, as well as union members, into the PAC program because in Germany a wife's place is still, as it has been for centuries, in the home.

Looking at our schedule of Family Participation Conferences, at pictures of these women discussing their mutual problems, at PAC literature captioned "Politics Is Your Baby, Too," "The New Look" and "Women's Place Is In Politics," Miss Rosenbaum nodded excitedly and exclaimed "this is good—this is wonderful!"

The 104 women at the recent Family Participation Conference in Philadelphia outlined a program of similar conferences for the city which aims at activating women in areas where PAC programs are particularly needed. The Conference steering committee, headed by Sara Fredgant of the CIO Clothing Workers, was set up as a continuing committee.

Coming PAC conferences:
Oct. 9—Tulsa, Okla. Sponsored by Tulsa Co. IUC.

Oct. 16—LaCrosse, Wis. Sponsored by LaCrosse Co. IUC.

Oct. 21-22—Knoxville, Tenn. Sponsored by Knoxville IUC.

Big Money

Big money from big business contributors is what makes the Republican Party go, as demonstrated once again by the latest report on congressional campaign contributions filed with the House of Representatives.

The GOP received $33,500 from six members of the Rockefeller family and $21,000 from three members of the Mellon family.

The four GOP campaign committees received an officially-reported $682,000 during the last three months, almost three times the $239,000 reported by the Democrats.

Looking To November—

'Someone In GOP Is Out To Get TVA,' Warns Kefauver

By MILTON PLUMB

RECENT exposure of double bookkeeping and rate-highjacking by a subsidiary linked to the Dixon-Yates private power combine underscores the belief of Sen. Kefauver (D. Tenn.) that "someone in the Administration is out to 'get' TVA."

The courageous Southerner renewed his efforts to block the "deal," personally ordered by Pres. Eisenhower and forcing the Atomic Energy Commission to buy power from the Dixon-Yates utilities at an added cost to taxpayers of between $92 million and $140 million.

He charged that the "deal debases the AEC into a mere power broker just to satisfy the greed of the private utility lobby."

On his return from a month in Europe as a delegate to the Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Kefauver joined Chairman Langer (R. N. D.) of the Senate Anti-Monopoly Subcommittee now holding hearings on the Dixon-Yates contract in Memphis.

After hearing only two witnesses the committee renewed its request that the Administration hold up signing the Dixon-Yates contract until there can be a full-scale review of the matter. Earlier this year when the issue first arose a similar appeal was made but was ignored by the White House.

'Miserable' Record

Describing the Eisenhower Administration's record on public power and resources development as "miserable," Kefauver said he intends to "do a lot of talking" on this subject from now until the elections. Besides continuing his own campaign for re-election in Tennessee, he has scheduled talks in 14 other key states.

"From Hell's Canyon through the Central Valley of California to the Dixon-Yates deal," he said, "Washington is coming to look like a very large bargain basement of the utilities magnates."

When it was pointed out to Kefauver that the Senate Republican Policy Committee had blocked funds for the Anti-Monopoly Subcommittee to investigate the Dixon-Yates deal, he said that he did not believe this factor would stop them.

SEN. KEFAUVER

"We've had effective hearings before without funds," he pointed out.

Kefauver said that the Eisenhower Administration has pushed the Dixon-Yates contract almost to a settlement despite a resolution of the Senate Anti-Monopoly Subcommittee asking that it be delayed until its investigation is completed.

The Tennesseean said that one of the utility companies in the Dixon-Yates combine may have committed "direct violation" of the Holding Company Act. He referred to Middle South Utilities, Inc., one of the two outfits in the contract deal.

Kefauver made his statement after J. D. Stietenroth, ousted official of Mississippi Power & Light Co., a Middle South subsidiary, testified his firm was Wall Street-dominated.

"Isn't this a direct violation of the intent and purpose of the Holding Company Act?" Kefauver asked. Stietenroth conceded "the way we're operated down there is certainly in violation of the spirit of the act."

Its Own Executioner

Earlier the contract had been opposed by the TVA board of directors and three of the five AEC commissioners, Kefauver said. He added that the General Accounting Office has ruled that to sustain the contract's legality, the President would have to rely on his extraordinary war powers.

"If carried out, this would put TVA in the ironical position of providing the subsidy for the private power companies to move in and serve its present customers in the Memphis area, in effect subsidizing its mortal enemies and probably hastening TVA liquidation," Kefauver warned.

While power is only one of many issues Kefauver will "do a lot of talking" about during the campaign, he said that the Dixon-Yates contract impresses him more than any other action of the last Congress "because it reflects such a complete change of policy, such a dominance of the private power lobby over this government, such a lack of regard for what I have always considered the basic public interest."

One reason for his nationwide campaign for Democratic candidates, Kefauver said, is that he hopes that in the new Congress "we will be able to return to the proper concept of the TVA, of resource development and of a sound economy that includes all segments."

Kefauver will spend only the first eight days in October campaigning in his own state, although his Republican opponent, Thomas Wall, Jr., Nashville attorney, is waging an all-out fight against him.

Wall is building his major attack on one issue—the fact that Kefauver was the only member of the Senate to vote on principle against the original Humphrey Bill to outlaw the Communist Party.

There doesn't appear to be even the slightest chance that such a smear technique will have any effect upon Kefauver's standing with the Tennessee electorate. A similar attack was made against him in the Democratic primary by former Rep. Sutton, whose highly financed campaign reportedly had the blessing—and backing—of Texas oilmen.

Although he took to the airwaves in costly TV ad radio talkathons and used a private helicopter to get about the state, Sutton really never got off the ground. Tennessee voters re-elected Kefauver overwhelmingly.

Kefauver described his primary triumph as "not so much a personal victory for me as an example of Tennesseeans speaking from the depths of their hearts on the issues of the day."

Praised CIO Aid

"Tennesseans and the rest of the South," he says, "have been misunderstood too long and they took this opportunity to say that they firmly believe in a liberal foreign policy, in a domestic policy which has as its goal the welfare of the average man, and that they definitely do not believe in campaigns of smear, of innuendo and of character assassination."

Kefauver said that the part CIO is playing in his campaign was "a real help." He praised especially the work done by CIO Reg. Dir. Paul Christopher, the officers of the Tennessee CIO Council and CIO Steelworkers Dir. Jim Payne.

"The New Creep"

"Warm Day At Steam Plant"

The Fight For Congress

There's A Liberal Breeze In Rockies

By RAY DAVIDSON
Special Correspondent

Another Campaign Exclusive

OPTIMISM is running high among labor and liberal groups in five Rocky Mountain states as 1954's general election approaches.

CIO-PAC workers are pleased by the fact that liberal candidates emerged on top in most primary election contests while the reactionary forces seem to be faced with a shortage of high-appeal candidates.

They are still running scared, but labor-liberal groups expect to help send four good Senators to Washington, to improve the calibre of their small Congressional delegations and to help elect two better governors.

People of the sparsely-settled Rocky Mountain region feel that they may exert a measurable influence in Washington. Four senators are enough to swing the balance of power in the closely-divided Senate.

—Of the 11 congressmen from Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho and Utah, seven who may be ranked either conservative or reactionary while four qualify as liberals. This year, chances are that several of the conservatives will be unseated while none of the liberals appear to be in serious danger.

HOTTEST PRIMARY fight in the Rocky Mountain region—and most encouraging to the liberal forces—was the Colorado Democratic primary for U. S. Senator.

John A. Carroll, outspoken former Fair Deal Congressman, won by a 3-2 vote in a liberal vs. conservative contest over Mayor Quigg Newton of Denver, a candidate with much appeal who chose to run on a conservative platform.

Carroll ranks practically as a model of the New Deal-Fair Deal type of legislator. During four years in Congress—in the Awful 80th and in the 81st Congresses—he voted 100% right by CIO standards. Later, he served as legislative consultant to former Pres. Truman.

His opponent, Newton, had long been considered a liberal.

But, as the primary campaign waxed hot, Newton bitterly attacked Carroll because of his labor support and because of his voting record in Congress.

Carroll responded to Newton's attacks by expressing pride in his "100% Democratic record" and stating that he was pleased to have labor's endorsement.

While Newton's campaign was richly financed, Carroll had little money. But he does have a wealth of volunteer workers from every walk of life to ring doorbells for him. And Carroll received the unanimous endorsement of all labor groups in the primary as well as for the general election.

In the general election, Carroll will face Colorado's present Republican lieutenant-governor, Gordon Allott. As a candidate, Allott lacks the experience and popular appeal needed to sway a mass vote. Odds are highly in favor of Carroll going to Washington next January.

The new Colorado senator will replace Democrat Ed Johnson, who is retiring after three terms to run with hearty labor support for Governor. Unopposed in the Democratic primary, "Big Ed" faces a young and relatively unknown Republican candidate, Gordon Allott, and looks like a cinch for that job.

SIMILAR, though less clearly defined liberal over conservative contests appeared in several other primary campaigns and in nearly every case the nod went toward the liberal side.

For example, Utah's Reva Beck Bosone, former congresswoman with a distinctly liberal and pro-labor record, won easily in the Utah Democratic primary in her campaign to return to Congress.

Another liberal veteran of Washington affairs is on the comeback trail in Wyoming. Former Sen. Joseph O'Mahoney was practically drafted by the Democrats to run for the Senate seat formerly held by the late Senator Hunt (D.).

Because of his good record in the Senate, O'Mahoney has the solid support of labor. He is running against Rep. Harrison (R.). Barring a Republican landslide, O'Mahoney should win.

IN MONTANA, Sen. Murray, an outstanding liberal Democrat, is seeking re-election with full support of labor. His Republican opponent is Rep. D'Ewart.

In Idaho, former Sen. Glenn Taylor outran two other candidates in the Democratic primary and seeks to unseat the reactionary Republican incumbent, Henry Dworshak. CIO members are limited in number in Idaho, but are working closely with AFL and Railroad Brotherhood groups. Due to circumstances in the State, they are refraining from endorsements in most races.

JOHN A. CARROLL

SEN. MURRAY

JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY

Three leading liberal candidates for Senate in the Rocky Mountain states.

Here's A Summary Of House Races

Here is a state-by-state analysis of the Congressional contests in the Rocky Mountain area.

COLORADO: This most populous of the Mountain states has four Congressmen, two of them liberal Democrats, while two of them voted the conservative GOP line.

In the 1st Dist., comprising the city of Denver, incumbent Democrat Byron Rogers, with a good voting record, was unopposed for his third term bid in the primary. He faces Mrs. Ellen Harris, a Citizens for Eisenhower leader. Rogers should win in normally Democratic Denver unless Mrs. Harris is aided by the Eisenhower smile.

Democrat Lacy Wilkinson has labor's enthusiastic support in the 2nd Dist. There is a fair chance that union members living on Denver's fringes and the unhappy farmers may elect him over William S. Hill, the conservative Republican incumbent. A veteran in Congress, Hill may be unseated this year by the farmers in the agricultural area who are annoyed with him.

Alva Adams, Jr., a Democrat, faces Rep. J. Edward Chenoweth (R.) in the 3rd Dist. in the State's southeastern corner. Chenoweth has a consistent anti-labor record.

A liberal Democrat, Rep. Aspinall, meets an almost-unknown Republican in the contest for the "western slope" 4th Dist. Union members are few in the area but Aspinall has a near-perfect record by CIO standards and should win unless intra-district squabbles over water allocations interfere.

IDAHO: Democrat Gracie Pfost beat the GOP landslide two years ago with labor support and is expected to repeat.

William P. Whittaker, a Democrat, opposes incumbent Homer Budge (R.). Labor backed another man in the primary but should rally to Whittaker in view of Budge's record.

MONTANA: Liberal Democrat Lee Metcalf is running strong in his re-election bid. In the State's other district labor is supporting Democrat LeRoy Anderson who is seeking the seat vacated by Rep. Wesley D'Ewart (R.) who is making a bid for the Senate.

WYOMING: Labor forces here expect Sam Tully to defeat Republican Keith Thompson for the state's single House seat, which Rep. Harrison (R.) vacated to run for the Senate. Tully is a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, mayor of Rawlins and has captured popular imagination. Despite an under-financed campaign, Tully should win.

UTAH: With no Senate or gubernatorial contests, attention is focused on the two congressional races and the question of reapportionment in the Legislature.

In the 1st Dist., comprising Salt Lake City and other urban centers, Reva Beck Bosone is making a strong comeback try against William Dawson, incumbent Republican. Mrs. Bosone had an excellent record when she was in Congress, makes it plain she is pro-labor.

Importance

The five Rocky Mountain states — Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho and Utah—don't count for much in people, but they count for plenty in Congress.

Altogether they have some 3.7 million people, a bit over 2% of the U. S. total. But this year four of their 10 Senate seats will be filled, and 11 House seats. In the closely-divided Congress, every one is important.

Unionized

Wyoming is more than just cowboys (with union-label levis) and sagebrush, mountains, fancy scenery and Yellowstone Park.

Although basically ranching country, plus a scattering of oil fields and railroad centers, the State has a high percentage of organized workers. And all labor groups—CIO, AFL and railroad brotherhoods—are working together in the '54 campaign.

REP. METCALF

REP. PFOST

Two western liberals who seek reelection to the House.

The Issues Come Home To Roost—

Why are liberal hopes riding high in the Rocky Mountain states? It seems to be a case of issues coming home to roost after two years of Republican rule. Here are three basic reasons:

First, the present Administration and Congress in Washington have butchered reclamation projects and have tightened the screws on public power and REA programs.

The West can't stand this. Availability of water is literally the difference between economic life and death for the region. When the Republican Administration tinkers with the reclamation projects, they are hanging a literal threat of starvation over the West.

Second, the farmers and ranchers are scared. Some of them are more than scared: they're bankrupt.

Mention Ezra Taft Benson, the Secretary of Agriculture, and many Western farmers and ranchers will burst into incomparable profanity. The other day on a Denver street there was seen a dust-covered auto from one of the ranching counties. A sign on the bumper said: "Come on Back, Harry, We're Starving to Death."

Third, the inconsistencies of the present Administration are earning for the Republican party a sense of disappointment and a measure of contempt among the people. McCarthyism and Brownellism don't sell very well in the Mountain States.

This is revealed in the dearth of leadership in the Republican party. Two short years ago the Republicans were riding high in the saddle. They had lassoed not only Washington but the state capitals. But today the bandwagon is half-empty. The Eisenhower enthusiasts of two years ago are conspicuously quiet.

And while the liberal forces have two top-calibre campaigners to offer for every job, the conservatives are having to round out their slates with candidates of second class calibre, from the standpoint of personal appeal and political experience.

BETTER understanding of CIO's aims and purposes was the theme of address at eighth annual convention of Nebraska CIO Council by Franz Daniels (left), field assistant to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, shown talking with Vice Pres. Harvey Townsend (center) and John Henry.

GOP's Farm Program Hit At Nebraska CIO Parley

A FARM STATE CIO Council convention was told that the Eisenhower Administration's farm program is "a step in the wrong direction."

The Nebraska CIO Council heard Dr. Clyde Mitchell, University of Nebraska agricultural economist, blast the GOP farm program. Meeting in Lincoln, the Council's eighth annual convention drew more than 200 delegates.

Labor, Mitchell warned, has as much of a stake in a healthy farm economy as the farmers.

"This country should be expanding its economy in this crucial period," he said. "In agriculture, the new bill with flexible price supports tends to contract —not expand—production."

The convention opposed a state sales tax and urged repeal of the "right to scab" law and public utility strike ban. Another legislative target is equalization of representation in the Legislature by reapportionment in all countries, based on population.

Convention speakers included Gov. Robert Crosby, Franz Daniels, field assistant to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, and CIO Reg. Dir. Delmond Garst.

James C. Harris was re-elected president. Harvey Townsend was named vice president to succeed Elvin O. Wait, resigned.

'Use Big Broom Of Decency On Welfare Rackets'--Salerno

GOVERNMENT supervision of union pension and health and welfare funds, under laws similar to those affecting insurance companies and banks, was suggested last week by New England Dir. Joseph Salerno of the CIO Clothing Workers.

Speaking at historic Phillips Exeter Academy in Exeter, N. H., he condemned those "few racketeers who have given labor a bad name through mishandling of pension and insurance funds."

"The labor movement should use the big broom of decency and clean its house of these eternal enemies of labor," Salerno declared.

"But let us not forget that corruption begins with those who have something to offer for not doing the right thing—and that is true in business, industry and government, as well as labor . . . Labor is not afraid to show its insurance and pension fund books."

The veteran ACWA-CIO official assailed the Eisenhower Administration's failure to stabilize the nation's economy and improve the conditions of workers. Bitterly critical of recent rulings of the National Labor Relations Board, Salerno suggested:

"The reactionaries would amend the Ten Commandments by adding the 11th—'Thou shalt not speak evil of the Boss.'"

Wood Strike Panel Named

BOTH THE CIO and the AFL are represented in the fact-finding board named in the extended dispute between Northwest lumber operators and the CIO Woodworkers and the AFL lumber union.

Govs. Langlie of Washington and Patterson of Oregon appointed Chester Dusten, CIO director of organization in the Northwest, and Earl Hartley, Puget Sound Dist. president of the Northwest Council of the AFL union.

IWA-CIO Pres. A. F. Hartung and Executive Sec. Kenneth Davis of the Northwest Dist. of the AFL union, said the two unions will present their cases jointly before the board.

Carey Named To Island Pay Units

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who also is president of the CIO Electrical Workers, has been named to three industry committees that will meet in San Juan Oct. 19 to recommend minimum wages in three Puerto Rican industries.

The committees will investigate conditions in the electrical equipment, metal, and plastic products industries. David Sternback, CIO representative for Puerto Rico, will serve as employe member of the electrical and metal industries committees.

Sheil Gets Hillman Fund Award, Cited As 'A Great Democrat'

PRAISE for the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil as "one of our staunchest allies" and "a great democrat" was voiced as the Sidney Hillman Award for meritorious public service was presented to the distinguished churchman.

The citation for the Catholic auxiliary bishop of Chicago was presented in New York ceremonies by Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the CIO Clothing Workers and head of the Hillman Foundation.

Sheil was cited as "a champion of economic betterment and social fulfillment" and as " a friend and ally" of all who labor "in their struggle for justice and security."

The churchman's denunciation of McCarthyism was noted in the citation's praise of Sheil for having "defended our civil liberties on many occasions, but probably never more effectively and courageously than when he recently attacked the current wave of hysteria and the demagogues who have promoted it."

IN PRESENTING the Hillman award—named for the ACWA's late president—Potofsky called Sheil one of labor's staunchest allies who "realizes that communism will not be licked by the hysteria of headline hunters and bigots."

Potofsky warned that "hysteria and confusion, promoted by the demagogues, are merely a curtain behind which they attack all liberal-thinking elements of the community."

"Working people," he said, "can organize to improve their conditions only in a free society. When men and movements arise that threaten our freedoms, labor is the first to suffer."

In accepting the citation, Sheil renewed support for family benefits and government action to aid the economic, housing and medical problems of low-income groups. He will present the $1000 award, which accompained the citation, to the Lewis College, Lockport, Ill.

AVC Honors HST

Former Pres. Truman has been awarded an honorary membership in the American Veterans Committee, which will be presented at the AVC convention in Boston in December.

LONG SERVICE of Bishop Bernard J. Sheil as "friend and ally" of labor was cited as Chicago churchman (left) received Sidney Hillman Foundation award from Mrs. Bessie Hillman and Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of CIO Clothing Workers at a ceremony in New York City.

Labor's World—

Reuther Renews Plea For Peaceful Atomic Development

A RENEWED plea for development of atomic energy for peaceful use was voiced by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther after the death of a Japanese fisherman, victim of H-bomb radiation.

Reuther voiced condolences to the family of Aikichi Kuboyama, fisherman who suffered radiation poisoning during U. S. H-bomb tests in the Pacific some months ago.

In a cable to Kuboyama's family, forwarded through the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions, Reuther said:

"His innocent death is a symbol of sadness for the world. May it serve at least to awaken the world to the need for serious efforts to turn atomic developments to peaceful use and to strengthen the United Nations as means for peace and disarmament."

Britain

An important vote in support of West German rearming was won by a narrow margin by former Prime Minister Clement Attlee's forces at the British Labor Party conference last week.

Attlee said German rearmament was essential to western defense "until there is a complete change of heart in Soviet Russia," and he added that hopes for such a Soviet shift "are not very bright."

The vote, on a resolution backing German "contribution" to western defense, was 3,270,000 to 3,022,000.

Spain

New repressive measures against labor have been reported from Franco's Spain, with the sentencing of eight executive committee members of the Federation of Communication Workers to prison terms of from one to five years each.

Barkin To Teach

Solomon Barkin, research director of the CIO Textile Workers, will open a course on "Work, Worker and the Job" at the New School for Social Research, New York City, Oct. 13.

Mrs. Roosevelt Praises Murray Fund

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT
(From her syndicated "My Day" column.)

I WAS VERY HAPPY to attend the other day, as a member of the Philip Murray Foundation Board, a luncheon at which the National Council of Churches received a substantial check. This foundation has recognized the fact that Philip Murray was a deeply religious man and it has generously aided Catholic, Jewish and Protestant charities.

Philip Murray was a loyal supporter of his own church, but he was also a man of broad vision and many sympathies. Those who spoke at the luncheon emphasized that he was a statesman as well as a labor leader.

I know that the trust and confidence and mutual respect which grew up between my husband and Philip Murray was due to the fact that my husband felt that Mr. Murray understood the problems of government, and always considered the welfare of the people and the country as a whole as well as the welfare of the workers whom he represented.

This meant that Philip Murray had to have the trust and confidence of the men with whom he worked and who elected him to office. He kept this all his life, and it is good to have him followed in office by a man like Walter Reuther who has integrity, understanding and ability.

One of our metropolitan newspapers has just praised Mr. Reuther for having moved so quickly to crack down on officials who have misused the welfare funds of certain CIO unions.

Human nature is weak and apparently these men have fallen before temptation, but this discovery of misuse of funds may be of real value since it should cause a closer scrutiny by the unions themselves of how funds are invested and controlled, and how their own leaders conform to the ideals of service which are inherent in any leadership.

'How-To-Do-It' Booklet Offered By CSC On Effective Strike Aid

"Good news, chief! Johnson here can now prove we're in a Republican boom with his new way of figuring the cost-of-living index."

HOW-TO-DO-IT books are growing in popularity and CIO Community Services Committee has just published one that belongs on the bookshelf of every local union.

Action for Strike Assistance, CIO-CSC's latest publication, details step-by-step methods for unions on strike. The booklet was developed as a result of eight years' experience in aiding CIO affiliates with their strike problems.

"A good strike assistance program," the booklet says, "like a health and accident insurance policy, anticipates and prepares for future possibilities. Like the policyholder, the union may hope to gain its demands through peaceful negotiations, but if a strike is necessary, the union is prepared."

A local with a Community Services Committee already organized has a head start, since the members know the community's social services available, the welfare director and personnel to staff strike assistance headquarters.

For locals without a CSC, there are details on how to get one started in a hurry, a discussion of the basic kinds of relief agencies: public or those supported by taxes and voluntary or private supported through contributions and donations.

THERE IS AN excellent section on rapid training of strike assistance counsellors who will man the nerve center of referrals to various agencies. It is at the referral center that members are interviewed, that union records are kept, and where the strike committee can keep tabs on the relief load and hold regular discussions on agency cooperation and other pertinent strike relief matters.

With the careful outline of daily operations of a strike assistance center, even those members suddenly thrown into this kind of work should do an efficient and effective job.

For locals financially able and required by circumstances to organize a strike commissary there is a detailed discussion of this strike weapon. Location, the type of food to be distributed and the system to be employed are dealt with and some of the pitfalls to be avoided are mentioned.

The booklet closes with a note of caution against over-enthusiastic promises of relief and advice to call in CSC before a strike is very old.

Action for Strike Assistance; National CIO Community Services Committee, 1776 Broadway, New York, 19, N.Y., 50c each, 100 for 35c each, 200 or more, 25c each.

Like Jobless Figure, Price Index Sticks At High Level

THE COST OF LIVING is moving sidewise at the same high level as unemployment, the latest Consumer Price Index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics showed last week.

In the month ending Aug. 30, the bureau reported, the index figure dropped by two-tenths of 1% from 115.2 to 115, principally because of lower food prices. The reading was the same as for August and November 1953, and for February and May 1954. It was 13% higher than in June 1950, just before the fighting began in Korea.

The BLS said food prices sagged by six-tenths of 1%, thanks to what it called "substantial" cuts in fresh fruits and vegetables and meats. Bread prices rose 1.5% and coffee showed a slight overall increase although many cities reported cuts.

Here are the cumulative figures for the BLS index:

Period	Index		Period	Old Index	New Index
1939 monthly average	99.4	1953:	Jan. 15	190.3	113.9
1943 monthly average	123.6		Feb. 15	188.6	113.4
1944 monthly average	125.5		Mar. 15	188.8	113.6
1945 monthly average	128.4		Apr. 15	188.3	113.7
1946 monthly average	139.3		May 15	188.8	114.0
1947 monthly average	159.2		June 15	190.9	114.5
1948 monthly average	171.2		July 15		114.7
1949 monthly average	169.1		Aug. 15		115.0
1950 monthly average	171.2		Sept. 15		115.2
1951 monthly average	185.9		Oct. 15		115.4
1952 monthly average	190.6 (old index)		Nov. 15		115.0
1953 monthly average	114.4 (new index)		Dec. 15		114.9
1954 monthly average	114.9	1954:	Jan. 15		115.2
			Feb. 15		115.0
			Mar. 15		114.8
			Apr. 15		114.6
			May 15		115.0
			June 15		115.1
			July 15		115.2
			Aug. 15		115.0

'Don't Buy Kohler' Drive Set By Wisconsin CIOers

A "DON'T BUY Kohler products" drive was started last week by Wisconsin CIO units to strengthen the seven-month-long strike of CIO Auto Workers against the big bathroom fixtures firm.

With Kohler workers out since Apr. 5 "in a strike against the oppressive and arbitrary conduct of the Kohler Co.," the Wisconsin CIO Council, Milwaukee CIO Council and the UAW-CIO announced the "don't buy Kohler" drive.

A statement by Pres. Robert Jordan and Sec. Fred Erchul of the Milwaukee Council; Pres. Charles M. Schultz and Sec.-Treas. Ross Baum of the State CIO Council, and Dir. Harvey Kitzman of UAW-CIO Dist. 10 said:

"The company is determined to destroy the union and subject every Kohler worker to the company's callous will.

"We believe that all workingmen are part of this struggle now in progress at Kohler.

"We therefore call upon each Worker, his family and the public generally to refuse to purchase any goods or products made by the Kohler Co. until such time as the rights of the striking workers are recognized and they have gained their just demands."

UAW Wins 8c At Alcoa

AN 8c an hour package was won by the CIO Auto Workers for some 3500 hourly paid members at four plants of the Aluminum Co. of America.

The union gained a 5c an hour general increase in the two-year contract, plus other adjustments in wage rates and incentives worth an additional 3c an hour. UAW-CIO represents workers in plants at Cleveland, Chicago, Los Angeles and Garwood, N. J.

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

NEW DEVELOPMENTS in the production of electrical appliances and television sets are knocking down the prices of this equipment to new low levels. In October you will find 21-inch television sets for under $150, gradual trims in prices of automatic washing machines, and for the first time, sale prices as low as $250 on self-defrost refrigerators.

Buying Calendar

You will also find the first fall clothing sales in October, with price cuts starting on women's and children's clothing.

Soon after several manufacturers brought out new low-priced 17-inch sets, listing at $129.95, Admiral, one of the largest manufacturers, announced a 21-inch set for $150 list. With the discounts given by many retailers these days, this set should be available at around $120 net.

THE REDUCTION has been made possible by the use of the new printed circuit system and automation (automatic assembly).

An official of the company told this writer that the automatic manufacturing method has not resulted in any technological layoffs at the plant; in fact, it has resulted in new hirings because of increased production at the lower price.

However, the ultimate effect of the rapidly-advancing development of automatic assembly of consumer goods remains to be seen. One side result is that the printed-circuit sets don't require as many repairs and are easier to service—the repairman removes the faulty section and slaps in a new one.

Most of the good nationally-advertised automatic washers that employ an agitator for washing and a spinner basket for damp drying, strangely enough sell at exactly the same price—$300. But now some standard models of the same machines are being introduced at lower prices. These are basically the same machines stripped of some decoration and a few relatively unimportant features.

For example, Norge automatic now has an efficient stripped model for $280 list. Also, both large mail-order chains now have automatic washers at $240 or less, with Sears offering a special on a nine-pound automatic at $199 and the eight-pound at $148. Unless the family is small or space limited, a full-size washer is advisable, since manufacturers tend to overrate capacity, with the result that families frequently overload washers.

The Sears' offer of a 9.2 cubic-foot self-defrost refrigerator at $248 is a significant move indicating that this widely-wanted feature is going to be available in the future at less cost than the present lofty tags on automatic-defrost boxes.

CHILDREN'S CLOTHES: High costs of kids' clothing has been a source of concern in recent years, and October offers a chance to find special sales and better values than at the beginning of the fall season.

According to a survey by the Bureau of Home Economics, it costs even more to clothe teen-agers than father or mother (contrary to legend, Pop's clothes generally do cost more than Mom's if she is a housewife.)

Costs of clothing increase as a child gets older. This survey found that at present prices it costs about $150 a year to clothe youngsters 12-16 years old, about $125-130 for those 6-12, about $85 for kids under 6, and about $30-35 for infants.

Children's corduroys have been creeping up in price this fall, and jeans now seem a better buy. The problem in buying children's garments is always that if they are too poorly made they don't last, and if well-made, they are outgrown before outworn. We recommend shopping the middle price line; avoiding the cheapest and the costliest garments both.

But be careful in buying dungarees and jeans. Some are made of only six-ounce denim, but for a few pennies more you can get the sturdier seven-ounce quality, with additional wear-resistant features like double knees.

Denims lined with flannel are a useful development of recent years, since for cool (but not really cold) weather they can take the place of the costlier and more fragile wool pants. A new advance along these lines is ski pants made of flannel-lined denim, which stores are selling for under $2.50.

What really costs is little girls' school dresses. Often the dresses in the $2 bracket have exactly the same material as those in the $3-$4 line, but are merely more simply styled, which is actually more desirable.

(Copyright 1954, by Sidney Margolius.)

Church-Labor Unit To Meet

THE NATIONAL Religion and Labor Foundation will hold its annual Interseminary Conference in Los Angeles Dec. 7-9 in conjunction with the National CIO convention.

At a recent meeting in New York, which John Ramsey, CIO community relations representative, co-chairman, it was decided that the theme of the conference will be "Behold the Labor Movement."

Dr. Witherspoon Dodge, executive director of the foundation, reported on the use made so far this year of funds granted by the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation. The remainder of the funds will be used to help clerical students attend the Los Angeles conference.

Dr. Clair M. Cook, minister and writer with a background as a machinist and union officer, was elected associate secretary of the foundation. He will take up his duties at headquarters in Columbus, O., about the middle of October.

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

NOW THAT the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, has concluded its great convention in Atlantic City, with drafting of a program of union policy for the next two years, I feel sure that all members of the USA-CIO will work in complete harmony with Pres. David J. McDonald and other officers to put that program into effect.

After all the speculative reports in the press about what the Steelworkers would or wouldn't do at their convention, it was significant that McDonald reaffirmed the steel union's continuing affiliation with the CIO and its strong demand for negotiations for an early amalgamation of the free American labor movement.

The rumors have been answered once and for all. Now we can all buckle down to the continuing job of organizing the unorganized, giving greater service to the members of our unions, working to strengthen the CIO and to bring about a united labor movement based on fully protecting the interests of all existing unions, big or small.

The realization of our common goal of labor unity would mean much to all laboring men and women. It would also mean that a united labor movement could go to the general public with a single program for solving the problem of unemployment, for acting on other important national issues, and for working together to build a stronger nation.

DURING THE COMING WEEK, the CIO Executive Committee and Executive Board will hold important meetings in Washington. On Oct. 4, there also will be a meeting of all CIO regional directors, to report on organizational progress throughout the country and to plan for the developing political campaign.

I was happy to see the overwhelming vote by which the recent convention of the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers approved the proposed merger of this great union with the CIO Oil Workers. This amalgamation will give us a more powerful union in the oil, petrochemical, atomic and related industries which can give increased benefits to its membership. We want to join with them, with all the means at our disposal, to help them finish the job of organizing these industries.

The CIO Shipbuilders this week are holding their national convention in Asbury Park, N. J. This union has been hard hit by declining ship construction and mounting unemployment. Nevertheless, they have come out of contract negotiations with Bethlehem Ship with major gains, and the IUMSWA officers and members are to be complimented on their accomplishments in the face of great odds. I regret that, because of the National CIO officer and board meetings, that I am unable to attend the Shipbuilders convention, and have asked my field assistant, William Smith, who is an old Shipbuilder, to represent me at Asbury Park. We want to help the IUMSWA in every way we can.

ON THE ORGANIZATIONAL front, Pres. Morris Pizer of the CIO Furniture Workers reports an important victory in Memphis. In a hard-fought campaign against bitter employer opposition, the UFWA-CIO won bargaining rights at the Memphis Furniture Manufacturing Plant.

Pizer reported "the company used every trick in the cards, utilizing the Taft-Hartley Law to the limit, trying to split the people six different ways." After the close victory, by a 334 to 313 vote, Pizer pointed out that despite the firm's "consistent use of 'free speech,' Taft-Hartley style, the workers chose the union to help advance their cause."

Another victory for the CIO Electrical Workers—on the eve of their sixth convention—was reported by Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett. Workers at the Newark Rivet Works confirmed their previous decision to disaffiliate from the discredited UE and to join IUE-CIO. With UE pulling out of the contest, the vote was IUE 145 to two for no union.

Three victories for the CIO Paperworkers in National Labor Relations Board representation elections are reported by Lloyd Vaughan, UPA director of organization. Here are the votes:

Aetna Paper Co., a Howard Paper Mills division at Dayton, O., by a vote of UPA 140, AFL Paper Makers 114, with UPA Rep. Kenneth Hendershott in charge; Moser Bag & Paper Co., Cuyahoga, O., by a vote of UPA 28, ILWA 2, with UPA Rep. John Gray in charge; and Natvar Corp., Woodbridge, N. J., by a vote of UPA 83, AFL no votes, no union 27, with UPA Reps. Frank Mendez and Jack Rosen in charge.

Several organizing victories for the CIO Chemical Workers are reported by Elwood Swisher, president and director of organization. The victories, by close votes in a series of smaller chemical plants, were at Stauffer Chemical Co., Lowland, Tenn., with CIO Rep. William Roehl in charge; Calabama Chemical Co., McIntosh, Ala., with Thermon Phillips in charge; and National Carbon Co., Kenova, W. Va., with Dist. Dir. Lou Koletka in charge.

There also is good news from UGCCW in another organizing effort. The union has notified the Goodyear Atomic Corp. that it represents a majority of its employes at its Piketon, O., plant and that it wishes to negotiate a contract. Should the firm fail to grant UGCCW-CIO recognition, it will petition for an NLRB election.

City Of Hope Honors McDonald

Pres. David J. McDonald of the CIO Steelworkers was presented with the Torch of Hope Award by the National Labor Council of the City of Hope, medical center near Los Angeles, at the recent USA-CIO convention.

Harry Lopatin, national labor coordinator, presented the award in tribute to McDonald's devoted and energetic service to his fellow trade unionists and his public-spirited participation in many great humanity-serving causes.

New Ruling On Runaway Shipping Hit

COMMERCE Sec. Weeks has endorsed a policy i the transfer of American ships to foreign flags which will wreck the American merchant marine, according to the CIO Maritime Committee.

Executive Sec. Hoyt S. Haddock of the CIO committee said that Weeks has endorsed a policy issued by Maritime Administrator Louis S. Rothschild "liberalizing" the transfer of dry cargo ships to the runaway flags of Liberia, Panama and Honduras. The Maritime Administration is under the jurisdiction of the Commerce Dept.

Weeks' stand is set forth in a letter to the Conference of American Maritime Unions, which consists of a dozen CIO, AFL and independent maritime unions.

HADDOCK SAID that Weeks' letter stated "a 'reasonable' but no specific number of dry cargo ships will be permitted to be transferred foreign."

"This is most disheartening because 'reasonable' means an open door policy with no limitations, Haddock said. "The end result of this policy will be the same for our dry cargo ships as it has been for our tankers. That is, the only ships remaining in our merchant marine will be those in the coastwise and intercoastal trades which are reserved by law for American ships."

STATEMENT REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF AUGUST 24, 1912, AS AMENDED BY THE ACTS OF MARCH 3, 1933, AND JULY 2, 1946 (Title 39, United States Code, Section 233) SHOWING THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, AND CIRCULATION OF

THE CIO NEWS, published weekly at Washington, D. C., for 1954.

1. The names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are: Publisher, Congress of Industrial Organizations, 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington, D. C.; Editor, Henry C. Fleisher, 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington, D. C.; Managing editor, none; Business manager, none.

2. The owner is: (If owned by a corporation, its name and address must be stated and also immediately thereunder the names and addresses of stockholders owning or holding 1 percent or more of total amount of stock. If not owned by a corporation, the names and addresses of the individual owners must be given. If owned by a partnership or other unincorporated firm, its name and address, as well as that of each individual member, must be given.) Congress of Industrial Organizations, 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington, D. C.; Walter P. Reuther, Pres.; James B. Carey, Secy.-Treas.; John V. Riffe, Exec. V-P; Vice-Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes, 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington, D. C.

3. The known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 percent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: (If there are none, so state.) None.

4. Paragraphs 2 and 3 include, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting; also the statements in the two paragraphs show the affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner.

5. The average number of copies of each issue of this publication sold or distributed, through the mails or otherwise, to paid subscribers during the 12 months preceding the date shown above was: (This information is required from daily, weekly, semiweekly, and triweekly newspapers only.) 109,087.

HENRY C. FLEISHER
(Signature of editor)

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 27th day of September, 1954.

[SEAL] Josephine M. Carney
(My Commission expires July 31, 1958.)

LISTEN TO THE CIO RADIO PROGRAM

John W. Vandercook AND THE NEWS

every weekday evening on the ABC Network

With the return to standard time in all sections of the country except New England, here is a revised and up to date log of all radio stations carrying "John W. Vandercook and the News," the nightly program sponsored by CIO on the ABC Radio network. In Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, "fast time" continues until Oct. 31, so the Vandercook program is heard one hour later.

Location	Station	Dial Position	Time
ALABAMA
Auburn	WAUD	1230	6:00
Birmingham	WSGN	610	7:15
Florence	WJOI	1340	6:00
Gadsden	WGAD	1350	7:15
Greenville	WGYV	1400	9:45
Mobile	WABB	1480	6:00
Montgomery	WAPX	1600	6:00
ARIZONA
Flagstaff	KGPH	690	4:00
Kingsman	KGAN	1230	6:45
Phoenix	KPHO	910	7:00
ARKANSAS
Little Rock	KLRA	1010	6:00
CALIFORNIA
Fresno	KARM	1430	6:00
Los Angeles	KABC	790	6:00
San Diego	KCBQ	1170	6:00
San Francisco	KGO	810	6:45
COLORADO
Denver	KVOD	630	7:00
Pueblo	KGHF	1350	7:00
CONNECTICUT
Hartford	WGTH	1410	7:15
New Haven	WELI	960	7:15
Torrington	WTOR	1490	7:00
Waterbury	WATR	1320	7:00
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Washington	WMAL	630	7:00
FLORIDA
Jacksonville	WPDQ	600	8:15 Mon thru Thurs; 7:15 Friday
Miami	WQAM	560	7:00
Tampa-St. Petersburg	WSUN	620	7:00
GEORGIA
Atlanta	WGST	920	7:00
Augusta	WGAC	580	7:00
Brunswick	WGIG	1440	7:00
Cornelia	WCON	1450	7:00
Macon	WNEX	1400	7:45
Rome	WLAQ	1410	7:00
ILLINOIS
Chicago	WLS	890	6:00
Peoria	WIRL	1290	6:00
Springfield	WCVS	1450	7:15
INDIANA
Bloomington	WTTS	1370	9:45
Evansville	WJPS	1330	7:15
Ft. Wayne	WGL	1250	7:15
Indianapolis	WISH	1310	7:15
South Bend	WHOT	1490	6:30
IOWA
Des Moines	KSO	1460	7:45
Waterloo	KXEL	1540	6:00
KANSAS
Topeka	WREN	1250	7:45
KENTUCKY
Bowling Green	WKCT	930	6:00
Louisville	WKLO	1080	7:15
LOUISIANA
New Orleans	WSMB	1350	6:00
Shreveport	KRMD	1340	6:00
MARYLAND
Baltimore	WFBR	1300	7:00
MASSACHUSETTS
Boston	WVDA	1260	7:00
Gardner	WGAW	1340	7:00
Springfield	WSPR	1270	7:00
Worcester	WORC	1310	7:00
MICHIGAN
Bay City	WBCM	1440	7:00
Detroit	WXYZ	1270	8:45
Flint	WTAC	600	7:00
Grand Rapids	WLAV	1340	7:00
Iron Mountain	WMIQ	1450	10:15 Mon thru Thurs
Lansing	WILS	1320	10:00
Muskegon	WKBZ	850	7:15
Sault St. Marie	WSOO	1230	10:45
MINNESOTA
Mankato	KTOE	1420	6:30
Minneapolis-St. Paul	WTCN	1280	7:15
Montevideo	KDMA	1450	7:30
St. Cloud	WJON	1240	7:30
MISSISSIPPI
Laurel	WLAU	1490	6:00
Meridian	WTOK	1450	6:00
MISSOURI
Kansas City	KCMO	810	9:00
St. Louis	KXOK	630	7:15
MONTANA
Butte	KOPR	550	7:00
NEBRASKA
Sidney	KSID	1340	9:00
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Claremont	WTSV	1230	7:00
Lebanon	WTSL	1400	7:00
Manchester	WMUR	610	8:00
NEW MEXICO
Albuquerque	KOAT	1240	7:00
Los Alamos	KRSN	1490	7:00
Santa Fe	KTRC	1400	7:00
NEW YORK
Albany	WROW	590	7:00
Buffalo	WKBW	1520	7:00
Endicott-Binghamton	WENE	1430	7:00
Geneva	WGVA	1240	7:00
Jamestown	WJTN	1240	7:15
New York	WABC	770	7:00
Rochester	WVET	950	7:00
Syracuse	WHEN	620	7:00
NORTH CAROLINA
Asheville	WLOS	1380	7:00
Charlotte	WAYS	610	7:00
Goldsboro	WGBR	1150	10:15
Greensboro	WCOG	1320	11:00
Hendersonville	WHKP	1450	10:00
Raleigh	WNAO	850	7:00
Reidsville	WFRC	1600	7:30
Salisbury	WSAT	1280	8:15
OHIO
Akron	WAKR	1590	8:15
Canton	WHBC	1480	10:00
Chillicothe	WBEX	1490	7:00
Cincinnati	WSAI	1360	8:15
Cleveland	WJW	850	7:00
Columbus	WCOL	1230	7:00
Dayton	WING	1410	7:00
East Liverpool	WOHI	1490	7:00
Mansfield	WMAN	1400	7:00
Toledo	WTOL	1230	7:00
Youngstown	WBBW	1240	7:00
OKLAHOMA
Ada	KADA	1230	7:00
McAlester	KTMC	1400	6:00
Oklahoma City	KTOK	1000	7:15
Tulsa	KRMG	740	7:15
OREGON
Pendleton	KWRC	1240	10:15
Portland	KEX	1190	7:15
Redmond	KJUN	1240	6:30
PENNSYLVANIA
Altoona	WRTA	1240	7:00
Erie	WERC	1330	7:00
Harrisburg	WHGB	1400	7:00
Johnstown	WCRO	1230	7:15
Meadville	WMGW	1490	7:00
Philadelphia	WFIL	560	7:00
Pittsburgh	WCAE	1250	7:15
Scranton	WARM	590	7:00
Wilkes-Barre	WILK	980	7:00
RHODE ISLAND
Providence	WPJB	1420	7:00
Westerly	WERI	1230	7:00
SOUTH CAROLINA
Charleston	WHAN	1340	7:00
Columbia	WCOS	1400	7:00
Orangeburg	WDIX	1450	11:15
Sumter	WSSC	1240	7:00
SOUTH DAKOTA
Sioux Falls	KSOO	1140	6:00
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga	WAPO	1150	7:00
Jackson	WTJS	1390	6:00
Knoxville	WBIR	1240	7:00
Memphis	WMPS	680	6:00
TEXAS
Austin	KNOW	1490	7:15
Beaumont	KFDM	560	7:15
Dallas-Ft. Worth	WFAA	570	6:00
Houston	KXYZ	1320	7:15
UTAH
Provo	KCSU	1400	7:00
Salt Lake City	KUTA	570	7:00
VERMONT
Brattleboro	WTSA	1450	7:00
VIRGINIA
Danville	WBTM	1330	8:15
Norfolk	WGH	1310	7:00
Roanoke	WROV	1240	7:15
South Boston	WHLF	1400	8:15
Suffolk	WLPM	1450	7:00
WASHINGTON
Aberdeen	KBKW	1450	6:00
Pasco	KPKW	1340	10:30
Seattle	KING	1090	6:30
Spokane	KGA	1510	6:00
WEST VIRGINIA
Charleston	WKNA	950	7:00
Fairmont	WVVW	1490	7:00
Huntington	WSAZ	930	7:00
Princeton	WLOH	1490	7:00
Wheeling	WKWK	1400	7:00
WISCONSIN
Duluth-Superior	WDSM	710	7:00
Madison	WISC	1480	7:30
Milwaukee	WOKY	920	6:00
WYOMING
Casper	KVOC	1230	7:00
Cheyenne	KFBC	1240	7:00
Cody	KODI	1400	7:00
Laramie	KOWB	1340	7:00
New Castle	KASL	1240	7:00
Rawlins	KRAL	1240	9:00
Riverton	KWRL	1450	7:00
Torrington	KGOS	1490	7:00
Worland	KWOR	1490	7:00

IMUSWA Wins 12c Hike In New Pact

A 12c-an-hour package increase was won last week by the CIO Shipbuilding Workers in a new contract with the Patapsco Scrap Corp., Sparrows Point, Md., a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Corp.

The agreement provides a 5c an hour wage increase, and raises pensions to $140 a month and disability payments to $75 a month. It is in line with the new contract of IUMSWA-CIO with Bethlehem's ship-building division covering eight East Coast yards.

Economic Outlook Says—

GOP-Ruled States Block Jobless Pay Hikes

RELIANCE on the states by Pres. Eisenhower and the Republican Administration to liberalize unemployment compensation benefits "shows lack of either political realism or genuine desire for change," the CIO Economic Outlook charged in its current edition.

The "same employer organizations that blocked action by Congress" have been active in state capitals, charged the Outlook, which is published by the CIO Education and Research Dept. As a result, it continued, none of the states changed benefits in 1954 to the levels urged by the President."

"The state leaders of his own party fought the very things he suggested in Michigan, New Jersey and Massachusetts," the Outlook emphasized. "It was organized labor and the Democrats, rather than the Republicans, who supported his goals on unemployment compensation. But they lost out."

When unemployment compensation laws were first enacted in 1935, the Outlook recalled, Congress refused to set up a uniform national system, as was done with social security. Instead, it decided to use its taxing powers to force the states to set up their own systems within a federal-state framework.

EACH STATE was to decide what benefits unemployed workers should receive—and most of them adopted benefit ceilings of at least two-thirds of the average weekly wage in covered employment.

Congress also levied a tax of 3% on payrolls divided into two parts: .3% to be collected in all cases, and 2.7% to be collected only if a state did not pass a law meeting federal standards. All states passed acceptable laws.

"But while average weekly wages tripled between 1936 and 1953," the Outlook said, "maximums (in benefits) did not even double."

The states were expected to enact further legislation equivalent to a payroll tax of 2.7% in order to pay adequate benefits. But they didn't have to, and the door was thus opened for "experience rating," a system of tax concessions based on the employer's individual experience, the Outlook showed.

Employer lobbies in state capitals over the years have sniped at their state laws from three angles in an effort to keep their taxes as low as possible. They have shot at the tax rate itself, they have blocked realistic increases in benefits, and they have had legislative and administrative restrictions enacted on the eligibility of the jobless worker to receive the benefits.

As a result, the Outlook shows in a state-by-state table, the average weekly benefit for the U. S. during the first six months of 1954 was but $25 a week—and 882,015 unemployed workers exhausted their benefits before they found new jobs or were recalled from layoffs.

A total of 636,000 jobless workers was denied any benefits whatsoever.

"The central issue underlying all others," said the Outlook, "can be stated simply: How much of the cost of unemployment is to be borne by employers and how much by the unemployed?

"WITHOUT unemployment insurance, the unemployed bear part of the cost through loss of wages. Part is taken up by private and public relief agencies or by relatives. The employer ducks out," the Outlook continued.

"It is too easy for corporation officials to be satisfied with running at two-thirds of capacity month after month, as in the steel industry in 1954. Profits can be made at these levels if workers are laid off or put on short hours.

"The sufferings of individual families are hidden behind overall statistics and rosy statements that the recession has halted."

The Outlook declared Congress should set benefit and tax rates uniformly through a national system, for "it will not be easy to win gains in state legislatures, as sad experience has shown in the past."

Tips On Getting Jobless Benefits

These general points from the CIO Economic Outlook may help save you time and money. State laws vary so much that this list cannot fit all of them. For more information and help, go to your union.

Keep records, with dates, of your employment and earnings, the employers for whom you worked, and lay-offs.

File a claim promptly when you are jobless or working considerably less than full-time. Do this at a local employment security office, bringing what records you have. Get your facts straight and give them straight.

Know your rights, and the dangers threatening them. Read the information on your state law prepared by state employment security agencies and perhaps by your union or State CIO Council.

Beware of pitfalls that may lead to benefit denials. These are likely to involve—

Refusal of a "suitable" job; not being able to work or available for it; not "seeking" work; any false statements, such as not reporting earnings.

If you are referred to a job but find it unsuitable, be sure to explain your reasons, keeping in mind the terms of your own state law. The following kind of things may be taken into account when state agencies rule whether refusal of a job means loss of benefits: its distance and hazards; your previous work history and family circumstances; the terms offered.

If you are denied benefits, be sure you know why. If you seem to have been treated wrong, you can appeal the decision at the employment office. Ask to see any statement filed by your employer.

Appeal promptly, since you usually have only five to 10 days to do so. A higher appeal is also possible. But appeals may not be easy for workers to carry through successfully.

If you move to another state, you can file your claim there. You may be able to pool earnings credits in several states.

If you are a recent veteran, special benefits are available.

'Textile Titanism' Perils Mill Job Outlook

"TEXTILE titanism" is offering a new threat to the dwindling jobs of thousands of CIO Textile Workers.

The union estimates that a tide of corporate mergers has engulfed more than 150 textile firms since July 1953, affecting 50,000 workers. The mergers have gone on while employers have urged workers to hold off demands so as to put the companies in a better "competitive position."

TWUA-CIO is concerned because many of the "cannibal" companies include those whose past policies have been aimed at high prices, low wages and violent anti-unionism.

Amerotron, Inc., has emerged as the latest hybrid born of mergers. The combine was formed from the giant American Woolen Co., Textron, Inc., and Robbins Mills. The 50-year-old American Woolen firm has lost $25 million in the past two years.

Bigness, regardless of its social threat, the union concedes, is inevitable in the American economy.

The union regards the textile industry, however, as a special situation since it is largely unorganized. There are no adequate safeguards for the workers, TWUA points out, "and no suitable watchdog against the employers' social or industrial malpractices."

So widespread have the mergers become, smaller firms being absorbed by great, powerful textile corporations, that the union is endorsing the action of Sen. Green (D. R.I.) to probe developments in the industry, particularly in New England.

Just before adjournment, Green told the Senate:

"IT IS MY JUDGMENT that the whole textile industry, particularly textile mergers and consolidations, should be thoroughly investigated by the Subcommittee on Monopoly of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary."

He added that the Joint Committee on the Economic Report "should undertake a basic study of all the problems relating to the textile industry as a whole."

The importance of the textile industry to New England was cited by Green, who pointed out that a sampling of unemployed textile workers in that area showed 40% still jobless after a year of unemployment.

He pledged a renewal of his fight for an investigation when Congress reconvenes.

J. William Belanger, New England director for TWUA, lashed out at a recent Commerce Dept. task force that investigated economic conditions in Lawrence, Mass., where mill closings have left thousands permanently jobless.

Belanger noted that the union had been urging federal attention for Lawrence for 18 months.

He assailed a statement by a federal official that "the textile business here is finished, we might as well face it," and asked Commerce Sec. Weeks if this reflected an official opinion.

"The average citizen," Belanger said, "must wonder whether the Eisenhower Administration looks with favor on a movement to rob us of what is still our most important single industry."

Belanger charged that Weeks, a Massachusetts resident and former State GOP chairman, is "interested in southern textiles."

Waiting

Pres. Emil Rieve of the CIO Textile Workers praised Pres. Eisenhower's plan to spend $150 million for coal industry relief but insisted the need for action in the textile industry is as great.

Rieve, also a CIO vice president, recalled promises of aid to jobless textile workers in the 1952 campaign. He termed Administration moves to date "at best highly casual."

FIGHT HOUSING BIAS—CIO Packinghouse Workers and AFL Butchers have formed Chicago Committee for Equality in Housing to oppose anti-Negro housing riots. Co-chairmen (seated) are Patrick E. Gorman, AFL Butchers secretary-treasurer (left), and UPWA Vice Pres. Russell R. Lasley. Standing are Charles Hayes, UPWA district director, and Robert Nielunowski, AFL Butchers business agent.

UPWA Raps Kennelly On Housing Riots

A DEMAND that Mayor Martin Kennelly of Chicago end anti-Negro violence at the Trumbull Park Homes housing project, or resign, was served on the city's chief executive in an open letter signed by the CIO Packinghouse Workers and the AFL Meat Cutters.

The letter appeared as an advertisement in the Chicago Daily News following 13 months of disorder and rioting at the housing project. The two unions, with about 40,000 members employed in Chicago's meat packing industry, have formed a Chicago Committee for Equality in Housing to press for an end of the violence.

"The members of our unions, Negro and white, work side by side in Chicago's great meat industry," the open letter said.

"If Chicago citizens can work in harmony inside our industries — Chicago citizens can live in harmony inside our communities."

The letter recalled that since the first Negro families moved into the project, "they have been subjected to assaults, attacks, stoning and harassment by various mobs bent on depriving them of their right to a decent home."

"Mr. Mayor," it asked, "could a 13-month-long race riot take place in Chicago if the law were being enforced?"

CIO Cracks Down On Welfare Rackets

—See Page 3

The Fight for Congress (See Center Section)

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., October 11, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 41

Vandercook Begins 'Grass Roots' Report On Election

JOHN W. VANDERCOOK, ABC radio news commentator whose nightly broadcasts are sponsored by the CIO, this week begins a nine-state tour to report "grass roots" sentiment on the congressional elections.

Vandercook will originate his broadcast from key industrial and farm states in the Northeast and Midwest during the next three-week period.

"When Congress is in session," he said, "Washington is the news capital of the world. But the real domestic news at the moment is what the candidates are doing and saying in their home states and, more importantly, how the people feel about the issue, the records of the candidates and what they have to say.

"You can't get the feel of that in New York or Washington. That's why I'll be on the road."

Vandercook said his schedule included: Ohio, Michigan, Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and New York. All are considered key states in the coming election.

The radio commentator said he planned not only to interview major candidates, but "just average voters" during his tour.

Ruefully, Vandercook noted that "traveling had always been a favorite pastime." But, he said looking at his travel schedule, "this is different."

During his exploring days, when he traveled in more than 80 countries, Vandercook recalled "nice leisurely journeys in the tropics where you sat around for days waiting for the canoes to get ready or a hurricane to pass."

Grass root coverage of an election campaign, he observed, meant "split second timing for trains and planes, broadcasts and interviews."

Hear John W. Vandercook's first-hand election reports every week night on ABC Radio; check your local radio log for broadcast time.

Drive To Swat Labor With Anti-Trust Laws Hit

By GERVASE N. LOVE

THE SHAPE of things to come in the next few months, if the big business-run Commerce Dept. has its way, is a two-level crackdown on organized labor by the states and the federal government.

From recent speeches and not too secret memoranda of department big shots—plus the remarks and protests of Sec. of Labor Mitchell—the program calls for:

1. An all-out drive to apply the federal anti-trust laws to unions. The net effect would be to restore labor to the status of 150 years ago, a "commodity." And unions again would be open to suits as "conspiracies."

2. A parallel drive to give the states and their gerrymandered legislatures almost total power over collective bargaining. The effect would be a plague of anti-labor laws.

THE DRIVE to swat labor with anti-trust legislation, which recalls the fights for the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts, was strongly protested by CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg last week in a letter to Atty-Gen. Brownell.

The Attorney-General's Committee to Study the Anti-Trust Laws, named by Brownell, has been considering changes in the nation's basic anti-trust policies as well as in the laws themselves. Goldberg cited press reports that it has been weighing proposals to bring unions under the laws.

"If these reports are correct," he wrote Brownell, "I think two major issues are involved. The first issue relates to the manifest incompetence of this committee to deal fairly with this basic issue . . . The committee was obviously not chosen as fairly representative of both the labor and business viewpoints."

The second issue, he went on, is "whether any committee studying our anti-trust laws and anti-trust policy, no matter how constituted, is a proper body to make recommendations as to our national labor policy."

"I AM NOT ARGUING that unions are above the law or that industry representatives do not have a right to complain in the proper forum about union practices that they think are improper," Goldberg wrote.

"But I do say that any attempt to treat these complaints by a committee of business experts on the anti-trust laws involves a basic and fundamental reversal of precepts that are as firmly grounded in American public policy as the very principle of competition itself.

"The purpose of the anti-trust laws is to preserve competition among business enterprises—organizations engaged in the manufacture and sale of products or commodities. Unions are not engaged in any such activity, unless we are to reverse our traditional concept of humanitarianism and stipulate that human labor should be regarded as a commodity."

Goldberg said that from newspaper stories about Sec. of Commerce Weeks' presentation to the committee urging a recommendation that unions be covered by anti-trust laws, "he believes that labor organizations possess economic power which constitutes a serious threat to the continued existence of our free economy."

"Don't scare your father any more than he is, dear."

"The Secretary is wrong," Goldberg stated bluntly.

"THE SHORT of the matter is that your committee of experts on business law is now engaged in secret deliberations on fundamental issues of labor policy and labor law.

"We should like to record our strong protest against this course of action and urge you, as Attorney-General and as the committee's principal, to issue public instructions making clear that such issues are not within the committee's scope."

Should the committee recommend to Brownell that unions be brought under anti-trust laws and Brownell in turn makes a similar recommendation to Congress, it is in for tough sledding.

Rep. Celler (D. N.Y.), who expects to become chairman of the House Judiciary Committee in January if there is a Democratic victory in November, told the recent CIO Electrical Workers convention that "come hell or high water, he (Weeks) will never get such a bill through the House."

Newspaper reports are that a six-man task force of Brownell's committee studied the Commerce Dept. proposals and turned them down in a majority report.

However, Stephen Dunn, until recently the department's general counsel, came up with a 27-page minority report, circulated to the full committee, demanding that the anti-trust boom be lowered on unions. The committee turned the matter over to Co-Chairman Stanley N. Barnes, Brownell's assistant for "restudy."

Mitchell maintained the committee has taken no action, and said it had advised him the decision is primarily that of Brownell and the Eisenhower Administration. If there are any abuses by unions that require correction, he declared, "it should be done through the medium of labor legislation and not anti-trust legislation."

THE LABOR Secretary denied Weeks' labor policy views are those of the Administration, or that a "cold war" is on between his department and Weeks'. Every agency has a right to its opinions, he said, and added that "I can take care of myself."

Weeks' assault on unions at the federal level ties in with the anti-labor drive in the states bared by his undersecretary, Lothair Teetor, at a recent Chamber of Commerce speech in Kansas City, Mo.

Teetor said the big business overlords of the Commerce Dept. intend to lobby for Taft-Hartley Act changes which would encourage the states to pass right to scab laws, and for revisions in unemployment compensation legislation which will buck the Administration's efforts to widen coverage.

Steel Output At 70%

For the first time in nearly four months, basic steel production last week reached 70.4% of capacity. That still leaves over a quarter of steel capacity idle—and some 425,000 CIO Steelworkers unemployed or on short work weeks.

Brownell Hints Relaxing Of Trust Curbs On Business

A FRANK warning that while the Eisenhower Administration is considering thumping labor unions with the anti-trust laws, it hopes to ease them for big corporations has been sounded by Atty.-Gen. Brownell.

The Republican plan to loosen the legal ties that tend to keep big business from growing too big for the country's good was bared at a luncheon of the New York chapter of the Public Relations Society. Brownell's audience included the chief press agents for many of the nation's largest and wealthiest corporations.

Claiming that the practical application of the anti-trust laws is hampered by legal and judicial obscurities, he said the Attorney-General's Committee to Study the Anti-Trust Laws "is coming in with a very significant report."

"I've seen enough of it to get the drift," he went on. "It will be ready when Congress assembles in January.

"They are suggesting revisions to produce a more proper law, one more in keeping with a middle-of-the-road economic and social administration of those laws.

"I invite your attention to the work of that committee, which is coming out about six week's from now. It will provoke a prolonged and perhaps acrimonious discussion in Congress."

Reuther To Appear On 'Meet The Press'

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther will appear next Sunday on the nationally-televised program, "Meet the Press." The program will be aired at 6 p.m. EST, Sunday, Oct. 17, on NBC-TV stations.

'Big Business Is Swallowing Small Firms At Fast Rate'

"THE HEAVIEST buildup of giant corporations since the 1920's" is now in progress, the non-partisan National Issues Committee reported.

"Big business firms are buying smaller companies at the fastest rate in years," says the committee paper, The Issue. "Government anti-trust lawyers and economists are beginning to admit publicly that they're concerned."

The paper points out that the last big merger wave was 1940-47. Then "it engulfed 2,450 independent companies valued at $5.2 billion. That was 5.5% of the 1943 total of all manufacturing corporations in the country."

Meanwhile, on the small business side, times have been hard. Business failures in 1954 have shown an increase over 1953 while the gap between large and small business, according to the Small Business Administration, "shows an ever widening margin."

All this has caused revival of of demands that the government take anti-monopoly steps under the Anti-Trust laws. So far there has been comparatively little action on this front.

Since 1950, the Federal Trade Commission has prosecuted only three cases under the anti-merger sections of the Clayton Anti-Trust Act. The Justice Dept. has taken action on only one major case, blocking the merger of Bethlehem Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube. —(PAI)

CIO Group To Police Welfare Funds

By AL ZACK

THE CIO Executive Board, meeting in Washington last week, created a special standing committee empowered to crack down on any corruption in handling welfare or other union funds.

In a major policy statement, adopted unanimously, the new committee was instructed to "investigate any charges or allegations" of corruption or maladministration of funds.

The committee will report to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and the Executive Board, with recommendations for prompt remedial action in each case.

Reuther immediately named Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the CIO Clothing Workers, as chairman of the committee. Other committee members are Joseph Curran, president of the CIO Maritime Union, and James G. Thimmes, vice-president of the CIO Steelworkers. Both Curran and Thimmes are CIO vice-presidents.

Reuther named CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg to be director of the special standing committee.

At the same time, the board praised and supported Reuther's recent action in demanding and securing prompt remedial action in New York City, where abuses of local union welfare funds were uncovered in five locals of the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union.

Greenberg Reports

Pres. Max Greenberg of the RWDSU reported to the board on action taken by the international in line with Reuther's demand. Officials of three locals have been removed and administrators installed, Reuther later told the press, and legal steps are being taken to gain control of the other two locals.

Reuther told reporters the RWDSU had taken "forthright action" and its leaders had indicated they clearly intended to "clean up" corruption in these five local unions.

Spelling out its intent to crack down on all racketeers infiltrating the labor movement, the Executive Board said it "will unhesitatingly use its powers, under the CIO constitution, to preserve the integrity of our movement and to keep it free from any taint of corruption."

The new committee will not "delay action to prevent or remedy abuses until a case has been formally established in the courts," the board statement said. Instead, CIO will act as it did in expelling Communist-dominated organizations "in accordance with our democratic procedures" taking "prompt and effective action on our own initiative."

Welcome Inquiries

At the same time, the board pledged "complete cooperation" with "legitimate" government and congressional investigations of alleged welfare fund frauds and offered to help write legislation to prevent frauds, if such laws were found necessary. But, the board added, CIO would fight any attempt "to curtail the area of collective bargaining . . . under the guise of preventing abuses."

The special committee will recommend uniform standards for welfare funds, the board said. Reuther said he expected some proposals in time for consideration at the CIO convention in December.

Reuther told newsmen the corruption uncovered in New York was "penny ante stuff." The biggest crooks, he said, were employers and insurance officials who accepted kickbacks.

'Business Ethics'

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who took part in the press conference, noted CIO was fighting traditional but unethical business practices. Reuther added that "when you apply business ethics to trade union practices, you get corruption and we won't tolerate it."

Reuther told newsmen he didn't expect to find much corruption in CIO ranks, but he said CIO would not stand for shady practices which might be inside the law and still be unethical. CIO, he said, would not tolerate "legal ways to rob workers."

The CIO president observed that "wherever there's a crooked labor leader, there's a crooked employer. The crooked labor leader belongs in a jail cell and the cell next door should be reserved for the crooked employer."

In other actions, the CIO Executive Board:

1. Demanded that Atty.-Gen. Brownell give all-out support to local and state officials in dealing with "disgraceful" demonstrations against racial integration of public schools. (Story on Page 6.)

2. Set a meeting of the full unity committees of the CIO and AFL for Oct. 15 in Washington.

3. Approved a report showing the no-raiding agreement between CIO and AFL unions was working satisfactorily.

4. Formally conveyed a charter to the Mechanics Educational Society of America. Reuther said the charter covered present membership and a committee of Steel, Auto and Electrical Workers would meet with the MESA to work out permanent jurisdictional lines.

5. Heard a report that the affiliation of the CIO Railroad Workers with the CIO Transport Workers had been completed. The railroad workers had voted better than 3 to 1 for the amalgamation, Reuther said.

6. Adopted a full scale report on America's year-old economic skid, which noted the Administration's "failure to enact a program to halt and reverse this downturn has become the major issue of the 1954 elections."

It also noted that the President's "self-styled dynamic economic program has proved to be a complete fizzle," and that "head-in-the-sand tactics" have failed. (Story on Page 13.)

7. Urged CIO members to mobilize a campaign seeking commitments from political candidates to support "at least" the Eisenhower recommendations to improve unemployment compensation benefits and extend their duration. The resolution urged CIO members to plan now a continuing, vigorous campaign in next year's legislative sessions for improved state laws in this field.

CIO CHARTER for Mechanics Educational Society of America was presented by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther to MESA Pres. George White during CIO Executive Board meeting. At left: CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Jerry Raymond, MESA publicity director. Newest CIO affiliate has some 52,000 members.

CIO, AFL Unity Meeting Planned

Meetings of the full CIO and AFL unity committees will be held at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington on Oct. 15, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther said last week.

The session will be the first since the signing of the CIO-AFL no-raiding agreement, which Reuther reported is operating satisfactorily.

Reuther refused to make a prediction for newsmen on how rapidly unity talks could move, but he said more progress had been made during the past year than during the previous 16 years.

L. A. Sessions Set Before Convention

The CIO Executive Board has set the following schedule for pre-convention meetings in Los Angeles:

Executive Committee, Tuesday, Nov. 30.

Executive Board, Wednesday, Dec. 1.

Resolutions, Constitution, Appeals, Credentials, Officers' Report and Rules and Order Committees, Thursday, Dec. 2.

All meetings and the convention, which opens Dec. 6, will be at the Statler Hotel.

WASHINGTON newsmen last week had a barrage of questions for CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther dealing with CIO Steelworkers Pres. David J. McDonald's recent call for a full-time CIO president, and newspaper reports concerning speeches by CIO Exec. Vice-Pres. John V. Riffe.

In response to questions about a full-time president, Reuther said such a president would "be able to do things that I can't do now" as combined CIO and UAW president.

But, he added, he believed CIO should have as president the "head of a powerful union that has to face collective bargaining at the bargaining table so that collective bargaining problems do not become academic" to him. Otherwise, he said, the CIO president was "denied many of the essential tools he requires."

"If the CIO could find someone to work full time and on whom the CIO could agree," Reuther continued, "they will have no problem with Walter Reuther."

"I've got a full time job in Detroit," he said with a smile. "I like it and it's my Number One love." Reuther went on to say he felt the UAW and the CIO "were inseparably interwoven."

Questions On MRA

Reporters then raised a number of questions dealing with newspaper reports of statements by Riffe at the Moral Rearmament conference on Mackinac Island, Mich.

Reuther thoughtfully outlined his views on religious issues and the CIO's position on the right of individual conscience.

But, he said, no officer of the CIO had the right to use his title of office on behalf of any organization which did not have CIO's endorsement. He recalled that last year's CIO convention had adopted a resolution carefully spelling out this point.

In response to questions, Reuther said the CIO had not and does not endorse MRA.

He added that CIO recognizes the full right of all members to practice their own religious beliefs.

Higher Pension Benefits Mailed

Increased social security benefit checks were mailed last week to more than 6.5 million persons. The average increase in benefits is from $6 to $7 a month—improvements voted by Congress only after labor pushed a drive for even wider expansion of social security.

Text Of CIO Board Action On 'Policing' Of Welfare Funds

Here is the text of the CIO Executive Board statement on the establishment of a special committee to police operations of union welfare funds:

DURING THE past several years, CIO unions have negotiated pension and welfare agreements with employers throughout American industry.

This precedent-making development has brought tangible and substantial benefits to millions of union members and their families. Through the collective bargaining process, the unions of the CIO have thus been responsible for a major assault on the hazards of insecurity arising from old age, death, disability and illness.

Thousands of these welfare plans, achieved through collective bargaining processes, are now functioning. Hundreds of thousands of families have benefitted, hundreds of millions of dollars in benefits have been paid out to workers and their families.

People who might otherwise have suffered privation and want have been able to preserve their dignity, self-respect and standard of living, despite family catastrophe. These welfare plans are a testimonial to the vitality and flexibility of the collective bargaining process in the American free enterprise system.

The administration of these welfare plans varies. Some are administered jointly by unions and employers; some by employers; some by the unions alone. Whatever the method of administration, the objective in all cases is the same—to provide the maximum benefits at the minimum cost to the workers and their families. It is a characteristic of all well-administered welfare funds that the cost of administration is a small part of the total income of the fund.

The vast majority of these welfare plans are administered as they should be, as a sacred trust on behalf of the beneficiaries. The CIO is proud of this record of constructive achievement on the part of its affiliates in this field of human welfare.

We have been determined from the outset that the administration of welfare funds shall meet the highest ethical standards for the handling of fiduciary funds.

Year after year, CIO conventions have reaffirmed, in our annual statement on ethical practices, our determination to prevent any corruption in the handling of funds belonging to, or held in trust for, our members or their families.

We have said, and we now repeat, that there is no room in the legitimate labor movement for crooks or Communists.

In the recent past, a few cases of financial corruption in the handling of welfare funds on the part of certain local officials have come to light. These situations, few as they are in relation to the whole picture, cannot be condoned. Even a few are far too many. They are shocking and disgraceful.

We commend Pres. Reuther for the prompt and effective

(Continued on Page 15)

'Thou Shalt Not—'

The CIO Executive Board has made trade union history with its swift and courageous action against crooks and racketeers attempting to steal workers' welfare funds.

Not only has the Board erected a "Thou Shalt Not Touch" sign around all union funds, it has created efficient, workable machinery to find and punish the crooks and protect workers' funds.

There may be a need for new laws to nab sticky-fingered characters who have found a "legal" way to dip into workers' funds. CIO will not tolerate that kind of crookedness either.

If new laws—which preserve workers' rights to bargain collectively for important and humane welfare funds—are necessary, CIO will help get them adopted.

But CIO is determined that the morals and ethics of the trade union movement never sink to the merely "strictly legal" level of big business.

That means trade union vigilance—and the CIO Executive Board will provide it.

'Running Scared'

Now that the congressional campaign is swinging into the decisive weeks, we're getting a heavy dose of artful pessimism from GOP ranks. For example, a prominent but otherwise unidentified Republican at Pres. Eisenhower's vacation headquarters says "we're not only running scared —we are scared."

We suggest all of this be taken with a shovelful of salt. The election—and control of the next Congress—won't be decided until the votes are counted.

On the next several pages, The CIO News continues its series of first-hand reports on several of the key states. Generally, they show that a lot of good work has been done —and that there's much more to do before Nov. 2.

Just keep in mind: The "Daddy Warbucks" of the GOP are beginning to shell out. Watch for something desperate. The Madison Ave. hucksters have been far too quiet. They have a lot of rabbits to pull out of their hat in an effort to soft-soap the American people. So beware of the last-minute GOP maneuvers.

Crossed Up

In our mail last week came a publication of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce called Economic Intelligence, which took high offense at any suggestion that the GOP Administration is giving-away the people's resources. "It is particularly difficult," says the C. of C., "to see the logic of the give-away charge with respect to natural resources."

If the C. of C. took off its blindfold, it might consider how the Administration is trying to ram through the Dixon-Yates AEC-TVA deal—a $140 million operation compared with which Teapot Dome was only a county fair shell game.

Carry On, Men

If you're an unemployed worker with your compensation benefits long exhausted, and want a refund on last year's income tax to help get by, you haven't a ghost of a chance.

But if you're a businessman in a similar position, then the doors to the Treasury Dept. are wide open. You can apply current business losses against past tax payments, and get a whopping refund. Under the little-known "carry back, carry forward" provisions of U. S. tax laws—and the loophole was widened by the last Congress—the Treasury will pay out some $400 million this year. That's another demonstration of how business gets the breaks, while tax reductions for the people were killed.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS
Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director
Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII October 11, 1954 No. 41

New Cop On The CIO Beat

In Other Words—

Behind The 'Right To Scab' Drive

How a movement for a "right-to-scab" bill operates is described in this digest of an article on "The $241,000 Law" in Ammunition, monthly magazine of the CIO Auto Workers:

ON DEC. 29, 1953, 73 Oklahoma business and industry officials, together with a smattering of legislators and lawyers, met in the Baltimore Room of Oklahoma City's plush Skirvin Hotel, where they unanimously approved a $241,000 campaign to get a law on the state's statute books.

The "Right" To Work?

The bill they wanted had already been rejected at a previous session of the Legislature. There, it hadn't got beyond the committee hearing stage. This time, its sponsors were determined to jam it through by trying a new tack.

The program they okayed called for placing the proposal before the voters in the form of an initiative petition—and for a high-powered, carefully timed campaign to put it across.

Their plan included setting up a "non-profit educational corporation" and choosing a name that would have undoubted propaganda value. The name they decided on was "Jobs, Inc." and the incorporators, according to their own report which was marked confidential, "must be (1) a member of the Legislature, (2) a rancher, or prominent agriculturalist, and (3) a business man or industrialist."

The program called for establishing a board of directors of "key individuals located through the state, both in the sphere of their personal influence and geographical location."

And they also made plans to "employ persons to get signatures to the petition," in addition to those volunteering for the task, according to the report.

They decided, too, to get up literature promoting their proposed law, and "to use the press, radio, TV, public appearances, direct mail and personal calls to carry the program to the people."

A suggestion that the group probably would spend more than $241,000 in the Oklahoma campaign was contained in the budget report. And, it added, "if the effort is to succeed, it must be well-financed."

Object of the heavy outlay and the intricate plans was a so-called "right-to-work" law.

Most "right-to-work" laws were passed shortly after the end of World War II. Much of today's restrictive labor legislation was adopted about the same time. Three of the states have since repealed their passage of the measure.

But proposals are pending in several states for additional legislation.

Labeled "right-to-work" laws by proponents as a means of whipping up public support, the measures prohibit enforcing union security provisions of contracts negotiated by labor and management. These provisions include both a union shop and maintenance of membership.

T-H Assists The States

Although both the union shop and maintenance of membership are permitted by the Taft-Hartley law, states nevertheless are free to ban both. Reason is, the Taft-Hartley law gives priority to state laws when they are more restrictive against unions.

Supporters claim the "right-to-work" bills are cemented to freedom of a worker to take a job whether or not he belongs to a union. They insist this would widen the labor market, and serve as an inducement to the areas where such laws are in effect.

Opponents, on the other hand, point out that when the majority of employes in a plant, shop or office vote for representation by a union, the gains they then negotiate apply to all in the bargaining unit.

Dues of the union members make possible these gains in wages and working conditions, opponents of the "right-to-work" proposals emphasize. Workers who accept these benefits but refuse to join the union, they add, are declining to carry their democratic share. Instead, they're taking a "free ride."

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

IT IS DIFFICULT to remember, offhand, any single national issue in which Pres. Eisenhower has intervened more persistently and stubbornly than in regard to the Dixon-Yates contract.

He told the Bureau of the Budget to "direct" the Atomic Energy Commission to sign a contract with the Dixon-Yates private utility syndicate that would have the effect of pushing private power into the Tennessee Valley Authority's natural market in Memphis.

More About Dixon & Yates

Democrats and anti-monopoly Republicans conducted a hard fight in the Senate to block the deal, but the Republican leadership followed the President's insistence and drove through a bill to authorize the AEC to enter private contracts for power production.

Sen. Langer (R., N. D.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee asked money to conduct an investigation. He was turned down—hard.

Forces in favor of the TVA managed to get a provision written into the law requiring a contract to lie before the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy for 30 days before it could become effective. But the Joint Committee was also given power to "waive" this provision by majority vote—and it is packed with champions of private utilities.

Early this month it became perfectly apparent that the White House was adamant and that skids were being greased to drive the contract through.

Rep. W. Sterling Cole (R., N. Y.), chairman of the congressional Joint Committee, summoned a meeting and the AEC promptly announced that it had requested a "waiver" of the 30-day delay period. The object was clear: to get the waiver and get the contract signed before the Nov. 2 election.

The Dixon-Yates deal, as Sen. Gore (D. Tenn.) pointed out, will cost the taxpayers some $140 millions over the next several years—a figure "far bigger than that of the Teapot Dome."

The Case Against Dixon

The President's aggressiveness in this deal was made in the face of very serious allegations against Middle South Utilities, Inc., headed by Edgar H. Dixon—the Dixon of Dixon-Yates.

An official of the Mississippi Power & Light Co., a Middle South subsidiary, was fired after publicly charging that his operating company was dominated, controlled and "milked" for the benefit of the holding company.

A Republican lawyer in Arkansas charged that Arkansas Power & Light, another Middle South subsidiary, "milked" the people of the state for the benefit of Dixon's holding company.

J. D. Stietenroth, the former Mississippi company official, told an unofficial hearing of the Senate anti-monopoly subcommittee that for practical purposes the Holding Company Act, passed with great trouble in the '30s as one of the major New Deal reforms, had been "amended" or otherwise changed through interpretation so that the strict rules had been, in effect, subverted.

Sen. Kefauver (D. Tenn.), sitting with Langer to hear testimony from Stietenroth, said that a transaction by which a $3 million Mississippi Light & Power Co. surplus was changed into common stock, paying 9% a year to Dixon's Middle South Utilities, was almost exactly the same kind of "milking" by a holding company that ruined Samuel Insull 25 years ago and finally created a political storm against giant utility empires.

A Step 'Back To McKinley'

Eisenhower's public power policy literally takes the country "back to McKinley." He is repudiating, in step after step, the foundations and principles of public power first laid down by a Republican predecessor, Theodore Roosevelt.

Through the Dixon-Yates program he is repudiating everything that the great Sen. George Norris, also a Republican, did to create and expand TVA through bitter years of conflict.

The President apparently thinks that the Dixon-Yates syndicate—a holding company combination which under the contract would get enormous strength and an entrenched position in the South Central states—is just a clean little example of red-blooded private enterprise and "local control."

There is strong evidence that the opposite is true—that it is a regional monopoly by which local utilities are manipulated for the benefit of New York managers and stockholders.

An investigation would uncover the facts—but Eisenhower doesn't want an investigation, either by the Senate anti-monopoly committee or the atomic energy committee. Confused and largely ignorant of the tremendous virtues of TVA, he wants to bull through a contract to damage TVA.

It is a campaign issue for Democrats—and it is no credit to the men around Eisenhower that they have led him into that morass.

4 TV Campaign Films Offered

The CIO Legislative Dept. has obtained four TV films on vital election issues starring key Senators which are available for use on TV programs or for motion picture showings at union and other meetings.

Full details on securing these films can be obtained by wiring or phoning the CIO Legislative Dept., 718 Jackson Place,, N.W., Washington 6, D. C., phone EXecutive 3-5581.

Issues In The Election—

In The Matter Of Give-Aways, GOP Sure Kept Its Promises

(This is the fifth of a series of articles on issues in the coming election.)

THE HUCKSTERS and hustlers of the Eisenhower Administration have good reason not to share the workers' worries over deepening recession.

While pay envelopes have shrunk and national income is down, the GOP elephant has fattened from his forays against the public estate. Big business has left its greedy pawprints on the national landscape. Its mark is on the forest-clad mountains, the lush grazing lands and on the beaches bordering the off-shore oil lands.

Encouraged by one success after another, he has dipped his trunk deeply into the public treasury. His trainers have been planted in key spots, the better to pilot his plunderings.

The story of Republican give-aways to pay off political debts is the most successful chapter in the whole sorry record of two years of the Eisenhower Administration. In this field, if in no other, the 1952 campaign pledges have been redeemed at an astronomical interest rate.

Hardly had the GOP-controlled 83rd Congress warmed its chairs before it embarked on the give-away spree. In its first major piece of legislation, it handed over to the big oil companies—in return for lavish campaign handouts—the off-shore oil and natural gas properties.

The Big Boys Wanted More

These were valued variously at from $50 to $300 billion and all debts could have been considered squared, except by the big interests behind the GOP throne. They had succeeded in looting the public domain after four major setbacks: a veto by former Pres. Truman of earlier legislation and three adverse decisions by the Supreme Court.

Pres. Eisenhower committed himself to aid the give-away before his nomination, in return for support by Texas oil millionaires.

Covetous Republican eyes next swung to the vast acreage owned by the U. S., just under one-fourth of our national area. This belongs to the American people. The value of this land has been estimated at over a trillion dollars.

This land, with its enormous riches in water power, minerals, timber, grazing rights and the skill and resourcefulness of the people who use it, has made this the strongest nation on earth. America's natural resources, wisely used for the benefit of all the people, have the potential of providing lasting prosperity and the sinews of world security.

It was natural that so great a treasure would be a target for the spoilsmen who came to power under the Eisenhower Administration. They set about reversing 20 years of reason during which the people initiated a gigantic program to harness the water power for low-cost electricity, for irrigation and flood control.

Taxpayers Pay The Freight

The people had enhanced the beauty and recreational value of our national parks. They wisely operated timber and grazing lands for the benefit of all. And under the pressure of war they developed the greatest force for good or evil yet discovered by man—the atom.

Truman invited the audience at the dedication of Montana's Hungry Horse Dam in October 1952 to take a very good look at the project. For, he said, if the Republicans won the election "you folks may never see another." His words were tragically prophetic.

The slick sloganeers of the private power monopolies sold their program to a willing Republican Party. Eisenhower echoed their propaganda when he cited TVA as an example of "creeping socialism." A new concept of "partnership in power" was enunciated.

Freely translated, this means, federal subsidies, tax write-offs, higher rates and less power. It means one partner—the taxpayer—pays the freight, the other—the power monopolists—get the profits.

Two members of the Eisenhower Cabinet early made it plain they were in the give-away business to the detriment of the people. There was the famous "What's good for General Motors is good for the country" declaration of Defense Sec. Wilson.

Interior Sec. McKay, apostle of the land-grab philosophy, stated more bluntly:

"We're here in the saddle as an Administration representing business and industry."

Even the Indian on his reservation wasn't safe when the Republican leaders took the profit warpath. Under the cloak of "freeing" the Indian from his tribe, GOP lawmakers pushed for a bill to rob him of his tribal lands with their mineral and forest wealth.

The resources of the Niagara River, of Hells Canyon (greatest undeveloped source of water power in America), of TVA and other public power projects would all be turned over to private power firms. These outfits already had been beneficiaries of special legislation to increase their profits.

Lid Lifted On Gas Rates

For example, companies peddling natural gas were freed of responsibility of federal rate regulation, if the gas is sold by one firm within one state.

The biggest give-away of all is still in the works. Republicans in Congress tried to ram through legislation to turn over the development of atomic energy for peaceful power uses to private firms. The nation's stake of $12 billion would have been dissipated in a flash if alert Democrats and a handful of others had not blocked the grab.

They staged a marathon debate—termed a filibuster by the GOP—and succeeded in tacking on amendments to safeguard the public interest. These changes prevented atomic energy from becoming an exclusive blessing for a few private monopolies.

—Fitzpatrick in St. Louis Post-Dispatch
Almost Got It But Not Quite

How 'Local' Is Local?

"Local partnership" is the Eisenhower term for scuttling public power projects and turning them over to private monopolies.

But the amazing story told by a Mississippi power executive reveals that the "local" partners come from Wall Street. The testimony of J. D. Stietenroth, fired secretary-treasurer of Mississippi Power & Light Co., will help dump the explosive issue of power monopolies into the current and 1956 campaigns.

Stietenroth charged that Dixon-Yates—selected by Eisenhower personally to build a private power plant in the TVA area—is dominated by Wall Street interests.

He confided that his firm kept two sets of books, one in Mississippi and the other in New York and although he was the company's chief financial officer he could never see the New York ledgers. He admitted that electric consumers are victims of a price gouge.

Facts From PAC

The accompanying article is based on material in the 1954 Handbook of the CIO Political Action Committee. Copies of the Handbook are available to union members at $1.50 each from the CIO-PAC, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

Behind the Headlines—

The Pickings In Milford Were Pretty Good

(The following report on the background of the recent anti-Negro school demonstrations is digested from broadcasts of John W. Vandercook, CIO-sponsored commentator, on ABC Radio.)

By JOHN W. VANDERCOOK

THE LOCALIZED resistance to the end of racial segregation in our public schools, as now demanded by the Supreme Court's ruling, continues to provide world communism with the finest anti-American propaganda it has had in years.

In Milford, Del., the town that has won its way into headlines 'round the world as the temporary capital of unreason and race prejudice, ignorance and hate have won a Pyrrhic victory.

Following the decision to evict 11 Negro children from the local high school, most of the white students who have stayed home this week have gone back to classes. The haters—the defiers of the Constitution and the Supreme Court—claim triumph.

MUCH OF THE credit for that ascendancy of wrong over right, of cruelty over kindness, goes to an outsider—to a certain Bryant Bowles who calls himself the president of a "National Association for the Advancement of White People."

Bowles came to Milford in the self-appointed role of leader of the prosegregation rabble. In the course of his labors in behalf of white supremacy, Bowles is reported as not having been too busy to collect, in person, dues from those who wanted to join his organization . . . dues which range from $5 to $50.

THE MAN AND THE RESULTS—Organized efforts to block school integration under the U. S. Supreme Court decision broke out in the border states last week. At left is Bryant Bowles, head of "hate group" calling itself "National Association for the Advancement of White People." Bowles, who has a bad check police record, boasted of forcing Milford, Del., school board to reverse integration moves. In Baltimore (photo at right) and Washington, high school students staged Jim Crow demonstrations. School board and police in both cities moved to carry out the law.

It is interesting to learn something of this example of white superiority. Bowles hails from North Arlington, Va. His last arrest, in Baltimore, was on five charges of false pretense. He was found guilty and paid a separate fine and costs on each charge.

At one time he was wanted in Florida for passing phony checks, the same weakness which got this glittering example of racial supremacy into trouble with the law in Baltimore. (According to Delaware police, Bowles later paid up on the Florida checks.)

Rubber check passer Bowles, in the course of his activities in Milford, declined repeatedly to say how many members his organization has. Nor does it appear that its books have been audited. Judging from reports, the pickings in Milford have been pretty good. Bowles' own estimate of the take is $3500.

At the nearby town of Laurel, also touched by the infection, a citizens' meeting took on an interesting coloration. As the president of the local Board of Education said: "I think it should be emphasized that three-fourths of the thousands of people who attended the rally were not residents of this district. They came from other parts of the state, from Maryland and from as far away as Virginia."

Why those ringers showed up, who brought them, and why, might be an excellent subject for investigation by the congressional Committee on Un-American Activities.

In the news are two other stories that sound more like America — basically sound and good and decent America. The Board of Education of Topeka, Kan., has officially informed the Supreme Court that integration there is going ahead rapidly and will be completed by the beginning of school next year.

In a Negro State College in Frankfort, Ky., a white student was admitted today, for the first time in the school's history, and a white instructor and a white physician have been employed.

The approach to a change with this human species of ours is almost always difficult. It is one of the most reassuring facts of history that once a change is effected, consent to it comes quickly. And we never go back.

'Firm' U. S. Action Urged By CIO To Halt School Outbreaks

"FIRM and fast action" by the federal government to halt a Ku Klux Klan type of demonstrations against school integration was demanded last week by the CIO Executive Board.

CIO acted as a series of student demonstrations — inspired, CIO said, by "outside agitators and elements seeking to subvert the law of the land"—occurred in some high schools in Baltimore and Washington but quickly were brought under control by school officials and police.

The Baltimore-Washington outbreaks were inspired by demonstrations and KKK cross-burning episodes earlier in Milford, Del. These forced a local school board to quit and resulted in the setting aside of school integration there.

THE OUTBREAKS were linked to a hate group calling itself the "National Association for the Advancement of White People" (see John Vandercook's story above).

Noting the "chain reaction" developing, the CIO Board called upon Atty.-Gen. Herbert Brownell "to take firm and fast action." CIO added:

"The federal civil rights laws make it unlawful for individuals to conspire together to deprive any citizen of the equal protection of the laws. They provide appropriate criminal penalties. An immediate investigation as to whether these laws have been violated should be instituted.

"Local and state school authorities initially elected to comply with the law of the land. We commend them for that action. It must now be made clear that the full force of the federal government will back them up against the disgraceful disruptions which have occurred."

Similar demands for federal action against the "sordid outbursts of racism" were voiced by Rep. Celler (D. N.Y.), the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Americans for Democratic Action, Jewish War Veterans, and the American Council on Human Rights.

From the Justice Dept.'s civil rights section, the only report was that it was keeping an eye on the pro-segregation outbreaks. These came as the Supreme Court opened a session in which it is expected to spell out ways and means of school integration as a follow up to its historic decision last spring that segregation in classrooms is un-American and unconstitutional.

Brownell later promised "prompt action" if any evidence of federal law violation is found. The Justice Dept., he said, was "watching developments" but so far had found no violation of federal laws.

In Milford, NAACP lawyers planned court moves to set aside the resegregation order.

In Baltimore, the City and State CIO Councils joined with a score of religious, women's and inter-racial organizations in supporting school and police officials in their strong moves to curb the hate group-inspired outbreaks and to continue integration programs which were being carried out on an orderly basis.

Church Unit Urges Orderly Integration

In the midst of "hate group"-inspired demonstrations, the Council of Churches, Christian Education, of Maryland and Delaware urged a neighborly and orderly acceptance of school integration.

In a strongly-worded statement sent to 21 Protestant denominations, the Council said the Supreme Court decision outlawing school segregation "gives a clear status in law to a fundamental Christian and American principle."

"To put this decision into effect," the church group said, "will test the good will and discipline of people in many communities. In the period of transition, we know that the churches and individual Christians will continue to exert their influence and leadership."

UPWA Wins 5c At Armour

NEW CONTRACTS with Armour & Co. have been negotiated by the CIO Packinghouse Workers calling for a 5c wage increase retroactive to Sept. 20.

The terms are similar to those negotiated earlier with Swift & Co., by UPWA-CIO and the AFL Meat Cutters. About 35,000 members of both unions are covered in the Armour agreement.

Other contract improvements include: Upward adjustment of all rates below the company's chain-wide patterns, an extra 1.5c for women workers, an additional 2.5c for workers in five southern plants, and improved vacation schedules and insurance coverage.

Resume Probe On Atomic Disputes

A board of inquiry named by Pres. Eisenhower on Aug. 11 will resume investigations this week into labor disputes at atomic energy plants in Paducah, Ky., and Oak Ridge, Tenn., between the CIO Chemical Workers and Union Carbon and Carbide Corp.

Bias At Fire Houses Rapped In Recent California Ruling

MAINTENANCE of segregated Negro fire houses is prohibited under the State and federal Constitutions, according to a ruling by California's Atty.-Gen. Edmund G. Brown.

"City officials in carrying out discretionary authority in the assignment, promotion and transfer of public employes, may not follow a policy of segregation based upon race or color," ruled Brown, a Democrat.

His opinion was given at the request of Assemblyman William Byron Rumford (D.) of Berkeley, a Negro lawmaker.

In answer to contentions that non-segregation in fire houses would result in racial tensions—argument raised in a similar Washington, D. C., case—Brown cited a statement of State Supreme Court Justice Traynor that "it is no answer to say that race tension can be eradicated through the perpetuation by law of the prejudices that give rise to the tension."

Several cities and districts in California have segregated fire house personnel. The subject has been a matter of controversy in Los Angeles, where two all-Negro fire houses are in operation.

The city has 81 uniformed Negro firemen out of a total of 2600 firemen. Seventy-five are assigned to two fire houses, the other two to bureaus in the department. The Greater Los Angeles CIO Council has urged elimination of the segregation practice.

Bell Firm Asked To End Job Bias

The New Mexico Fair Employment Practices Commission has asked the Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co., which is part of the Bell System, to adopt a non-discriminatory employment policy in the State.

The CIO News

The '54 Campaign At First Hand

Tom Burke Turns On Steam In Ohio Fight

By DON SMITH
Special Correspondent

AN IRISHMAN from Cleveland is starting to fight like one and Ohio Democrats have their best chance in 10 years to elect a Democrat to the U. S. Senate.

The Irishman is Thomas A. Burke, who served as head of Ohio's largest city longer than any other mayor. He was appointed to the Senate by Gov. Frank J. Lausche last year following the death of Sen. Taft.

Another Campaign Exclusive

The normally Republican state of Ohio has been the recent scene of much pulse-taking by the so-called experts of the newspaper trade, but to date no one has uncovered any conclusive evidence of a decisive trend.

However, the consensus now is that Burke has at least a 50-50 chance of defeating his opponent, Rep. Bender, head of the GOP organization in Cuyahoga County (Cleveland).

Burke is fighting a battle of down-state or rural anonymity, since his political career has centered in Cleveland while Bender's name has appeared on the statewide ballot several times as Congressman-at-Large.

Slap At Give-Aways

But Burke's campaign has started to pick up steam and Burke himself has started to get into the swing of things by lashing out with increasing vigor at the Republican's "give-away" record and favored treatment for big business.

While the 56-year-old Burke is pointing to the record and discussing the issues, his opponent is playing the same old record: "Elect me because Ike needs a Republican Congress."

Although appointed to the Senate midway in the 83rd Congress, Burke quietly and effectively compiled an impressive record by:

1. Voting to kill Adminstration efforts to toughen Taft-Hartley and give the states union-busting authority.

2. Sponsoring legislation to reduce the excise tax on household appliances and favoring the complete elimination of the tax on such items as refrigerators.

3. Voting in favor of Democratic attempts to liberalize unemployment compensation laws in the states.

4. Voting for an increase in personal income tax exemptions from $600 to $700.

5. Vigorously opposing passage of the Hinshaw Gas Bill that prohibits the FPC from regulating utilities which transport natural gas within state boundaries.

Burke won a great deal of support from officials and consumers in the larger Ohio cities for his fight against the Hinshaw Bill. Burke has predicted the legislation will cost Ohio consumers "millions of dollars."

Burke has not been known as a hard campaigner. His popularity in Cleveland was so high that he never had campaign worries. He has found out it's different in a statewide race and he's warming to the task.

Tax Deal Hit

For example, he delivered a series of bristling attacks on the Administration for its "big business" mentality, its lack of concern for the worker and farmer and its "brave words and small deeds" in foreign affairs.

He accused the GOP Administration of "giving tax relief to the ordinary wage earner with an eyedropper, while it poured out tax benefits to the wealthy with a four-inch hose."

The GOP has one distinct advantage in the campaign—money. The Republicans have earmarked $1,300,000 for their 1954 campaign in the Buckeye State. The Democrats, as usual, are operating on a shoestring.

The heavy-set Bender is struggling to overcome the impression of a political buffoon that he created as a bell-ringing cheerleader for the nomination of Taft at the last GOP national convention.

He also is battling to erase from the voters' minds some of the verbal salvos fired at him during the primary campaign by his youthful and dynamic GOP opponent, William B. Saxbe, Jr.

On January 14, for example, Saxbe said: "Mr. Bender typifies to the average voter in Ohio the old-style ward heeler type of petty politician that we have tried to get away from in past years . . ."

There appear to be the rumblings of a Democratic trend in Ohio because of increased unemployment and declining farm income. But it has been difficult to accurately gauge the temper of the voters because to date there hasn't been any evidence of unusual voter interest.

However, the Burke-Bender race must be considered as one in which the Democrats have the best chance of electing a Democrat since they almost turned the trick back in 1944, when Taft nosed out William G. Pickrel by only 17,740 votes.

EYEDROPPER VS. FIREHOSE — Sen. Burke (D.) tells an Ohio rally that GOP Administration gave "tax relief to the ordinary wage earner with an eyedropper, while it poured out tax benefits to the wealthy with a four-inch hose." He also hit at gap between falling farm income and rising food prices for city workers. At right, the Ohio senator meets with A. J. Gallagher at his Columbus campaign headquarters.

Danger Signs In The Economy

Here are some of the economic danger signs in Ohio that will affect the Nov. 2 elections:

- Agriculture income for the first seven months of the year was 3% below last year.
- Unemployment in the state is estimated in the neighborhood of 200,000 to 225,000.
- In the month of August alone, 9203 persons exhausted their unemployment benefits. It was one of the highest months in Ohio's history.
- Manufacturing employment for the first seven months of the year was down 12% compared with 1953.
- Manufacturing payrolls were down 14% for the first seven months as compared with 1953.
- Man-hours worked in manufacturing during the same period were down 16%.

The above figures can hardly be classified as "crooked fence economic politics" because they were taken from official reports of the Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation and Ohio State University's Bulletin of Business Research.

Look Who's Running Short Of Moola

Some of the very people who have been proclaiming loudly that the country never had it so good moved in with the rest of the folks the other day.

They were top Ohio Republican strategists who met in Columbus and discovered that in spite of the great prosperity they've been talking about, they can't raise a lousy $1,300,000 to return Sen. Burke (D.) to private life. Of this sum, they've managed to collect only a paltry $400,000.

Burke, meantime, is percolating along on a budget that would shame a GOP candidate for dogcatcher.

What's Wrong With Bender—In A Republican's Own Words

NO PARTY squabble in recent Ohio history reached the intensity of the GOP primary fight for the right to oppose Sen. Burke (D.).

Rep. Bender and State Rep. William B. Saxbe, Jr., slugged it out for the GOP nomination. Here are some Saxbe quotes:

"Many people remember Mr. Bender as the psalm-singing, bell-ringing voice of doom in the national convention in 1952 and were given little confidence in Republican leadership by that exhibition."

"Certainly the GOP can't retread a party hack with a record of demonstrated mediocrity and make a shining knight of him."

"Even though my opponent has quit singing and ringing, you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, nor a statesman out of a political huckster."

"The issue of this campaign is bossism with Benderism or oblivion for the little man of the Republican party."

Then — hold your hats — on Sept. 8, after he lost the primary, Saxbe swallowed hard and said: "I'm going to work to elect George H. Bender to the U. S. Senate in November."

GOP Paper Blasts Ohio GOP Platform

When a Republican paper gets mad at Republicans, and comes rght out and says so, that's news.

After the Ohio GOP recently adopted a platform pledging to "encourage" fair employment practices, the traditionally-Republican Cleveland News commented:

"The 'FEP statement of principles doesn't mean a thing and the Republican platform-builders aren't fooling anybody. Three straight Republican Ohio Legislatures have killed any form of FEP legislation. . . ."

LIBERALS and Democrats in Ohio believe they have a good chance this year to cut into the 16-6 edge the Republicans now enjoy in the State's congressional delegation.

Ohio has 23 Congressmen but one of the seats—the 9th Dist. in Toledo—is held by Independent Frazier Reams, a former Democrat.

Areas of substantial unemployment in highly-industrialized Ohio and a falling farm income may add up to more Democrats in Washington in January.

The changes in the party lineup will probably come in the 2nd, 3rd, 14, 15, and 16 Dists.

The Key Races

Democrats are hopeful that Thomas B. Talbot will unseat Rep. Schenck (R.) in the 3rd Dist. (Dayton), which is usually Democratic but slipped into the GOP column by only 4774 votes two years ago.

In the 2nd Dist., former Rep. Earl T. Wagner is opposing Rep. Hess and has the CIO-PAC recommendation for election on the basis of his former record.

The Democratic organization in Cincinnati and Hamilton county has been doing an excellent job on behalf of Wagner and other Democratic candidates, with valuable help from the local CIO-PAC committee.

Democratic hopes are also high in the 14th Dist. (Akron), where John L. Smith is given a good chance to knock off incumbent Rep. Ayres (R.).

Hays Is Strong

The Democrats' chance to defeat Rep. Bow (R.) in the 16th Dist. (Canton) are rated as "fair." The district has been hit hard by unemployment.

The GOP would like to increase its margin by defeating Rep. Hays in the 18th Dist. but the liberal-minded, plain-speaking Democrat is regarded as a solid bet to win.

However, the GOP may pick up a seat in the 15th Dist., where veteran Democratic Rep. Secrest was suddenly removed from the race by a "well-timed" Presidential appointment to the FTC. The 15th is strongly Republican but the voters consistently supported Secrest.

The contestants in the 15th are Democrat Max Underwood and Republican John E. Henderson. The question here is how many voters will continue to vote contrary to the District's otherwise traditional GOP record in other races.

Housing Issue

Democrat incumbents Michael J. Kirwan (19th) and Michael A. Feighan (20th) are certain repeaters.

A big issue in several cities will be the votes of GOP congressmen against even the Administration's "token" housing program. These include Reps. Bow (Canton), Hess (Cincinnati), Schenck (Dayton), Scherer (Cincinnati) and Vorys (Columbus). Slums are rampant in all of these cities.

The Republicans appear to be more than comfortably safe in eight districts. But if farmer discontent is strong enough, there could be a lot of red faces on Nov. 3!

The Fight For Congress

'Veep' Comes Out Slugging As Drive Opens With All The Trimmings

By MILTON PLUMB

Another Campaign Exclusive

THERE WERE torchlights, bands, banners and the traditional Kentucky colonels on hand in Shelbyville, Ky., the last night in September, when Alben W. Barkley, the "Veep," began his campaign for the Senate.

It was a slambang Southern political rally with all the trimmings, and everyone knew beforehand that it was going to be a big and successful affair. But not even the most ardent Barkley supporters expected the tribute that was forthcoming.

Shelbyville is a little town of about 7000 about 30 miles from Louisville. On Barkley Night nearly three times its population swarmed into the town from all over the State. They came by bus, by rail, by auto and by foot, and distance apparently meant nothing in relation to the mode of travel.

If ever a political demonstration best expressed the love of the people of a State for an American statesman, this one at Shelbyville must get the credit. The highway into the town was blocked almost completely. Cars and buses jammed every bit of field as far as the eye could see, and at the end you were walking a couple of miles to the speakers' stand even though you drove into Shelbyville.

There Just Wasn't Room

Police said that several thousand cars of Barkley supporters had to be turned away because there just wasn't room for them.

The 20,000 people who did get into the fair grounds bandstand or the horse show ring made clear they were enthusiastically happy to be there. By the sound of their applause and cheers when the former Vice President and Mrs. Barkley came to the speakers' stand they could easily have been twice their actual number.

This was, said Gov. Wetherby, "the largest, most enthusiastic crowd I've ever seen at a Democratic campaign opening in Kentucky." He was really being modest in using the last two words. He introduced Barkley as "a rugged champion of democracy."

Just before the introduction, Sen. Clements (D. Ky.) got the biggest applause next to Barkley when he told the throng:

"You need Barkley, the State needs him, the nation needs him and the whole world needs him."

Then, the "Old Man," as Kentuckians fondly call their indestructible favorite, took the podium. There was wild demonstrating, then a complete hush as the Democratic nominee for the Senate from Kentucky began to speak.

He's In Top Shape

"The Veep" came out slugging, and there's no question—he's in top shape. Here was the same unrivaled orator and statesman who as majority leader in the Senate had been in large part responsible for enactment of the great social reforms of the New and Fair Deals. Hearing him speak, it still might have been 1933, when Barkley was 55 years old, or earlier.

Before his campaign Barkley told reporters who brought to his attention that the Republicans were building their campaign against him solely on the fact that he is now 76:

"Wait till they see the kind of campaign I put on. That will show them."

After Shelbyville—and his intensive campaigning last week—there's no doubt it will.

In fact, at Shelbyville Barkley turned the question the other way. He accused his opponent of either deliberate misrepresentation or loss of memory in claiming sole credit for getting the 90% support level on tobacco, the State's main money crop. Barkley set the record straight by referring to the Congressional Record, which shows that Sen. Cooper (R.) was a cosponsor with Barkley in offering the tobacco amendment.

"If it was deliberate, I wonder how many more examples of this sort of political misrepresentation may be expected in the present campaign," Barkley said. "If it was due to his loss of memory, I suppose I ought to forgive him on account of his age."

This brought laughter and applause from the audience. Cooper, whom Barkley opposes, is 53.

After seeing Barkley in action, it's difficult to believe that Cooper, although obviously one of the most popular Republican Senators, has even a slight chance in November. Democratic leaders are predicting Barkley's re-election by a 3-to-1 margin. Kentucky CIO-PAC people are more cautious.

"Over-optimism is a danger we've got to lick," says Kentucky CIO Sec.-Treas. W. F. Billingsley. "It still requires a maximum effort to insure victory, although there's no question that Barkley has all-out support from all groups of labor and we all are confident he'll win."

Leads On Layoffs

One of the major factors in Barkley's favor is Kentucky's present unemployment rate of 12% of the labor force. This is the highest in the nation. In one six-county area, unemployment is over 57%.

There are 11 areas, covering one-fourth of the counties in the state, now designated Group IV areas of substantial unemployment. The State Dept. of Economic Security estimates that at least 105,000 are out of work.

Kentucky CIO-PAC endorsements have been given to incumbent Reps. Spence, Perkins and Watts, in the 5th, 7th and 6th Dists., respectively. Reps. Gregory, Natcher and Chelf, in the 1st, 2nd and 4th Dists., have no opposition and will be automatically re-elected in November. The last two had PAC backing in previous races.

In the 3rd Dist., comprising Louisville and Jefferson County, the CIO is backing Harrison Robertson, retired general counsel of the Brown and Williamson Tobacco Co., against Rep. Robison (R.), now seeking a second term. Robertson is given "an excellent chance." The district is normally Democratic.

BLUEGRASS CIO—At left: Kentucky CIO Pres. Al Whitehouse greets the "Veep," Mrs. Barkley and Sen. Clements (rear) at Shelbyville rally. Right: Rep. Spence and State PAC Sec.-Treas. W. F. Billingsley discuss bright Democratic prospects in November.

Demos Lead

A nation-wide survey by the New York Times last week reported that the Democrats appear to be leading in 25 of the 38 senatorial seats at stake on Nov. 2, but cautioned that too many of the races "are rated close" for any definite forecast a month before election day.

Tough Fight

Republican plans for a rough-and-tumble campaign in the final, decisive weeks were indicated in the report of House Majority Leader Halleck (R. Ind.) that the GOP has "a tough fight" ahead if it expects to retain House majority control.

TORCHLIGHT parade of 20,000 sup of Shelbyville as former Vice Pres.

LOUISVILLE CIO members fill nin Barkley rally. Others came from all

HARRISON ROBERTSON, seated, PAC leaders of Kentucky's 3rd Dis

SOUTH BEND CIO-PAC officials to discuss help in his bid to defeat CIO Auto Worker Brademas won

Stevenson Says—

'A Second Best Hand Never Wins'

REPUBLICAN economic policies add up to "favors for the few and prayers for the many," Adlai Stevenson, 1952 Democratic presidential nominee, told a party rally in Detroit.

Stevenson

The country is not in a depression but is in a rut, he said, adding that "we are having our second best year."

"Moving sidewise is not enough," he maintained, "A second best year, like a second best poker hand, is not good enough."

Stevenson cited "seven facts" which he said speak for themselves. They are:

Unemployment: "One out of every 20 people in the labor force is unemployed."

Living Costs: "The cost of living is at an all-time peak."

Wages: "The average weekly earnings of workers in industry have declined."

The Farmer: "The gap between the prices he pays and the prices he receives has steadily widened."

Over-all Economy: "Looking at the economy as a whole, per capita disposable income is down. After paying our taxes we have less income this year than last."

Corporations: "Corporation profits are down, too. In the first half of 1954, corporation profits were about 20% below what they were in the same period of 1953, or a drop of $7 to $8 billion a year."

(Even though they weren't earning as much, corporations were paying higher dividends. According to the Office of Business Economics of the Dept. of Commerce, stockholders got 4.5% more in the first seven months of 1954 than in the same period last year.)

Stevenson told the rally that the Republican-controlled 83d Congress passed no important legislation without Democratic help and in spite of "serious" GOP opposition.

The sole exception, he went on, was in the case of the giveaway programs and in revising taxes.

"On those the Republicans have stood together," he said, "consistent with their tradition of trickle down economics."

The most hopeful prediction he has heard, he said, is that the economy will "move sidewise" in the months to come. Currently, he said, it is "stagnant."

As Stevenson so rightly said: "A second best year, like a second best poker hand, is not good enough."

Even Hoosier Tories See Democratic Year

arters swarm over the little town Barkley opens campaign.

special buses for 30-mile trip to parts of the state.

s told he has CIO endorsement by at Louisville.

eet with John Brademas, center, ep. Crumpacker (R. Ind.). Former I scholarship to Harvard.

EVEN conservative political observers in conservative and traditionally-Republican Indiana today are predicting that 1954 will be a Democratic year. The only question seems to be how many seats the Democrats will gain in Congress and the State Legislature.

Another Campaign Exclusive

There's no Senate or major State post at stake, but both Republicans and Democrats alike have been working just as intensively at politics as though this were a Presidential election.

GOP efforts, which began earlier, have been concentrated in the 1st Dist. in an effort to defeat PAC-backed Rep. Madden, the lone Democratic member of the Indiana delegation to the 83rd Congress. The Republicans have dumped plenty of money into the Gary-Calumet area, but Madden, a nationally-known congressman who seeks a seventh term, faces weak opposition and doesn't appear to be in serious trouble.

Meanwhile, a revigorated Democratic organization has been working in the 10 other Indiana congressional districts and overconfident Republican congressmen now find themselves in serious trouble.

Faces A Fight

The safest Republican is Rep. Halleck, House majority leader, who seeks his eleventh term. The 2nd Dist. is largely a prosperous agricultural region strongly controlled by the Farm Bureau, but there are at least 15,000 CIO members and proportionate numbers of other labor organizations voting there, too. The latter, through CIO-PAC and similar groups, have endorsed Democratic nominee James H. Berg.

In all other districts, however, Democratic prospects are even brighter.

"We've a real good chance of picking up five seats now held by Republicans," Dallas Sells, president of the Indiana CIO Council and state PAC chairman, said. "We're as reasonably sure as you can be of anything in a political year that there will be at least six Democrats in the Indiana delegation to Congress next year."

Indiana CIO and PAC Sec.-Treas. George Colwell shares Sells' optimism about the congressional races. He also represents the Indiana CIO before the Legislature and believes that there is "a good chance" that the Democrats will win control of the House in that body.

CIO experts see "most likely" Democratic gains in the 3rd, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 10th Dists. but insist that, if enough voters turn out, the others can also be won.

Unemployment Is Issue

All agree that the 3rd and 8th Dists. now seem to be "reasonably sure" of Democratic victories. In both of these areas, high unemployment and the indifference of both the State and national GOP Administrations to the growing distress of the workers is cited as a major reason for the expected shift. The Democrats also have usually strong candidates in these districts.

In the 3rd Dist, which embraces South Bend where 20% of the work force is now idle, former CIO Auto Worker John Brademas is rated far ahead of Rep. Crumpacker (R.).

A United Labor Committee is backing former Rep. Winfield K. Denton (D.) in the 8th Dist., where unemployment is more than double the rate a year ago. Denton's voting record was "perfect" in the CIO News voting record on the 81st and 82nd Congress.

In the 5th, 6th and 7th Dists., PAC endorsements have gone, respectively to Democratic nominees John R. Walsh, a former congressman; John W. King, Putnam County farmer; and George Gettinger, of Sullivan, a farmer and farm implement dealer.

National Democratic Vice-Committeewoman Inez Scholl has PAC support in the 10th Dist., where she hopes to unseat Rep. Harvey (R.). Unemployment in both Muncie and New Castle is more than five times that of a year ago.

Shutdown

The South Bend, Ind., plant of the Singer Mfg. Co. will close by the end of the year, throwing 1000 CIO Electrical Workers out of jobs. The plant will be put up for sale and the making of sewing machine cabinets will be transferred to Trumann, Ark., and Pickens, S. C.

INDIANAPOLIS CAMPAIGN to elect Charles Boswell (D.) seated, to Congress is planned by Indiana CIO Pres. Dallas Sells, Dan Bedell, who heads PAC work for CIO Auto Workers in Indiana and Kentucky, and Indiana PAC Dir. H. J. Noel.

INDIANA'S TOP DEMOCRAT, Rep. Madden (center) gets pledges of CIO support from Indiana CIO Sec.-Treas. George Colwell and Lake County IUC Pres. John Truchan. Republicans are waging all-out effort to unseat Madden.

Madden Sees Relaxing Of Rules Curbs

LOOK for a change in the rules of the House of Representatives to restore democratic procedures in that body—if the Democrats win control of the House next month.

"I predict," Rep. Madden (D. Ind.), a ranking member of the Rules Committee, told The CIO News, "that with the next Congress being Democratic, the first business of the first day will be to reamend the rules of the House, taking away the autocratic powers of the Rules Committee."

Madden recalled that such action had been taken in the Democratic 81st Congress, but that the Dixiegop coalition which ran the 82nd Congress revoked it in 1951. The Republican 83rd Congress last year voted down a Democratic effort to restore the rules change. He said:

"Now seven members of Congress can keep 435 members from voting. That's not democracy. It autocratic government!"

The Woman's Angle—

'This Is No Time To Slow Down'

By ESTHER MURRAY
CIO-PAC Field Representative

THE FEVER of political predictions is more common than the common cold these days and you can get a forecast as to how the November elections will go from sources ranging from gypsy fortune tellers to highly paid professional pollsters.

Mrs. Murray

There do seem to be straws in the wind — the vote in Maine, the primary results in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

In the South, the primaries have brought victories to an encouraging number of liberal Democrats, and no candidate running for reelection with PAC's endorsement has lost a race to date.

Heartening as these trends are, this is no time to slacken our pace. In the congressional races, 39 contests are so close the outcome is a toss-up; in another 64 districts there is a feeling that while the incumbent has a slight advantage, the opposition has a fighting chance. Republicans control 38 of these districts, Democrats 26.

The only conclusion is that we need to redouble our efforts. We must speed up our work of getting voters registered, seeing that they have the facts on the candidates, and making plans to get them to the polls in November.

It could be the neighbor one of us gets to register, the meet-the-candidate tea in one of our homes, or the campaign literature one of us distributes that determines a winner on Nov. 2.

One group which seems to be working on this theory is the State CIO-PAC in Connecticut, where an intensive program has been built on studies and blueprints begun a year ago. Now, in the final week of registration, CIO-PAC has more than 15 offices open throughout the State to see that every worker qualifies to vote.

Nearly 200 CIO women workers and wives of workers have volunteered their services, Mitchell Sviridoff, president of the Connecticut CIO and CIO-PAC, reports. In Hartford, there is a Women's Auxiliary of the local CIO Council that is spearheading the work of the women.

For months these women have been contacting unregistered voters by telephone, house calls and in the shops.

Once registration is over, the women plan to go on working to acquaint voters with CIO-PAC stands on candidates and issues, and get out the votes. That's a job for all of us.

The Fight For Congress

In Oregon The Senate Race Is Close

By GEORGE HOLCOMB
Special Correspondent

SAID ONE Republican to another at a recent GOP picnic in Oregon:

Another Campaign Exclusive

"Who'll we get to run against Wayne Morse in 1956?"

Came the reply: "How about Guy Cordon—he'll be free then and only 65!"

Just how widespread that sentiment is in Oregon is the question which has publicity advisers of Sen. Cordon (R.) running their fingers through their hair as they notice the earnest hand-shaking and speechifying of his opponent — the 41-year-old Democrat, Richard L. Neuberger, who is a well-known author and state senator.

But Democratic leaders aren't counting any votes before they read the Nov. 2 election returns. They're running just as scared as are the Republicans.

Although Cordon has been U. S. Senator since 1944, he has been so little known in recent years that public opinion polls showed only a minority of citizens in the state even recognized his name. But in recent weeks the two biggest daily papers in Portland have put his name in favorable headlines at least once a day. On several occasions, as many as three separate stories with the Cordon name in the headline have been on the same page in the Oregon Journal.

Exposing A Record

Dick Neuberger himself also is making the name of Cordon well known. He's getting a number of headlines by exposing Cordon's voting record. Oregon AFL, CIO and railway union leaders are cooperating in joint efforts to get the Cordon record known among working people. They all agree that voting record in itself should win votes for the fully-endorsed Neuberger.

Attention is being focused on Cordon's votes over the years in favor of easing taxes on high-income families first so as to give them more "incentive" to make more; on Cordon's leadership in the coastal oil-lands give-away; and on his behind-the-scenes and sometimes open favoritism of private power and big grazing and private forest interests whose leaders are supporting him so fervently.

Before the League of Women Voters recently in Portland, Neuberger discussed Cordon's foreign policy votes. The incumbent is part of that small minority of dissidents who voted against the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) which was set up in great part through the efforts of Gen. Eisenhower under former Pres. Truman's direction. These and other isolationist votes, which incidentally were identical with the Communist party line are hurting Cordon considerably.

Cordon wasn't present to defend himself—he makes a point of staying away from anything which might resemble a debate, despite Neuberger's repeated challenges and despite invitations from numerous non-partisan groups. In 1948, the daily newspapers clamored for debates between Harold Stassen and Thomas E. Dewey, then GOP candidates for presidential nomination. Today the papers are quiet about suggesting debates in which their man Cordon might be shown up.

All this seems to be getting under Cordon's skin, particularly when the opposition supporters distribute literature exposing his voting record at meetings where he speaks.

Cordon is believed to be the man most responsible for the GOP Administration's failure to press for a multi-purpose federal dam at Hells Canyon on the Snake River. Yet recently, in Bend, Ore., Cordon surprised his listeners by saying that once he supported the high dam—which has the backing of many voters in both parties and the unequivocal support of Democrats and Independent Sen. Morse.

Cordon led the Senate fight to kill the Hill "oil for the lamps of learning" bill, yet now he claims to favor federal aid to education. He tried to excuse his votes against the Hill bill by calling it a "phony" and adding that it would "only" have meant 41c per child each year for the next 50 years.

Neuberger did some quick calculations, and said this meant "only" a loss of some $375,000 for Oregon alone.

"That may not mean much to the Republicans," Neuberger quipped, "but it impressed me as being a lot of money!"

No Thinking Allowed?

In addition to his trying to confuse the issues between himself and Neuberger, Cordon is seeking to discredit his opponent. He likes to make snide remarks like "I never found time to write a book while I was trying to serve the people." (Several of Neuberger's books on politics are being used in the nation's schools as texts.)

He called Neuberger "a 20th Century Galahad with a worn out fountain pen." (Neuberger replied that he uses a typewriter.) This apparently is adopted by Cordon from the "call-them-eggheads" approach by those of the no-head school of thought which includes so many Republican leaders.

One of the issues Neuberger stresses is whether money can or should buy an election. He points to the expenses of the last three campaigns in Oregon. The Republicans spent $1,315,734; the Democrats only $285,033.

Neuberger challenged Cordon to limit expenses in the Senate campaign this year to $50,000 for each side. Cordon disdained to reply but gave a statement to the press saying state laws already set a limit—which is a half truth. The limit is only on the candidate—not his supporters.

Congressional Races

In the congressional races, labor is backing Mrs. Edith Green, a Democrat, in the 3rd Dist. which includes Portland and surrounding Multnomah County. Her opponent, trailing in the polls, is Tom Lason McCall. A former radio newscaster with a fairly liberal background, he mouths generalities now that he's a Republican candidate for Congress. Oddly, he recently listed his application for membership in the Loyal Order of the Moose, a Jim Crow outfit in Oregon, as a political campaign expenditure!

Labor-endorsed Al Ullman, Democrat and a Baker businessman, comes from the 2nd Dist. adjoining the Snake river and he's campaigning for its development for power, flood control and irrigation. His opponent, Sam Coon, first termer in the House, is being very quiet.

George Brown, Oregon CIO Council secretary-treasurer and CIO-PAC leader, believes Neuberger, Mrs. Green and Ullman "have a good chance" of winning this fall.

He is not so optimistic about the following two races:

Donnell Mitchell, labor-backed Democrat, versus Rep. Norblad in the 1st Dist. Norblad has worked closely with local industries such as fishing, which has tended to becloud the voting issues.

Charles Porter, labor-supported, is opposing veteran GOP Rep. Ellsworth, who is even more conservative than Cordon, in the 4th Dist.

LEGISLATIVE TEAM—Richard L. Neuberger, fighting Democrat for Senator from Oregon, leaves the State Capitol at Salem with his wife Maurine. Gadflies of the Legislature, he's now a State Senate member while she's in the House. At right: Neuberger sits at typewriter (he's a top-rank magazine contributor, known throughout the nation) while meeting with labor supporters. In group are Vice Pres. J. E. Dicey of the CIO Woodworkers (standing) and Portland AFL Pres. Bill Way, Neuberger, Sec.-Treas. George Brown and Pres. Jess Bell of the Oregon CIO Council, and Vice Pres. Cecil Jones of State AFL. Slogan on the blackboard is to the point: "Do your duty—register and vote."

Business Drop

GOP policies are being blamed for a 11.5% drop in Oregon state tax commission collections for the first seven months of this year compared with a like period a year ago. Corporation tax collections are down 22.5%.

These may have significance in the coming elections since falling incomes usually bode trouble for incumbents.

TWO DEMOCRATIC candidates for Congress in Oregon are Mrs. Edith Green (left), who is running in Portland, and Albert Ullman, champion of a Hells Canyon federal

Forest Service Veteran Heads Supporters Of Neuberger

THE FORMER chief of the U. S. Forest Service is heading a committee of more than 550 conservationists-for-Neuberger.

Lyle F. Watts, the nation's chief forester from 1942 until his retirement two years ago, is aiding the campaign of Richard L. Neuberger to unseat Sen. Cordon (R.). Watts now lives in Portland, Ore.

He said conservation is a big issue in the Oregon race, because the people oppose GOP give-aways and are interested in keeping natural resources for the next generation.

Instead of match books and the usual political gimmicks, Watts' committee are giving away little packets of grass seed to encourage scouts, campers, hunters and fishermen to re-seed the upland meadows. This, Watts explained, "carries out the theme of always working for conservation."

LYLE F. WATTS

NEW TRANSPORT SETUP—Affiliation of CIO Railroad Workers as a division of the Transport Workers at Washington meeting. At left: TWU Pres. Michael J. Quill receives divisional charter from CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe (next to right). Also in group are URRWA Chairman Richard Leonard and Sec.-Treas. Eugene V. Attreed (at right). Center photo: TWU Sec.-Treas. Gustav Faber (next to right) chats with URRWA board members Lloyd Johnson, George Gibboney, and Paul Wagner. At right, Quill and Leonard shake hands with John Green.

Labor's World—

CIO Delegates Join In ILO Industry Meetings

DELEGATIONS from three CIO unions are to be in Geneva this month for meetings of industry committees of the Intl. Labor Organization.

Due for a session of the ILO Iron and Steel Committee, opening today and continuing until Oct. 23 were Pres. John Grogan of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers as worker representative, and Sec.-Treas. I. W. Abel and Intl. Rep. Elmer Cope of the CIO Steelworkers as advisers.

At a meeting of the Metal Trades Committee scheduled for Oct. 25-Nov. 6, Victor G. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers will be worker representative, with UAW Dist. Dir. Edward Cote as adviser.

In Washington, Pres. Walter P. Reuther and other CIO officials last week entertained ILO Gen. Sec. David A. Morse at a luncheon and discussed ILO problems with him.

IN A REPORT prepared for the Iron and Steel Committee meeting, the ILO office said a study indicates that industrial psychology cannot achieve the "hopes" placed in it until the questions that interest workers the most—wages, hours, paid holidays, job security, promotion, etc. — are considered.

The study also showed it would be "an illusion" to imagine that industrial psychology will ever undermine unions.

Main questions to be discussed at the Metal Trades Committee meeting are practical methods for attaining fruitful labor-management collaboration at the plant level, and for achieving regular, high-level production and employment in the industry.

Greece

An "intense effort to break the trade union movement of Greece" has been reported by Sec.-Gen. Fotis Makris of the Greek General Confederation of Labor.

Minister of Labor Gonia, as extreme rightist, has moved to abolish the dues checkoff and substitute a check-off for a government-run "labor welfare fund."

CIO has protested the drive against anti-Communist Greek unions. "Such treatment of the Greek labor movement," warned CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, "only undermines the roots of democracy and lays the ground work for a rebirth of Communist strength in that country."

A 100 Years Of Hope Turns To Bitter Tears

BACK in the days before the Civil War, the quiet community of Dresden, in Western Ontario, was a city of hope for fugitive slaves from the South—the terminus of the underground railroad to freedom across the border of Canada.

Today it stands accused as the first town in the province to produce a charge of violating the Ontario Fair Accommodations Practices Act, which became effective last June and which prohibits discrimination because of race, creed or color in public services.

Judge William Schwenger has concluded the first hearings under the act and last week was preparing a report upon which Provincial Minister of Labor Charles Daley will decide whether or not he will prosecute two of Dresden's four restaurant proprietors who openly admitted refusing to serve Negroes.

"I have to break the law to protect my business—I have a right to," testified Morley McKay, who has operated a restaurant for 31 years. "My customers have told me that if we serve Negroes, they won't come in."

Matthew Emmerson, proprietor of the second restaurant, also stated flatly that he refused to serve Negroes.

CIO Rail Union Links With TWU

AFFILIATION of the CIO United Railroad Workers as a division of the Transport Workers Union was brought to completion in Washington last week after several months of discussion.

The unanimous vote for amalgamation by the URRWA executive board and presentation of a division charter by TWU Pres. Michael Quill at ceremonies in the Burlington Hotel climaxed an earlier referendum vote by Railroad Workers membership which overwhelmingly favored the affiliation.

"Nothing but good can come from this affiliation," Quill told the meeting. He pledged the full resources of TWU towards "expanding the frontiers defined by the railroad division's jurisdiction."

Chairman Richard T. Leonard of the railroad organization reported that 46 of the 67 URRWA locals voted for affiliation.

THE VOTE was scheduled in May after delegates to the third annual national conference of URRWA adopted a resolution authorizing its officers and executive board "to seek ways and means of achieving one transportation union, chartered by CIO, which shall represent all transportation workers."

Leonard described the result of negotiations between the organizations as "a fine agreement which does not permit the Railroad Workers to lose their identity." He said the membership vote was more than 3-to-1 for affiliation with TWU.

CIO EXECUTIVE Vice Pres. John V. Riffe urged the members of the railroad group to extend the same loyalty to TWU they had given to their former leaders. Turning to Quill, Riffe declared, "I believe, Mike, they are going to be a tremendous asset to you."

Riffe said that the approximately 40,000 railroad workers would bring the TWU membership strength to the 150,000 mark.

He expressed his "confidence, admiration and respect" for Quill and TWU Sec.-Treas. Gustav Faber.

URRWA Sec-Treas. Eugene V. Attreed read the resolution adopted by the executive board in which the amalgamation details are spelled out. It provides that charters will be issued by TWU to the present locals of URRWA.

A SEPARATE United Railroad Workers Div. will be set up within TWU, similar to the Air Transport Div. which has been in existence for several years. It will have its own director who will be a vice president of TWU and a member of the union's Executive Board and Executive Council.

In a straight-from-the-shoulder talk Quill told of the difficulties encountered in completing the amalgamation. He said he was aware of the objections stressed earlier by both sides to the affiliation and said it was a tribute to the understanding and union spirit of all that the affiliation was effected.

He pledged the independence of the railroad division and said it would have the assistance of Intl. Rep. Andrew Kaelin as liaison officer. Other speakers included Faber, Pres. Matthew Guinan of Local 100 in New York, and R. J. Thomas, assistant to Riffe, All stressed Leonard's important role in the amalgamation meetings.

Leonard, Attreed and URRWA Vice Chairman Thomas A. Bloom were named to a committee to issue TWU charters along with Kaelin and Dir. James Horst, of TWU's air division.

Elephants? Yes! Politics Too? Not In This Report

THIS IS A STORY about elephants, but there's not a line of politics in it—even if it is less than a month until election day.

In Birmingham, Ala., the local CIO Council is going to present a $4000 elephant to the new municipal zoo.

Pachyderms do not come cheap, the Council officials learned in a meeting with Mayor James Morgan, but that's only part of the story. CIO Steelworkers at the Bessemer Steel plant have pledged a tiger cage —to the tune of $3000.

AFL construction workers have promised to donate their labor for building the zoo. Community leaders have praised organized labor for cooperating in putting over the civic project.

CIO AID ZOO—Birmingham CIO leaders meet with Mayor James Morgan, standing, to discuss plans to aid city's zoo. From left, seated, are Pres. J. W. McLellan, Steelworkers Local 2833; Vice Pres. J. M. Duggan, Steelworkers Local 1489; Donald Stafford, Birmingham CIO; Warren Trucks, USA-CIO Local 1015; Margaret Robbins, Retail, Wholesale; Fox Henderson, Communications Workers Local 3902, and Pres. R. E. Goodwin, Birmingham CIO Council, which will give the zoo an elephant.

CIO on ABC
Monday thru Friday
John W. Vandercook
AND THE NEWS

CCL Presses Unity, Action On Job Crisis

By GERVASE N. LOVE

AN HISTORIC first step toward labor unity in Canada was taken at the 14th annual convention of the Canadian Congress of Labor in Toronto when a no-raiding agreement with the Canadian Trades & Labor Congress was overwhelmingly approved.

The action parallels similar labor peace moves in the U. S., for locals of CIO unions in Canada are affiliated with the CCL, while AFL locals are associated with the TLC.

It was the highlight of a week in which grave unemployment and the pressing need of political action to correct the federal goverment's failure—as in the U. S.—to act entered into virtually every discussion and debate.

Sec.-Treas. Donald MacDonald warned that "unless something unforeseen providentially develops," unemployment may rise to one million.

A second highlight was approval of a statement on economic policy calling for full employment at a progressively higher standard of living which laid down a 12-point program (see adjoining columns) for creating jobs by increasing buying power.

Effort For Unity

The no-raiding agreement won the approval of all but a handful of the 875 delegates. Action followed a lengthy discussion in which several complaints of "sweetheart" agreements by some AFL unions with managements were vigorously aired.

William Mahoney, assistant Canadian director of the CIO Steelworkers, urged the delegates to see the agreement in its proper context, as "part and parcel of efforts to work out unity for the major labor organizations in Canada," and not to let "sweetheart" contracts "becloud" the main issue.

However, Murray Cotterill, USA-CIO delegate from Winnipeg, Man., warning that a no-raiding agreement "may be delaying unity for many years," declared unity is impossible "in a jurisdictional straightjacket."

Mahoney and Pres. Romuald J. Lamoreaux, of the Quebec Federation of Industrial Unions, both urged that the Canadian & Catholic Confederation of Labor, with about 100,000 members mainly in Quebec and Ontario, also be brought into the agreement.

The TLC had approved the no-raid pact at its convention two weeks earlier. As it now stands, it is binding only on directly-chartered locals of the two bodies. As in the CIO-AFL No-Raiding agreement, it will be binding on national and international unions when they sign it, with disputes subject to arbitration.

A resolution reaffirming CCL support of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, often denounced as socialist, was overwhelmingly approved despite opposition from a handful of Communists who aired their views on any and all subjects throughout the convention.

The resolution urged the establishment of political action committees by councils and locals where they do not already exist, and registration of all union members as CCF adherents.

In a series of foreign policy resolutions, the convention followed the course taken by the annual British Trades Union Congress a month earlier and approved the rearming of Germany under adequate safeguards.

It likewise beat back an attempt of the left wingers to send delegates to the coming Prague conference of the Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions.

ICFTU Is Backed

The delegates again endorsed the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions and renewed a request that all locals contribute 1c per member per month to the ICFTU Regional Activities Fund. The CCL has given more on a per capita basis to the fund, intended to help unionism in underdeveloped countries, than any labor body in the world.

In a long series of additional resolutions, the convention again demanded government action on unemployment, especially in the hard-hit textile and coal mining industries; condemned the "inadequacy" of immigration policy; urged all-Canadian construction of the St. Lawrence Seaway; called for greater Canadian investment in the Colombo Plan, and condemned compulsory arbitration and goverment housing policies.

A. R. Mosher, 73-year-old president, was reelected to his 14th term, and MacDonald to his third term as secretary-treasurer. All vice presidents also were renamed.

BANQUET SPEECH of ICFTU Pres. Omer Becu (seated, left) won hearty congratulations of Pres. Harry Chappell, of Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes, at CCL convention. Right: some of the 600 delegates who spent a noon recess picketing Massey-Harris-Ferguson Co. in Toronto, where UAW-CIO Local 439 is striking.

Growing

The Canadian Congress of Labor reached the 400,000 mark in membership just in time for the Toronto convention.

The last gap was closed when the Executive Council, at a meeting immediately prior to the parley, voted to admit the unaffiliated Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, an industrial union of federal government employes with about 8500 members.

Higher Purchasing Power Urged To Block Recession

A STATEMENT on economic policy adopted by the CCL convention proposed to increase the purchasing power of the great mass of Canadians by:

1. Pressing for higher wages . . . Where depressed industries can show that increased wages cannot be met, they must at least be held at present levels.

2. By reducing working hours and maintaining take-home pay.

3. By increasing unemployment insurance benefits, establishing higher benefit categories, eliminating non-compensable delays and otherwise liberalize the act.

4. By providing, out of consolidated (general) revenue, extended benefits for those who have exhausted their benefits under the act . . . and by establishing a nationwide public assistance plan.

5. By increasing old age security benefits and family allowances, and providing cash benefits to maintain income during illness.

6. By raising personal income tax exemptions, imposing a capital gains tax, repealing tax exemptions for dividend income, and reducing the sales tax with a view to abolishing it.

7. By a public investment program, federal, provincial and municipal, housing, schools, hospitals, roads, etc.

8. By increased efforts to promote exports . . . and the lowering of barriers to international trade generally.

9. By a planned immigration policy based on the country's capacity to absorb immigrants in an expanding economy.

10. By adequate measures to maintain and increase farm purchasing power.

11. By a substantial increase in Canada's contributions to the Colombo plan and UN Technical Assistance, and by pressing for an international development fund under UN.

12. By special measures to help depressed industries to get on their feet, and to help depressed areas either by bringing industry to such areas or by helping workers move to places where work is available.

GREETINGS are extended by CCL Pres. A. R. Mosher (right) to Minister of Labor Milton F. Gregg (center) at CCL convention as Sec.-Treas. Donald MacDonald looks quizzically at a few booing delegates.

'You Can't Co-exist With Commies'

CO-EXISTENCE with communism is impossible despite claims to the contrary, Omer Becu, president of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions, told the Canadian Congress of Labor convention.

"The claim can mean everything or nothing," he said. "If it means there is no reason why a country in which the chief means of production are in the hands of the state cannot live side by side with one in which capitalism prevails, it is so obvious that it does not need stating.

"But if the suggestion is that capitalist or Socialist countries that do not accept the Communist ideology can live in peace and security in the same world as predatory imperialist Communist countries, then the claim is a contradiction in terms."

Canadian Minister of Labor Milton F. Gregg, despite widespread unemployment, told the delegates that "the long-run outlook for the development of our country's resources has seldom been brighter."

GREGG, making his fifth appearance before a CCL convention, was greeted by boos and cries from a minority reflecting the delegates' dissatisfaction with government inaction on unemployment.

Premier T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan, head of the country's only Cooperative Commonwealth Federation provincial government, warned that farm income, already far below its post-war high, is due for an additional drop this year because of excessive rain and crop diseases.

This means further critical economic times, he maintained, with still deeper unemployment in industries which depend to a great extent on sales to farmers—particularly farm implements, autos and textiles.

U. S. Assistant Sec. of Labor J. Ernest Wilkins, a Negro, said that efforts to bypass the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in the schools "are doomed to failure."

Pres. A. F. Hartung of the CIO Woodworkers explained that the Taft-Hartley Act amendments which Pres. Eisenhower said were blocked by Democrats were killed because they would have made the law even worse. Pres. Burl Phares of the CIO Glass Workers, the CCL's newest international union affiliate, pledged to make the union as strong in the Canadian industry as it is in the U. S.

ALL AROUND THE COUNTRY, CIO city and state council booths are drawing the crowds at the fairs—and helping to get over labor's story of unionism and political action. At left: the Indiana CIO Council booth at the state fair offered prizes to help boost registration. Some 15,000 PAC literature packets were distributed. Center: The Oklahoma CIO Council's first fair booth drew 22,000 visitors. At right: Sec.-Treas. Charles A. Della of the Maryland CIO Council shows CIO booth, visited by some 35,000 people at three state and regional fairs.

CIO Councils In Action

SURPLUS FEDERAL FOOD is being distributed to unemployed workers in Macomb County, Mich., thanks to the efforts of the Wayne County CIO Council and the CIO Auto Workers.

Macomb County adjoins Wayne County and recession-hit Detroit. Many jobless UAW-CIO members live in Macomb County and commute to the auto capital — when they are working. The opening of the program is expected to spur the setting up of similar programs in other hard-hit Michigan counties.

TV Tells Issues

Election issues are being presented in a 15-minute television program every Monday night until election day over WSJV-TV, Elkhart, Ind., by the Elkhart County Citizenship Council of the CIO Auto Workers in cooperation with the Indiana CIO Council.

- The Buffalo CIO Council also is plugging for surplus food distribution. Council delegates adopted a resolution urging the Council for Social Agencies of Buffalo and Erie County to investigate the program and call a community-wide conference.
- The California CIO Council has supported through a "friend of the court" brief the suit brought by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People against some Sacramento builders and real estate dealers. NAACP charged that a "monopoly" of these firms has refused to "sell a single housing unit to a Negro" despite the fact that practically all the recent housing in Sacramento County has been erected with funds insured by the federal government.
- Sec.-Treas. Albert T. Lunceford of the Greater Los Angeles CIO Council has urged that regional and district directors of international unions and officials of local unions appear before the Council to give their views of the Council's good citizenship program. UAW-CIO Reg. 6 Dir. C. V. O'Hallaran recently spoke on the subject, which is aimed at making union members more aware of their responsibilities as voters.
- The New Jersey CIO Council has joined the ranks of state councils that are sponsoring booths at fairs aimed at showing the need for the greater cooperation between farmers and workers. The Council—for the first time in its history—maintained a booth at the Trenton State Fair.
- The Indiana CIO Council distributed some 18,000 shopping bags at the Indianapolis State Fair. They contained PAC literature showing the interdependence of workers and farmers and a resume of the Council's legislative program.
- Pres. August Scholle of the Michigan CIO Council and Roy Reuther, political action coordinator for the CIO Auto Workers, called for all-out registration and get-out-the-vote drives at a State PAC meeting at FDR-CIO Labor Center near Port Huron.
- Sec.-Treas. Edris Owens of the Iowa CIO Council told a committee of U. S. Army Engineers at a hearing in Des Moines that the Council supports the Saylorville dam project for the Des Moines River. He also said "we in the CIO would rather have seen a multiple purpose dam than a mere flood control dam."
- The Alabama CIO Council reported: "There is a spreading unhappiness and concern among farmers as they add up their cash income at the end of each month and notice that it is getting smaller and smaller."
- The Virginia CIO Council will present a memorial award to the rank-and-file member who made the most outstanding contribution to the CIO movement in the State during the last year. The presentation will be made at the council convention at Norfolk Oct. 14-16.
- More than 10,000 patients received vision tests during the past two years at the Union Eye Center at Chicago, which is endorsed by the Cook County CIO Council and which was organized in 1951 by a dozen CIO and AFL unions.

'Ike's Dynamic Program Fizzles,' CIO Economic Report Warns

"THE PRESIDENT'S self-styled dynamic economic program has proved to be a complete fizzle," the CIO Economic Policy Committee charged last week in a statement approved by the Executive Board.

The nation's economy, CIO said, will be "a major issue" in the November congressional elections, saying "the American people must sit in judgment and determine whether or not there shall be a return to the economic progress" of previous years.

Even business sources now admit, the CIO committee reported, that the so-called incentive tax program passed by the Republican Congress is having no real effect on business investment.

The only tangible result of the GOP tax program has been a record profit harvest for hundreds of large corporations, despite reductions in their sales and production.

The committee headed by CIO Vice Pres. Emil Rieve, who also is president of the Textile Workers, declared the "chronicle of Administration statements on our economy during this past year is not a happy one." The policy statement recalled:

"IN OCTOBER 1953 a top Cabinet official said, 'My judgment is that we are going to have a better year than last.'

"By January of 1954 even Administration leaders had to take note of the downturn and the increase in unemployment, but it was described as only a 'minor readjustment' which was 'likely soon to come to a close.' Indeed, this was just a 'corrective process.'

"No, I definitely would NOT care to give a buck to PAC."

"At a press conference in February the President indicated that if the unemployment and employment outlook did not improve by March he would take action. But March came and went as quietly on the economic front as the other recession months.

"By spring of 1954 Sec. of the Treasury Humphrey could say that four million unemployed is nothing to be greatly worried about. In May Dr. Gabriel Hauge, economic adviser to the President, declared that the 'downward drift' of the economy 'has been arrested' and we could 'look ahead to going forward again.'

"In June Dr. Arthur Burns expressed a conviction that the upturn would be coming shortly. He particularly emphasized his own opinion that business spending on new plant and equipment would be increasing despite official forecasts that a decline was expected in these outlays.

"Subsequent government reports have indicated that, far from improving, the anticipated decline had actually understated the drop in business-investment outlays.

"In August the President sought to minimize the current economic decline by comparing it with conditions in 1952. Again came promises that prosperity and economic recovery were just around the corner."

THE POLICY statement warned "these head-in-the-sand-tactics" have long since been shattered on the hard stones of economic fact. Total production, it noted, in the first half of this year was at a rate of nearly $10 billion below the level of 1953. Production is now running at a rate approximately $25 billion under a full-employment level.

Unemployment today is two and a half times as high as it was a year ago. Five per cent of the labor force is out of work as compared to less than 2% in 1953.

Mine Union Editor Dies

CECIL OWEN, editor of the United Mine Workers Journal, died in Washington last week at the age of 51.

Owen, a veteran Washington newsman, was public relations director of Labor's Non-Partisan League in the late '30's, when it was an arm of the CIO. He was well known to many CIO officials.

He had been in ill health for some time. He is survived by his widow, two children and several grandchildren.

Heavy Layoffs Hit Alco Shop

Heavy layoffs and production shutdowns hit the American Locomotive Co. plant at Schenectady, N. Y., last week.

Pres. Anthony Barbieri of CIO Steelworkers Local 2054 predicted the plant would be shut down almost completely by Jan. 1. Management denied this, but announced layoffs in a two-week period totalling 230 workers.

Wage, Salary Payments Fell By $4 Billion

A DROP of nearly $4 billion in salaries and wages in the first eight months of 1954 compared with the same period a year ago has been admitted by the professionally-cheery Commerce Dept.

The annual rate of salaries and wages slumped from approximately $198 billion to about $194 billion. Personal income during August was slightly less than in July but was a full billion dollars less than in the same month last year.

Farm incomes have also dropped and total farm income for the first eight months of 1954 sank by $200 million from the $16 billion in the same period a year ago.

Total personal income was at the rate of $285 billion a year for the first eight months, about the same as a year ago.

'They Can Do The Job—' CIO Joins In Drive To Aid Handicapped

"THEY CAN do the job—" That was the theme of a dinner at which CIO joined with other labor groups, management, civic organizations and government in "kicking off" the 10th annual National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week.

R. J. Thomas, assistant to CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe, pledged continued support to the National Federation of the Physically Handicapped at a Washington dinner. NFPH is the original sponsor of the week, which Congress at its request designated as the first week of October.

The AFPH national council at a two-day meeting was sharply critical of the Eisenhower Administration because federal agencies have failed to issue regulations to put into effect the expanded program to aid the disabled which Congress voted.

The council said a Budget Bureau order ignored Congress' intent. The directive, AFPH said, was contained in a letter to federal agencies instructing them virtually to "freeze" appropriations for specific phases of the rehabilitation program. Thomas Burke, CIO congressional liaison representative and new member of the council, participated in the sessions.

THOMAS SAID CIO cannot realize its full employment objective "if there is discrimination against the handicapped." He called on the Administration to shoulder its responsibility to help them.

He recalled that during World II industry eagerly employed women, Negroes and the handicapped, and declared that if these groups "are important in wartime, they are important in peacetime."

"If we don't take care of them, we are falling down as a great democracy," he said.

AFPH Pres. Paul A. Strachen said that "despite all the ballyhoo today, from many quarters, to 'employ the handicapped,' we are still discriminated against, socially and economically, and are the first to be fired, and the last to be hired."

He called for "an over-all, adequate program of rehabilitation and employment for our approximately 40 million handicapped, of whom about seven to nine million are from 60% to 100% disabled."

STRACHEN HAILED a number of CIO leaders for aiding him during his 15 years of effort in Washington on behalf of the disabled. They included:

The late Philip Murray; Pres. Walter P. Reuther; Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey; Vice Pres. Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, O. A. Knight, Emil Rieve and Michael J. Quill; Pres. David J. McDonald, Steelworkers; Jacob S. Potofsky, Clothing Workers; Burl Phares, Glass Workers; Karl Feller, Brewery Workers; Elwood D. Swisher, Chemical Workers; A. F. Hartung, Woodworkers; Ralph Helstein, Packinghouse Workers; Ernst Hebert, Barbers and Beauty Culturists; and Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey, Auto Workers; James J. Mitchell, Shoe Workers; and Barney Hopkins, Michigan CIO Council.

TENTH YEAR of Employ the Physically Handicapped Week is marked by (from left) Thomas Meloy, Alexandria, Va., industrialist; Sec.-Treas. Mildred Scott and Vice Pres. Leo J. Buettner of American Federation of Physically Handicapped, and R. J. Thomas, assistant to CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe.

'An Example Of Conservation—'

"In beginning a real program for the handicapped, you are simply taking out insurance," according to Pres. Paul A. Strachen of the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped.

"You are thereby guaranteeing that this nation will always have a vast reservoir of manpower, trained and competent to do a job.

"You are conserving public resources, by making a capital investment in the individual—treating and training him so he can make his own way, and you are thus lessening taxes on the one hand, and bolstering our national income, through increased production and consumption, on the other."

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

BEFORE THE END of this year, moderate-income families need more than ever to get tax wise. For a study of the new regulations shows them to be noticeably weighted in favor of higher-income people. There is little relief for moderate-income taxpayers, especially for wage-earners, who have taxes deducted from wages and often tend to send in the short-form return and take a blanket 10% allowance for deductions.

How To Get Tax Wise

In fact, for the first time, the tax law permits people who get income from dividends to pay a lower rate than wage-earners and farmers. And the much-touted increase in medical-expense deductions will save individual taxpayers only one-fifth of the amount the accelerated amortization rates will save businessmen.

The inevitable result is that wage-earners will now carry a larger share of the tax load. As it is, you probably pay more in federal income tax than you spend for clothing for your family. A typical wage-earner, who earned the average industrial wage of $71-$72 a week, will pay about $310 in income tax this year for a family of three—the biggest item in his budget next to food and rent.

THE ONLY WAY to protect your own family in this situation is to know how to take all advantages of the tax laws to pare your tax to the minimum. Under the new rules you don't have to file your final return until Apr. 15. But before the end of '54 you ought to take these steps:

Estimate if your tax-deductible expenses this year will be in the neighborhood of 10% of your income, taking into consideration the several new possibilities this year, like the increased medical deduction and other possible tax-savers explained below. If so, by prepaying certain expenses by the end of the year you may be able to itemize deductions this year and reduce your tax bill.

If your potential deductions won't conceivably total 10%, then it may be wiser to plan to take the blanket allowance and postpone payment of certain deductible expenses until after the end of the year, so you may be able to itemize deductions in 1955.

For example, whether you pay medical bills, mortgage interest and taxes on your house and interest on debts by the end of December or after Jan. 1 will determine whether you can take these allowable deductions on your 1954 or '55 tax return.

Here are potential deductions for moderate-income taxpayers brought up to date under the new tax law:

MEDICAL EXPENSES: You can now deduct all medical expenses in excess of 3% of your income, instead of 5% as before. Thus, a family with $3700 of income can deduct all costs over $111 for the year. Medical expenses are a broad group lending themselves to prepayment or postponement.

Among possible deductions are fees paid doctors, dentists, chiropodists, optometrists, other practitioners, hospitals and clinics; all costs of transportation to get medical care including your own car expense; costs of Blue Cross and other health insurance even if deducted from your pay; all medicines, including patent medicines, cough and cold preparations like aspirin and cough syrup; vitamin preparations, tonics and preparations for gum conditions advised by a doctor or dentist; nurses' fees and costs of board including for a practical nurse.

PERSONAL EXEMPTIONS: Despite many appeals for increased exemptions, the personal exemptions for the taxpayer and his family remain at $600 each. There are two changes of possible interest. Where several people support a close relative (not including cousins) but none contributes more than half the support, they can now agree to let any one take the $600 (not counting tax-exempt income like social security and insurance).

Of possible help to some moderate-income families, another change permits parents to take the $600 exemption for each dependent child even if he earns $600 as long as he is under 19 or going to school.

CHILD-CARE EXPENSES: Working mothers or single parents like widowers may get a small break from the new rule permitting additional deductions of up to $600 for expenses for the care of children up to age 12 to permit the taxpayer to go out to work. If you pay someone to take care of the children while you are at work you can deduct this expense.

WORK CLOTHES OR TOOLS: These are tax deductible, too, if the work clothes are distinctive and generally not wearable away from work. Small tools can be deducted outright in the year of purchase, but costlier ones must be amortized over their estimated useful life (deducting part each year). Also deductible are technical books and journals you have to buy to earn your living. You can also deduct for repair and upkeep expenses for deductible clothing and tools.

Texan Gets Top Position In National CIO Auxiliaries

A TEXAN, Mrs. Minnie Zoller of Beaumont, has been named secretary-treasurer of the National CIO Auxiliaries.

She succeeded Mrs. Bertha Perrin of Warren, O., who died recently. Mrs. Zoller was elected by vote of the Auxiliaries executive board, according to Lillian Sherwood, president and organization director of the Auxiliaries.

Mrs. Zoller represented the Auxiliaries of the CIO Oil Workers on the executive board for the past four years and is first vice president of the OWIU-CIO auxiliaries. She is president of OWIU Local 243A in Beaumont and secretary of organizers for the OWIU Dist. 4 auxiliary.

Mrs. Zoller has also played an active role in CIO-PAC work in Texas, most recently in the Shivers-Yarborough campaign for governor in that state when she was in charge of Yarborough's headquarters in Beaumont.

MRS. MINNIE ZOLLER

Name CIOers To Board In New Haven

CONNECTICUT CIO leaders have been named to three New Haven boards. Pres. Mitchell Sviridoff of the Connecticut CIO Council was appointed to the board of education and the Citizens Action Commission.

Sviridoff, who also is assistant regional director of the CIO Auto Workers, is the first CIO official to be named to the board.

CIO Rep. Frank Avallone was appointed to the city's charter commission, which is designed to give New Haven the basis for a better government.

The appointments were made by Mayor Richard C. Lee, a Democrat elected last November with labor support.

The action commission was established by Lee to win public support for a comprehensive city planning program.

Food Prices Going Higher

HOUSEWIVES can expect to see their family food budget stretched tighter—and their dollars cover even less ground—at the grocery in the next few weeks.

The Agriculture Dept. predicted that supplies of fresh vegetables this fall will be "somewhat lighter" than normal and prices will be "somewhat higher."

For potatoes, onions and sweet potatoes, the predicted price increases range from "well above" last year to "much higher."

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

THE WRITER has had the opportunity recently to meet and talk with a number of labor leaders, high government officials and business representatives from 30 other nations, and I find that all of them are deeply interested in finding an answer to the division that has developed between men everywhere.

Most of us are asking the big question, "How do we find unity within our nation and between nations and what does the future hold for us?" How do we work together to solve the problems of unemployment and insecurity and so many other things that face us each day?

We live in fear of another great war and what the future holds for us and our children. People everywhere, from all free nations, are seeking an answer of how we find and keep hands full of work and stomachs full of food, and decent houses to live in and means to educate our children to cope with the world we are building.

All men have a deep desire to work together to construct a world where all these things can be solved. Most of us live in fear of the international situation, of a cold war erupting into a "hot" war. I believe if all of us in the labor movement work and try hard enough, nearly all, if not all, of these problems can be solved.

We of CIO are dedicated to work with all men who have a deep faith in the future and who are committed to work with us on the basis of wiping out prejudice and discrimination against minority groups in industry and government everywhere.

Of course, uppermost in my mind is the job of organizing the unorganized workers in industry everywhere, and I am hoping that between now and the National CIO convention in Los Angeles, we can map out with the international unions great organizing campaigns in chemicals, wood, paper and other basic industries in an effort to make and build our unions stronger in all industries.

THERE IS EVIDENCE of a concerted effort on the part of many industries to uproot their present plant locations and move South. Many industries have and are presently making the move at a rapid pace. We of the CIO must be ready and able to organize the new plants that are opening in the South and Southwest. In talking with our regional directors in these regions, they inform me that hundreds of new plants have been constructed in the past few months.

I feel that we should give real deep consideration to concentrating our organizing efforts in these plants. In these areas there is a great potential market opening up, one that will continue to grow if the workers and their needs are recognized and respected. The employers have a great responsibility not only to their employes but to the communities where they have their plants.

The CIO Organizing Committee operated for a number of years in the South and did a good job of organizing the unorganized workers, as well as developing friendship among the people in the South. We had just reached a point, I believe, where we had begun to make real progress in organizing the Southern workers when we changed our plans by assigning CIO representatives to international unions. This we thought was the best plan at the time.

I believe we should take another look at our organizing progress, and I would like to see between now and convention time, the kind of organizing program that will bring thousands of workers under the banner of CIO.

IN THE PAST YEAR, thanks to many international union officers, we have been able to bring into our local and state CIO councils approximately a half million new participating members from local unions all over the country.

I also want to take this occasion to thank all our local and state council officers for their untiring efforts to bring this about. A strong council can be very effective in many ways in its community. It can be particularly effective in the forthcoming political campaigns now in progress throughout the country. Let's make our communities better places to live in by being participating members of our local or state CIO Council.

Guild Wins 181-Day Wilkes-Barre Strike

THE 181-DAY walkout of the CIO Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) Newspaper Guild against the Times Leader Evening News and the Record ended last week with a long series of gains for the 120 strikers.

With publication of the two dailies suspended because of the strike, members of the ANG-CIO and the printing crafts unions had filled the gap by publication of the Valley News. On resumption of operations by the publisher, the Valley News was discontinued.

The settlement meant wage increases from $2 to $3.50 a week retroactive to last March, with further boosts of $2 to $4 due next Apr. 17.

It involved almost a complete revision of the contract that opened up for negotiation last spring, and was based on peace proposals the Guild made in May.

A MAJOR improvement was clarification of admittedly ambiguous language which originally had prompted the union to reject an arbitration clause demanded by management. With the language altered, the Guild accepted a standard arbitration clause.

Another change granted a fourth week of vacation after 28 years' service, with 21 members of the combined staffs immediately affected. The work week was cut from 38¾ to 37½ hours, with Easter Sunday classed as a five-hour day for calculation of holiday pay. The maximum on severance pay was increased from 36 to 38 weeks.

Management furnished the Guild with a covering letter which guarantees all workers on the current payroll two years employment regardless of economic conditions.

The negotiations which led to the settlement started Sept. 30 and continued for four days—and most of the nights. The strike began Apr. 8.

The local is the home local of ANG-CIO Pres. Joseph F. Collis, who is assistant managing editor of the Record.

THE NAME'S THE SAME—At the CIO Electrical Workers convention in Miami Beach, Sec. of Labor Mitchell chats at CIO News booth with Mrs. Julia Mitchell, Local 301 delegate from Schenectady, N. Y.

UTSE Is Victor On B&M

DINING car employes of the Boston & Maine Railroad overwhelmingly retained the CIO Transport Service Employes in an election conducted by the National Mediation Board.

UTSE Pres. Willard Townsend said the election was the latest in a series of disputes involving his union and the AFL joint council of dining car employes. The AFL Hotel & Restaurant Employes is not a signatory to the CIO-AFL no-raiding agreement.

Here's CIO Text On Welfare Funds

(Continued from Page 3)

manner in which he demanded and secured remedial action against these abuses, involving local unions of a CIO affiliate in the New York area.

We unreservedly approve his statement that the CIO does not recognize any autonomous right of crooks and racketeers to use the good name of the CIO as a cloak for their corruption. The CIO Executive Board will unhesitatingly use its powers, under the CIO Constitution, to preserve the integrity of our movement and to keep it free from any taint of corruption.

AT THE present time, several federal and state agencies are investigating the administration of welfare funds.

The CIO unreservedly welcomes every legitimate investigation of welfare funds and their administration.

The CIO pledges complete cooperation, in the firm belief that the pitiless light of publicity should fall squarely on those who betray their trust in the handling of welfare funds—whether these betrayers be union officials, corporation officials, or insurance company officials. There is no place in the labor movement for corrupt union officials, and they should go to jail, along with every embezzler of welfare funds, regardless of position.

The CIO pledges its cooperation to all legitimate efforts on the part of law enforcement officials to make certain that proper punishment is meted out to these malefactors.

THE CIO, furthermore, will not delay action to prevent or remedy abuses until a case has been formally established in the courts. Just as we did in expelling Communist unions, we will, in accordance with our own democratic procedures, take prompt and effective action on our own initiative against financial corruption by union officials.

There is considerable discussion, as a result of recent revelations, of the need for remedial legislation. We have no illusion that a simple act of law will eliminate abuses in this area, any more than laws against murder eliminate killings.

There is, of course, no substitute for character and honesty in people in positions of trust. There is no substitute for internal union vigilance to insure that union office is held as a trust by responsible individuals.

FAIR, thoughtful and well-considered legislation, however—if inquiry demonstrates a need—can help minimize abuses in the administration of welfare funds.

The CIO pledges cooperation to all legitimate inquiries as to the need for legislation; and if legislation is demonstrated to be necessary, we likewise pledge full cooperation in formulating fair laws to help make certain that welfare funds are honestly administered. It goes without saying that the CIO will regard as inappropriate and anti-labor any attempt to curtail the area of collective bargaining in this highly beneficial field of human welfare under the guise of preventing abuses in administration.

The CIO Executive Board empowers and directs the president of the CIO to appoint a Special Standing Committee:

1. Promptly to investigate any charges or allegations of maladministration of welfare or other union funds within the CIO, and to report to the president and Executive Board of the CIO their recommendations for prompt remedial action; and

2. Promptly to formulate recommendations for standards for welfare funds; and if demonstrated to be necessary, for appropriate legislation to help make certain that welfare funds are honestly administered.

UAW Backs Drive Against Rackets

The CIO Auto Workers Executive Board, meeting last week in Detroit, endorsed the "prompt and vigorous action of CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther against racketeering in union welfare funds.

The UAW said it will continue vigilant control of pension and health and welfare funds, adding:

"We are proud of the clean record we have established and we intend to see that it is kept as spotless as it has been to date."

The Boss Talked Too Much—So UFW Wins Memphis Vote

FREE SPEECH—"Taft-Hartley style" — backfired on the management of the Memphis (Tenn.) Furniture Mfg. Co. as the CIO Furniture Workers scored an election victory at the plant.

Blatant appeals based on racial issues and bitter denunciations of unions in the classic southern style were featured in a letter to workers before the election, which the UFW-CIO won by a 334 to 313 tally.

UFW Pres. Morris Pizer commented that despite the company's use of the free speech provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act "the workers chose the union to help advance their cause."

In Columbus, O., the workers at General Furniture Corp. chose UFW 18 to 3 in an election. The firm has fought the union bitterly in other cities where it has plants and tried to stall off balloting.

A STRIKE by 2200 members of UFW Local 76 in New York City, the first general strike in 20 years in the upholstered furniture industry there, ended with a 15c wage increase and improvements in the company-paid insurance fund.

At Newark, N. J., Local 163 at the American Hair and Felt Co. and Thermwell Co. won 5c an hour increases.

Cole Decides First No-Raid Pact Dispute

THE FIRST ruling on a dispute under the AFL-CIO No-Raiding Agreement was handed down last week by Impartial Arbitrator David L. Cole.

Cole held that an attempt by the AFL Meat Cutters to wrest bargaining rights for 400 Swift & Co. employes at Moultrie, Ga., from the CIO Packinghouse Workers was a violation of the pact. Officials of the AFL union said they would comply with his ruling.

The Moultrie workers have been represented by the UPWA-CIO for the last 10 years. In the recently negotiated Swift chain agreement, the union obtained for them a 2.5c an hour wage increase in addition to the 5c gained nationally.

Shipbuilders See PAC As Answer On Jobs

By FRED ROSS

THE CIO Shipbuilding Workers convention at Asbury Park, N. J., last week rolled with the punch delivered by the Eisenhower Administration—and came back to pack a wallop of its own, political action.

Its members are employed in an industry that was the first to be walloped by the Republican-ignored recession and GOP "economy" moves.

With work in the nation's shipyards almost nil, IUMSWA-CIO saw its membership decline from close to a half million during World War II to 60,000, many of them employed part time.

The Only Good Men

Some 250 delegates at the union's 17th convention took their cue from the officers' report, which declared:

"Eisenhower and his Republican colleagues are running on their record. The Eisenhower Administration has been all good things to all good men—and the only good men are the wealthy and those who head the great corporations."

After hearing Pres. John J. Grogan and other speakers place the plight of the shipbuilding industry squarely at the door of the GOP Administration, the delegates unanimously adopted a resolution calling for increased and coordinated political activity, and immediate fulfillment of the union's PAC quota.

Sec.-Treas. Ross D. Blood reported the quota goal was in sight. However, as a demonstration of good faith, all of the delegates voluntarily contributed to PAC.

Watching November

Grogan said that Eisenhower and members of his official family took turns at predicting that prosperity would soon return. He recalled that the last of the series of forecasts was by Arthur Burns, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, who in June urged the nation to "watch November" for the economic upturn.

"We will watch November," Grogan said. "The answer will be given in the ballot box by the election of a Democratic Congress."

Gov. Robert B. Meyner, first Democratic governor in New Jersey in 10 years, also called for the election of a Democratic Congress to aid the shipbuilding industry.

"The government tells us that its expects brightening prospects in 1961," he said. "when the number of ships due for replacement under a conventional 20-year replacement policy will rise sharply."

"I don't know about the rest of you, but here in Jersey, we're apt to get mighty hungry in considerably under six years."

The Administration's foreign trade policy was attacked by Victor G. Reuther, assistant to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther. He said he feared that recent tariff increase on Swiss watches would lead to further tariff increases on foreign goods. This would decrease the interchange of merchandise with foreign countries to the detriment of the American shipping industry, he pointed out.

Reuther also said IUMSWA-CIO, by its membership in the Intl. Metalworkers Federation could help its members indirectly by seeking a raise for workers in the Japanese, German, Italian and French shipbuilding industries, which are in competition with the American industry.

Reuther, Grogan and Sec.-Treas. I. W. Abel and Elmer Cope of the CIO Steelworkers will meet shortly with foreign shipbuilding union representatives as worker delegates to committee meetings of the Intl. Labor Organization at Geneva.

Delegates also voiced the need for more political action after hearing Vice Pres. Andrew A. Pettis, who is also Washington representative of IUMSWA-CIO.

They adopted a six-point program which urged congressional action to prevent transfer of American merchant ships to foreign flags, legislation aiding construction in private U. S. yards of ships now built abroad, and improvement in the construction-differential for U. S. shipbuilders.

High on the program was a call for restoring the revolving fund of the Maritime Administration to enable the building of more ships. The convention also asked for legislation authorizing un-subsidized ship operators to deposit in the construction reserve fund earnings that would be tax-deferred and would be used for building construction of new ships. A law was requested to grant subsidy aid to tramp ship operators under certain conditions.

Pres. David J. McDonald of the CIO Steelworkers wired greetings to the convention, calling attention to a resolution of USA-CIO Executive Board which requested "financial assistance by the federal government to support an adequate merchant marine."

The convention by acclamation re-elected Grogan—who is also Mayor of Hoboken, N. J.—Pettis and Blood.

Other speakers included Pres. Joseph A. Beirne, CIO Communications workers; Pres. Paul Krebs, New Jersey CIO Council; New Jersey Labor Commissioner Carl Holderman, former State CIO president; and William Smith, field assistant to CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe and former IUMSWA-CIO Executive Board member.

SHIP'S BELL, new symbol of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers, was used for the first time to open the union's convention at Asbury Park. (See story below.) In center photo are, from left, Sec.-Treas. Ross D. Blood, Pres. John J. Grogan, New Jersey CIO Pres. Paul Krebs and Vice Pres. Andrew A. Pettis. The three top officers were re-elected. New Jersey Gov. Robert B. Meyner (wearing hat in right photo) is greeted by Chairman John Reilly of the welcome committee.

Reuther Hits GOP Inaction On Jobs

CIO efforts to help the Shipbuilding Workers gain legislation to help the recession-hit shipbuilding industry were assured by Pres. Walter P. Reuther. He wired the convention:

"The failure of the Administration in Washington to adopt policies that will relieve unemployment generally and especially your hard-hit industry is a matter of concern to millions of people throughout the nation.

"The CIO, mindful of the problems facing your workers and those in other industries, has firmly and consistently called for programs to meet these serious economic conditions that face us."

The Plight Of The Industry

Here is an item that sums up the plight of the shipbuilding industry:

The Sparrows Point, Md., shipyard of Bethlehem Steel—which led the world in ship production last year—is keel-less after the launching of a tanker last month.

The firm has signed a contract for another tanker, which the CIO Shipbuilding Workers say is the first ship to be ordered at a privately-owned yard in two years, exclusive of government work.

Toil From Sunup To Sunset-- Bell Symbolizes Union Gains

THIS IS the story of a bell—a very particular ship's bell that for the first time was used instead of a gavel at this year's convention of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers.

Acting on the recommendation of IUSMWA-CIO Sec.-Treas. Andrew A. Pettis, the union's convention at Cleveland in 1952 decided that the bronze bell would be cast from metal contributed by the locals.

Pettis had good reason for his suggestion. A New York shipbuilder of colonial days—as hungry for profits by the sweat of his workers as many of his prototypes today — worked his shipwrights from sunrise to sunset.

Determined to stop this practice, his employes erected a ship's bell on a nearby hill. They shortened their hours by starting and quitting work when one of them tolled the bell.

The employer removed the bell, and re-instituted the longer hours. Undaunted, the shipwrights erected a bigger ship's bell, whose tolling again set the hours of toil until their boss accepted their idea of a working day.

IUMSWA-CIO convention delegates were proud of their bell—a symbol of their heritage and of their rights won by their union.

GOP 'Planned Optimism' Fails Again

"THE ADMINISTRATION'S 'planned optimism' has failed to restore economic stability or provide for continued growth. It is time the Administration stopped talking and started acting."

That's what CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther said about the employment and unemployment statement issued jointly last week by the Commerce and Labor Depts.

The official handout characterized the job picture in the U. S. as "stable," with slightly more than three million American workers jobless.

"We cannot rejoice at this news," Reuther declared.

"The figures do not reflect a reversal of the continued economic stagnation of the past 15 months. Despite all the Administration's promises of upturn, unemployment is still 2.5 times greater than last year, at a season when unemployment should be at low ebb.

"The slight improvement in the over-all employment situation between August and September is seasonal and nothing more. Economic weak spots—especially in the manufacturing core of our economy—have not been shored up.

"In manufacturing industries, employment is about 1.5 million below last year's level and almost a quarter of a million less than in June, even after seasonal adjustment.

"Approximately 1.2 million workers have exhausted their unemployment compensation benefits. These workers and their families have learned that Administration slogans are no substitutes for pay envelopes."

Official figures reported employment at about 62,144,000 in early September, about at the same level as in August, while unemployment was 3,099,000.

(CIO report says GOP economic program "fizzles"; see page 13.)

Gold Resigns As Fur President

Ben Gold last week resigned as president of the Fur & Leather Workers, one of the 11 unions expelled from CIO four years ago after investigation of Communist control of those organizations.

Gold recently was convicted of perjury in filing a Taft-Hartley non-Communist affidavit. He was succeeded in the fur union post by Abe Feinglass of Chicago, former Midwest regional director.

Pre-Election Issue

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., October 18, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 42

'Dear Charlie: Go Home!'

Wilson Slanders Jobless As 'Dogs'

—See Page 3

'Unemployed Are Not Dogs'— "What's Good for GM Is Good For Us Dogs," said placards carried by these CIO unionists who picketed a Chicago hotel where Defense Sec. Charlie Wilson was guest star at a Republican fund-raising party. Out of jobs themselves or members of locals whose unemployment rate is high, the pickets and their canine escort were typical of resentment against Wilson's sneering reference to jobless as "kennel-fed dogs." Wilson ducked the pickets and their dogs. (See Page 3.)

First-Hand Reports From The States—

New York, P. 6
New Jersey, P. 7
New England, P. 8 & 9
California, P. 10
Wisconsin, P. 11
U. S. Summary, P. 2

Candidates Jittery As Campaign Hits Stretch

By EUGENE A. KELLEY

SWEEPING 'round the turn and into the home stretch, with only two weeks to go until Election Day, the political candidates racing for control of the 84th Congress still had not pulled the fans to their feet in screaming pandemonium.

The strangely ominous silence from the sidelines is, in fact, giving a bad case of jitters to contestants in America's biennial classic.

At stake Nov. 2 are 37 Senate seats. Democrats now hold 22 of these, 15 are held by Republicans. The GOP controlled the 83rd Senate by the threadiest majority: 48 Republican seats to 45 Democratic seats. There was a single Independent, and two vacancies, evenly divided.

On the House side of the Capitol, all 432 chairs are to be filled. In the 83rd Congress there were 218 Republicans, 212 Democrats, a lone Independent and four vacancies. Maine has already elected its three.

THE LATEST example of how the voters are thinking came from Alaska, where last week they decided two years of Republican territorial rule was enough and swept the Democrats back into control. E. L. Bartlett (D.), the territory's lone delegate in Congress, easily won reelection.

Historically, the party in power loses House seats at midterm elections. The GOP lost 75 in 1922, Democrats saw 71 seats go in 1938. The average is a loss of 45 seats. Even a fraction of this normal attrition will cost the Republicans their control of the House.

Check List Of Key Senate Races

With the Maine election over, 37 Senate seats remain to be filled on Nov. 2. There are 22 Democrats and 15 Republicans up for re-election. Here are 15 key Senate races to watch:

EAST

Kentucky: Alben Barkley (D.) vs. Sen. Cooper (R.).

Massachusetts: Foster Furcolo (D.) vs. Sen. Saltonstall (R.).

New Jersey: Charles Howell (D.) vs. Clifford Case (R.).

West Virginia: Sen. Neely (D.) vs. Thomas R. Sweeney (R.).

MIDWEST

Illinois: Sen. Douglas (D.) vs. Joseph Meek (R.).

Iowa: Sen. Gillette (D.) vs. Thomas Martin (R.).

Michigan: Patrick V. McNamara (D.) vs. Sen. Ferguson (R.).

Minnesota: Sen. Humphrey (D.) vs. Val Bjornson (R.).

Ohio: Sen. Burke (D.) vs. George Bender (R.).

FAR WEST

California: Samuel W. Yorty (D.) vs. Sen. Kuchel (R.).

Colorado: John Carroll (D.) vs. Lt. Gov. Gordon Allott (R.).

Idaho: Glenn Taylor (D.) vs. Sen. Dworshak (R.).

Montana: Sen. Murray (D.) vs. Wesley D'Ewart (R.).

Oregon: Richard Neuberger (D.) vs. Sen. Cordon (R.).

Wyoming: Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D.) vs. William H. Harrison (R.)

Observers will watch most carefully those 59 districts where incumbents won by 55% or less of the vote in 1952 and which now have heavy unemployment.

Record voter registrations in Michigan are interpreted as aiding Democratic chances to take that State in next month's elections. Detroit's off-year registration is at a new high, a sign, observers thought, that unemployment is hurting Republicans.

In Chicago, the Illinois CIO Council passed out 400,000 registration leaflets on street corners. Hundreds of CIO precinct leaders climbed stairs and rang doorbells to get voters registered.

In many another area, even where registration was off from a presidential year high, CIO-PAC workers reported heavy listings, with the preponderance of registrants signifying a Democratic preference.

TO A LESSER degree, the Senate races will reflect the tensions of what the Wall Street Journal calls "pocketbook peeves" —the dissatisfaction of voters whose standard of living has been damaged by Eisenhower Administration policies.

Against this rising tide of understandable self-interest, GOP strategy for the last lap calls for revival of the scandal-a-day technique, shoving a reluctant President to the fore as cheerleader, and a new "numbers racket" concerning federal firings.

At Denver, Pres. Eisenhower had to be persuaded to interrupt his eight-week vacation to take the television stump in a plea for election of a GOP Congress. Still more reluctantly he agreed to a major farm speech which was officially billed as non-political, but which had all the earmarks of a Republican rally.

THE PRESIDENT tried to keep clear of individual endorsements, but earlier stood for hours with GOP candidates while photographers' cameras clicked.

GOP strategists sought desperately to use the President's personal glamour as a drawing card, hoping his still strong popularity would rub off on his party's candidates. "Gilt by association" was the way one reporter put it.

Eisenhower, wisely enough, is loathe to inject himself too deeply into what may well be a lost cause.

Unemployment, more than any other factor, will hurt Republican chances in industrial areas; Republican farm policies are likely to backfire in agricultural states.

A Wall Street Journal survey found a sizable percentage of Eisenhower admirers who trailed into the GOP camp in '52 have "had enough" and plan to vote Democratic in November.

"Their reasons are mostly economic," ruefully reports the WSJ. "Scarcely a single voter interviewed who backed the Democrats in 1952 said he is now aiming to switch to the GOP."

Eisenhower's pleas have been kept on a stratospheric level of dazzling purity while he urges support for a Republican Congress to implement his "great dynamic program" and to avert a "cold war of partisan politics."

Signs that the Great Crusade is being pushed off its beachhead are more evident among the lower GOP echelons. Led by Vice Pres. Nixon, numerous Republican stalwarts have turned momentarily from fighting among themselves to tossing irresponsible charges designed to confuse the voters.

THE NUMBERS game of last spring, involving how many employes were fired as security risks has been revived by Nixon. Challenged by the Democrats to prove the charges, Atty.-Gen. Brownell's Justice Dept. came up with a new set of figures which failed to reveal a single Communist on the federal rolls.

Similar scare techniques are being employed by other Administration spokesmen to divert attention from lost jobs, leaner pocketbooks, lessened opportunity and the foot in Charlie Wilson's mouth.

Adlai Stevenson, titular head of the Democratic Party, saw "a ground swell of dismay and revolt against the foolish boasts and broken promises of the Eisenhower Administration."

In a direct reply to Eisenhower's TV appeal for a Republican Congress, Stevenson accused the Administration of "20 months of bluff and bluster, confusion and contradiction." He chided the GOP for an "extensive catalogue of Republican sins."

CIO, AFL Resume Labor Unity Talks

CIO AND AFL unity negotiators met in Washington on Oct. 15 to discuss next-step moves towards labor unity.

(The meeting, scheduled for the Mayflower Hotel, started as The CIO News went to press. A full report will be carried in next week's issue.)

The last meeting of the Unity Committee was in mid-June, when final ratification of the AFL-CIO No-Raiding Agreement was achieved. Since then, a number of cases have been worked out by unions of the two organizations, by the secretary-treasurers of the CIO and AFL, and—in one case—by Arbitrator David Cole.

Last month, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther sent a letter to AFL Pres. George Meany—during the AFL convention — hailing the agreement as "a heartening trend toward the elimination of friction with the American labor movement." He continued:

"On the foundation of this agreement, I hope that the representatives of our two organizations may strengthen the bonds of friendship and set the foundation for future unity of the American trade union movement."

At the United Steelworkers convention, Sept. 20-24, Pres. David J. McDonald urged speedy steps towards labor unity, which he said is possible of attainment in a matter of "weeks."

McDonald, a member of the CIO unity group, was forced to enter Mercy Hospital in Pittsburgh last week with a recurrence of the virus flu attack which had him bed-ridden during part of the steel convention. He was represented at the meeting by James Thimmes, vice-president of the Steelworkers and of the CIO.

The CIO Unity Committee, headed by Reuther, has the same membership as the CIO Executive Committee—with the exception of McDonald in place of Thimmes.

PAC Paper Cites GOP Stalling On Civil Rights

A CAMPAIGN paper demonstrating that Republican policies have cost Negro workers jobs, lowered their living standards, and stalled action on civil rights legislation is being distributed by the CIO Political Action Committee.

The four-page, tabloid-size publication shows that Negroes have been hit hardest by unemployment, that for every Negro hired for a federal job in Washington by the Eisenhower Administration 200 Negroes have been fired, and that "not once in the 20 months Eisenhower has been President has he sent a peep to Congress about any action on civil rights."

Hard Losers

They really play politics for keeps in Oklahoma.

William O. Coe, defeated for the Democratic nomination for governor in the primaries, announced that he is supporting Republican Reuben Sparks.

Joe H. Barber, beaten by Sparks in the GOP primary, is backing the Democratic candidate, Raymond Gary. (PAI)

Brownell Denies Labor Voice In Trust Study

REJECTION of the CIO protest against permitting the National Committee to Study the Anti-Trust Laws to consider if labor unions should be subjected to such legislation has been indicated by Atty.-Gen. Brownell.

Brownell told a press conference that the 62-member committee, which he named, is "very able," and that contrary to the CIO view is "qualified to study all aspects of the anti-trust laws."

The CIO protest was lodged with him by CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg. The latter cited press reports that the Commerce Dept., spearheaded by Sec. Weeks, has been attempting to persuade the committee to include anti-trust coverage of unions in its recommendations.

NEITHER THE MAKEUP of the committee, which is dominated by corporation lawyers, nor the job before it "properly qualifies it to undertake" the study of such a proposal, Goldberg maintained. Changes in legislation affecting unions have no place before a body considering alterations in basic anti-trust polices, he said.

He asked Brownell, "as Attorney General and as the committee's principal, to issue public instructions making clear that such issues are not within the committee's scope."

At his press conference, Brownell said he had not seen a memorandum circulated among committee members giving Weeks' views on turning the anti-trust laws against organized labor.

He said he hoped no one would cry "wolf" before the committee reports, that "any aspect" of the anti-trust laws is properly before it, and that "anyone may submit a memorandum."

Oil Merger Is Delayed

MERGER action between the CIO Oil Workers and Chemical Workers has been deferred until conventions of both unions meet next Mar. 15 in Cleveland.

The scheduled special convention of OWIU, set for Nov. 15 in Cleveland, was postponed last week until "a mid-March date mutually agreeable" by that union and UGCCW.

Earlier, the UGCCW Executive Board unanimously approved a request that a special convention of their union be postponed until March. The broad general terms of the merger proposal were overwhelmingly approved by the union's convention recently.

Wilson Slanders Jobless Workers As 'Dogs'

THE MAN who thinks that "what is good for General Motors is good for the Country" last week likened unemployed workers to "kennel dogs" yapping to be fed.

Defense Sec. Charles E. Wilson's sneering reference to millions of jobless wage earners touched off a chain reaction that made him and the Eisenhower Administration's lack of action on unemployment the top issue in the final days of the congressional election.

The Cadillac-making member of the "Cadillac Cabinet" tossed off his boner in a press conference at Detroit where he was the principal attraction at a $100-a-plate dinner that raised an estimated $180,000 for Michigan Republican candidates.

Reuther Protests To Ike

Hardly had he spoken when he became the principal target for blistering attacks from almost every quarter except Denver where his vacationing boss, Pres. Eisenhower, pretended indifference until the violence of the storm provoked him to comment.

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther sent a sizzling telegram to Eisenhower demanding that Wilson retract or be fired. Later he told a press conference that Wilson "either is stupid or he is callous and indifferent. I don't think he is stupid."

Two days later at another $100-a-plate Republican shindig in Chicago, Wilson apologized for his "inept remarks" but few were satisfied that the issue was at an end.

AFL Pres. George Meany was highly critical of Wilson, charging "he is ignorant of the large masses of people because he has never had any personal contacts with them."

The bumbling Defense secretary was already busy fending off questions on why his former company, General Motors, is getting the lion's share of defense orders under the GOP Administration.

Wilson's brass-bound staff at the Pentagon did not contest Sen. Jackson's (D. Wash.) figures that GM increased its Defense Dept. business by more than $1.7 billion in the first 18 months of the Eisenhower-Wilson Administration. At the same time, Jackson noted, other auto makers' business was slashed by $395 million in cancelled contracts.

"GM CHARLIE" WILSON

What he said wasn't good for the Republican Party.

Already uneasy over their election chances in areas where unemployment is high, Republican reaction to their spokesman's fumble ranged from quick repudiation to attempts at covering-up that made bad matters worse.

While the Administration's own figures list over 3.2 million workers jobless, estimates add another several million on short time. Some of the worst areas of unemployment are in and around major cities of states where the GOP face tough fights for Senate and House seats.

Eisenhower might have shrugged off Democratic protests over his teammate's unconcern for the dignity of three million voters but he could not ignore the anguished bellows from GOP leaders around the country. For the record, the President said he had never found Wilson "indifferent to human misfortune."

Labor Sec. Mitchell supposed "it was a personal opinion of Wilson's to which he is entitled."

Other Republicans entered quick disclaimers of Wilsonian ideas, the vehemence of their disavowals varying with the political temperature and degree of unemployment in their states.

Strongly partisan Republican papers took a dim view editorially of the Wilson statements. Some suggested that Republicans would probably have paid $200 a plate to have the Secretary not attend. When Wilson opens his mouth in public, another noted, the GOP "cannot relax until he has closed it again."

The New York Times observed that Wilson "seems to have a special talent for saying the wrong thing in the wrong way at the wrong time."

Strong Labor Protests

Pres. James B. Carey and Sec.-Treas. All Hartnett of the CIO Electrical Workers demanded to know from Eisenhower if "Wilson's proposal that we wait for a cold wave for workers to move South" is the Administration's answer to measures dealing with unemployment.

"If a man's children are hungry and he cannot get work and asks for help is he then to feel that he is in the category of a kennel-fed dog?" the IUE-CIO asked.

The CIO Textile Workers Executive Council bitterly charged Wilson's dog story expressed Administration views towards unemployment. For the first time since 1932, the Council charged, "a federal government officially regards the unemployed as a gang of loafers who aren't really trying to find work."

The New Jersey CIO Council called for the defeat Nov. 2 of any congressional candidate "who doesn't understand the clear necessity for the removal of Wilson from his post."

Sen. Green (D. R.I.) made a retract-or-resign demand. So did Sen. Lehman (D. N. Y.), who called Wilson's remarks "insulting and shocking to the point of being incredible."

Sen. Clements (D. Ky.) charged "whether intentionally or accidentally, Sec. Wilson has given utterance to the cold-blooded philosophy of dog-eat-dog which always dominates the Republican Party in time of economic crisis."

From a Poughkeepsie, N. Y., street corner, Rep. Roosevelt (D.), campaigning for state attorney-general, told a rally:

"If the Democrats are elected you'll never hear men and women referred to as bird dogs."

Inventor

Overheard last week in a State Dept. elevator:

"Now we know why Charlie Wilson invented the automatic transmission—so he could have his other foot free to put in his mouth."

Bad Choice

Charlie Wilson couldn't have picked a worse place than Detroit—his old home town—to pull his now-classic boner about the unemployed and dogs.

The Motor City has 195,000 jobless right now, according to official figures, and many more thousands on short time. Michigan has a total of 285,000 out of work.

Here's What 'GM Charlie' Said

Defense Sec. Wilson claimed late last week he was "misunderstood" when he equated unemployed workers with "kennel dogs." Here is his verbatim statement taken from a tape-recording of the press conference:

SEC. WILSON—You see, actually it's smart to put work where there's plenty of workmen. But this defense business of the country is too serious a business to look at it as though it was "made work" and just something to dish out to keep somebody busy. It's too serious a business for that. And it's got to be placed where people can get it done.

I'd like to tell you a story that happened to me—an incident that happened to me down in Washington—a group of people came in like you're talking about from a distressed area—so-called labor surplus area—and they pointed out that it was so classified.

And one of them made the complaint, this is a little over a year ago. In addition, he said, "You know, you've just reduced the draft. In our district there are 110 more young men that won't have to go to the Korean fight now and that'll add to our unemployment." And the idea that a 19-year-old boy could be drafted and sent to Korea to be shot at and he didn't have enough gumption to go 100 miles and get himself a job—I don't go for that.

And I've got a lot of sympathy for people when a sudden change (unemployment) catches 'em . . . but (long pause) I have always liked bird dogs better than kennel-fed dogs myself. (Reporter attempts to interrupt, "Mr. Wilson." Wilson chuckles and continues). You know, one who'll get out and hunt for food rather than sit on his fanny and yell. (More laughter from Wilson) I'm getting out of the press conference area now, I think.

REPORTER — How long will we have a surplus of workmen here, Mr. Secretary, in this area?

WILSON—Oh, the new models get in production in November and December — maybe a few people go back South when it gets a little cold—I think you'll about balance out by Christmas.

"What Was Wrong With Charlie's Crack About Dogs?"

"Yoo Hoo—Charlie"

PROPERLY LABELLED is the dog food which CIO Steelworkers Michael Horozko (left) and Frederick Rewucki are handing to jobless workers at the State Unemployment Service office at Buffalo, N. Y. The cans bear the label "Wilson's Ideal Dog Food."

Reuther Wire To President

Here are excerpts from CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther's wire to Pres. Eisenhower demanding that Defense Sec. Wilson retract his slander of unemployed Americans or be retired from the Cabinet:

UNTIL I SAW this story, I had believed we were decades past the day when allegedly civilized men thought such things, let alone expressed them aloud and in public.

I regret that I was so sadly mistaken in estimating the degree to which big business had acquired at least the rudiments of a social conscience.

The unemployed to whom Wilson refers in such brutal terms are jobless in substantial part because of the irresponsibility of his corporate colleagues in General Motors and other major auto corporations. In the spring of 1953, they scoured the country for recruits to meet production schedules which they knew could not be maintained for more than a few months.

Relief Offices Busy

According to Business Week magazine, the Buick Div. of General Motors alone had help wanted ads in the newspapers of 64 cities in 11 southern states. After the production spurt was ended, these recruits were dumped on the streets to become burdens on the taxpayers of the automotive centers.

The Detroit public relief offices at one time this year operated on night shifts to take care of the applicants. As a result of the callous use of these temporary recruits who were lured from their homes and families by glowing promises of attractive jobs, the workers regularly attached to the industry were added to the rolls of the jobless.

These workers are now "dogs" to your grinning Secretary of Defense. Those who were recruited from other areas are presumably the "bird dogs"—they have served their purpose of turning over the profit kill to their masters and now should "go back South when it gets a little cold."

Perhaps this is another example of Wilson's having again put his foot in his mouth publicly. I hope this is the case. If it is, Wilson should retract publicly and apologize to the unemployed. If it is not, if Wilson's point of view is a considered opinion, he then should be asked to retire from public life, for such a point of view is immoral and incompatible with the purpose of free government.

Charles E. Wilson

★ ★ ★

I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
than such a Roman . . .
I am Sir Oracle, and when I ope my lips,
let no dog bark . . .
The cat will mew, and the dog will have his day . . .
—WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

★ ★ ★

Charles E. Wilson has, as CIO Pres. Reuther so quickly and clearly pointed out in his wire to Pres. Eisenhower, outlived his usefulness as a member of the Cabinet.

To be sure, Wilson "apologized" for his "inept remarks." But in the same breath, by blaming the criticism of those remarks on "left wingers," Wilson clearly showed that he doesn't know what the fuss was all about.

Those "left wingers" included a lot of Republicans who, either from motives of humanitarianism or political expediency, could not let Wilson's diatribe go unchallenged.

As Secretary of Defense, Wilson has too often seemed to display an attitude that Defense Dept. policies are not really the people's business. His recent reply to the inquiry of Sen. Jackson (D. Wash.) about defense contracts to General Motors was a case in point.

His callous remarks about unemployed workers going back south from Detroit when the weather gets colder had nasty overtones of racialism that were not lost on Detroiters.

And the stupid discussion of bird-dogs and kennel-dogs was not a chance slip of the tongue. Listeners to the radio program of John W. Vandercook and other newscasters heard the original tape recording of Wilson's remarks. They followed a long pause, as though Wilson were debating what to say; and they were accompanied by chuckles that sounded both contemptuous and obscene.

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette—not a "left wing" paper by any definition—had this comment:

"The kennel-fed dog, as surely Mr. Wilson must know, does not sit on his haunches and yelp because he lacks the basic instinct of self-preservation and a willingness to scrounge for food. He does it because he is chained to the kennel.

"And so it is with millions of working Americans who, through faith in our system and the necessity of earning a living under it, become chained to a vast industrial complex."

We agree—and we think that millions of Americans will continue to show their disdain and contempt for the sort of 19th century thinking, expressed by Wilson, that considers working men and women as ripe targets for exploitation by big corporations.

Two Important Strikes

Although most of the news is political during these October weeks, we'd like to remind you of two long strikes conducted by CIO members.

One is the strike of Communications Workers at Western Electric near Buffalo; it's been going for four months. The other is the Auto Workers' walkout at the Kohler plant near Sheboygan, Wis., against one of the toughest, most obstinate bosses in the country.

Workers in both these plants are fighting for decent American living standards. They have, and deserve, the support of CIO members everywhere.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS
Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director
Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII October 18, 1954 No. 42

'Now What Did I Say?'

In Other Words—

British Labor Learns About Us

The experiences of a U. S. union member in Great Britain were condensed from an article by Ben Segal, former CIO associate education director, who recently returned from a year of study on a Fulbright fellowship, and were distributed by Press Associates-PAI.

By BEN SEGAL

"CAN YOU TELL ME," asked the British trade unionist at a union weekend school in the north of England, "why in both World War I and World War II you Americans waited to see which side was going to win before you came into the war?"

Segal

I joined the group in laughter and said:

"You might be interested in hearing how this same kind of question would be asked at a union school in America: 'Can you tell me why we're always pulling British chestnuts out of the fire?'"

More laughter followed my reply and we moved on to more "sticky" questions. This exchange seems to symbolize some of the misconceptions and misunderstandings in Britain and in America.

In fact, one of the few generalizations I feel safe in making is that the only thing I found to match the misunderstanding and misconceptions about America existing in Britain are the misunderstanding and misconceptions about Britain existing in America.

I guess it's old stuff for Americans to speak about the damage to America and the impact that McCarthy and McCarthyism have made on Britain and the rest of the world. I was constantly asked to speak on this topic and was asked innumerable questions.

In the trade union area I found the average British unionist tended to base his impression about American unions on some specific situation he had heard about. I would be asked whether it's true that "all unions send in time study engineers and/or lend money to companies in need."

I also found misconceptions about increased productivity. As one union member put it to me at a district trades council meeting: "Is it true in America that if the company refuses to put in new machinery the workers go out on strike in protest?" Then he went on to imply that he had heard that American workers practically stayed up nights trying to figure out ways to increase productivity.

Having worked closely with the British trade unions and the Labor Party branches, I had the opportunity to compare and contrast our respective trade union movements. At first blush I was aware of the differences in political outlook and activities as well as in methods of collective bargaining.

I WAS ALSO IMPRESSED that the British trade unions seemed to be better established and more widely accepted than their counterparts in America. I was particularly interested in the fact that even the Conservative government frequently consulted the Trades Union Congress on matters of mutual concern.

But the longer I was in Britain the more I came to see that what we had in common was far greater than our differences. A few weeks ago, listening to debates at the annual convention of the British Trades Union Congress, I was aware that the goal of greater economic and social security and a peaceful world was similar for both union movements.

Every place I went in Britain I found interest in knowing more about our union and liberal and progressive activities. And I came away convinced that we must do a far better job than we have been doing of interpreting our trade union movement in Britain, just as we must learn more about their movement.

A Good Ambassador

"Ben Segal has been one of America's best ambassadors in Britain," G. M. Thompson, a member of the British Parliament, wrote in the Glasgow Forward after the former CIO associate education director had spent a week in Scotland.

Thompson wrote that in 10 months, Segal "proved that local Labor Party and trade union branch meetings are a better method for an American to get to know Britain—and vice versa—than Embassy cocktail parties."

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

IT WOULD BE NICE if "Bird Dog" Charlie Wilson, Secretary of Defense, could be introduced to his fellow Cabinet member, Labor Sec. Mitchell, and Mitchell's Undersec. Arthur Larson.

Wilson chose Oct. 11 as the day to suggest that the reason 195,000 Detroit workers were jobless was that they were too lazy to cast around say 100 miles to find new jobs.

But Mitchell on the same day told the Illinois State Federation of Labor in Peoria that the "mobility movement" of our labor force was a major factor "distinguishing" our free society. He used World War II statistics to prove that workers "move" frequently to "a job or a better job."

The willingness of our workers to "move," said Mitchell, helps maintain both liberty and prosperity. (They moved 2000 miles and more to the West Coast, of course, when jobs were available during the war.)

Larson, the Labor Dept. Undersecretary, took a different tack—but his tack made Wilson seem even more remote from reality. (Larson is a competent, honest university expert in social security, who seems puzzled that he can't get GOP professionals and the millionaires around Eisenhower to comprehend a few elemental facts.)

Larson told an interstate conference in New Orleans all about the tremendous values that would be gained by higher unemployment compensation. One of the objectives of an adequate unemployment benefit system, he said, is this:

"To make the best utilization of the nation's labor force, by sparing skilled workmen the necessity of abandoning their skills during unemployment and accepting menial work to avoid destitution, and to prevent the dispersal . . . of an employer's trained labor resources during temporary layoffs."

Wilson wanted the Southern boys deliberately recruited by Detroit to "go back South" to the blacked-out coal fields of Kentucky. He made a bad joke of his hope that they might soon feel the pinch of a Michigan winter. Larson thought they should be adequately compensated during the lay-off period to give the auto factories a trained force when the assembly lines started again.

Pres. Eisenhower and Sec. Wilson presumably would give Messrs. Mitchell and Larson a blank stare if the Labor Dept. gentlemen should start insisting on their ideas in Cabinet meetings.

Showdown On Power Delayed

On the eve of the election, the Administration seemed urgent to avoid a showdown on its public power policies by stalling every possible decision until after Nov. 2.

The most recent example was the curious incapacity of Federal Power Commission engineers to produce by Oct. 11 a final report on Hells Canyon, the great gorge in the Snake River separating Idaho and Oregon.

Democratic leaders of the Interior Dept. years ago recommended a high-level multiple-purpose federal dam in Hells Canyon, to produce cheap public power, provide flood control, navigation, irrigation and recreational facilities.

Eisenhower's man, Interior Sec. McKay, threw this recommendation down the river. The Idaho Power Co., a "local" private utility controlled by New England capital, renewed pressure for a Power Commission permit to build two or three low-level dams in Hells Canyon that would forever preempt federal development.

The lawyers supporting public power in Hells Canyon have continually fought for delays and postponements, hoping that the people's wishes would rise to sustain them.

This does not explain why the FPC professional staff, the disinterested engineers concerned merely with kilowatts and water flow, suddenly decided they needed time until after Nov. 2 to complete their tables, charts and graphs in regard to Idaho Power's proposals.

It may be that the non-political FPC engineering staff, after more than a year of Hells Canyon hearings piled on top of previous engineering reports, was too overworked to finish its final comments. The effect of the postponement, still, was to kick the issues to the future, so that the results of the election and the composition of the upcoming Congress might powerfully influence decisions.

Just a few days before Hells Canyon was delayed until after Nov. 2, the Republicans hastily stalled the controversial proposed Dixon-Yates contract, which if Eisenhower's plans should be followed would hedge in and hamstring the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The Hells Canyon and Dixon-Yates disputes were not postponed, one must guess, without some slight conversation among Republican bigwigs.

Careful!

Federal Communications Commission employes have been given blunt warning that their private lives must be as pure as the driven snow.

You mustn't use "abusive language" in public, an FCC policy statement says, or attend "loud and disorderly parties." You mustn't be guilty of conduct "which, although not necessarily illegal, is not condoned by society."

The policy directive doesn't say what might happen if a prying neighbor "reports" an ordinary family spat or some other Paul Pry "reports" a party at 10 p.m. which he calls "loud and disorderly."

Pretty soon, maybe, all of us can "report" on everybody else, and get all of us reprimanded, temporarily suspended or fired, which are the disciplinary threats the FCC lists as punishments.

Issues In The Election—

Social Security, With New Law, Still Is Too Little For Too Few

(This is the sixth in a series of articles dealing with issues in the coming elections.)

THE TRAGEDY of social security is that it still provides too little for too few.

The system—which the Republicans have attacked as a "cruel hoax" almost since its start, with predictions that it would "enslave workers"—dates back to Aug. 14, 1935, when the late Pres. Roosevelt signed into law a measure that gave the American work a minimum of security and independence.

Today's system includes nine parts which can be grouped under three heads: social insurance, public assistance to the needy and children's services. The first grouping contains the best-known programs—unemployment insurance and old-age and survivors insurance.

Certain improvements were made in the system this year, particularly in the field of old-age insurance, because public pressure had at last forced the Republicans to alter their views and propose modest revisions.

To judge from the bows being taken by the GOP for this overdue step, it might be imagined that social security was a GOP invention. The fact, however, is that the 83rd Congress grudgingly adopted a small part of the program which the CIO and the Democrats had been urging for years against their opposition.

A Certain Irony

There is a certain irony in the signing of social security improvement bills by Pres. Eisenhower. His views on the subject have undergone wide changes since Dec. 8, 1948, at Galveston, Tex., when he pooh-poohed the matter of social security. Said he:

"If all that Americans want is security, they can go to prison. They'll have enough to eat, a bed, and a roof over their heads."

Nearly three years later, made aware of social security's political potency, he could tell a Manchester, N. H., audience:

". . . We must have ample and improved social security measures. There must be better unemployment insurance . . ."

Reactionary Republicans and their allies still have their knives sharpened for social security.

In Chicago last February, Dr. Frank G. Dickenson, economist for the American Medical Association, said: "Federal old-age insurance is 96% charity and the recipients should give that much of it back to the government. Rarely, if ever, have people devised a better way for the old to rob the young."

Jobless Benefits Lag

Unfortunately, in view of the recession brought on by GOP fiscal policies, the field of unemployment insurance has received no favorable attention from the Republican-controlled Congress.

With 3.2 million unemployed and more than a million under-employed, the jobless worker finds himself at the mercy of state systems whose benefits are far too low to meet his needs and those of his family.

The Eisenhower proposal that the states improve their unemployment compensation laws fell for the most part on deaf ears and intransigent attitudes.

Wisconsin passed the first statewide unemployment compensation law on July 1, 1934. The following year, the late Sen. Wagner (D. N.Y.) and Rep. Lewis (D. Md.) introduced a bill which became part of the social security measure. By 1937, all 48 states, the District of Columbia, Hawaii and Alaska, had enacted unemployment compensation laws approved by the Social Security Board.

The purpose of unemployment insurance is to allow the jobless worker to pay for his basic living expenses without digging too deeply into his savings—if any—until he can find work again.

Present maximum weekly benefits range from $20 to $35. The average weekly unemployment benefit in 1954 is $24.26. Average weekly wages are $71.53.

Benefits Soon Exhausted

Maximum duration of benefits now ranges from 16 weeks (in four states) to 26.5 weeks (in Wisconsin). Many workers exhaust their benefits before they can find new jobs.

Sen. Green (D. R.I.) pointed out that a recent survey in his state showed a high percentage of jobless textile workers still unemployed months after they had exhausted their compensation benefits.

While a few states increased benefits slightly, they enacted more restrictive disqualification provisions. In 1951, restrictions disqualified one out of every seven workers because they had not earned enough money to meet state requirements. Another one out of five was disqualified for technical reasons even though earned credits were high enough. Since then the situation has become worse.

Bar To Depression

The CIO believes adequate unemployment benefits can help prevent depression. Increased unemployment compensation maintains purchasing power and production and keeps others working.

Benefits payments should provide a jobless worker with no dependents not less than 65% of his weekly wage for at least 39 weeks. Additional allowances would be made for dependents.

States hard hit by unemployment would be able to draw on grants from the federal government if their funds were threatened with exhaustion.

The Greensboro Daily News

"Sorry—Can't Save 'Em All, Y' Know"

Facts From PAC

The accompanying article was prepared from material in the 1954 Handbook of the CIO Political Action Committee and "Social Security," one of the '54 Facts booklet series issued by CIO-PAC.

Copies of the Handbook are available to union members at $1.50 each and of the booklet at 5c each from the CIO-PAC, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington, D. C.

'A Very Real Issue'

"The 1954 session of Congress has amply demonstrated that national health has evolved into a very real political issue," said an editorial in General Practice, the official organ of physicians in general practice.

"As such," the editorial continued, "it promises to be a feature attraction in many of the state election campaigns this fall . . . What it all seems to boil down to is this: Republicans and Democrats alike appear to be convinced that the American public wants them to do something about lightening the burden of medical expenses."

The CIO Presents
John W. Vandercook
AND THE NEWS
every weekday evening
on the ABC Network

The State Campaigns

There's King-Sized Job In New York

By BERNARD RASKIN
Special Correspondent

NEW YORKERS are facing up to a couple of king-sized jobs in this year's election. They are (1) to put an end to "12 long years" of entrenched Republican reaction in the State capitol and (2) to elect a majority on the side of liberalism and progress in the State's 43-member congressional delegation.

Another Campaign Exclusive

The CIO in all parts of the State has been working on these jobs since the beginning of the year. It is continuing to work on them despite difficulties placed in the way by the GOP-dominated Legislature and by controversies growing out of the Democratic gubernatorial campaign.

The Legislature's contribution was to delay the nominating conventions to close to the end of September—a move plainly designed to hamper the "outs."

Blow At Registration

The GOP lawmakers struck another blow by chopping up the regular six-day registration period in New York City into three two-day segments. This undoubtedly contributed to the serious registration slump—the city total is 12% below 1950, and the State total off by 6%.

(During the registration period, CIO-PAC sound trucks were forced to announce: "No registration today or tomorrow, but on Friday . . ." It left potential voters thoroughly confused—which is probably just what the Legislature had in mind.)

The campaign in New York is developing into a test between New Deal-Fair Deal candidates and policies as opposed to the slick Tom Dewey brand of righteous Republicanism—now more than slightly tarnished by the odor from the harness race tracks.

CIO, by action of the New York State CIO Council Executive Board, is supporting the Democratic ticket of Averell Harriman—long a high Washington official—for governor and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.—fighting congressman and son of the late President—for attorney general.

Heading the Republican ticket is Irving M. Ives, known as "the Senator with the two-way stretch" because of his ability to maintain a reputation for liberalism with the public while compiling a record of reactionary voting on almost all big issues.

It's no secret that New York CIO wanted FDR Jr. at the head of the ticket. The recent State CIO convention so declared, meeting a few days before the Democratic nomination convention.

But the Democratic Party State leadership decided otherwise. Roosevelt, despite his statewide reputation and enthusiastic rank-and-file support, lost out for the governorship, accepted the top State legal nomination. And Harriman won the gubernatorial nomination.

The Questions Of Jobs

The Harriman and Roosevelt Democratic slate, by majority vote of the State CIO Council Executive Board, has been endorsed because of the Democrats' "constructive, forward-looking" platform and because of the importance of the campaign for State offices on the 43 congressional contests.

Harriman, while known on the national and international scene, is just beginning to establish his position on New York issues.

Unemployment is a big problem in the Empire State, not just because of the Republican-ignored recession but also because of lagging industrial development plus runaway plants over the past several years. By latest figures, 6.8% of insured workers are on unemployment compensation rolls in the State, compared with a national average rate of 5.3%.

Harriman has charged the GOP Administrations in Albany and Washington with "callous indifference" to the problems of unemployment. He has hit at GOP policies for "helping the few and not the many." And he has struck at Ives as the "champion of the big power interests" on the question of Niagara power development.

The State CIO Council some time ago urged Gov. Dewey to put in motion a program for industrial expansion with fair wage and labor standards. Nothing happened in Albany. Now the basic elements of the CIO program to save industry in New York State have been written into the Democratic platform.

The question of saving rent controls in the cities and of farm price supports in the counties will affect both congressional and legislative contests.

New York CIO will keep on working up to election day for its twin objectives: a forward-minded government in Albany and a forward-minded delegation in Congress.

KING-SIZED FIGHT—At registration rally in New York garment district, Averell Harriman (right), Democratic candidate for governor, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., his running mate for attorney general, wave greeting over Margaret Truman, daughter of former President. At right, Harriman meets with New York CIO leaders: State Council Sec.-Treas. Harold Garno and Pres. Louis Hollander, CIO Clothing Workers Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky, and Charles H. Kerrigan, regional director of the CIO Auto Workers. It's an uphill contest in New York for the Democrats.

'Every Man His Own Sound Truck'

A new tool for vote-building has made its appearance in New York. It's a portable amplifying system, powered by 6- and 12-volt batteries and carried in the hand. The new slogan for getting recruits for PAC work now is "Every Man a Sound Truck!"

'Recession Wind Is Blowing--' Now Jobless Pay Curb Is Felt

WHEN THE Hughes-Brees amendments to New York's unemployment insurance law were introduced during the boom year of 1951, CIO warned their worst effects would be felt "whenever recession winds begin to blow."

Well, the wind has been blowing in New York State (where 6.8% of insured workers now are on the compensation rolls) and the cold bite of the Hughes-Brees amendments has been felt by growing thousands of workers and their families.

CIO has termed the amendments "the rawest and most reckless give-away in the history of the State." And it has declared they are "a shattering indictment of the Republican Administration which sponsored them and of every legislator who voted for them."

This year the Hughes-Brees provisions, which put brutal restrictions on workers' eligibility for unemployment compensation benefits for the first time, will be a factor in the State election.

The Democratic platform calls for repeal of their worst features. The Republican platform ignores the issue and the record. Here are some highlights of that record:

- Increased disqualifications: In 1952, first full year of operation under the Hughes-Brees amendments, the disqualification rate jumped by 6%. Next year, it was up 6%. And in important seasonal industries, the disqualification rate soared as high as 60%.
- Added red tape: It's almost like going to court now to get unemployment benefits. Cases going to referees were up 8% in 1952 and 11% in 1953.

Doorbell Ringers Prove Mightier Than The Bosses

THERE'S NO GREATER weapon for smashing entrenched political machines than the finger that rings the doorbell.

CIO Clothing Workers in Rochester, N. Y., proved that again in spearheading a drive of reform Democrats to take the leadership of their county organization away from the Bush machine, which for 13 years had maintained an iron—and incompetent—rule.

The ACWA members did the job without benefit of high-priced "mass communication" media, counting almost entirely on a person-to-person approach. Teams of union members did the rounds of the crucial industrial wards time and again—handing out literature, getting petitions signed, explaining the issues and getting out the vote on Primary Day. Leadership was given to the reform drive by Abraham Chatman, the Rochester Joint Board manager and an Amalgamated vice president.

N. Y. Jobs Off, Aid Load Up

EMPLOYMENT in New York City dropped 3% in the year ended last June while public assistance cases increased by 9% in the first eight months of this year—and Mayor Wagner is worried.

The statistics and the Mayor's expression of concern were contained in a report on the progress his Administration has made since it took office Jan. 1. Unemployment gained in the first six months of 1954 when normally it should have dropped, he said, adding that only more jobs can halt the upward sweep in assistance demands.

THE FIGHT FOR JOBS—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., draws crowds like this at an upstate CIO rally wherever he speaks. The New York State CIO Council has praised the Democrats' "constructive, forward-looking" State platform.

CIO Backs Dems With TV In N. Y.

The New York State CIO Council will present at least five, and perhaps more, television programs on behalf of Democratic candidates for Statewide offices, Pres. Louis Hollander announced last week. He estimated the cost at about $50,000.

GET OUT THE VOTE—That's the aim of pamphlets beind handed out at 42nd and Broadway by PAC Dir. Jim Carroll of the CIO Transport Workers.

The Fight For Congress

The Strangest GOP Campaign Of '54

By MILTON PLUMB

Another Campaign Exclusive

THE STRANGEST campaign the Republican Party is waging anywhere this year is the one being fought in New Jersey.

It's a campaign of Republicans against Republicans, with the right wing group of McCarthyites, Pro-America organization supporters and other reactionaries apparently doing everything in their power to defeat the GOP nominee for the Senate.

Up to now, the bitter internal party quarrel has seriously weakened Republican chances of winning in November. Some Republicans concede that—as of right now—the election of Rep. Howell (D.) over their own nominee, ex-Rep. Case, seems probable.

SENATE CAMPAIGN involves planning, handshakes and even dancing for New Jersey's "Democratic Abe Lincoln," Rep. Howell. State CIO officials (left) aid planning. Typical handshake (center) comes as Howell is welcomed by Negro leaders at party honoring Rep. Addonizio (D.), right. After day of debates with his opponent, several evening talks and parties in his honor, Howell dances (right) at Democratic Party Ball in Newark's Mosque.

As election day draws closer, however, some New Jersey political observers point out that the party quarrel has helped Case in at least two ways:

1. It has tended to distract attention from continuing exposure of corruption in Republican rule of New Jersey.

2. It has aroused some sympathy for Case among the State's "independent voters" and placed him in the public eye as a "liberal" fighting off right wing attacks. The fact that Howell has a much better record might be overlooked in such circumstances.

Liberal Tradition

Although long in the Republican column, New Jersey has consistently sent a high percentage of so-called "liberal Republicans" to Congress. Despite some notorious individuals elected, the State as a whole never has been basically reactionary.

When Howell, popular State chairman and congressional leader of New Jersey Democrats, declared his intention to run for the Senate, GOP concern over losing the seat now held by Sen. Hendrickson (R.) was immediately apparent. It caused State Republican leaders to dump Hendrickson, a conservative, and persuade Case, who had the most liberal record in Congress of any Republican in the State, to run instead.

In picking Case, the GOP acknowledged at the outset that only a Republican running as a liberal would have a chance to defeat Howell this year.

Case met the required pattern. He resigned his $40,000-a-year job with the Ford Foundation and began his campaign as a "liberal" by issuing a blast at McCarthy. This got him considerable favorable publicity and well-deserved praise, but it didn't help as much as expected politically.

Howell In Front

It quickly came out that his opponent, Howell, had been on record as opposed to the Wisconsin Senator's antics long before Case began campaigning—and before Republicans joined in the attack against him because he had begun to attack Republicans.

Even Case's "liberalism"—while better than that of most Republicans—became a liability for campaign purposes. His record in Congress was soon shown to have been considerably inferior to Howell's in terms of protecting the public interest.

Thus Case's whole campaign has had to be waged solely on his promise to back Pres. Eisenhower's program "100%." This, too, proved weak politically. Comparison of the votes he and his opponent cast when both were in Congress showed that Howell actually gave the President more support.

The polls continued to show Howell still far out in front.

It was at this point that the group of right wing New Jersey Republicans began attacking Case.

Declaring him to be too liberal, they formed a Committee for a Stronger Republican Party and begged Case to withdraw so that ex-Rep. Hartley (the T-H Act's co-author) could run instead.

Hartley indicated he wasn't against making the race although almost no one took his candidacy seriously. He began attacking Case as "the ADA candidate." Then, less than a month ago, having apparently "smeared" Case for having "too liberal" a record, Hartley publicly declared he wouldn't run against him.

Meanwhile, the New Jersey Poll, one of the few public opinion samplers which can claim never to have been wrong, reported Democratic strength in New Jersey was still at an all-time high. Its latest findings indicate that the "independent"—usually "liberal"—vote will decide the New Jersey election and that this group now favors the Democrats by a 5% margin.

In terms of practical politics, this means that the GOP must shift just 3% of the independent vote to Case in order to win.

A Write-In Drive

All of these facts were known Oct. 8 when Hartley, in a surprise TV broadcast, renewed his attack on Case and, reversing himself, urged his supporters to give him their votes for the Senate by writing in his name on the ballot.

While he was broadcasting, a sound truck outside the studio played music and displayed a sign: "Elect Fred A. Hartley, Write-In Candidate. (signed) McCarthy Republicans."

Assuming right wing Republicans in New Jersey have the strength they claim and that they really will vote for Hartley, the "on again, off again" campaign they've waged against Case could cost him almost 10,000 votes. If independent voters hold firm, this would throw a close election to the Democrats.

But here's another possibility: If Hartley's campaign should convince just 3% of New Jersey's "independents" that Case is being unjustly smeared because of his "liberal" record and for that reason should be elected over an even more qualified candidate, those McCarthyite votes could be sacrificed and still produce a GOP victory.

Howell, who has the all-out support of the New Jersey CIO-PAC, thus still appears to have a hard fight ahead even though the polls point to his easy victory election.

After all, a victory in New Jersey now appears to be essential if the Republicans are to have any hope at all of remaining in control of the Senate. Right wing Republicans want that control even more than Eisenhower's supporters, because they hold most of the powerful Senate committee chairmanships only so long as Republicans are in power.

Good Business—For Pawnbrokers

Business is good in New Jersey—for the pawnbrokers.

A survey of economic conditions by the Newark News said all of the brokers noted a general upswing in trade and most had "marked improvement" in the last year.

Said Louis Kampf, one broker interviewed: "We pawnbrokers are the last resort of credit for a lot of people and more people need that last resort when there are cutbacks in employment and loss of overtime payment."

There were 125,000 unemployed workers in New Jersey on Oct. 1, of whom 80,000 were drawing unemployment insurance benefits, according to Commissioner of Labor Carl Holderman. Insurance claims are being exhausted at the rate of 8000 to 10,000 monthly.

STRENGTH of Democratic congressional candidates adds to edge Howell now holds in Senate race. CIO officials from GOP Senate Nominee Case's home district (left) predict re-election of his successor, Rep. Williams (D.) right. In center picture, Essex-West Hudson CIO Pres. Hugh Caldwell discusses GOP record with PAC-backed nominees Martin Fox and Reps. Addonizio and Rodino, all Democrats. UAW-CIO rally in Union County is addressed by Howell (right) as Union County CIO Pres. Jim Trice and State CIO Pres. Paul Krebs share platform.

The Job You Save May Be Your Own! Register, Give A Buck To PAC, Vote!

The State Campaigns

New England's Voters Are Mad—But Not Fighting Mad Yet

By EUGENE A. KELLEY

VOTERS in New England are mad—but they're just beginning to shout about it. Labor-backed candidates, most of them Democrats, face their best opportunity for victory in years but CIO-PAC workers say they have a big job in the two weeks before election.

Another Campaign Exclusive

In many races, the surface lack of interest by many voters is a tougher foe, observers say, than the Republican candidates who are clutching at Pres. Eisenhower's coattails.

Observes suggest that the pre-election quiet may be that much-discussed New England conservatism. They admit that they would be cheered by more manifestations of discontent now, but they confidently expect there will be plenty of such evidence in the headlines the morning after Election Day.

In some contests, local rather than national issues will decide the outcome. In others, the Republican record is a definite issue. GOP office seekers are banking heavily on the magic of the Eisenhower smile even though they do not see it reflected on the faces of the thousands of jobless in New England's industrial areas.

As things stand today, there is an excellent chance that New England's delegation in the Senate and the House will number six to eight more liberal members when the 84th Congress is called to order. With hard work between now and voting day that number might be increased.

Tailoring their tactics to the mood of the voters, Democratic candidates are hammering effectively at the mounting unemployment in the area, the failure of the Eisenhower Administration to keep its pledges and the lack of understanding of people's problems by Republican Governors and Legislatures.

Republican confidence has ebbed steadily since Maine voters started what might be an area-wide trend by electing a Democratic government and trimming Republican pluralities in congressional contests. New England is one section where Republicans have to "run scared" and have the intelligence to realize it.

The six-state region sent nine Republican and three Democratic Senators to the 83rd Congress. Four Senate seats are at stake in November and labor-backed candidates, Democrats in Rhode Island and Massachusetts and a Republican in New Hampshire, are expected to capture three of these with the fourth a tossup.

Last year there were 19 Republicans and nine Democrats from New England in the House. When the new Congress convenes there is strong likelihood that there will be six new faces, two each from New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut, five Democrats and a Republican, all with CIO-PAC endorsement. Again, with hard work, the number could be larger.

DEMOCRATIC cand
setts CIO approval. F from right), Senate a

BID for CIO support is made by Murphy (
Pres. J. William Bel

Massachusetts Is The Biggest Question Mark

MASSACHUSETTS provides the biggest question mark in any pre-election forecast. Until very recently it was even difficult to find a trend in any direction in the contests for major offices.

The trend has set in now and there are signs of a Democratic tide rolling from Cape Cod's shores to the autumn beauty of the Berkshires. It picked up belatedly but probably in time to counteract the disconcerting quiet of the voters so noticeable a few weeks ago.

Neither side is claiming outright victory because the signs are confusing. Both are disquieted by the drop in registration figures, as much as 38,000 in Boston and off correspondingly in some of the major industrial centers.

A fighting speech by State Treas. Foster Furcolo roused the enthusiasm of hundreds of CIO members gathered in Boston to endorse candidates. Furcolo, an outstanding congressman before he resigned to accept the State post, is bidding for the seat of Sen. Saltonstall (R.).

Saltonstall, a popular three-time Governor before going to Washington, is in the weakest position of his political life. He is playing on the theme of his closeness to Pres. Eisenhower, but it may not be enough to offset unrest caused by high unemployment.

Solid Labor Backing

The loss of two super-carrier orders for the Fore River shipyard, employment drops in other defense industries and the sickly condition of the textile industry have jeopardized Saltonstall's chances in some of the State's largest centers. Saltonstall's close ties to the Eisenhower Administration could be his undoing.

Furcolo is a highly effective speaker and has solid labor backing. Other liberals in the State are rallying to him.

He stands to lose some votes in traditionally Democratic Boston because of Saltonstall's personal popularity, but is expected to run ahead of his ticket in the western part of the State. In other parts of the State Furcolo has a better than even chance.

A Malden newspaperman and veteran legislator, Robert Murphy, faces Gov. Christian A. Herter. While not the vigorous campaigner with the flamboyant flair of previous Democratic candidates, Murphy is making headway in an admittedly uphill race.

Herter carried a GOP majority into the Legislature with him two years ago and promptly set about worsening features of the unemployment compensation law. In a State with one of the highest percentages of jobless in the nation, this factor is going to cost Herter heavily and prompts Democratic optimism for winning control of the House.

Pres. J. William Belanger of the Massachusetts CIO Council told the PAC session which endorsed Murphy that "textile areas are back to 1950 in their support of good Democratic candidates."

Congressional Races

Two changes appear imminent in the Bay State's congressmen's roster. Torbert McDonald, former Harvard football captain, war hero and once a National Labor Relations Board attorney, is regarded as an excellent bet to unseat incumbent Rep. Goodwin (R.) in the 8th Dist.

In the 10th Dist., Jackson Holtz, former assistant U. S. attorney and national commander of the Jewish War Veterans, is a serious threat to Rep. Curtis (R.) whose record is singularly undistinguished.

Goodwin's last win was by a tight 3500 in a district gerrymandered to make it safely Republican. The nature of the district has since changed and McDonald, with labor and liberal support, is expected to win by more than 5000 votes.

DAVID BRADY (sec
by PAC in Connecti

'Little Rhody' Looks Good For Dems

THE SMALLEST State, Rhode Island, has the biggest chance of any in New England to send the same sound delegation back to the 84th Congress.

"Little Rhody" sends two Senators and two Congressmen to Washington, all of them Democrats. Despite an avalanche of Republican money thrown into this year's campaign, it appears that incumbents are assured of re-election.

Wild enthusiasm accompanied endorsement of Sen. Green for another term when over 500 CIO union officers and shop stewards gathered near Providence. The grand old man was presented with a flag-bedecked cake on his birthday which coincided with the CIO rally.

Green pitched his talk to support of his running mates, secure in the knowledge that his entry into the political arenas is tantamount to victory. At 87, aspiring to a six-year term, he reserved the right to decide later whether he will again be a candidate in 1960.

Re-election probably will come easy to Rep. Forand, who has served since 1936 and, to Rep. Fogarty, seeking an eighth term. Both have solid labor support in a State where labor is highly vocal about Republican inattention to heavy unemployment.

Interestingly, Rhode Island seems to be the New England State where Pres. Eisenhower's personal popularity is lowest.

In Woonsocket and other cities where textile unemployment is extremely heavy, the Eisenhower stock is well below par. Administration policies are blamed for many of the industry's ills, with GOP prestige suffering and Democrats getting credit with efforts to help the textile towns.

PROMISE to keep fighting for improved Rhode Island economy is made by Rep. Aime Forand (D.) to Elizabeth Nord, manager of TWUA's joint board in Providence and Pres. Sal Andreozzi (center) of TWUA Local 1348.

Textile Leader Opposes Martin

A vice president of the CIO Textile Workers, Edward Doolan, is giving House Speaker Joe Martin (R.) a hard battle for his congressional seat.

Doolan, Fall River area director for TWUA-CIO, is making a strong bid in Massachusetts' 14th Dist., which Martin has represented since 1924.

The carefully gerrymandered district pits Republican towns against strongly Democratic cities or parts of cities where feeling against Martin runs high because of unemployment. Doolan recently wired Martin to "stop gallivanting" around the country supporting other GOP hopefuls and attend to the problems of his own district.

BIRTHDAY cake fo feature of Rhode Is

idates get Massachu- 'oster Furcolo (second spirant, greets Robert Murphy, candidate for governor. CIO Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson (left) and Ed Doolan, seeking Speaker Martin's seat, watch.

at Boston PAC rally left photo) as Council er beams. At right, endorsement won, Murphy shakes with CIO Dir. Hugh Thompson. Council Sec.-Treas. Sal Camelio (left) and Belanger look on.

ond from left), backed ut's 5th Dist. confers with CIO-PAC staff including State Council Sec.-Treas. John Driscoll (standing, left).

Sen. Green, 87, was d PAC rally.

CAMPAIGN checks were given by Pres. Harold Smith of UAW Local 1007.

Liberals In Uphill Fight 'Agin' Big Money Boys In Connecticut

UPHILL fights face many labor-supported candidates in Connecticut. With no Senate seat in contest, attention of the voters has focused on the race for Governor, while the vigorous jockeying for House seats is getting less than normal attention.

Observers note that, despite one of the most active organizations of CIO-PAC in the country, there is disturbing quiet from the voters. Each side chooses to interpret this omen differently.

Democrats say their rallies have been better attended, however, than in many years and that CIO groups are working harder than ever.

Abraham A. Ribicoff, former congressman who was nosed out for the Senate two years ago, is campaigning hard for the Governor's chair now occupied by John Lodge, a Republican, seeking his second four-year term. Democrats aren't underrating Lodge; he has healed many of his early breaches with party leaders, his wife's charm has made inroads into a large bloc of workers' votes and he has plenty of money for his campaign.

Hitting The Issues

Ribicoff has been hitting effectively at the issues, blasting the failure of the GOP to aid the State's economy, the unsuccessful drive for a steel mill using Labrador ore, and mounting costs of State government. He is making the best of platform and TV appearances to bring these issues home to the voters.

CIO has endorsed six Democrats for the five House districts and the at-large seat. Rep. Dodd, 1st Dist. incumbent, is regarded as a safe bet. Republicans are apprehensive about the fate of Rep. Seely-Brown and Rep. Cretella in the 2nd and 3rd Dists. where Henry H. Pierce, Jr., and James F. Gartland are gaining ground.

Joseph P. Lyford poses a genuine threat to the at-large seat of Rep. Sadlak (R.).

PLANT GATE introduction to Abraham A. Ribicoff, Democratic candidate for Governor in Connecticut (left), of a woman worker is made at dawn by Pres. S. E. Monti of CIO Steelworkers Local 1604 and Waterbury CIO Council.

Vermont—There's No Change There

Back in 1856 when John C. Fremont was the first Republican candidate, he carried Vermont.

The State has never wavered since although it came close in 1912 when the Bull Moose ticket split the GOP. There is little evidence that history will be written in the Green Mountain State's election returns next month.

If opposition to GOP policies crystallizes before election day, there is a chance that Democrats may pick up another House seat.

A Full-Time Job

The State CIO Council, sparked by Pres. Mitchell Sviridoff and Sec.-Treas. John J. Driscoll, has made PAC a full-time proposition, urging registration and compiling material on State and national issues.

Against them is ranged plenty of business money. Management interests in the State are overlooking no chances to plug Republican candidates.

In Bristol, busy manufacturing center, for example, one company has draped a huge "Vote Republican" banner across the front of its property where it can be seen by every worker.

New Hampshire CIO Splits Backing

OPTIMISM is running higher than ever before for the election of labor-endorsed candidates in New Hampshire.

Officials and rank-and-filers from the State CIO Council's PAC aren't taking much time out to admire the famed fall foliage as they criss-cross the State plugging for victory on the national and State fronts.

Council endorsements have gone to two Democrats and two Republicans for Senate and House vacancies.

Both Senate spots will be filled Nov. 2. Rep. Norris Cotton (R.) is regarded as a shoo-in for the unexpired term of the late Sen. Tobey. Cotton won a three-way race for the GOP nomination, defeating Sen. Upton. He had some CIO help in his primary fight, is getting more in the election race.

A more difficult fight faces likeable, youthful Mayor Gerald L. Morin of Laconia who faces incumbent Sen. Bridges (R.). No Democrat has won a New Hampshire Senate seat since 1933 but Morin is hammering at Bridges' record and may upset the dopesters.

Running strong with plenty of CIO support is Atty. Thomas J. McIntyre, a Democrat whom many Republicans expect to defeat Rep. Merrill (R.) in the 1st Dist.

Merrill is a student of foreign affairs but has taken no stand on domestic issues like unemployment which is heavy in his area.

CIO help is also going to former State Senate Pres. Perkins Bass (R.) who looks like a sure winner in the 2nd Dist. seat vacated by Cotton. Bass has a liberal background.

Mayor John Shaw of Rochester, an able administrator, can very well become the State's first Democratic Governor since 1925.

Council Pres. George Fecteau says: "Anything Maine does, we can do better."

NEW HAMPSHIRE political support for Democratic and Republican candidates is discussed by Pres. George Fecteau of State CIO Council (right) with CIO Rep. Maurice Dineen (left) and CIO Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson in Manchester.

The Fight For Congress

California Labor, Liberals On Move

By HENRY SANTIESTEVAN
Special Correspondent

Another Campaign Exclusive

CALIFORNIA, long the nation's pivotal State in presidential elections, can cause an off-year shift in party control of Congress next Nov. 2.

The sprawling, politically potent State has enough marginal districts to give the Democrats control—if the word now being put out by trend-observers comes true.

Sec.-Treas. John A. Despol of the CIO California Industrial Union Council had this to say:

"California is a cinch to gain additional liberal congressmen. There will be a gain of at least two and possibly as many as 12."

Dir. Irwin L. DeShetler of CIO Reg. XIII said:

"The trend in California is Democratic. We can elect our candidate, Sam Yorty, to the U. S. Senate if we do our job."

California's present congressional delegation is made up of 11 Democrats and 19 Republicans. Chances are excellent, observers claim, that all incumbent Democrats will be returned except for Yorty, in the 26th Dist., who relinquished his seat to vie for the Senate.

A Sweep

On statewide races, CIO observers see it this way: Democratic candidates, headed by Yorty for the Senate and Richard Graves for Governor, will win or lose as a slate.

"They started from scratch at filing time," said Despol, "and had gone a third of the way by the primaries. Now they are within 3% of winning. It's an uphill fight all the way, but we can win it."

A victory for Yorty will "knock out McCarthy," Despol held.

"It takes only one vote to change control of the Senate," he said. "We believe Yorty will win, but he could win or lose by less than two votes a precinct. If we get out the liberal-labor vote, he'll be on the winning side."

A 12% vote shift, such as that in Maine, could elect 26 Democrats, a CIO California Industrial Union Council survey indicated. A 7% change would add six Democrats, while a 3% shift would bring in at least two new ones, according to the survey.

Of the incumbents, talk is that Robert L. Condon, 6th Dist., target of a vicious smear attack, is undergoing the toughest battle for re-election but will win.

Jimmie Roosevelt, oldest son of the late Pres. Roosevelt, is generally conceded to be a winner in the district vacated by Yorty.

Among other new faces California may send to the House is Tim O'Reilly (D.), being given a better than even chance to cop the 13th Dist. This district is now represented by a lame duck Republican, Ernest K. Bramblett, who was found guilty of salary kickbacks in Washington and did not run for reelection.

CIOer Is Running

The CIO could well send one of its own to the House—Philip O'Rourke, vice president of the American Radio Association, who is waging a hard battle in the 4th Dist., in the San Francisco area.

In the contest for Governor, Graves is proving a tough, uphill battler. Faced with a fight against a well-entrenched GOP incumbent, Gov. Goodwin Knight, he has battled his way to a position where he could knock off a victory.

Graves' running mate is Edward Roybal, popular vote-getting Los Angeles city councilman and the Democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor. The consistently liberal record of the young Mexican-American Councilman has given him a loyal following, especially in densely-populated Los Angeles County, that produced a startingly strong primary vote.

His following undoubtedly will be a factor in the outcome and could produce the extra push needed to swing the Democratic slate into the victory column.

Legislative Contests

As for the Legislature, said Despol, "we are sure to gain additional liberals in the Assembly and Senate."

There will be a gain of from two to four liberals in the Senate, and from five to 12 in the Assembly, the Council Secretary predicted. However, at best this would still fall short of a majority in the Senate, as only half of that body is up for election.

"In the Assembly, on basic liberal issues we had 29 out of 80 votes," he said. "We now have a potential of 41 liberal votes—seven or eight of which would be Republicans."

The Marginal Districts

DeShetler and Despol have joined in urging full CIO participation in the campaign to support endorsed candidates.

"Our major decisions in California this election," they said, "will depend on what happens in the large number of marginal districts. Most of these outcomes will depend on labor-liberal votes. We can win.

"This is where the role of thousands of CIO Political Action Committee and labor-liberal workers becomes decisive . . . it is up to us to get the issues to the people, and to get out the vote."

VETERAN DEMOCRATIC congressmen in California help political novices George Arnold (seated, left) and Bill Roskam (seated, center), aspirants in 24th and 21st Dists., get tips from (left to right) Reps. Hagen, Moss, Holifield and Doyle. At right, CIO Family Participation Conference in Los Angeles attracted, among others (left to right), Sec.-Treas. Albert T. Lunceford of Los Angeles CIO Council; Chairman Richard B. Cartwright of Council PAC; Sylvia A. Yuster, conference chairman; Cele Carrigan, UAW; Adel Hamilton, ACWA, and Jeri Despol, CIO State Council.

There's A Change In Coast Politics

Things aren't what they used to be since California changed its 40-year-old cross-filing law, under which candidates for political office could file on any ticket in the primaries.

It used to be that 80% of the incumbents won in primary contests. This year, however, there were primary runoffs in 95% of the districts instead of the usual 20%, and a lot more activity in the first campaign. The Reason: primary candidates for the first time had to identify themselves by party.

Union Wives Blame Mum Mates For Political Inaction

UNION men too often fail to tell their wives the union's attitude on political candidates and issues, the wives complained at a CIO Family Participation Conference in Los Angeles last week.

"And a lot of women are too embarrassed by their own ignorance to ask," one of them added.

Nearly 100 women CIO members and wives of male members attended the conference. At the conclusion of the weekend sessions, they set up a continuing committee to organize a CIO Women's Activity Group charged with arranging further conferences and with directing participation in the election campaign.

The delegates discussed the role of women in politics and in community groups, and attempted to determine why more of them are not interested in political activity.

Men came in for some sharp criticism. Some of them were accused by the delegates of an "attitude of superiority" which makes many women hesistant about entering politics.

However, the delegates admitted that women are acquiring more confidence in themselves and more interest in public questions despite the attitude of the men. They showed particular interest in public issues such as overcrowded schools, juvenile delinquency—especially the narcotics problem—taxes, and traffic and transportation problems.

MRS. ESTHER MURRAY, field director of the National CIO Political Action Committee's Women's Div. and once a Democratic candidate for Congress from a Los Angeles district, told the women what they could do in politics and reported upon women's activities in other parts of the country.

Sec.-Treas. Albert T. Lunceford of the Greater Los Angeles CIO Council and Chairman Richard B. Cartwright of the Council's PAC welcomed the women and later joined with Mrs. Murray in answering their questions. William Stout, radio commentator, addressed a luncheon and urged the women to get into politics.

Sylvia A. Yuster, president of the Office Workers Local Industrial Union, presided.

CIO In California Pushing 10-Point Political Program

IN MOBILIZING CIO activity, the State CIO Council, in cooperation with California's county and city councils, is pushing this 10-point program:

- Surveys which presented CIOers with a factual picture of the political situation;
- During registration periods, it helped finance selected drives, particularly those involving minority groups, Democratic clubs and selected districts;
- Coordinated PAC Voluntary Dollar Drives;
- Plans to print one million copies of CIO voting records for distribution, plus other political literature;
- Compile and publish material on important ballot issues for distribution to CIO members and the public;
- Mobilize every CIO leader in the State to work on political action full time for at least the final two weeks of the campaign;
- Put on direct-mail fund raising drives for several candidates, with appeals going to non-CIOers;
- Aided in filling Hollywood Bowl for the recent appearance of Adlai Stevenson;
- Some 20,000 active Democrats on State CIO Council lists were provided with materials on issues and voting records;
- Assist in providing personnel to statewide campaigns.

STANDARD BEARERS—Heading Democratic ticket in California are (from left): Rep. Yorty (D.), PAC-endorsed U. S. Senate candidate; Richard Graves, for governor, and Edward Roybal, for lieutenant-governor.

CWA Aide Seeks California Post

Jack P. D'Angelo, Jr. 29-year-old president of Local 9423 of the CIO Communications Workers in San Jose, has won the Democratic nomination for the California Senate.

He was endorsed by his local, the CWA international, the State CIO, Auto Workers, Steelworkers, Clothing Workers, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and several other labor groups.

The State Campaigns

Wisconsin's Farmers Are Boiling Mad

By ROBERT TREUER
Special Correspondent

Another Campaign Exclusive

WISCONSIN farmers from all parts of the State gathered last week at Manawa for their annual plowing contest. Despite pouring rain and ankle-deep mud, some 5000 turned out—and with them came CIO representatives, passing out literature.

By the time Republican Gov. Walter Kohler, who is seeking re-election, made his appearance in late afternoon most of the crowd had melted away.

"I've got to get home to do my chores," one farmer said on leaving. "Why should I stick around and listen to that windbag? He and his party haven't done anything for me."

The CIO representatives at the plowing contest, led by Charles M. Schultz, State CIO Council president and a number of farmers passed out lapel tags reading "I am a member of the $1.31 Club." (The price of average Wisconsin farmers' milk checks had dropped $1.31 per hundredweight from November 1952, when Eisenhower was elected, to August 1954. The tags urged farmers to vote Democratic this year.)

Warm Reception

The warm, enthusiastic reception accorded to CIOers at the plowing contest has been repeated many times at joint farm-labor conferences, the latest being held in Edgerton.

Another sign is the exchange of speakers between one of the State's largest farm organizations and the State CIO at their respective conventions this year.

In Wisconsin, where farm voters exert a strong political pressure, this trend to farm-labor solidarity is being viewed with alarm in Republican circles, for it stems from the lively PAC organizations in each of the 10 congressional districts.

Over the past years, these committees have been organized as a common meeting ground for farmers and factory workers, and sympathetic liberals as well.

Each of these 10 committees elects a "congressional district PAC coordinator"—who acts as administrative political action chief for the district. Between elections, these District PAC organizations distribute literature to farmers, conduct registration drives in the cities and promote educational events.

MY ACHING FEET—Staunch campaigner Henry Reuss is running for Congress in 5th Dist., hard-hit industrial area in Milwaukee.

THE RIGHT IDEA—This young daughter (left) of a Wisconsin CIO-PAC election day volunteer reminds her elders of their date on Nov. 2. At Milwaukee PAC's north side headquarters (center photo), Emil Bullerman checks precinct assignments with two door-to-door canvassers, George Kiphart and Ralph Amerling. Every voter counts (right), as volunteers help invalid to polls on primary day. Wisconsin PAC will have some 800 volunteers at work on Nov. 2.

'The Best Team' Gets Backing For Congress

"The best team of candidates ever to enter a Wisconsin congressional campaign" is getting CIO support.

Endorsement was made in each of the 10 districts and reviewed and approved by the CIO-PAC steering committee. In every case people in the districts made their own choice.

Results At The Polls

The result of this organizational work was seen, in part, after the votes were counted in the Sept. 14 primary:

More farmers and workers had voted Democratic in Wisconsin than ever before, and the proportion of Democratic votes had also risen to a new record high.

This was more than a farm rebellion against falling incomes, or a city workers' revolt against unemployment. Both these reactions had been measured on the Wisconsin political barometer before, yet the Sept. 14 result exceeded previous recordings.

For the first time in its history, the all-powerful Republican Voluntary Committee is fearful. This body, which time and again has whipped liberal Republicans back into the conservative fold and has absolute control over GOP pursestrings, is now wondering whether Nov. 2 is such a sure thing after all in traditionally-Republican Wisconsin.

A Fireball Campaign

The Democratic candidate for governor, William Proxmire, is a fireball campaigner whose personality and forthright campaigning has drawn hysterical invective from the GOP.

Proxmire keeps hammering away on the issues of poor State financing, unjust tax exemptions for railroads and banks, and takes an occasional swipe at Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.)—giving warning in advance that no Democratic Administration would stand still for any cover-ups of the Senator's tax and financial shenanigans.

Political observers agree that the CIO Congressional District Committees have pumped new blood and enthusiasm into the Democratic Party.

A Test Last Year

The first sign of this came last year from the 9th Dist. when a special election was held to fill the vacancy left by Merlin Hull's death. CIO-endorsed Lester Johnson was elected—the first Democrat to represent the district. His election was a victory not for CIO alone, but rather for the teamwork of farm-co-op-labor solidarity, made possible by the permanently established Congressional District Committee.

The entire Wisconsin CIO program depends not so much on "endorsement" of candidates by a top group as on active participation of rank and file members. Congressional candidates, for example, are endorsed by the members of the Congressional District PAC, then approved by the State CIO-PAC Steering Committee.

Work On Election Day

The growing participation in PAC resulted, for example, in over 200 poll workers in Milwaukee County for the primary election alone. It is expected that on Nov. 2, there will be between 800 and 1,000 such canvassers going door-to-door to get out the vote.

It would be overconfident to expect a Democratic sweep in Wisconsin this year; but Schultz and State CIO Sec.-Treas. Ross Baum sum it up this way:

"We may pick up at least one, and perhaps as many as four Congressional seats. On the state level, we are in the best position we have ever been in to score—but we still have a way to go.

"The entire PAC organization is functioning smoothly, and everybody is working hard. If it can be done, the CIO members in Wisconsin and their many friends will do it."

Senate Vote In Nevada Ordered

Republican efforts to block a Nevada election to fill the seat of the late Sen. McCarran (D.) were finally tossed out by the State Supreme Court.

The court ruled that the Senator to fill out the balance of McCarran's term must be selected by popular vote on Nov. 2. Candidates will be Alan Bible, former State attorney general and a McCarran follower, and Ernest S. Brown, Republican already named to the Senate by Gov. Charles H. Russell.

Here's Digest Of PAC Action On 10 Congressional Contests

Here is the list of the PAC-recommended candidates for House seats from Wisconsin's congressional districts:

1st Dist.—Edward A. Krenzke (D.), vigorous Racine County district attorney, over incumbent Rep. Smith (R.) with a "zero" labor record.

2nd Dist.—Democrat Gaylord Nelson, with a good record in the Legislature, against Rep. Davis (R.).

3rd Dist.—Joseph Seep (D.), who favored improved unemployment compensation "as a bulwark against depression and layoffs," over Rep. Withrow (R.).

4th Dist.—Rep. Clement Zablocki (D.) to succeed himself. Zablocki has a 100% voting record as "a staunch fighter who never gives up."

5th Dist.—Democrat Henry Reuss, endorsed unanimously over incumbent Rep. Kersten, a McCarthy supporter. Reuss is a member of Milwaukee's school board and is campaigning vigorously in the city's industrial north side, hard hit by unemployment.

6th Dist.—Russell Johnson (D.) against Rep. Van Pelt (R.). Johnson is president of the Wisconsin Council of Machinists, has a record of activity on behalf of farm and labor groups.

7th Dist.—Democrat Kenneth Anderson against Rep. Laird (R.). Anderson, a Stevens Point attorney, has a long record of civic interest. A LaFollette Progressive for many years, he is well known for his stands on public issues.

8th Dist.—Jerome Reinke, Kewaunee Democrat, over incumbent Rep. Byrnes (R.). Reinke is a wounded war veteran who become a lawyer and district attorney of Kewaunee County.

9th Dist.—Rep. Johnson, Democratic incumbent, has added endorsements from farm, co-op and small business groups. He earned the reluctant praise of Republicans for his fight for corrective farm legislation.

10th Dist.—Democrat Basil G. Kennedy endorsed over Rep. O'Konksi (R.). Kennedy is a conservationist with a good background of civic activity.

LABOR SUPPORTED—Two PAC-recommended candidates in Wisconsin are William Proxmire (left), Democratic nominee in an uphill race for governor, and Rep. Johnson (D.), who upset Republicans a year ago and now seeks re-election.

'From Pulpit To Picket Line'—

Drolet Cited For 'Service To Labor's Rights'

By GERVASE N. LOVE

TWENTY YEARS of "distinguished service to labor's rights" won renewed recognition last week when Rev. Jerome A. Drolet, pastor of St. Charles Catholic Church, Thibodaux, La., was presented with the David L. Clendenin Award of the Workers Defense League.

Leaders and members of labor and civic groups, including the CIO, joined to honor the Illinois-born labor priest at a luncheon in New York for activities "from the pulpit to the picket line" on behalf of oppressed workers in many southern states.

Practically every CIO union that has had an organization campaign or a strike in Louisiana and nearby states has received his help and encouragement, and often he has marched on their picket lines.

HE WON widespread commendation in labor and liberal circles for his extensive aid to the strike of the AFL Agricultural Workers Union in Louisiana sugar cane fields last year, and more recently for his valiant but losing fight against enactment of the State's "right to scab" law.

BRONZE PLAQUE symbolic of Workers Defense League Clendenin Award is displayed by Rev. Jerome A. Drolet (center), Thibodaux, La., labor priest, to Judge Harold A. Stevens (right), who presented it to him at a luncheon in New York, and Pres. Joseph A. Beirne of the CIO Communications Workers, a speaker.

"It is good to know that a man like Father Drolet was selected for this award," said Joseph A. Beirne, CIO vice president and president of the Communications Workers, who represented CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

"He has earned it. This is part of his riches that money cannot buy. He has the kind of strength that all of us seek, that spiritual strength which is the wealth he can give to others."

Judge Harold A. Stevens, of the New York City Court of General Sessions, who presented the bronze plaque to Father Drolet, lauded his alertness "in fighting those who will corrupt," for his efforts to preserve civil liberties, and for his "practical application of the papal social encyclicals . . . and giving them vitality."

In a response, Father Drolet said he accepted the award not so much for himself as "because of the many sacrifice-minded clergy who quietly and without distinction give themselves in the struggle for social justice."

He appealed to the labor movement to step up its organizing in the South for the good of the people in other parts of the country as well as of workers in the South. Communism, while "a terribly real and true threat to our civil liberties," is not the only menace, he said, "and we have to fight them all."

"Our fight against communism has to be positive, otherwise it is sterile," he said. "Communism is not the cause but the result of social injustice, of the exploitation of man by man.

"It is not by speeches, but by prudent and bold reforms in our social structure that we can meet that menace. This is the only effective means of fighting communism."

He also told of trying to block "that immoral and sinful legislation, the so-called right to work act," in Louisiana, and predicted it will be off the statute books soon.

OTHER SPEAKERS were Norman Thomas, who presided; John F. Finerty, noted civil liberties lawyer; Pres. H. L. Mitchell of the AFL Agricultural Workers, and Rowland Watts, WDL secretary.

Previous winners of the Clendenin Award, which honors the memory of the late David L. Clendenin, one of the founders of the WDL, include Reuther and CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey.

Labor's World—

Guatemala Labor Curbs Lifted; ICFTU Urges UN Job Action

RESTRICTIONS on Guatemalan trade unions have been ordered lifted as a result of joint action by the two labor groups, according to word received by Daniel Benedict, associate director of the CIO Dept. for International Affairs.

Following an open letter to Pres. Castillo Armas strongly protesting the continued violation of workers' rights and the serious hampering of union activities, the government sent word to district and local officials directing them not to interfere with the meetings of unions or their other legal organizational activities.

The protest was signed by the National Committee for Trade Union Reorganization (CNRS) and the Catholic-orientated Federation of Autonomous Unions (FAS).

IT CALLED UPON the government to stop arresting non-Communist unionists for their union activities, to cease hindering union meetings, and to end its blockade against the reorganization of unions.

In addition, it demanded the return of blocked union funds which belong to the workers, and asked for juridicial recognition of such important unions as the railway workers and United Fruit Co. employes.

The letter bluntly told Castillo that unless prompt action were taken, the two groups would suspend their activities in the absence of democratic guarantees.

It further warned him they would not be responsible for attacks on his government by anti-Communist bodies in other countries.

THE NEW Guatemalan government, in the past, has indicated a sympathy for unionism. Nevertheless many employers, including the U. S.-owned United Fruit Co. and its subsidiary, the International Railroad Co. of Central America, have summarily discharged active unionists and otherwise opposed effective organization.

The CIO has repeatedly warned the U. S. firms that such practices are detrimental to Guatemalan workers and the good reputation of the U. S., and that they violate assurances given U. S. government officials.

In the election last week Guatemalan voters picked delegates to a constitutional convention. On a "yes" or "no" ballot, about 99% endorsed Castillo, the government said.

Malaya

Five unions of rubber workers, with approximately 80,000 members, have merged into the National Union of Plantation Workers as a result of moves for unity prompted by Tom Bavin, ICFTU plantations representative, and P. P. Narayanan, chairman of the unions' joint negotiating committee.

Nazi Group Says It's 'Ally' Of McCarthy

A group of Nazis whose return to power in post-war Germany has been blocked by democratic forces last week appealed to Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) for help, asking him to regard them as his "allies, forerunners in battle and prophets."

The appeal was in the form of an open letter from Karl Strieder, a state chairman of the "Association of Those Damaged By Denazification." It expressed approval of McCarthy's "fighting aims," asked him to help get the American officials out of Germany, and invited him to confer with representatives of the group.

THE VIEWS of the free labor movement on some of the problems before the UN General Assembly were spelled out last week in a comprehensive statement presented to government delegations by the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

The ICFTU made it clear that full employment on a worldwide scale is a "social, economic and political necessity," and urged that it be given priority over all other national and international economic objectives.

The statement expressed the hope that the ICFTU program, given at the last session of the UN Economic & Social Council, would be taken into account in any UN actions likely to affect the level of employment in any part of the world.

THE ICFTU also renewed its proposal for the immediate establishment of a UN fund for economic development of underdeveloped countries and of an international finance corporation with safeguards to protect workers' rights in nations aided.

It urged adoption of the covenant on human rights, as it has done in the past, but insisted on the inclusion of "the right to form and join local, national and international trade union organizations of the workers' own choice for the protection of their interests."

In addition, it asked the General Assembly to set up, with the Intl. Labor Organization, a permanent Committee on Forced Labor.

The ICFTU appealed for immediate contributions to the UN Refugee Emergency Fund, citing existence of the problem as evidence that "for freedom, many are ready to risk privation, insecurity and indeed life itself."

Taylor Of UAW Is Named FOA Labor Chief In Europe

APPOINTMENT of Barney B. Taylor, assistant public relations director of the CIO Auto Workers, as area labor adviser in Europe for the Foreign Operations Administration has been announced.

Taylor, since 1948 managing editor of UAW's monthly paper, The Auto Worker, has been active in labor affairs for over 15 years.

He was named by FOA Dir. Harold E. Stassen on the recommendation of FOA's labor advisory committee consisting of representatives of CIO, AFL and the railroad brotherhoods.

As area adviser with headquarters in Paris, Taylor will coordinate the efforts of FOA labor advisers in 10 European countries. Their function is to strengthen free labor unions, develop opportunities for intercountry cooperation on labor matters, promote the concept of productivity and work toward free labor's unity in Europe.

Taylor, a native of Belton, Tex., was on the staff of the Washington Post from 1934 to 1941 and served as president and later as the first executive secretary of the Newspaper Guild local. He was named as ANG-CIO international representative in 1942.

Norwegian Unionist Honored By CIO

Konrad Nordahl, president of the Norwegian Federation of Trade Unions and a member of his country's delegation to the UN General Assembly meeting, visited National CIO headquarters last week.

At a luncheon attended by CIO officials and staff members and representatives of the Norwegian Embassy, Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey presented him with an inscribed gavel.

LABOR ADVISER in Europe for FOA is new role for Barney B. Taylor, assistant public relations director for CIO Auto Workers. Swearing-in ceremony took place in Washington. From left: Dir. Victor G. Reuther of CIO Dept. for Intl. Affairs, Taylor, UAW Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey and William Russell, FOA official.

GEORGIA CIO honors W. H. Crawford (left) by presenting him with plaque on retirement as Council president. Pres. William Sapp of USA-CIO Local 2401, Atlanta, presents plaque. In animated conversation at right are (from left) Southern CIO Dir. Carey Haigler, Reg. Dir. Charles Gillman and Assistant Councils Dir. Carl McPeak.

Georgia CIO Fights Talmadge Move To Kill Public Schools, Keep Bias

AN ALL-OUT effort was pledged by the Georgia CIO Council convention at Macon to defeat Gov. Talmadge's proposed constitutional amendment to abolish the State's public school system—the oldest in U. S.

The proposal would send children to private schools to perpetuate segregated education which the Supreme Court has outlawed.

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey delivered a blistering attack on the Eisenhower Administration and called on the delegates "to carry on the trade union job of political action that is going to be so essential to the country over between now and Nov. 2."

Carey, who also is president of the CIO Electrical Workers, said the "banners" of Eisenhower's "great crusade are smeared with oil from the payoffs of those who lubricate the wheels of the Republican bandwagon."

He said the crusade banners were sullied by "the members of Eisenhower's own party, the men who selected him to lead and then proceeded to make mockery of the things he promised in his campaign speeches."

Carey pointed out that the Administration had not lived up to Eisenhower's campaign promises to cut taxes and balance the budget. He also said that 'if we have a firm, stable, unyielding foreign policy for as long as an hour, that becomes a red-letter day in State Dept. history."

HE ALSO reiterated the CIO demand that Assistant Sec. of Commerce Lothair Teetor be fired.

Carey said that "greed for profits" was causing companies to move their plants South in the hope that they could get rich quicker "by paying substandard wages and extracting a higher workload because the people had never had a yardstick before to evaluate the intention of these migrants."

He predicted that these runaway plants would "find the same union at their front door."

THE CONVENTION elected W. H. Montague, an Auto Worker, as president to succeed William H. Crawford, who was presented with a plaque on his retirement after serving for three years. The plaque honored Crawford, who is the CIO Steelworkers' district director, "for his life of dedication to the labor movement, and for his ability to build strong unions."

State Curbs On Compensation Benefits Hit By Clayman

CONTINUED efforts of legislatures to block "humane liberalization" of workmen's compensation laws will force unions to seek justice for injured workers at the bargaining table.

That's what Sec.-Treas. Jacob Clayman of the Ohio CIO Council told the 40th annual convention of the Intl. Association of Industrial Accident Boards and Commissioners at Quebec, Can.

He cited the Ohio law as a "horrible example" of what has happened in the field of such legislation. He said the average worker in the early days of workmen's compensation could draw a weekly maximum benefit equal to approximately two-thirds of his weekly wage, but today the injured worker can receive no more than approximately 40% of his weekly pay.

"Already the drums are rolling on this front," Clayman said. "There are some disability contracts in existence between the CIO Steelworkers and steel companies which scale as high as $60 a week.

"In the realistic atmosphere of the bargaining room where the hard facts are more potent than political pressure, the spokesmen of management recognize the pitiful shortcomings of workmen's compensation stipends. If management has come to this realization, it is not time for state legislatures to do likewise?"

Monopoly In The Mills—

'It's The Same Old South,' Says Rieve

"THE NEW South is just the 'old South' in a slightly different form," Pres. Emil Rieve told the CIO Textile Workers southern conference in Charlotte, N .C.

"Instead of plantation owners, you have mill-owners," Rieve asserted. "Aside from that, there is very little difference—except that there was easier work and more security on the plantations."

He pointed to the textile industry's depressed condition in the South and said 41 southern mills had been liquidated since early 1953 with a consequent loss of 10,000 jobs. Industry employment has shrunk, he went on, to 580,000 jobs in the South, 80,000 less than three years ago.

RIEVE told the 350 delegates that the "friendly little mill in the valley with the owner who lived on the hill and took care of everybody in the village" has almost disappeared. Today's typical mill owner, he said, is "a corporation with headquarters in New York or Boston or, sometimes, Atlanta or Charlotte."

Its officers, the TWUA head continued, "care a lot more about the price of cotton than about the problems of the workers or the community."

He cited Burlington Mills as the biggest firm in the industry and "with possibly the most outstanding anti-union record in our jurisdiction." Rieve pointed to mergers in the past two years in which a few companies have swallowed dozens of small competitors.

Opposing mergers, he conceded, was futile. Instead, he called for organizing to build a stronger union to combat "big impersonal corporations under absentee ownership."

THE NEW OWNERS, Rieve charged, "are paying the lowest wages to their workers of any large, basic industry and pay themselves the highest salaries of any large, basic industry."

He urged campaigns for repeal of "right to work" laws, improved unemployment compensation and workmen's compensation.

"In all of these campaigns we must hammer away at one basic truth—the lack of union organization, the lack of adequate state laws, is costing the southern states millions of dollars a year. . . . Everyone in the community is being held down by the low-wage philosophy of the industrial giants and their political hirelings," Rieve said.

EMIL RIEVE
Not many changes . . .

New Answer To The Old Runaround

VICTORY in a National Labor Relations Board election doesn't always result in a union contract, Pres. Emil Rieve reminded delegates to the southern conference of the CIO Textile Workers.

"We have won at least 70 elections in the South since the end of World War II where no contract was ever negotiated. The will of the workers has been frustrated by illegal means; yet there is no legal remedy," Rieve said.

Taft-Hartley changes were an old story, Rieve admitted, but he offered some new constructive proposals. As part of the certification of a union by NLRB, it should be entitled to certain minimum conditions, such as grievance procedure with arbitration and the voluntary checkoff of dues.

"These conditions," Rieve went on, "would remain in effect until they were replaced by an agreement between the parties—in other words a contract. I think such provisions would put an end to the problem of the southern employers' refusal to bargain, and I defy anyone to say it is unfair or unworkable."

'Business Needs Maturity For Better Industrial Relations'

BETTER industrial cooperation in the U. S. is going to require "a growth in the maturity and responsibility of our great corporations in their relationships with labor."

Carey

CIO Sec.-Treasurer James B. Carey made this observation last week in an address to the University of Minnesota Industrial Relations Center in Minneapolis.

A first basis for good industrial relations, Carey said, is a full recognition of the existence, the validity and the positive values for every group in the nation that are inherent in trade unionism.

"Corporation presidents, editorial writers, conservative politicians, keep assuring us that labor is now a full partner in America,—that it is here to stay, that it is fully recognized," the CIO official continued. "Much of the time, that section of the speech is immediately followed by a plea for labor to give up something that labor holds dear and precious."

Carey said he would believe the compliments more when he saw them being practiced as well as preached. He declared there is too little real collective bargaining when labor and management sit down together. There is, he asserted, too much "take it or leave it."

So much "suspicion and recrimination," Carey declared, "points to the fact that there is still lacking a complete acceptance of labor as a full-fledged partner in the American scene."

Speaking from his experience as president of the CIO Electrical Workers, Carey assailed the labor relations policies of General Electric.

He credited the scientists in the GE laboratories with a constant stream of inventions and discoveries that have contributed mightily to the welfare and living standards of the American

"In contrast," he charged, "the labor relations policy of General Electric is hammered out, so far as we in the IUE can make out, by a blacksmith—and a second-rate blacksmith, at that."

Carey contended that GE entered the collective bargaining relationship "to blackjack an acceptance of its rigid and penny-pinching demands."

Pending outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, Carey expressed hope the law would be amended to make it more fair and equitable. He said he hoped Pres. Eisenhower would not veto "improving amendments — improvements which I anticipate a Democratic controlled 84th Congress will vote in 1955."

Vote Set At Atom Plants

SOME 4500 Chemical Workers at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Paducah, Ky., atomic plants of the Carbon & Carbide Chemicals Corp. will vote Oct. 21 and 22 on whether to accept a 6c an hour wage offer. The offer was recommended by a fact-finding board named by Pres. Eisenhower.

The workers rejected the offer when they struck for three days last July. They returned to work under a Taft-Hartley injunction when the government promised to review health, housing and community problems of all the nation's atomic energy workers. The injunction expires Oct. 30.

You And Your Money—

FTC Accuses N. Y. Coffee Traders Of Rigging Java Price Increases

THE FEDERAL Trade Commission caught up with the CIO News last week and charged that the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange "promoted substantial increases" in coffee prices last year and this.

The FTC issued a formal complaint alleging the exchange, four of its officers, eight members and the New York Coffee & Sugar Clearing Association, Inc., illegally restrained international trade in America's favorite beverage and forced consumers to pay an extra $300 million for it in the first eight months of 1954.

The CIO News on Apr. 26 said the consumer "has been paying the bill for various price fixing schemes, artifically created shortages and other manipulations by coffee traders and bankers to raise prices and profits."

The FTC complaint charges "an agreement, understanding and common course of action" by the exchange, its members and the clearing association "to restrict and restrain" the entering into of contracts for the purchase and sale of coffee for future delivery, the trading in such contracts, and the actual buying and selling of coffee itself.

The FTC maintained that the contract has the effect of limiting future trading to coffee shipped to this country from Santos, Brazil. This amounts to only about 10% of the coffee imported into the U. S. annually, but its futures prices, the FTC held, are used "as a base for determining the actual prices to the producers and consumers of coffee."

Use of the contract, the complaint said, has "contributed to and promoted substantial increases which the consuming public has been required to pay for coffee." With other trading practices, it alleged, it has "a dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition in the purchase and sale of coffee in interstate and foreign commerce."

The complaint followed an FTC economic report, made public in July, which said the wave of price boosts in 1953 and 1954 "cannot be explained in terms of the competitive laws of supply and demand."

The Woman's Angle—

Women Steam Up Humphrey Race

By ESTHER MURRAY
CIO-PAC Field Representative

MEMBERS of the Minnesota Women for Sen. Humphrey are appearing in public in their aprons these days.

Mrs. Murray

After all, says Mrs. J. K. Moen, chairman of the organization, the apron is the emblem of the housewife and government is essentially an extension of housekeeping.

The organization which is working for Humphrey's re-election has a membership of over 1200 women, including many of our CIO homemakers.

The women have used a number of novel ideas in their program which is built, for the most part, around the coffee hour. They have brought out that traditional housewife's bank, the sugar bowl, in which to collect "A Penny a Day To Help Humphrey Stay."

To start things off, the Women for Humphrey sponsored an exhibit of antique sugar bowls at the state fair and now each hostess for a coffee hour sets out her finest sugar bowl to collect pennies, nickels and dimes.

As aids to the coffee hour hostesses, the committee makes available recorded speeches by Sen. Humphrey and distributes copies of the Senator's favorite coffee cake recipe. A monthly newsletter goes to all members and each woman receives a campaign workbook and a big, pink and white campaign button.

Our first West Coast family participation conference touched off what promises to be a very lively women's PAC program in Los Angeles where the Greater Los Angeles CIO Council sponsored a recent conference. (See Page 10.)

'Trick Or Treat' The UNICEF Way—A New Hallowe'en Idea

HOW ABOUT a new style Hallowe'en in your local union this year?—a UNICEF Hallowe'en for all the world's children.

UNICEF means United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund.

This is a wonderful opportunity for group participation in your local—as well as local union participation in your community—in a traditional American holiday celebration which is fun for children and grown-ups and also will help bring health and happiness to children in 88 countries around the world as well.

This is how it works: Boys and girls in Hallowe'en garb will ring doorbells as usual and say "Trick or treat!" They will be wearing UNICEF arm bands and holding a UNICEF milk carton for donations of pennies, and they will say that they want to share their treats of coins with children less fortunate than they, children in many parts of the world suffering from hunger and disease.

AFTERWARDS, the contributions are counted at a bang-up Hallowe'en party in your local union hall, complete with apple-bobbing and guessing the ghost!

This is a constructive, not destructive Hallowe'en. Your community will hail your efforts. Your children will be happy in helping others and it starts them on the road to international understanding.

The UN Children's Fund—long supported by CIO—is the world's largest international effort to improve the health and welfare of children and mothers. UNICEF funds, which are more than matched by contributions from the assisted countries, help those countries to establish their own permanent health and nutrition facilities.

For full details on how to plan a UNICEF Trick and Treat Halloween, send $1 to U. S. Committee for UNICEF, United Nations, New York.

FOR ALL THE WORLD'S CHILDREN
UNICEF

Another Drop-In Center Opened For UAW Retirees

ANOTHER DROP-IN CENTER for retired CIO Auto Workers in the Detroit area was opened in the Dodge Local 3 hall.

Speakers included Mayor Zak of Hamtramck, Rep. Machrowicz (D. Mich.) and Dir. Norman Matthews of UAW-CIO Reg. 1.

Other Drop-In Centers in the Detroit area are located at halls of Hudson Local 154 and Lincoln Local 900.

More than 10,000 retired UAW-CIO members attended the Local 154 Drop-In Center last year. Five meetings of retirees were held in the Detroit area last week under the leadership of UAW-CIO Recreation Dir. Olga Madar.

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

IN A TIME when "surplus" butter, cheese, milk powder, eggs, grains and other foods are piled up in government warehouses in tremendous quantities, many families are still not getting enough and the proper kind of food for adequate nutrition.

A Better Diet For Your Family

The government today is the unwilling and worried owner of some 1.3 billion pounds of butter, cheese and milk as well as other foods which it skimmed off the market to keep up retail prices, as it must under present laws. In contrast, the U. S. Agriculture Dept. finds that:

Three out of 10 city families consumed less than a pint of milk or its equivalent per person per day in one recent year. One-third of the families were using less citrus fruits and tomatoes than they needed. Three out of 10 used fewer than five eggs per person per week.

A survey by the department in 1952 similarly found 35% of the families were not getting the recommended amounts of calcium which they would get from consuming enough milk and cheese. One out of five weren't getting enough ascorbic acid (vitamin C), or thiamine, riboflavin and niacin—the vital B vitamins necessary for normal growth and functioning of the body.

THE MAIN REASON for these dietary deficiencies in the midst of plenty, according to surveys by the Agriculture Dept., is that many families have too little income to buy enough of the kinds of food that maintain maximum health. The other reason, the department indicates, is the widespread lack of nutritional knowledge.

Surveys by the former Bureau of Home Economics and Human Nutrition found highest bracket families—incomes of $7500 or more—used twice as much milk, nearly twice as much meat, poultry, fish and eggs, and three times as much fresh fruit, as the lowest-income families.

Unless and until you get enough income to buy everything you need, you have to be an exceptional shopper, cook and nutritionist. Just ordinary knowledge is not enough to feed a family adequately in this time of high food prices without robbing yourself of other needs.

On a moderate income budget put milk and cheese first. For good nutrition, children need three or four cups of milk a day, and adults at least two, or its equivalent in milk products or cooked dishes that include milk. Studies show that women especially tend to use too little milk, less even than men and teen-agers who themselves often need more.

IN GENERAL, you'll get most nutrition on a modest food budget if you allot your food money along these lines: milk, cheese and other milk products, 28%; eggs, meat, fish, other proteins, 27%; fruits and vegetables, 23%; flour and cereals, 9%; fats and oils, 7%; sugar beverages, miscellaneous, 6%.

What is a moderate food budget? Most surveys indicate that even with economical buying and management, about $6-$7 a week is needed for each person, possibly a shade less for larger families because of the advantages of bulk buying and cooking, and lower costs of feeding small children. Assuming economical buying and cooking, it takes $6.50 to $7 a week to feed a man who does hard physical work, and teen-age boys; about $5.50 to $6 for a woman who does housework and teen-age girls, and about $3 a week for babies and toddlers.

You get some help with the food problem at this time from the lower prices of grass-fed beef. This is the lean beef without the marblings of fat through the lean, that makes grain-fed beef tender and suitable for broiling and dry roasting. But pound for pound this lower cost lean beef has more protein and vitamins than the prime and choice grades, even though it needs longer, moist cooking, as in stews and pot roasts.

Moderate-income families are also finding help with the vital problem of assuring themselves enough milk from the new half-gallon and gallon containers now offered by many distributors and stores, which save 1c to 3c a quart. There is also a new instant milk powder on sale which dissolves without beating. Thus you can make up as much skim milk as you need at a time—a glass to a quart—quickly and easily.

(Copyright 1954, by Sidney Margolius)

CIO Joins In Support Of UN Day

CIO SUPPORT of the United Nations by participation in the observance of UN Day, Oct. 24, has been urged by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

"World peace and security demand that a continued and strengthened United Nations organization be maintained," Reuther wrote the Labor Advisory Committee for UN Day.

Noting that "some shortsighted individuals and special interest isolationist groups" want to destroy the UN and any idea of international cooperation, Reuther urged all CIO affiliates to "join in every effort to broaden the understanding and appreciation of the United Nations."

"The United States Committee for United Nations Day needs help in making UN Day 1954 a success in your community," Reuther said. "Join with other organizations through a local committee for UN Day to develop a truly representative base for the United Nations. UN Day must be made a living symbol of world peace and security promoted through international understanding and cooperation."

Planning labor's participation has been going on throughout the year under the Labor Advisory Committee headed by Stuart P. Brock of the CIO Education and Research Dept. and Lewis Hines of the AFL. A special bulletin "Labor and UN Day" was issued and distributed to CIO and AFL affiliates.

The CIO Free World Labor Fund also is stepping up its work in connection with the celebration. Contributions of local unions to the fund are used to help trade unions in underdeveloped areas get the tools they need for organizing, education and bargaining activities.

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

IN THE PAST FEW MONTHS many of our city and state CIO councils have held their annual conventions, and before the year is out a few more will be holding their conventions.

The officers take the opportunity at convention time to report to the members the work that has been done in the past year by the councils and to adopt new programs for the year to come.

I want to take this opportunity to express my congratulations to all city and state council officers for their splendid efforts in making CIO a living part of their respective communities. The fine cooperation that we have enjoyed is due in large part to the untiring efforts of Assistant Dir. of Councils Carl McPeak.

The CIO through its city and state councils has become a vital part of communities throughout the country. Especially is this true in those huge urban areas where there are great numbers of CIO people who can participate in projects that concern their communities.

CIO members take part in almost every civic, public and charitable endeavor that must take place for a community to live and grow. Our people are on the school boards, Red Cross and Community Chest committees. CIO councils are the first to lend a hand in emergency situations, such as the recent flood and hurricane catastrophes in New England. In fact, we do our level best whenever and wherever we are called upon to render service and aid.

THE WORK OF THE COUNCILS in large part is due directly to international union officers, who recognize the important function of the councils and urge their membership everywhere to participate actively in council affairs. Then too, those of us in my office have cooperated with and have received every cooperation in turn from councils across the country.

As in all good things, our job is never done. We have done a good job in the past but there is still much to be done through councils that must become bigger and stronger, that can envision future needs of not only CIO people but all the people. We can accomplish our goals on the basis of dealing honestly and fairly with all those we work with.

I hope and trust that before the coming elections in November every CIO man and woman, and all eligible members of their families, will register to vote. Let's be effective in electing the best possible candidates for public office on the local scene as well as the national.

The people we help elect will be instrumental in determining whether we keep men at work and families secure. We must wipe out unemployment and make sure we keep able hands busily at work for a better and stronger America.

CIO REG. DIR. IRWIN DeSHETLER reports that the CIO Rubber Workers were victorious in an election at the Kirkhill Rubber Co., Orange, Calif., by a vote of 247 for CIO as against 223. CIO Rep. Frank Grillo handled this campaign.

Sec. Treas. Al Hartnett of the CIO Electrical Workers reports the following election victories: American Meter Co. (Metric), Erie, Pa., where a company-filed decertification petition for the Office Workers Unit was repudiated by a vote of 43 to 32 for no union; New England Carbide Tool Co., Cambridge, Mass., IUE-CIO 31, no union 14; Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., Buffalo, N. Y., IUE 4, no union 2; General Electric Co., Long Island City, N. Y., IUE-CIO 29, UE 2. In Westinghouse's new TV-radio plant at Brantford, Ont., IUE-CIO was certified to represent the 350 to 400 employes.

CIO Reg. Dir. Michael Mann reports that in an election at Automotive Enterprises, Inc., Newark, N. J., the workers favored the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union by a vote of 8 to 5 for no union.

CIO Rep. I. R. Gray reports that the CIO Stone & Allied Workers won an election at the Lone Star Cement Co. plant, Sweetwater, Tex., over the AFL by a vote of 93 to 41.

IUE Hits Lamp Industry On Blocking Pay Ruling

THE ELECTRIC lamp industry last week was accused by the CIO Electrical Workers of stalling on federal wage determination under the Walsh-Healey Act.

The charge was made by IUE-CIO Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett at a conference at the Labor Dept. called by Sec. Mitchell, who has power to set minimum wages on government contract work.

Hartnett pointed out that although a notice of the conference had been sent to industry representatives Oct. 1, they appeared unprepared.

Hartnett said Mitchell "indicated in no uncertain terms during his appearance before our Miami Beach convention that hearings would be held which would result in the requirements of the Walsh-Healey Act being met, specifically a determination of a minimum wage for the lamp industry."

"Not only was no progress made toward that objective but industry representatives seized upon the hearing to conduct a filibuster in calling for another new wage survey even though a survey was made of the industry for this purpose in 1952," he said.

It was agreed that both the unions—the AFL Electrical Workers also were represented—and the industry would present drafts on their positions to the Labor Dept. within a week.

6000 UAW Members Strike Six Ford Plants In Canada

SIX THOUSAND members of the CIO Auto Workers employed by the Ford Motor Co. in Canada went on strike last week when negotiations for a new contract broke down after 10 months of talking.

Picket lines were set up at six plants when a last ditch peace effort sparked by Mayor Arthur J. Reaume of Windsor, Ont., and carried on by Ontario Minister of Labor Charles Daley failed to yield a settlement. Ford's largest Canadian plant is in Windsor, which has been hard hit by unemployment.

The union originally asked a 15c an hour wage increase, but cut its demand to 4c, with improved medical and insurance protection, a seventh paid holiday, improved vacations, and a satisfactory interpretation of the seniority clause, which had caused many disputes.

THE COMPANY refused to increase wages, but offered to incorporate 8c an hour now paid under the cost of living escalator clause into the basic wage, slightly improve the vacation plan, and meet the union on the seniority clause.

"Regardless of what the union does," said Rhys M. Sale, president of the company's Canadian subsidiary, "our offer will not be bettered."

The union rejected the company proposal, but in spite of Sale's closing the door to further negotiation agreed to additional meetings when Reaume and Daley asked for them. The walkout was delayed for a week at Reaume's request.

George Burt, UAW-CIO Canadian director, said the basic issue is the company's attitude toward the union.

"The union has asked nothing that Chrysler and General Motors have not already given their employes," he added.

Ford is Canada's largest auto producer. Sale said the average production employe earns $1.69 an hour and that the union's demand, after it was reduced, would cost a total of 11c an hour.

CWA Signs Long Lines, 2 Other Pacts

NEW AGREEMENTS covering some 236,000 workers in 22 Bell Telephone companies have been won by the CIO Communications Workers.

More than 21,000 CWA-CIO members employed as long distance operators by the AT&T benefit under a new contract won after a move for strike action. Top pay boost was generally $2.50 a week, but went as high as $5.50.

In sharp contrast with other Bell companies, the Cincinnati & Suburban reached a settlement a week before the contract terminated. AT&T has only a majority interest in the firm. Increases range from $1 to $2.50 a week, and other benefits include some job upgrading, and improvements in inclement weather, seniority and holiday clauses.

SOME 800 installation, distribution and clerical workers are covered by the new agreement with Northern Electric, a Bell System unit in Canada. Wage increases range from 8c to 16c an hour.

Meanwhile, 1100 CWA-CIO members continued their strike at the Western Electric plant in Buffalo. Negotiators were still trying to reach agreements at Southern Bell, Pacific Telephone & Telegraph, and four Chesapeake and Potomac companies—Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia.

Give A Buck To PAC —The Job You Save May Be Your Own

LISTEN TO THE CIO RADIO PROGRAM

John W. Vandercook AND THE NEWS

every weekday evening on the ABC Network

Location	Station	Dial Position	Time
ALABAMA
Auburn	WAUD	1230	6:00
Birmingham	WSGN	610	7:15
Florence	WJOI	1340	6:00
Gadsden	WGAD	1350	7:15
Greenville	WGYV	1400	9:45
Mobile	WABB	1480	6:00
Montgomery	WAPX	1600	6:00
ARIZONA
Flagstaff	KGPH	690	4:00
Kingsman	KGAN	1230	6:45
Phoenix	KPHO	910	7:00
ARKANSAS
Little Rock	KLRA	1010	6:00
CALIFORNIA
Fresno	KARM	1430	6:00
Los Angeles	KABC	790	6:00
San Diego	KCBQ	1170	6:00
San Francisco	KGO	810	6:45
COLORADO
Denver	KVOD	630	7:00
Pueblo	KGHF	1350	7:00
CONNECTICUT
Hartford	WGTH	1410	7:15
New Haven	WELI	960	7:15
Torrington	WTOR	1490	7:00
Waterbury	WATR	1320	7:00
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Washington	WMAL	630	7:00
FLORIDA
Jacksonville	WPDQ	600	8:15 Mon thru Thurs; 7:15 Friday
Miami	WQAM	560	7:00
Tampa-St. Petersburg	WSUN	620	7:00
GEORGIA
Atlanta	WGST	920	7:00
Augusta	WGAC	580	7:00
Brunswick	WGIG	1440	7:00
Cornelia	WCON	1450	7:00
Macon	WNEX	1400	7:45
Rome	WLAQ	1410	7:00
ILLINOIS
Chicago	WLS	890	6:00
Peoria	WIRL	1290	6:00
Springfield	WCVS	1450	7:15
INDIANA
Bloomington	WTTS	1370	9:45
Evansville	WJPS	1330	7:15
Ft. Wayne	WGL	1250	7:15
Indianapolis	WISH	1310	7:15
South Bend	WHOT	1490	6:30
IOWA
Des Moines	KSO	1460	7:45
Waterloo	KXEL	1540	6:00
KANSAS
Topeka	WREN	1250	7:45
KENTUCKY
Bowling Green	WKCT	930	6:00
Louisville	WKLO	1080	7:15
LOUISIANA
New Orleans	WSMB	1350	6:00
Shreveport	KRMD	1340	6:00
MARYLAND
Baltimore	WFBR	1300	7:00
MASSACHUSETTS
Boston	WVDA	1260	7:00
Gardner	WGAW	1340	7:00
Springfield	WSPR	1270	7:00
Worcester	WORC	1310	7:00
MICHIGAN
Bay City	WBCM	1440	7:00
Detroit	WXYZ	1270	8:45
Flint	WTAC	600	7:00
Grand Rapids	WLAV	1340	7:00
Iron Mountain	WMIQ	1450	10:15 Mon thru Thurs
Lansing	WILS	1320	10:00
Muskegon	WKBZ	850	7:15
Sault St. Marie	WSOO	1230	10:45
MINNESOTA
Mankato	KTOE	1420	6:30
Minneapolis-St. Paul	WTCN	1280	7:15
Montevideo	KDMA	1450	7:30
St. Cloud	WJON	1240	7:30
MISSISSIPPI
Laurel	WLAU	1490	6:00
Meridian	WTOK	1450	6:00
MISSOURI
Kansas City	KCMO	810	9:00
St. Louis	KXOK	630	7:15
MONTANA
Butte	KOPR	550	7:00
NEBRASKA
Sidney	KSID	1340	9:00
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Claremont	WTSV	1230	7:00
Lebanon	WTSL	1400	7:00
Manchester	WMUR	610	8:00
NEW MEXICO
Albuquerque	KOAT	1240	7:00
Los Alamos	KRSN	1490	7:00
Santa Fe	KTRC	1400	7:00
NEW YORK
Albany	WROW	590	7:00
Buffalo	WKBW	1520	7:00
Endicott-Binghamton	WENE	1430	7:00
Geneva	WGVA	1240	7:00
Jamestown	WJTN	1240	7:15
New York	WABC	770	7:00
Rochester	WVET	950	7:00
Syracuse	WHEN	620	7:00
NORTH CAROLINA
Asheville	WLOS	1380	7:00
Charlotte	WAYS	610	7:00
Goldsboro	WGBR	1150	10:15
Greensboro	WCOG	1320	11:00
Hendersonville	WHKP	1450	10:00
Raleigh	WNAO	850	7:00
Reidsville	WFRC	1600	7:30
Salisbury	WSAT	1280	8:15
OHIO
Akron	WAKR	1590	8:15
Canton	WHBC	1480	10:00
Chillicothe	WBEX	1490	7:00
Cincinnati	WSAI	1360	8:15
Cleveland	WJW	850	7:00
Columbus	WCOL	1230	7:00
Dayton	WING	1410	7:00
East Liverpool	WOHI	1490	7:00
Mansfield	WMAN	1400	7:00
Toledo	WTOL	1230	7:00
Youngstown	WBBW	1240	7:00
OKLAHOMA
Ada	KADA	1230	7:00
McAlester	KTMC	1400	6:00
Oklahoma City	KTOK	1000	7:15
Tulsa	KRMG	740	7:15
OREGON
Pendleton	KWRC	1240	10:15
Portland	KEX	1190	7:15
Redmond	KJUN	1240	6:30
PENNSYLVANIA
Altoona	WRTA	1240	7:00
Erie	WERC	1330	7:00
Harrisburg	WHGB	1400	7:00
Johnstown	WCRO	1230	7:15
Meadville	WMGW	1490	7:00
Philadelphia	WFIL	560	7:00
Pittsburgh	WCAE	1250	7:15
Scranton	WARM	590	7:00
Wilkes-Barre	WILK	980	7:00
RHODE ISLAND
Providence	WEJB	1420	7:00
Westerly	WERI	1230	7:00
SOUTH CAROLINA
Charleston	WHAN	1340	7:00
Columbia	WCOS	1400	7:00
Orangeburg	WDIX	1450	11:15
Sumter	WSSC	1240	7:00
SOUTH DAKOTA
Sioux Falls	KSOO	1140	6:00
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga	WAPO	1150	7:00
Jackson	WTJS	1390	6:00
Knoxville	WBIR	1240	7:00
Memphis	WMPS	680	6:00
TEXAS
Austin	KNOW	1490	7:15
Beaumont	KFDM	560	7:15
Dallas-Ft. Worth	WFAA	570	6:00
Houston	KXYZ	1320	7:15
UTAH
Provo	KCSU	1400	7:00
Salt Lake City	KUTA	570	7:00
VERMONT
Brattleboro	WTSA	1450	7:00
VIRGINIA
Danville	WBTM	1330	8:15
Norfolk	WGH	1310	7:00
Roanoke	WROV	1240	7:15
South Boston	WHLF	1400	8:15
Suffolk	WLPM	1450	7:00
WASHINGTON
Aberdeen	KBKW	1450	6:00
Pasco	KPKW	1340	10:30
Seattle	KING	1090	6:30
Spokane	KGA	1510	6:00
WEST VIRGINIA
Charleston	WKNA	950	7:00
Fairmont	WVVW	1490	7:00
Huntington	WSAZ	930	7:00
Princeton	WLOH	1490	7:00
Wheeling	WKWK	1400	7:00
WISCONSIN
Duluth-Superior	WDSM	710	7:00
Madison	WISC	1480	7:30
Milwaukee	WOKY	920	6:00
WYOMING
Casper	KVOC	1230	7:00
Cheyenne	KFBC	1240	7:00
Cody	KODI	1400	7:00
Laramie	KOWB	1340	7:00
New Castle	KASL	1240	7:00
Rawlins	KRAL	1240	9:00
Riverton	KWRL	1450	7:00
Torrington	KGOS	1490	7:00
Worland	KWOR	1490	7:00

'Grass-Roots' Report—

GOP Cultivating Apathy In Ohio Campaign

Here is a digest of the first reports on "grass-roots" political sentiment by Commentator John W. Vandercook, CIO-sponsored newscaster whose program is sponsored each week night on ABC radio. Hear Vandercook's program daily for exclusive reports on the campaign.

By JOHN W. VANDERCOOK

IT HAS been said, at least by the Republicans, that this current political campaign is a campaign without big issues. There is no doubt, just three weeks before election, that there is in most parts of the country an absence of the high excitement, of some of the intensity of feeling, that accompany most American elections.

But here in Ohio there are issues, and as for the apparent campaign apathy, I have been told here that some of that may be cultivated.

The State's GOP-dominated press appears to be taking a let's-leave-well-enough-alone attitude, almost as if it were playing down the campaign. Republican appeals to get out and vote are so conspicuous by their absence that the Ohio GOP may be wagering its best chances on victory on a small turnout.

One of the campaign issues—and no politician or dog-fancier would be well advised to forget it — is unemployment. Another issue is the eighth-ranking farm state—though how burning an issue it is, as yet, hard to say—is farm prices.

Ohio is one of the states that the politicians call pivotal. As, say, Vermont and Alabama are not. Ohio is subject to change. Shifts of political sentiment here are sometimes duplicated in many parts of the country. Ohio is conventionally thought to be a Republican state, but it has a Democratic Governor.

WHICH WAY, then, is Ohio going to lean, partywise, in this election? I have talked here to politicians and citizens, both plain and fancy, of both parties. Few seem willing to say flatly which way they think the cat is going to jump.

The opinion seems to be common that Ohio Democrats, on the offensive so to speak, have more get-up-and-go to them just now than Ohio Republicans. On the GOP side and among independents, there does seem to have been a marked letdown since 1952.

Democrats call it disappointment—a disappointment they say stems in large part from a feeling of letdown about Pres. Eisenhower himself. In some people that disappointment has, undoubtedly, turned into a sense of definite uneasiness. Neither ordinary life nor the world seem to have as clear a direction as they once did.

The passengers, as one man put it, would rather be embarked on a dangerous course with a good pilot than on no course with a weak pilot.

Ohio's swing on Nov. 2, when it votes for local candidates, will almost certainly be more influenced by broad issues than local issues or candidates' personalities.

MORE SUBSTANTIAL straws are in the political wind. Alaska, of course, is not a state. Nevertheless, Alaska goes through many of the motions, and in a whole series of recent elections, Alaska chances to have voted as the whole of the U. S. A. has later voted.

In Alaskan elections the territory went strongly Democratic after having been just as strongly Republican two years ago. Democrats will have what a dispatch from Juneau calls an overwhelming majority in the Legislature.

Listen regularly to John W. Vandercook's radio broadcast each night, Monday through Friday. For stations and times, see Page 15.

SEVENTIETH birthday brought a deluge of tributes to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, seen (left) cutting huge cake at big birthday party in New York. Left, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey (center) chats with Mrs. Roosevelt and Ralph Bunche, UN official.

World Honors Mrs. Roosevelt At 70 As 'A Symbol Of Sanity, Courage'

THE CIO joined last week in what turned out to be an international tribute to one of the best-loved ladies of the century, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, on her seventieth birthday.

The testimony of the love and affection in which she is held was paid at a birthday dinner in New York conceived by the American Association for the United Nations.

The guests included CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, one of the speakers. Notables ranging from former Pres. Truman and CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India and Sec. of State Dulles, who could not be present, sent greetings.

CAREY told the gathering, attended by more than 1000 well-wishers, that CIO members "share in the deep affection that working people the world over feel when they hear her name or see her picture."

"To us, Mrs. Roosevelt is more than a well-beloved friend," he said. "She is a symbol, a symbol of sanity and wisdom in a world that sometimes seems mad. She stands for courage and probity in an era too often marked by vacillation and expediency.

"Mrs. Roosevelt does not just talk about democracy, she lives it. She is the beacon, the guiding star, the patron saint if you will, of every man and woman who cherishes freedom and civil liberty under law as dearly as they prize life itself."

Carey expressed regret that the late CIO Pres. Philip Murray had not lived to be present.

Reuther in a telegram expressed the "love and devotion" all CIO members have for Mrs. Roosevelt.

"She is an essential ingredient of our democracy," he said, "a voice of conscience and humanitarianism that transcends partisan division or walk of life . . .

"As a member of the Public Advisory Board of the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation, Mrs. Roosevelt has once again demonstrated not only her friendship for the leaders of democratic labor in America, but her active and continuous concern for the welfare of working people and their families."

CIO on ABC
Monday thru Friday
John W. Vandercook
AND THE NEWS

Police Seize Bowles In School Case

BRYANT BOWLES, the white supremacist who has been trying to stir up a war against the U. S. Supreme Court and its decision outlawing segregation in the schools, was enmeshed with the law last week—a plight which is not new to him.

Within a few hours:

1. He was served with a summons at an open air meeting near Baltimore, Md., directing him to a huddle with federal income tax authorities in Baltimore.

2. He was arrested at an airport near Milford, Del., where he sparked the first strike against admitting Negro children to previously segregated schools, on two charges of conspiring to violate the Delaware education law.

THE INCOME tax charge had nothing to do with Bowles' fight against the end of segregation in the schools, but with a roofing business he formerly ran in Baltimore. He didn't show up, later explaining he had been delayed by "business" in Delaware.

Meanwhile, a Delaware court issued an injunction which ordered Milford school authorities to re-admit 10 Negro students to the high school. The students attended classes when the term opened, were later transferred to another school when a boycott by white students brought on the resignation of the school board.

Weather Forecast—

Stormy And Warmer In Tennessee Valley

THE POLITICAL STORM headed for the Tennessee Valley has been held up until after election.

Postponement of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee's hearing on the politically and economically explosive Dixon-Yates give-away power contract was announced by Vice Chairman Hickenlooper (R. Ia.). Both Republican and Democratic members, he said, reported themselves too busy campaigning to return to Washington for the opening of the session, scheduled for Oct. 13.

A new date of Nov. 4 was set—two days after the election.

Committee Chairman Cole (R. N.Y.) had scheduled the Oct. 13 meeting after the Atomic Energy Commission had requested a waiver of the provision in the new Atomic Energy Act requiring a waiting period of 30 days while Congress is in session before executing a contract. The committee has the authority to waive the requirement.

The Dixon-Yates contract is the one forced on the AEC by Pres. Eisenhower. Under it, the private power combine would build a generating plant at West Memphis, Ark., to feed 600,000 kilowatts of power a year into the Tennessee Valley Authority system in the Memphis, Tenn., area. It would replace TVA power going to AEC facilities at Paducah, Ky.

Paper Bares Dixon-Yates Pact Details

THE GRAVY train that Pres. Eisenhower is trying to engineer for the benefit of the Dixon-Yates combine would give the private power group "a virtually risk-free guarantee of earning 9% on invested capital of $5.5 million," the St. Louis-Post-Dispatch said last week in a copyrighted story.

This means Dixon-Yates would recapture its original investment in less than 12 years.

The newspaper, in a Washington story by Richard Dudman, said it had obtained a copy of a draft contract dated Oct. 1. It was the ninth draft drawn up since Eisenhower handed down his ukase to the Tennessee Valley Authority, whose territory the combine would invade, and the Atomic Energy Commission.

THE Post-Dispatch listed three main provisos:

1. The private power group may figure U. S. income taxes into its "basic capacity charge." This, in effect, means the AEC would pay them.

2. The group may pledge or transfer the contract without AEC consent to pay debts growing out of construction of a $107 million steam generating plant at West Memphis, Ark.

3. The group will get its money from the taxpayers even if it should not deliver electricity because of "an act of God, fire, flood, explosion, strike, sabotage, an act of the public enemy, civil or military authority, insurrection or riot, an act of the elements, failure of equipment, or inability to obtain or ship materials because of the effect of similar causes on suppliers or carriers."

The newspaper also said it has learned the contract has been approved by the Federal Power Commission, General Accounting Office and, except for minor details, by the TVA.

Labor Unity Talks Gain
—See Page 3

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., October 25, 1954 Vol. 17, No. 43

'Grass-Roots' Reports—

'People Have Instinct To Do Right'—HST

On his "grass-roots" tour of key states in the 1954 election, John W. Vandercook last week met with former Pres. Truman and broadcast this report on his CIO-sponsored news commentary program on ABC Radio. Follow Vandercook's reports each week night on ABC Radio.

By JOHN W. VANDERCOOK

FEW AMERICAN Presidents have been more loved than Harry S. Truman. Perhaps not many during their term of office have produced so many angry yelps of dislike from those who opposed him.

Another Campaign Exclusive

That is the good fortune of men of clear principles, of plain speech, and of exact and unrelenting honesty. About strong men, people inevitably feel strongly. They do not just vaguely "like" them.

It was my great good fortune to call on ex-Pres. Truman—still instinctively "Mr. President" to all who see him at his office in Kansas City.

It was not, strictly speaking, an interview. Truman explained, regretfully, that under the terms of the agreement with those who will publish his now almost completed and eagerly awaited book of his own life and times, he may not yet be directly quoted.

An Unpretentious Man

I am sorry. For there is a salt-and-pepper, a frankness and precision, in every word Truman speaks to which no fumbling paraphrase can do justice.

Truman's office is in a big downtown Kansas City office building. It is an office as unpretentious as the man.

In Truman's own office—and I have been in a lot of offices and have talked to a lot of people—there is an aura of greatness.

Nor is it just the greatness of the past presidential office, in this room with the well-filled bookcases around the wall, with the big mahogany desk piled high with work that somehow makes the sun streaming through the window seem a little brighter. It is the man.

As the world knows, Truman has been very ill. Though he confessed that at the end of his only political speech of the campaign, in Kansas City on Saturday night, his knees felt "rubbery"—and he later slept away 12 hours (instead of his customary three or four)—there is no outward trace of that illness.

Truman's skin is clear, with good color. His back is ramrod straight as always. He moves alertly. His speech, his thought, plainly have an amazing store of physical energy—as well as an acute, original and independent mind—behind them.

His smile—the confidence—the clean, the unspoiled faith and trust in people with which Truman looks at you and talks to you . . . well, I could only advise the most bitter Truman-hater in the land to stay clear of him. For that hater would be soon undone and soon ashamed.

Here, one discovers at once, is a man with a profound sense of history. Truman is not an optimist because he knows the whole record of man's upward climb.

Scorns Them All

The dictatorships of our own time—those of Hitler, of Mussolini, of Stalin, of Franco—look much alike to him. He detests and scorns them all.

He spoke of the totalitarians, of Louis the Fourteenth of France, of Alcibiades of Greece; of how the peoples of those times too understood and hated those tyrannies, long before they were undone.

To Truman there is only one workable acceptance form of human government, a republic—a governmental structure in which the judiciary must be wholly independent, in which the legislature reflects, as best it can, the will of the people. And, in a republic like our own, said Truman, there must be an executive who knows where he is going and why.

Truman will make no flat predictions about the way the larger world will go. He knows the hazard of unpredictable accidents.

But Truman believes there are as many good people behind the Iron Curtain as there are on this side of it. Because of that goodness, that essential wisdom Truman knows there is in men, you feel that he is convinced in his large heart that there, too, wrong will someday be made right.

The founders of the American republic chose the form of government under which we live, Truman believes, because they knew the past and deliberately chose from it what was best. He believes that Americans today have an even more acute feeling for history than did our forefathers. And are even less likely for very long to make mistakes.

Smilingly, he recalled as, perhaps, the best thing Abraham Lincoln ever said the famous aphorism: "You can fool all of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time."

We Won't Be Misled

Truman refuses to style himself a political expert. He admits to having had a political education. But he says that, of course, is not complete for every part of the country.

Even in entire confidence—and off the record—Truman indulges in no personalities. Obviously, there is no hate in him.

He hopes and thinks that a Democratic majority in Congress will be elected this year. But he will not guess at precisely how many seats will be won or lost. The pollsters, the know-it-alls, the political experts amuse him.

But he does feel that the reasonable American people were misled by slogans, by shoddy pretenses and by falsehoods in 1952. He does not believe that they—that we—will be misled again.

What of the problems that might arise with a Congress of one party in the Capitol and a President of another in the White House?

That, believes Truman, does not necessarily need to be a problem. Even the stubborn 80th Congress, he recalls, supported—as Americans, not as partisans—the major achievements of that period in his Administration in the field of foreign policy.

The Sure Remedy

There can be, believes Truman, statesmanlike behavior on the part of an opposition party. He thinks that in its support of the more socially useful phases of the Eisenhower legislative program the Democratic minority in Congress has already displayed that capacity for statesmanship.

The "simple and sure remedy"—thinks Truman—for the uncertainties that now beset us, for the increasing fact and gathering fear of unemployment, for the decline in farm prices—should be what he said in his speech on Saturday—"vote the Democrats back in control of the Congress."

What was the truest and most revealing of the trim, smiling, believing, warmly friendly man I saw this morning—what I shall remember longest, though, was nothing he said on politics or about the immediate campaign.

But, what he said, that is a kind of larger politics—the essence of Harry S. Truman's democratic faith: "People have the instinct to do right—and to be good."

(Vandercook continues his "grass-roots" reports from key states each night until the pre-election weekend. Hear him on ABC Radio.)

MISSOURI—"Mr. Truman (right, with John Vandercook) refuses to style himself a political expert . . . He does feel that 'reasonable' American people were misled by slogans, by shoddy pretenses and falsehoods, in 1952. He does not believe that they, that we, will be misled again."

Reuther To Air Views On Vandercook Show

John W. Vandercook, CIO-sponsored news commentator, will report on an interview with CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther this Friday night, Oct. 29, on his ABC program.

Following In 'GM Charlie's' Footsteps

A REPUBLICAN Congressman from Indiana floundered in where even Charlie Wilson, the politically inept defense secretary, would fear to tred.

Rep. Brownson, a wallpaper wholesaler, told an Indianapolis audience "it was wonderful today to attend a reception in Washington and be able to tell the Cabinet members from the waiters."

The latest sneer at working people from a Republican brought an instant retort from the AFL Central Labor Union in Brownson's home town and a demand for an apology—to the waiters.

"We believe that the country would be better managed if the Cabinet members were composed of waiters instead of millionaires, thereby assuring a Cabinet representative of the majority of people in this country," said the AFL unionist.

Wilson, who swore off political speeches after his "kennel-fed dogs" attack on the jobless, quickly forgot his good resolves and loped off on another speech-making jaunt. Republicans gnawed on their nails in anticipation of his latest boner.

Pres. Karl F. Feller of the CIO Brewery Workers wrote Pres. Eisenhower protesting "the insulting and reactionary attitude of one of the most important members of your Cabinet."

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, first to attack Wilson for his comparison of unemployed workers to dogs, said "the American people will judge the concern of Mr. Wilson and the Republican Administration by what they do rather than what they say. The Republican-controlled 83rd Congress and the Republican Administration have to date refused to take affirmative steps necessary to insure full employment and full production."

MICHIGAN—"Campaigning again seems to center chiefly around the race for U. S. Senator. Interest in the parallel contest for Governor is muted only because no one seems to question that three-times Gov. Williams (right, with Vandercook) has a fourth victory in his pocket."

OHIO—"I have talked here to politicians and citizens, plain and fancy (above with State CIO Sec.-Treas. Jacob Clayman, left), of both parties. Few seem willing to say flatly which way they think the cat is going to jump . . . There's lassitude, though possibly less than shows."

CIO, AFL Plan 'Single Trade Union Center'

SUBJECT, UNITY—Creation of a single labor center in U. S. proved so important to members of CIO-AFL Unity Committee they discussed it in groups after formal meeting in Washington broke up. Left, AFL Pres. George Meany listens as CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther explains views. Center, merger smiles come from (left to right) Meany, Pres. David Dubinsky of AFL Garment Workers, Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of CIO Clothing Workers, and Reuther. At right, secretary-treasurers talk it over: CIO's James B. Carey (left) and AFL's William Schnitzler.

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

CIO AND AFL unity negotiators made a major move forward at a three-hour session in Washington on Oct. 15.

To newspapermen, the leaders of the two big wings of American labor read this statement:

"It is the unanimous decision of this joint committee of the AFL and CIO to create a single trade union center in America through the process of merger, which will preserve the integrity of each affiliated national and international union.

"Further, the presidents of the AFL and CIO are authorized to appoint a joint subcommittee to draft a detailed plan to achieve this objective and to then report its recommendations to this committee at its next meeting."

Both CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and AFL Pres. George Meany, who head their respective unity committees, expressed optimism that real progress could be made within the next few months.

No official subcommittees were named at the Oct. 15 session. It is doubtful that the subcommittees will meet until after the New Year, because of the press of pre-convention work for CIO leaders and the holidays, which follow the CIO convention at Los Angeles by less than a fortnight.

THE UNITY committee session—the first since last June—might have lasted longer. But as the meeting progressed the whiplashing fringe of Hurricane Hazel was beating the nation's capital and the meeting adjourned in order to permit the members to reach their homes or hotels before the full fury of the storm descended on the city.

In the press conference that followed the joint luncheon and business session, Reuther and Meany added background details to the short formal statement.

Reuther, for instance, noted that "it was the desire of each member of this team to expedite this as much as possible."

"WE ARE ALL working in good faith here," he said. "We don't believe there are any insurmountable obstacles."

Meany acknowledged that there are "problems—real problems." He added: "I don't see, if we can agree, why we can't have a merger plan ready by the 1955 conventions."

In answer to a reporter's question, Meany said it was inconceivable that if the unity committees completed their work "say six months" before the regular conventions, it might be desirable to hold special conventions.

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey pointed out that the effort of the subcommittee would be not to find a final answer to all the existing problems between the two organizations, but to find a mechanism for settling those problems and disputes at the proper time.

It was pointed out, in response to another question, that the committee was primarily interested in securing the merger of the AFL and CIO—and that efforts to bring in independent unions like the United Mine Workers would be a later step.

"Not only the American workers, but all the American people will benefit from such a merger," Reuther told reporters.

(On "Meet the Press" TV show two days later, Reuther voiced hope for a constructive unity of labor that would lead to great organizing campaigns and other advantages for workers in this country. While declining to say who is his "candidate for president," Reuther said that that problem would certainly work itself out later.)

Representatives of the CIO at the meeting were: Reuther; Carey; Executive Vice-Pres. John V. Riffe; Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the Clothing Workers; CIO Vice-Presidents Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, O. A. Knight, Emil Rieve and James Thimmes; and CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg.

Vice-Presidents Joseph N. Curran and Michael Quill were unable to attend. Pres. David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers was ill in a Pittsburgh hospital, but he had designated Thimmes as his representative at the meeting.

AFL representatives were: Meany; Sec.-Treas. William Schnitzler; Pres. Al Hayes of the Machinists; Pres. William Doherty of the Letter Carriers; Pres. David Dubinsky of the Ladies Garment Workers; Pres. William McFetridge of the Building Service Employes, and Daniel Tracy, recently retired president of the Electrical Workers.

CIO Welfare Fund Group Sets Hearing In New York

THE SPECIAL standing committee on welfare funds of CIO unions, which was created at the last meeting of the CIO Executive Board, will hold its first hearings Nov. 16-17 in New York.

Testimony will be taken from experts in the field of welfare and other insurance-type funds, whose advice is being sought on what standards should be set up to prevent fraud and other abuses.

In its resolution creating the committee, the CIO Executive Board instructed it to investigate charges of maladministration of welfare or other union funds within CIO and submit recommendations for prompt remedial action.

IT ALSO CHARGED the committee with responsibility for formulating recommendations for standards for welfare funds and, if investigation shows it to be necessary, for appropriate legislation to help insure that welfare funds are honestly administered.

The committee is headed by Pres. Jacob Potofsky of the CIO Clothing Workers. Other members appointed by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther are Pres. Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union and James Thimmes, vice president of the CIO Steelworkers. They will report to the coming CIO convention.

CIO Officers Issue Call For Coast Convention

THE OFFICIAL call for the 16th constitutional convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, to open Dec. 6 in the Hotel Statler, Los Angeles, was issued last week by the three executive officers.

Pres. Walter P. Reuther, Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey pointed out that while the CIO in the past year has "faithfully devoted its strength and energies to achieving economic and social justice . . . this has not been an easy task." They continued:

"Advocates of an outdated, ill-founded economic philosophy have created a climate wherein the specter of mass unemployment once again threatens the welfare of the nation. Millions of our fellow workers are jobless; millions of others have suffered reduced incomes.

"Our economy is in a state of stagnation, with the farmers, the small businessman and the white collar worker equally the victim of industrial practices which endanger the welfare of the many in order to preserve the profits of a few . . .

"Tragically, the 83d Congress has been responsive principally to the whims of selfish interests which care not for the welfare of the people. The Congress has engaged in a legislative giveaway program without parallel, while ignoring the essential needs of the people. The needs are great, and they are growing."

CITING the Communist menace, and recalling that domestic policies are "inseparably intertwined" with our foreign policies, they concluded:

"We rededicate ourselves to the principles and programs of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the charter of our lives."

Memo To GOP: Don't Wait For Reply

STANLEY H. RUTTENBERG, director of the CIO Education and Research Dept., got the surprise of his life the other day.

It came when the mailmen delivered a letter at his home in Arlington, Va., on the letterhead—hold tight now—of the Republican National Finance Committee.

Even stranger, it was addressed to him as a member of a government committee on which he doesn't serve—the Intl. Development Advisory Board, part of the Point Four setup.

Some months ago the Administration, without checking with Ruttenberg, anncunced his appointment to the board. He promptly declined the post. But that didn't stop letter-writers A. R. Dunning and Alpert P. Hickey, Virginia GOP finance officials, in their canvass of any and all U. S. appointees in their search for political funds.

It was a heart-rending plea for a campaign contribution based on the net saving to him resulting from one part of the Eisenhower program, "the major slash in the budget and the reduction in taxes." It estimated these increased his spending money by 3%.

"Unless we return a Republican majority to both the House of Representatives and the Senate this fall, the Eisenhower program will not be continued or completed," the letter warned ominously. "In the last 22 years only a Republican Congress has been able to reverse the tide of spending and socialism . . . The need is now!"

Ruttenberg knows that when the Republicans talk so grimly about "spending and socialism" they don't mean the subsidization of already wealthy individuals and firms by giveaways like off-shore oil, or loss-proof power plums liks the Dixon-Yates jobbing—or even strengthening the Point Four program, about which the Advisory Board advises.

A Democrat, he is firmly convinced that it would be just fine and dandy for the country and for himself if we do NOT "return a Republican majority to both the House of Representatives and the Senate this fall."

But being a kindly soul, he hopes Messrs. Dunning and Hinckley don't wear themselves out waiting for that campaign contribution.

Remember Nov. 2!

You can grumble all you want about reactionaries in public office.

Bu those grumbles don't mean much if you don't use your right to vote on Election Day.

The ballot box and the voting machine were built for you.

If you don't use them, you won't have any real basis for complaining that the men and women elected to run your government don't fit your taste.

So—on Election Day—make sure that you and the other voters in your family go to the polls. Know the issues . . . know the candidates . . . and vote.

Go Broke And Smile

• First it was Republican Charlie Wilson, who talked about the unemployed in one breath and about dogs in the next.

• Then it was Republican Randolph Burgess, the Under-Secretary of Treasury, who said that about the only place he can find "somebody of great competence" is in the downtown, or Wall St., area of New York.

• Then it was Republican Clem D. Johnson, head of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, who told a Newark audience that there's going to be a "noticeable increase in business casualties"—which, he said, is a "sign that we are returning to normal."

Say, do you think the Republican Party has gotten a suicide mania?

That Balanced Budget . . .

The Eisenhower Administration gave big tax rewards to the wealthy and to great corporations. Losses in tax receipts, the GOP said, would be offset by the big spur to business incentive that was lying between the lines of that tax bill.

The GOP predicted that the budget would be almost $5 billion in the red for the fiscal year ending next June 30.

Now the returns are in for the first quarter of that fiscal year. They show that Uncle Sam is already in the red for $5 billion.

Could it be that the tax give-away to big business is working out just the way the CIO said it would work out—to hurt the average people of the country?

Advice For Labor

Reading the editorial pages of daily papers is an old hobby of ours—but a pretty confusing one at times.

Many papers, for instance, were pleased with the statement on labor unity issued by the CIO and AFL Unity Committees on Oct. 15. But not the Baltimore Sun, which pontificated, without real explanation, that merger of CIO and AFL would cause a real need for anti-trust laws against unions. Such a law would be most harmful to workers.

Some papers take the CIO to task for being too concerned about improving or repealing the Taft-Hartley Act. But not the Wall Street Journal. That paper takes the CIO to task for being concerned about congressional issues like housing and electric power, social security or taxes—which the Wall Street Journal has somehow concluded are really none of our business.

There's no moral to the story—except that it's lucky for labor in America that we've never paid to much attention to the free advice of the newspaper publishers.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS

Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII October 25, 1954 No. 43

Please Note—And Vote!

In Other Words—

The Flattest In Years

(Along with the problems of the 3.1 million unemployed in this country, there is the grave matter of the 2.5 million under-employed—those who are working less than 35 hours a week and bringing home short pay checks. Their crisis is described by Sylvia F. Porter in her New York Post column.)

By SYLVIA F. PORTER

JOE WAS OFFICIALLY counted among the nation's employed last week but Joe was a decidedly frustrated young man.

For Joe worked at his factory job only 30 hours—the equivalent of a four-day week—and although his hourly pay was at a record, the pay envelope he took home was the flattest in years.

"Yeah, I'm employed," said Joe as we sipped coffee in the luncheonette near my office in downtown Manhattan. "But I can't support Marie and the kids on this amount of money. I can't find a one or two-day job to fill out. I can't get another full-time job at my trade around here. I can't move away because I've bought a house and have payments to meet. I don't know what to do . . ."

Joe is not an isolated case—which is the deep significance of this report to you, regardless of your own situation.

We count as employed today 62.3 million Americans—a million under 1953's all-time peak and much is being made of the fact that employment is stabilizing, the worst appears behind us.

But of that 62.3 million, 2.5 million are working less than 35 hours, according to a new, special study of the Census Bureau itself.

The Squeeze Is Devasting

What's more, of this 2.5 million, three-fourths are working anywhere from 22 to 35 hours a week—a shockingly wide spread in work hours for the Census Bureau to bunch under one heading.

(If a family breadwinner works 35 hours at a top hourly pay, the squeeze may not be devastating; if he works only 22 hours even at a top hourly pay, the squeeze becomes intolerable. In statistical terms, a 22-35 hour spread may seem minor. In human terms, it's vital.)

The other one-fourth, mainly in mining, are working less than 22 hours a week.

These millions are not working part-time out of choice.

On the contrary, 1.5 million of them are working part-time because such economic factors as slack work in their areas or lay-offs in their industries are forcing them to.

Another one million are working part-time because they can't find full-time jobs even though they want and could accept them.

In this report, I'm not touching on the over three million officially declared to be unemployed now.

That "soft spot" we are admitting and we are facing it one way or another every day.

In this report, I'm touching only on the 2.5 million others who are under-employed now.

That "soft spot" we are not admitting and we are not facing.

Appallingly Casual

Today's Joe's hourly earnings are up to $1.91, the highest ever. But this year, his work-week has varied from no days to over five. Last week, his gross pay was down to $57.30. For all of 1954, he'll be far behind recent years.

Joe feels it. And all the tradespeople with whom Joe deals are feeling it, too.

We are not facing the problem of the partially employed. We are not recognizing the impact on the economy of millions whose earnings have been sharply cut even though they're counted as employed.

Our government's statistical agencies are being appallingly casual about the elementary distinction between the fully employed and the partially employed and even more appallingly casual about the distinctions among the partially employed themselves.

We do not deceive the humans who make up the partially employed statistics by so doing nor lessen their troubles. We deceive only ourselves and pile up extra troubles only for ourselves.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

REMEMBER THE RECESSION the Republicans never admitted existed, the joblessness and distress which Pres. Eisenhower argued existed only in the imagination of "self-appointed prophets of gloom and doom?" There were signs, just before the election, that the chief problem of Republicans was this "imaginary" recession.

This is not a prediction of election results — a precarious business since Harry S. Truman in 1948 shattered several time-tested political patterns in walloping Dewey.

Within about two weeks of E-Day, however, two facts were observable:

1. Some Administration spokesmen were desperately concentrating on an effort to place the brightest light on economic conditions, while others—like Vice-Pres. Nixon and Ives of New York—were trying, with equal signs of panic, to change the subject to various red herrings.

2. Political reporters, traveling around the country, seemed unanimous in writing that GOP chances were threatened by the anxiety of farmers over falling prices, the anxiety of the jobless or the underemployed in what the Republicans insisted were mere "pockets" of trouble.

Dr. Arthur F. Burns, chief of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, emerged from a long silence to tell Detroit businessmen that we were "again entering a phase of economic expansion" and that the Administration, in any case, was humanitarian and forward-looking. (Bird-dog Charlie Wilson had got out of Detroit for his long journey back to Washington.)

A Faithful Team

Treasury Sec. Humphrey told some bankers that the "long future of this economy" is perfectly sound, but he too expressed "concern" about the unfortunates who in the unrelenting present have no jobs.

Labor Sec. Mitchell—a remarkably faithful member of the "team"—talked about the volume of employment. It would be strange, considering our great burst of population growth, if "employment" is not keeping pace with increased productivity by an increased number of available but partly-unused workers. While unemployment now totals 3.1 million, under-unemployment (less than 35-hour work weeks) hits another 2.5 million.

Meanwhile, the political observations of the traveling reporters came in, the surveys and the straw-ballot polls were published.

U. S. News & World Report, a magazine controlled by the pro-McCarthy David Lawrence, reported that Democrats would carry both the Senate and the House—largely because of farmers' troubles and the anxiety of urban jobless in the "pockets" of unemployment.

From Minnesota, Wisconsin, New Hampshire, Illinois, from New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky, from likely and unlikely states, many reporters kept sending stories that the "pockets" contained voters, and that the voters were not likely to roll up pluralities for the GOP.

McCathyism In A Tuxedo

Nixon, as Sen. Morse described it, donned a tuxedo to try to make McCarthyism respectable. The "high-level" Republicans, on the other hand, still took the other line—that there never was a "recession," and besides it was over long ago, and besides everything will be lovely a few weeks from now.

In the midst of this comedy, two notes were struck that rang with chimelike clarity:

•—The Wall Street Journal, which does not kid its businessmen subscribers, said that Agriculture Sec. Benson was planning new farm price-support cuts after Nov. 2. Benson's "experts," it was stated, admitted that "a pre-election announcement . . . might anger farmers, cost the GOP some votes."

•—Bennett S. Chapel, Jr., a U. S. Steel executive, cheerfully told bankers that they mustn't be afraid of 1955, because 1955 "could be" our second-best or third-best year, economically, since the war.

Happy days. We've already had a "second-best" year in 1954 and now we can look forward to possible progress toward the "third-best."

Cover Up For The AEC

The Rural Electrification Administration and the Atomic Energy Commission issued a joint statement insisting that they were determined "to make the know-how of the new art of nuclear power generation" available to consumer-owned electric cooperatives.

Do you know what this gobbledegook means? It's a cover-up for the fact that the AEC and Agriculture Sec. Benson's bureaucrats in charge of rural electrification refuse to let the co-ops in on the ground floor.

Many months ago the AEC cleared a study group of private-utility experts for information which would help them master "the know-how of the new art of nuclear power generation." The co-ops asked that a similar study group from their own ranks be cleared and authorized for studies—and were turned down on the ground that the time was "not ripe."

Trend?

In the voteless District of Columbia, the turnout of absentee voters at bureaus operated by women Democrats, Republicans and the League of Women Voters has proved one indication of national election trends.

Back in 1952, business was briskest at the GOP's bureau. This fall, according to a report in the Washington Evening Star, there's a change. It's been pretty slow for the Republicans, while the Democrats report applications for absentee ballots are "very good for an off-year election."

Issues In The Election—

Now GOP Faces The Voters, On Record Against Public Interest

(This is the seventh and last in a series of articles on issues in the coming elections.)

EVEN WITHOUT the question of Republican inattention to the needs of the unemployed, the record of the GOP-controlled 83rd Congress would be a top issue in next week's election.

The Congress was dominated by Republicans, many of whom owed their trip to the Capitol to a free ride on the Eisenhower bandwagon. Running on their own this year, they have to face the voters on the issues they made themselves.

In August the CIO Legislative Committee took a look at Congress' record and said:

"The 83rd Congress has established a record which, in the aggregate, is contrary to the public interest. The few constructive things which were accomplished with bi-partisan support are substantially outweighed by the many harmful actions which were forced through by the slender Republican majorities of Congress."

The First Big Give-Away

Briefly, here is what "Eisenhower's Eighty-third" did to the public interest:

• Offshore Oil—The first big give-away handed this plum worth from $50 to $300 million to big oil companies which contributed heavily to the Eisenhower campaign fund in 1952.

• Public Power—By appropriation cuts and administrative directives, the 83rd Congress (and Eisenhower appointees) crippled public power development, TVA and the rural electrification program.

• Dixon-Yates—At the personal insistence of the President, a private utility contract for power in the TVA area was forced on the Atomic Energy Commission and an obedient Congress made the deal a part of a rewritten Atomic Energy Act.

• Atomic Energy—The $12 billion investment of U. S. taxpayers in developing atomic energy was almost completely turned over to private industry for exploitation. Only stiff Democratic resistance blocked a total sellout.

• Tax Relief—The corporations and the 20% of U. S. families making more than $5000 a year got 91% of the tax cuts. Families with incomes of less than $5000—80% of our population—get a piddling 9% of tax relief.

• Unemployment—A need for economic expansion was ignored for a "return to normalcy" program and budget cuts that left a $30 billion gap between today's level of economic stagnation and full employment.

• Jobless Pay—Unemployed workers were slapped by a refusal to pass a federal unemployment compensation standards law which would provide those out of jobs with higher benefits for longer periods.

"Look Out Below"

Facts From PAC

The accompanying articles are based on material in the 1954 Handbook of the CIO Political Action Committee. Copies of the Handbook are available to union members at $1.50 each from the CIO-PAC, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

• Public Housing—A request for 140,000 units over four years was killed for a measure which will probably give us at most 10,000 units. Some 150 House Republicans deserted their President on this measure.

• Labor Laws—The pledges of the GOP platform and the GOP President were dumped. Instead of improvements as promised in Taft-Hartley, the 83rd tried to make the law even more harmful to labor.

• Farm Policy—The 90% parity farm price support was abandoned for the GOP's flexible supports, worsening the troubles of farmers and bringing more unemployment to workers who make farm tools and products farmers buy.

What the 83rd Congress didn't do is almost as significant as what it did. Among the things it failed to move on were school construction programs, a health program, raising the minimum wage, and civil rights legislation.

Still Stalling On Job Bias Ban

". . . ALL MEN are created equal . . . they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights . . . to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men."

These words from the Declaration of Independence are the foundation of the American form of government, the essence of the American way of life. They hold a promise for all Americans which must be fulfilled if the U. S. dream of peace and prosperity at home and abroad is to come true.

There have been important Supreme Court decisions and legislative acts by which the government has helped to secure basic civil rights for minority groups. More important, probably, has been the great improvement in the living standards of all Americans.

Quite A Contrast

For every Negro appointed to a government post, the Eisenhower Administration laid off another 200 in Washington, D. C., alone.

Republicans boast about Negroes appointed to federal jobs, about 50 in number, in an attempt to get Negro votes. They fail to mention that since the GOP took over in Washington over 10,000 Negro government employes lost their jobs in the nation's capital under GOP economy firings.

But much remains to be done. We still have a long way to go before all of man's inalienable civil rights are secured for all our citizens, regardless of race or color. Civil rights is an all-American issue.

Yet, job discrimination is still widely practiced. Only seven states have fair employment practices laws that are effectively enforced. Six states require segregation in employment by law.

Job discrimination is, of course, unconstitutional and un-American as well as morally indefensible. It is also bad business.

The Eisenhower Administration has made numerous false claims about improving opportunities for Negroes. They contended that 45 key appointments in the federal service went to Negroes. Less than five of these were "first time" appointments, some were as doormen and mailmen.

It was Former Pres. Truman who ordered equality of treatment and opportunity in the armed services back in 1948. In 1941 the late Pres. Roosevelt directed heads of all federal agencies to make certain that race discrimination was eliminated in practice as well as theory.

The Republican-controlled 83rd Congress failed to move towards changing a federal executive policy on housing that was termed "the greatest single factor in promoting residential segregation."

The Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in the school systems was a great milestone. It did not, however, indicate how this principle should be carried out.

NABET Stresses Industrial Union Drive

By HENRY SANTIESTEVAN
Special Correspondent

THERE WAS a strong accent on industrial unionism at the 21st annual convention of the National Association of Broadcast Employes and Technicians in Los Angeles.

Chaired by Pres. Clifford F. Rothery, the NABET convention moved to strengthen its regional-type structure, to stress expansion of the union along industrial lines, and to increase NABET participation in political action and other phases of the CIO program.

Some 50 delegates, representing about 6000 members in the radio, television and film industries throughout the U. S. and Canada, took part in the three-day meeting.

CONVENTION SCENES—Pres. Cliff Rothery of San Francisco (left) welcomes delegates to CIO Broadcast Employes' convention in Los Angeles. The woman's angle on political action was stressed by Mrs. Esther Murray (center), a CIO-PAC field representative. At right: Eugene Klumpp of Buffalo, who was reelected as NABET vice president.

A Critical Election

At the request of CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, Irwin L. DeShetler, CIO Reg. XIII director, brought the good wishes of CIO's top officers to the delegates.

"We are facing a very critical time in the coming elections, as organized labor," DeShetler said.

Pointing out how the Republican-dominated 83rd Congress had compiled an anti-labor record, he added:

"This was not a Congress for the people but for the privileged few big industrialists of America."

Sam Yorty, CIO-supported candidate for U. S. Senator in California, sharply attacked the Republican Administration's foreign policy.

"We have suffered diplomatic defeats all over the globe," Yorty said. "We are in serious trouble in the world, and all we get from the present Administration is sloganizing."

Welcoming talks were made by John A. Despol and Albert T. Lunceford, secretary-treasurers of the CIO-California Industrial Union Council and Greater Los Angeles CIO Council, respectively.

NABET, which outgrew a craft-type structure a few years ago and then joined CIO, repeatedly stressed industrial unionism during the convention.

"Our hopes for future expansion lies in the direction of complete vertical organization," said Eugene P. Klumpp, vice-president. "This type of philosophy ultimately will gain us stature and recognition as the union for all broadcast employes . . ."

In a step to strengthen their regional type of organization, delegates voted to amend the constitution to call for annual regional meetings. Constitutional conventions would be held once each year, beginning in 1956.

PAC Fund Urged

On political action, William J. Walck, vice-president for CIO affairs, urged the establishment of a fund by the payment of $1 per member from each local treasury. This fund, Walck said, could be used to carry on political education work among the members.

Jerome Y. Sturm, NABET counsel, warned the delegates they now were faced with a hostile National Labor Relations Board because of appointments made by the Republican Administration.

"As a member of the trade union movement," he said, "NABET has to struggle against an anti-labor political situation which is doing everything it can to restrict the growth of organized labor. Since all of what has been pointed out is the result of a political situation, the cure will necessarily have to be in the same sphere."

Growing

North of the border, NABET also is growing. Vice Pres. Edward G. Ward reported that, after two years of organizing, the Canadian membership "now crowds the 1000 mark."

The broadcast union represents workers at the publicly-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corp., and at nine privately-owned stations.

NABET Is Growing Rapidly In TV-Radio-Film Fields

THE BROADCAST Employes, one of CIO's newer affiliates, is also one of its most unusual.

Included in its jurisdiction are persons employed in the radio broadcasting, recording, television and film production industries. Founded 21 years ago as an independent group, it first included only highly skilled technicians and engineers.

The organization, realizing through experience the need for an industrial type setup, abandoned its craft union structure. Then in 1950 NABET joined the CIO.

Today, its approximately 6000 members in radio, television and film plants throughout the U. S. and Canada include not only skilled technicians, but other groups, such as office personnel. It is growing rapidly, and now includes in its membership the largest organized group of television employes.

NABET is affiliated with the Canadian Congress of Labor, as well as CIO. It holds nationwide contracts with the American Broadcasting Co., as well as contracts with numerous independent stations.

TALKING POLITICS—George Maher (left), executive secretary of CIO Broadcast Employes, and CIO-PAC Field Rep. Esther Murray talk with James Roosevelt, candidate for Congress, at NABET women's luncheon.

The Women Have Their Day Talking Grass-Roots Politics

THE WOMEN had their day at the NABET convention at a special luncheon which featured Mrs. Esther Murray, CIO-PAC field representative, and James Roosevelt, candidate for Congress in Los Angeles' 26th Dist.

Attending the luncheon, chaired by Mrs. Ruth Brown, were the wives of delegates and women members of NABET from the Hollywood Chapter. Mrs. Brown is the wife of James Harvey Brown, NABET's international representative in Hollywood.

Mrs. Murray described the CIO-PAC family participation conferences held throughout the nation to stimulate activity among women unionists and wives of members.

"We are finding our CIO women are willing to be a part of our activity," she said. "They don't want a separate organization, they want to be with the rest of us."

Importance of women in political and community activity was stressed by Mr. Murray. She pointed out that in the Los Angeles area there are about 80,000 more women than men over the age of 21.

"Political education on the local level is the basic start for activity on the state and national level," Roosevelt said.

His mother, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, began her public activity on the local level, Roosevelt said. He added candidly, "she didn't like it at all, at first, but she learned to enjoy it very much."

New Education Program Set To Unionize The Organized

BY APPOINTMENT of their first national director of education, the CIO Broadcast Employes pushed plans for an expanded program of information and education for their members.

Mary Ellen Trottner, appointed to the position just a few months ago, told delegates of the broad education program now in the works.

She stressed that the program should be directed at organizing members into the union, unionizing the organized and providing training for leadership.

The newly-appointed education director urged close cooperation by NABET education committees with CIO education programs, from the national level to state and local CIO councils, and in conferences and schools.

MARY ELLEN TROTTNER
Reads new NABET Edition of The CIO News

NABET's rapidly growing membership, and resultant need for informing and training its members, led to the establishment of the education position, said Pres. Cliff Rothery.

Miss Trottner has served the union as vice-chairman of the Chicago chapter and member of the national council. A recording engineer at NBC, she is also an attorney.

CIO Backs Coast Walkout

The San Francisco CIO Council voted approval of strike action against Station KEAR taken by the CIO Broadcast Employes and the AFL Radio-TV Announcers. It is the first time the two groups have waged a strike jointly.

NABET officials and National Council members attending the convention in Los Angeles helped on picket lines, which are being maintained 17 hours daily outside the studios in the Mark Hopkins Hotel.

AN UNBEATABLE COMBINATION of solidarity, good welfare administration and skilled negotiations is displayed by the CIO Communications Workers on strike since June 17 at Western Electric Co., Tonawanda, N. Y. Left: Duke Cammilleri and son, Steve, 3, give stint on picket line. CWA had float (center) in Buffalo Labor Day parade. Edward Bastien (right) signs for picket duty with Strike Dir. Steve Dzina.

Smooth Organization Pays Off For CWA In Longest Strike

THE LONGEST—and one of the best-organized — strikes in the history of the CIO Communications Workers now is being conducted by some 1100 CWA members at the Western Electric plant at Tonawanda, near Buffalo.

CWA-CIO already has won a victory in the strike, which began last June 17—but the manufacturing subsidiary of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is trying to take the edge off it.

Western Electric is insisting on a strike termination clause which would give it the right to discriminate against Tonawanda workers after they return. Also, to save face, the firm is seeking to cut the workers' service credit and to shorten next year's vacations.

The Main Issue

The company has caved in on the main issue—seniority. Western Electric tried hard to force acceptance of a provision that would have created an impossible situation — one worker would need six months more service than another to displace him in a layoff. Agreement also has been reached on wage increases.

It is a well-run strike that is being conducted by CWA-CIO Local 1162. Many members picket every day, although only two hours of picket duty a week is required. Local 1162 set up a system to guarantee that every member fulfills his duty.

The kitchen does an effective job in strike headquarters across the street from the plant. A smooth-running welfare committee also is functioning after making a determined effort to work out the kinks.

BEHIND barbed wire, supervisors are at work in photo taken by a CWA striker.

"Everybody gets the same treatment," said Nellie Allen, member of the committee and the local board.

"We don't look at names. We just look at problems."

The committee takes care of as many as 120 applicants a day. While the strikers await their turn to fill out their applications, they are served coffee and sandwiches at the committee headquarters.

After a striker fills out the application, his membership card is checked against the master file. Next, he is interviewed by one of 10 counsellors, and his needs are determined.

After a final check by Grace Murdoch, chairman of the committee, he receives a food order for enough groceries to supply his family for a week. Members of the welfare and the counselling committees work the year round—without pay.

Morale Is High

This aid and other strike expenses is costing about $8000 a week. Half of the strikers have temporary jobs and make no demands on the strike fund.

Public support has kept the morale of the strikers high. CIO and AFL locals, and businessmen and other individuals have contributed to the strike.

Here's New Way To Fix Phone

Here's a new way to get your phone fixed:

Charles S. Sompton, a CIO Communications Worker at St. Paul, Minn., is an amateur radio operator. He picked up a call from a Dr. Nakamura, near Deer River, 400 miles away, who wanted it reported to the Deer River exchange that his phone was out or order. Compton phoned the exchange and the phone was fixed.

GOOD STEW for hungry pickets is made at strike headquarters by Mickey Mecurio (left) and Viola Schultz.

IT WAS 6 A.M. on a cold day when these pickets came from line to strike headquarters for much appreciated hot coffee.

STREAMLINED strike assistance is shown by this series of photos. Assistant Strike Dir. Bill Newman (left) checks membership card of Charles Miller against master file. Miller (center) and Barbara Kolodziejski, another applicant for help, fill out applications as Eddie Marcus checks cards showing previous aid. Right, Grace Murdock, welfare committee head, looks over food order with Counsellor Vi Johnson, standing.

Economic Outlook Warns—

'Right To Work' Laws 'Atomize' Industry

THE NATION'S economy is being atomized by state "right to scab" laws, the CIO Economic Outlook warns in its current issue.

Seventeen states have enacted such legislation, which prohibits enforcement of union security agreements. Proponents call them "right to work" laws, but actually they are a "slick anti-labor weapon," said the Outlook, which is published by the CIO Dept. of Education & Research.

"'Right to Work' propagandists always refer to liberty, justice and free choice, which union security provisions supposedly take away from workers," it said. "But underlying such misleading declarations of high principle is the illusion that 'right to work' laws are a special attraction to industry and commerce."

Both assumptions are "false and illusory," the publication said. They merely serve, it added, "to cloak anti-labor legislation with a fraudulent cover of social purpose and respectability."

THE OUTLOOK emphasized that "behind the doctrine of exclusive bargaining rights is the simple democratic doctrine of majority rule."

"A Republican President, elected by a majority of voters, is the President of the United States, not of Republicans alone," it went on. "It is similar in industrial relations! The union selected as the bargaining agent by a majority of employes becomes the bargaining agent for all employes in the unit."

If a union fails to serve nonmembers in the bargaining unit, it continued, its bargaining rights may be challenged and the courts may find it has violated the law.

Citing management and other opinion that union representation leads to benefits for all workers in a unit, the Outlook asked:

"Is it unreasonable, then, to ask all workers in the bargaining unit to contribute to the support of the union that represents them? Can society properly sanction the 'free rider' who refuses to assume his share of the burden of industrial citizenship."

Union security is an issue that demands a national policy because labor-management relations are conducted with national firms that operate in several states, the Outlook stressed. Yet if "right to work" laws were adopted by all states, there would be 48 different laws affecting it.

This, the publication contended, would lead "to chaotic labor-management relations, and it could result in a breakdown of orderly collective bargaining relationships."

"A national economy requires natonal economic policies," the Outlook declared. "To atomize collective bargaining through the Taft-Hartley Act and state "right to work" laws is to restrain trade unions and business firms from functioning properly within a national economy dependent on interstate commerce and multiplant companies."

The CIO said that to single out union security for special restrictions is "an obvious attempt to undermine collective bargaining."

"The claims of high principle for 'right to work' laws have no basis in fact," it concluded. "These laws have but one single-minded aim: the undermining of union strength by disrupting effective bargaining and atomizing industrial relations."

Recants

The father of Georgia's right-to-scab law has recanted. The original sponsor of the measure, H. L. Wingate of the Georgia Farm Bureau Federation, told the Georgia CIO convention that he underwent a change of heart. He also thanked the Council for its consistent support of fair price supports in Congress.

Virginia CIO Sets Drive Against Open Shop Law

THE STATE'S "right to scab" bill was denounced and its repeal demanded in a resolution adopted unanimously at the Virginia CIO Council's annual convention.

Delegates at the sessions at Ocean View, Va., declared the law—passed in 1947 and with further amendments added by this year's Legislature—has "restricted and retarded organizational efforts and collective bargaining."

The Council's Legislative Committee will introduce a bill to repeal the act and unions were instructed to "work for the repeal of this insidious law that labor in Virginia again may obtain the dignity that is rightfully theirs."

Franz Daniel, assistant to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, cited the record of broken promises by the Eisenhower Administration. As examples he named the pledge to expand the TVA and the promise to remove bad features of the Taft-Hartley Act.

More than 100 delegates heard Daniel A. Powell, CIO-PAC field director, call for a large turnout of voters on Election Day. People should "look at the record of office holders and the platforms of new candidates before they vote," Powell said.

Other speakers included Executive Vice Pres. William Pollock of the CIO Textile Workers and Area Dir. Harry Scott of the CIO Paper Workers. Council Pres. Lawrence H. Marine presided at the convention sessions.

—The Job You Save May Be Your Own Give A Buck To PAC

LIU 1474 Tops 100% For PAC

Contributions by 100% of membership to the CIO Political Action Committee may be good enough for some unions, but not for Local Industrial Union 1474 in Raceland, La.

The union has only 100 members, according to a report from CIO Reg. Dir. Robert Starnes, but it has kicked in with $119 to PAC.

Friedel Carries Drive To Workers

SAM FRIEDEL is carrying to the workers at plant gates his campaign for re-election as Democratic congressman from the 7th Dist. in Baltimore.

In the Maryland city—which is hard-hit by unemployment in the steel mills and shipyards—CIO members are determined to help keep Friedel in office because of his straight liberal voting record.

The district is one into which Republican funds are being poured and where GOP big guns are pounding in the hope of picking up a badly needed seat in the House. Friedel carried the district in 1952 by a scant 51.4% of the votes.

Already the Citizens for Eisenhower band wagon, complete with pretty girls and barrage balloons, has appeared in Baltimore.

The district rings Baltimore. Its solid GOP vote in the north and east sections is offset by labor and liberal votes in the densely-populated balance of the area.

CIO members could well make the difference in the section where jobless and steel and ship workers live. Minority groups also are supporting Friedel because of his stand on issues affecting them while he was a member of Baltimore City Council and the Legislature.

PLANT GATE CAMPAIGN—Rep. Friedel (D. Md.) meets CIO Steelworkers at Bethlehem Steel's Sparrows Point plant.

Fulbright Award Deadline Near

Applications for Fulbright fellowships for study and research in the fields of labor and adult education in many foreign countries during the 1955-6 academic year will close on Nov. 1, the Institute of International Education has announced.

Literature and application blanks may be obtained from the institute at 1 E. 67th St., New York City.

On Wall St., Natch—

'The Only Good Men' Get Slap On The Back

NEED A COMPETENT MAN for government service? The best place to find him is in Wall St., in the opinion of a high Treasury Dept. official.

Changing the tune from bow-wows to brokers, Under-Secretary of the Treasury W. Randolph Burgess joined the "let's speak frankly among us friends" brigade, in an Oct. 7 address to the New York State Chamber of Commerce. His speech was reported in the starchy Commercial & Financial Chronicle, published in New York City.

"After all, every politician must have a constituency, and I think you come as near to being mine as any group," he said.

Having paid his tribute to the Chamber, Burgess paid an even greater compliment to the Wall St. delegation in Ike's Cabinet:

"I don't believe there has been a finer team of men assembled in the Cabinet and sub-Cabinet in the history of our country."

"That group includes a great many from downtown New York (the Wall St. area) and it includes some of your members, who, I can report, are doing a fine job . . .

"As a matter of fact, we are always a little embarrassed about downtown New York, because every time there is a vacancy and you need somebody of great competence, you can think of three or four fellows here who will do the job. You go around to the authorities and they say: 'For Lord's sake, give us somebody outside New York.'

"So we have to go digging around elsewhere in the country, and very often finally we come back and say: 'The only good man to do this job is from downtown New York; so I'm sorry, you will have to take him.'"

New Hampshire CIO Warns Against 'Right To Work' Peril

THANKFUL they escaped the brunt of Hurricane Hazel, more than 200 delegates to the annual convention of the New Hampshire CIO Council last week voted adoption of a resolution to put utility cables underground.

Meeting in Manchester, the convention called on the federal government to give financial assistance if necessary to prevent repetition of power failures which affected two million New England families.

The Council pledged itself to resist attempts by reactionary employers to use the Legislature to hamper unionization and weaken unions through passage of anti-labor legislation, including any so-called "right to work" laws.

Another resolution called for conformity on Daylight Saving Time across the nation. New Hampshire and a couple of other New England states will remain on DST until Oct. 31 and the Council noted the "saving, if any, is not worth the confusion, hardships and headaches. . . ."

Mrs. Rita McGowan, president of CIO Clothing Workers Local 550 in Newport, N. H., was presented with the Lt. Benjamin Rush Toland memorial medal. The annual award was instituted by the will of the Marine lieutenant killed on Iwo Jima to go to the person doing most to foster improved relations between labor and management.

Thomas Pitarys, manager of the Textile Workers Granite State Joint Board, succeeded George Fecteau, Shoe Workers director, who declined to run for a second term as president. Earl M. Bourdon, a Steelworker, succeeded Mrs. McGowan as executive vice president and Thomas Williams was renamed secretary-treasurer.

PAC Stressed At Colorado CIO Parley

LABOR'S great stake in the November election was stressed by speakers at the recent convention of the Colorado CIO Council at Denver.

Failure of the Eisenhower Administration to live up to campaign promises was the theme of John A. Carroll, Democratic candidate for Senator; Rep. Rogers (D. Colo.), who is seeking re-election, and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the former agriculture secretary.

Need for intensified political action also was stressed by a number of CIO aides. They included Dist. XII Dir. Fred Pieper; National Rep. Adolph Germer; Franz Daniel, field assistant to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, and George Roberts, western PAC director.

High Court Upholds Curb On Strikes In Wage Reopenings

THE SUPREME Court, in effect, has upheld a lower court ruling that the Taft-Hartley Act prohibits a strike at any time during the life of a collective bargaining contract, including wage reopenings.

It acted by refusing to accept a petition from the CIO Packinghouse Workers asking it to review a decision by the Circuit Court of Appeals at St. Louis growing out of a dispute at Wilson & Co. plants in Faribault, Minn., and Cedar Rapids, Ia.

The CIO Legal Dept. aided the UPWA in the presentation to the high court.

The lower court had ruled that the union violated the Taft-Hartley Act when it struck, after giving the 60-day strike notice the T-H law requires, because it was unable to negotiate a settlement under a wage reopening clause during the lifetime of a two-year agreement which did not contain a no-strike clause.

THE SUPREME COURT refused to accept the case although the union pointed out in its petition that the issue affects more than half the collective bargaining contracts in the U. S.

"It affects the willingness of unions to negotiate long term contracts," the petition said, "and contracts are being negotiated every day. Its prompt resolution by this court would, therefore, be in the public interest.

"Further, the interpretation given the statute by the court below is probably erroneous. It overturns the (National Labor Relations) Board's settled construction of the statute, which has been acquiesced in by Congress and relied upon in the negotiation of thousands of collective bargaining agreements; and it rejects a reasonable construction of the statute in favor of one which is both unreasonable and detrimental to stable labor relations."

A somewhat similar case, involving the same basic issue, is on its way up to the high court. It involves the CIO Oil Workers and the Lion Oil Co.

The Supreme Court agreed to review an appeal by the CIO Clothing Workers from an Ohio State court injunction prohibiting it from picketing, any place within the U. S., retail stores of the Richman Brothers chain.

The ACWA-CIO had placed pickets at Richman stores in all parts of the country to call attention to the fact their product is not made by workers receiving union wages and enjoying union working conditions.

NLRB Says Firm Must Bargain On Stock Purchases

A 3-TO-1 majority of the National Labor Relations Board last week ruled that the CIO Oil Workers may negotiate with the Richfield Oil Co. on an employe stock purchase plan to which the worker makes at least a 50% contribution.

The NLRB overruled contentions of Richfield and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce that mandatory bargaining on this point opens the door to union encroachment on management rights.

GE, Du Pont Profits Boom To New Peaks As Sales Fall

Sales fell off so badly in the first nine months of 1954 that the best General Electric and du Pont could do was to set new record high earnings, their latest reports show.

GE managed to bear up under the impact of a 7% decline in sales from the first nine months of 1953 by chalking up a spectacular 20% increase in profits. Earnings soared from $116,386,000 last year to $140,691,000 this year, while sales sagged to $2.1 billion from 1953's record $2.3 billion. The earnings amounted to $1.62 a share, compared to $1.34 last year.

Du Pont found solace for an 8% drop in sales—from last year's record $1.3 billion to $1.2 billion—in record nine-month net earnings of $4.74 a share, compared to $3.62 last year. The previous high was $4.67 in 1950.

The report said dividends from the firm's holdings in General Motors, thousands of whose employes are jobless, accounted for $1.22 per share, the same as last year. The balance of $3.52 a share came from du Pont's operating activities, compared to $2.40 a year ago.

'What's Good For GE Is Good For Teachers, Too'

WHAT'S GOOD for General Electric ought to be good for teachers, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther told the annual convention of the Maryland State Teachers Association in Baltimore last week.

He held up to them a newspaper clipping which reported GE had increased its profits by 20% while sales dropped off by 7%.

"Now wouldn't it be wonderful," he asked them, "if you could cut the number of children in your classes by 7% and get a 20% increase in pay?"

There is no reason why teachers should feel "selfish" when they ask for higher salaries, smaller classes and more schools, he maintained.

"You are fighting for the opportunity to do a more effective job, to solve the teacher shortage," Reuther said.

"The situation in our schools is tragic. Millions of American children are being denied their right to the opportunity for a good education. America cannot look itself in the eye until it has given every child the chance to grow intellectually and spiritually to the limit of his ability.

"We send our children to school in firetraps so bad that if union labor was forced to work in them there would be a picket line there the next morning.

"This is the way we treat our most precious asset!"

Building badly needed schools, he pointed out, would not only provide enough classrooms for children but in addition would create jobs for the unemployed.

The CIO president warmly commended the association for a resolution passed at an earlier session calling for "fair and lawful integration of Negroes in the public schools in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States."

IN MEMORY OF HEROISM—The famous World War II photo of the raising of the American flag atop Mt. Suribachi on Iwo Jima is reproduced in Marine Corps memorial now being erected in Arlington across the Potomac from Washington. Pulitzer Prize-winning photo was by Joe Rosenthal, CIO Newspaper Guildsman and past president of San Francisco-Oakland Guild. Felix de Weldin was the sculptor.

UPWA Local Lauds Stand On School Bias

THE "FIRM and courageous" stand in support of the desegragation program in Baltimore schools by three city officials has been commended by Local 392 of the CIO Packinghouse Workers.

Mayor Thomas D'Alessandro, Schools Supt. John Fisher and the police commissioner were praised for their crackdown on attempts to block integration of students in a resolution voted by Local 392 members at the American Sugar Co. refinery.

You And Your Money—

500,000 Relief Recipients Pay For Loophole In Social Security

By Public Affairs Institute

WHEN THE SOCIAL SECURITY bill improving old age pensions was enacted, there was general agreement that a big step forward had been made.

Nevertheless, there was one area in which relatively little was done. There was no significant improvement in the status of old age relief programs either on the federal or state levels.

That weakness is now showing up in the tragic disappointment of some 500,000 old age relief recipients who thought that their position would be improved but now find that this was mostly a delusion.

In many states relief recipients who also draw old age and survivors insurance are finding that their relief payments will now be cut by the amount of increase they receive in their OASI insurance checks.

THE QUESTION came to a head in Pennsylvania, which has notified aged and ill relief recipients:

"Your grant has been decreased effective Oct. —, 1954, due to increased social security benefits . . ."

For those who thought that all social security beneficiaries would have their economic position improved by the recent social security bill, the question must arise: "How does this come about?"

The answer is that under state relief laws, payments are fixed in accordance with minimum standards of living, taking into account whatever outside income the recipient may have. Old age insurance payments are part of that income. So the state is in a position to reduce its own contribution by the same amount as the federal old age payment goes up.

UNDER THE LAW this is perfectly legal, although it has stirred bitter complaints in Pennsylvania that the increases in federal benefits simply subsidize the state rather than improve the economic position of relief recipients, who in any event are desperately close to the subsistence level already.

Rep. Byrne (D. Pa.) has written Pres. Eisenhower complaining that "it was not the intent of Congress that this money go into the coffers of any state government, but that it should actually increase the benefits received by the aged and needy, under both federal and state laws."

Whatever the intent of Congress, the fact is that Congress did nothing to prevent exactly this from happening.

There are some half million OASI recipients who also receive old age assistance payments throughout the country. This is a sizable chunk of those who were supposed to benefit under the new social security act but who actually do not. It is likely that they will make their voices heard during the next Congress.

ACWA Opens New Health Center

CIVIC leaders joined with labor and management officials last week at the opening of the $1.3 million health center of the laundry division of the CIO Clothing Workers in New York City.

The two-story structure, housing the latest equipment, offers the most comprehensive medical care under a single roof. It will serve the 18,000 laundry workers who are employed by 1500 laundry, diaper service and linen supply establishments.

Free medical services will be supplied under terms negotiated with the employers. ACWA Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky pointed out that the health center is interracial. He said the laundry workers organization is composed of white and Negro members in almost equal proportions and includes Puerto Rican, Chinese and other substantial minorities.

"Our laundry workers," Potofsky declared, "have learned cooperation and mutual respect through years of struggle for a better life. They have emerged from a sweatshop industry, steadily improving their wages and working standards, obtained a comprehensive system of welfare benefits and have now achieved their latest dream—this beautiful health center which will minister to their needs."

Mayor Robert F. Wagner, Manhattan Borough Pres. Hulan Jack and Rep. Powell (D. N. Y.) attended the opening exercises.

Commenting on the opening the New York Times said editorially: "The center is an impressive end product of the efforts of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, which began in the Middle Thirties, to improve the conditions of the workers in New York's laundries, then notoriously bad. It is also an example of union welfare fund operations at their best—an example now particularly timely."

MEDICAL CARE for 18,000 laundry workers—members of the CIO Clothing Workers—will be provided by health center recently opened in New York. At opening ceremony are (from left) Manager Louis Simon, ACWA Laundry Workers Joint Board, Manhattan Pres. Hulan Jack, ACWA Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky, Mayor Robert F. Wagner, and Joint Board Assistant Manager Odell Clark.

CIO Praises Credit Unions As 'Friend Of Every Worker'

CREDIT UNIONS were hailed by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther as "truly the friend of every American worker" as Intl. Credit Union Day was celebrated on Oct. 21.

In a message to CUNA, nonprofit organization of credit unions in this hemisphere, Reuther said 1.5 million CIO Auto Workers members "are well aware of the advantages offered by credit unions, because so many UAW-CIO members belong to them."

"The UAW and its local unions have always encouraged membership in credit unions and will continue to do so," he said.

"We wish you and CUNA every success in your efforts to promote thrift and to aid those who need it most with low interest loans. CUNA and its affiliated groups are truly the friend of every American worker."

Some 260 CIO locals now operate their credit unions. Intl. Credit Union Day marked the 106th anniversary of the credit union movement. There are now 19,500 of these self-help thrift associations in the Western Hemisphere, with more than nine million members.

Coffee Cheaper--U.S. Blast Did It

Close on the heels of a government report that speculation, not shortages, caused jumps in coffee prices, three big grocery chains cut the retail price. A. & P., Grand Union Co. and Safeway Stores reduced prices by 4-6c a pound after wholesale prices dropped by 5c.

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

NOVEMBER is a month of clothing sales. It is also the time auto dealers cut prices sharply to unload this year's models. Judging from the 1955 models, some of the '54 cars are more suitable for many needs at that.

Buying Calendar

Look for good buys in clothing needs this month. Prices of fabrics are starting to move up from recent bargain levels and will soon affect retail price tags on apparel. Cut-price sales of women's coats are featured on Armistice Day, as well as reduced prices on men's suits, but more markdowns on men's coats will be available later in the winter.

Here are buying suggestions for this month:

SNOWSUITS: These are the most expensive children's garments families have to buy. Some sets for children run as high as $30 but are an unwise investment. Often these expensive sets of coats and leggings are made of fragile woolens. What most parents want is a hard-wearing, warm outfit for about $10 that will last at least two years or more if the child doesn't outgrow it first. And you can get it around the $10-$12 mark if you shop carefully.

While one-piece snowsuits are often preferred for toddlers because they are warmer, two-piecers are more practical for older children. They are more adjustable to growth. Also the jacket can be worn separately and the usefulness of the suit can often be extended another year by getting a separate pair of snow pants.

For warmth and wear, a suit made with a wind-resistant cotton or nylon-rayon outer covering, and a wool liner, is preferable to an all-wool suit. The outer shell should be either closely-woven cotton twill, gabardine or poplin.

Knit bands at wrists and ankles are warmer than button or even zipper closures, and should preferably be wool for warmth and more elasticity than cotton. Fit is important too. Don't trust marked sizes; they vary.

WOMEN'S COAT SALES: You can get good value at the coat sales this month if you select a classic style and avoid extreme fashions even though they are often marked down most drastically. Some coats are made this year with detachable fur collars, which is a more versatile idea than the usual fur-trim. But for best value, invest in a good cloth coat which you can dress up or down with accessories.

Stores are featuring women's coats in soft fabrics like cashmere, fleeces and wool velour, but these get shabby quickly, particularly at the cuffs and around buttonholes. Nor are the widely-flared styles currently being featured a good choice if you want real warmth. Fitted or straight box styles are warmer.

One way to tell good quality in a coat is to look at it inside out. Clarice L. Scott, U. S. Agriculture Dept. clothing specialist, advises that the lining should be smoothly and neatly fitted with expansion allowance in back, and neatly put in with fine stitches at the edges and armholes. In cheap coats, linings are often run up by machine and slipped into place with only a few loose tack stitches to hold them. In a good coat the lining is tacked securely around the shoulder and side seams.

CARS: The 1955 moderate-price models will feature more eight cylinder engines and longer lines, neither of which is of particular use to (1) families interested in economy, and (2) city and suburban drivers struggling with traffic and parking. The 1953 and '54 sixes therefore will have lower resale value, and should offer a buying opportunity for families that use a car mostly for short trips and are interested in gas and repair economy.

(Copyright 1954, by Sidney Margolius)

17 Health Insurance Firms Charged With Ad Fakery

THE FEDERAL Trade Commission, after a 10-month look at advertising by the hospitalization, accident and health insurance business, came up last week with complaints that 17 companies have been using "false and misleading" claims about their policies.

The firms named collect more than $300 million a year in premiums, about one-third of the country's total health and accident coverage on an individual basis.

Among them are the four largest—Mutual of Omaha (Mutual Benefit Health and Accident Association, Omaha, Neb.); the White Cross Plan (Bankers Life & Casualty Co., Chicago); Reserve Life Insurance Co., Dallas, Tex., and United Insurance Co., Chicago.

Chairman Edward F. Howrey said the FTC began an investigation when a lot of policy holders complained that the coverage they had bought was not what they thought it was—that the small print in the policies proved different than the large print in the advertisements.

He said the proceedings were directed against the use of false or misleading advertising claims as to the extent of coverage provided and the benefits payable under health and accident policies.

The complaints allege the 17 cited firms have been using false representations, deceptive or misleading statements, and deceptive concealment, or non-disclosure of exceptions and limitations, in their advertising. Such practices, to the FTC, are "unfair and deceptive."

Howrey said approximately 900 companies are operating in the field and have sold policies to some 25 million individuals. Premiums in 1953 for both individual and group coverage were more than $3 billion, an increase of more than 200% since 1946.

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

THE COMMUNIST Daily Worker in a recent article has attacked my religious beliefs and the economic thinking of Pres. David J. McDonald of the United Steelworkers of America, CIO.

Despite the bitterness of the article I was flattered because it brackets me with McDonald. It is an honor to be mentioned in the same article with the man who has done so much for the steel workers of the country—a man who, in the face of reduced steel output and vast unemployment in the steel industry, was able to negotiate improved wages and benefits for steel workers all across this country.

McDonald did what many thought was the impossible—eliminated the so-called southern differential that had for so many years been imposed on the steel workers of the South. As always, the Daily Worker attacks those officers of labor unions who are constantly fighting to win improved wages and security for workers all across this country.

IT IS AT THIS TIME OF YEAR that the Community Chest makes its appeal to the people to support and contribute whatever they can to the Community Chest. I am proud to say that the CIO has always played a vital part in helping the Community Chest reach its goal because with many of us rings these words of the late Philip Murray:

"There permeates through your bloodstream that very human desire to make a contribution to the well-being of not only your people—the members of your union—but to make a constructive and substantial contribution to the welfare of the people in your communities, and, in fact, the nation." I feel sure that in 1954 the CIO again will do all it can to make the chest fund raising drives a success.

The CIO Research & Education Dept. has released a very good pamphlet entitled "Right-to-Work Laws—Slick Anti-Labor Weapon," which exposes the true intent of so-called state "right to work" legislation. Such legislation is now in force in 17 states, chiefly in the South, where labor has long been weak.

The real aim of such laws, although they pretend to be interested in protecting the worker, is to destroy unions by making them ineffective. By outlawing all forms of the union shop, employers are free to hire as many non-union workers as they please and to lower wages and working conditions accordingly.

This has become a vital issue for labor people all across the country, because 16 of the 17 states passed "right to work" legislation since 1947. For any of you readers who are not clear as to the threat of right to work legislation I urge you to read the above mentioned pamphlet. The best way to fight evil things that threaten the existence of our great organization is to understand them, then use every means to change them.

Steadier Auto Production, Job Stability Urged By Reuther

THE AUTO industry was called upon last week by Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers to draw up steadier production schedules for 1955 models and to support national policies aimed at increasing purchasing power.

In a letter to all auto and truck producers under contract with the UAW-CIO, Reuther also asked for information on expected monthly production and employment schedules at each plant covered by a union agreement.

"As the recognized representative of the workers employed by your company," he wrote, "we are legally and morally entitled to the above information so that our members will know where they stand and what they can expect.

"Auto workers are people and not tools of production that can be mothballed when not needed. They are human beings with families who must be fed and clothed and sheltered 52 weeks of the year."

Reuther recounted the shambles the industry made of employment by crowding a disproportionate percentage of production into the first six months of 1953 and by nationwide recruitment of employes.

"THERE ARE TWO important measures which can be taken to avoid a repetition of the troubles which have afflicted the automobile industry and its workers since the middle of 1953," he wrote. "The UAW-CIO strongly urges your active support for them.

"The first measure is to use all possible ingenuity and foresight to stabilize production schedules so as to insure maximum employment throughout the year for the workers now in the industry, including those at present laid off . . .

"The second measure is to impress on the Administration and Congress with all possible vigor the necessity of national policies designed to produce an expansion of mass purchasing power which will enable millions of American families to fill needs now unsatisfied and will open up vast new markets for the automobile industry and for every other industry."

PORTRAIT of George Leader, Pennsylvania Democratic gubernatorial candidate, dominates CIO Transport Workers conference in Harrisburg. TWU Pres. Michael J. Quill (speaking) pointed to Democratic trend in elections. Pres. Harry Boyer of Pennsylvania CIO Council is at right; TWU-PAC Dir. James Carroll is at left.

Big Transport Rally Sparks PAC Drive In Pennsylvania

ALL-OUT support for Democratic candidates for state and national offices was pledged by 125 representatives of 30,000 CIO Transport Workers attending the Pennsylvania TWU-CIO conference in Harrisburg.

TWU Pres. Michael J. Quill pointed out a Democratic trend throughout the country and predicted it would be particularly true in Pennsylvania, where some 400,000 unemployed constitute the biggest election issue.

George Leader, Democratic candidate for governor, was cheered on his promise "to repeal all anti-labor legislation enacted by the Republican Administration."

PRES. HARRY BOYER of the Pennsylvania CIO Council ripped the GOP State Administration for "the bad legislation that has plagued the working man in the past eight years." Boyer charged that employers in the state have gained $200 million "by legislative juggling" of the unemployment insurance fund.

It was the first TWU session in the state since the recent affiliation of the CIO Railroad Workers.

A plea for aid for hard-hit Altoona, Pa., was given a White House "brush off," four labor leaders claimed after a conference with Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, mobilization director for Pres. Eisenhower, last week.

The conference was arranged by Sen. Morse (Ind. Ore.) when he was presented with a 4000-name petition asking help for the railroad center where unemployment is high. Labor spokesmen said that appeals to Rep. Van Zandt (R. Pa.) and other Republican officials had been futile.

John Horon, CIO Transport Workers, and John Lamaur, CIO Steelworkers, were in the delegation that saw Flemming. Lamaur said later that Flemming would make no commitments and discouraged the group from trying to present their case to Eisenhower.

"We were told a lot of words that meant nothing . . . We got a polite brush off," Lamaur stated.

700 Clerical Workers Join IUE; Another GE Shop Won

SEVEN hundred new members, salaried and clerical employes of Federal Telephone & Radio Corp. in Nutley, N. J., have joined the CIO Electrical Workers.

The white collar group operated under a CIO local industrial union charter since 1949. Prior to that it was in the Office Workers, one of the unions expelled by CIO in 1949 because of Communist domination.

A membership meeting of the LIU voted unanimously to join IUE, which represents the 4000 production workers at the Nutley plant.

A few days earlier employes at the General Electric service shop, Long Island City, N. Y., voted 29 to 2 for IUE against the Communist-led United Electrical Workers. It was the last GE plant left in UE's Dist. 4.

An all-out drive is under way by IUE to oust the UE from three Tung-Sol plants in northern New Jersey. More than 2000 workers are involved in the drives at plants in Newark, Bloomfield and Hillside.

Plans to step up the campaign were made at a meeting of the presidents of IUE-CIO locals in the Newark-Bloomfield area. A National Labor Relations Board election will be held before Nov. 7. Pres. Milton Weihrauch of IUE-CIO Dist. 4, who called the meeting, said.

"Only in IUE-CIO will Tung-Sol workers find the necessary strength to help them make progress in the fields of increased wages, job security, better conditions, and improved pensions and health and welfare programs."

IUE-CIO won a 9c an hour package at the American Bosch plant at Springfield, Mass., despite efforts of local management to repudiate the agreement.

New Providence Station Airs Show

CIO's nightly radio program featuring the news and commentary of John W. Vandercook is now being heard over Station WEAN in Providence, R. I. The program was formerly heard over WPJB in that city. WEAN operates at 790 kc. on the radio dial, with 5000-watt power.

Severance Won In Cudahy Pact

An estimated $2 million in severance pay will go to 2500 Cudahy Packing Co. workers whose jobs have been lost through closing of plants in Sioux City, Ia., Newport, Minn., and Albany, Ga.

Distribution of the pay was negotiated by the CIO Packinghouse Workers when a new two-year contract was signed with the firm.

Guild Plans Drive In TV

A MOVE toward possible representation for writers in the broadcasting industry was made by the CIO Newspaper Guild last week at simultaneous meetings in six major radio and television centers.

ANG-CIO Intl. Rep. John Campbell said in Los Angeles that the meetings are exploratory and were set up in answer "to a number of letters from writers in television and radio expressing dissatisfaction with their present bargaining representation." The Guild, he stressed has made no plans for organizing.

In a letter to the radio and TV writers, Exec. Vice Pres. Ralph B. Novak pointed out that the ANG-CIO is the largest union of writers, and has observed the struggle of other writers for "an effective contract in television."

Baltimore Shipyard Rapped On Drive Against Seniority

THE MARYLAND Drydock Co., Baltimore, Md., last week was accused by the CIO Shipbuilding Workers of trying to rob 2500 members of seniority protection.

That charge was made by Executive Sec. Charles A. Russell of IUMSWA-CIO Local 31 after negotiations were recessed indefinitely.

He said that the company was insisting on a proposal that would permit it to transfer "favorite" employes with low seniority from a department where a layoff was pending to other jobs. Men with from 15 to 20 years' seniority remaining in the department would then be furloughed, Russell pointed out.

"We asked the company to give the same seniority protection enjoyed by every union shipyard worker in Baltimore," he said. "We pointed out that such a guarantee is the workers' only protection against strawbosses who don't like the color of some workers' hair."

Seniority protection is highly important in the shipbuilding industry, which was the first of the major industries to be hit by the recession and the Eisenhower's "economy" moves.

The company is trying to starve the workers into accepting its terms and has succeeded in keeping the State from paying unemployment compensation to 300 employes laid off July 23.

The N. Y. Campaign—

Reuther Lauds Harriman As 'Labor's Friend'

CIO PRES. Walter P. Reuther last week praised Averell Harriman, Democratic candidate for governor of New York, as "a close friend of organized labor."

On the basis of Harriman's record and his "liberal, humanitarian program," Reuther said, he pledged his "sincere support and our hope that your campaign will end in victory."

Reuther told Harriman that he was pleased that the New York State CIO Council had voted endorsement of the Democratic Party ticket which has "pledged to return liberal, forward-looking government to the Empire State."

Harriman replied that he was grateful to CIO members in New York for their endorsement and he appreciated Reuther's personal message and good wishes. The CIO, Harriman said, "is familiar with my political and economic views. We have worked together for many years."

"As an associate of the late Pres. Roosevelt," Reuther wrote, "you demonstrated that there is no conflict, and need be no conflict, between the essentials of a New Deal program of economic reform and social progress, on the one hand, and the essentials of free economic enterprise, on the other hand.

AVERELL HARRIMAN
Praised by CIO president

"As Secretary of Commerce," Reuther continued, "you proved that the federal government agency devoted to the service of business need not be, and should not be, anti-labor in character as the present Republican Secretary of Commerce would have the public believe."

Through Harriman's cooperation and assistance, Reuther declared, "organized labor played a direct and vital role in the Marshall Plan operations—more, I believe, than labor has ever enjoyed in any other governmental program."

The CIO president paid tribute to Harriman's "statesmanlike guidance of policy and skillful administration of that agency, through which the people of America helped their friends in Europe survive the economic chaos and the threat of Soviet Communist domination after World War II."

Replying to Reuther, Harriman said the working men and women in New York State "can be certain that there will be a better day for them starting Jan. 1, 1955."

The Democratic candidate noted that unemployment "is the most serious question which confronts us today." Harriman scored the Republican attitude of inattention to the problem.

"Imagine what such a hands-off attitude would have meant to the future of democracy in western Europe," he said, "when Communist imperialism was on the march, if we had had an Administration in Washington which said, 'Let the free workers of western Europe wait and prosperity will come.'

"Imagine if during those perilous postwar years—when western Europe was in a state of virtual economic collapse—we had had an Administration in Washington which had followed a slogan of 'Let's do nothing and it will go away.'"

Harriman said Democrats believe that government is a servant of its citizens—not its master—a philosophy which, he contended, the Republican Party still repudiates.

"The Republican Administration," Harriman continued, "has produced the economy of the slowdown and it may lead to the economy of the shutdown. It takes a perverse kind of genius for an Administration to take over a nation whose citizens were fully employed, whose factories were booming, and in 20 short months create fear where there was confidence, anxiety where there was security and leveling-off where there was growth."

With victory on Nov. 2, Harriman promised, his Administration "is determined to put an end to the care-nothing government in Albany."

Warning

A warning that "last minute personal smears" may be expected in the last days before the Nov. 2 elections was voiced by W. J. Ashworth, national council member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"Such allegations are purposefully released just before an election," Ashworth said, "because they cannot be fully substantiated, although they may appear as truth."

10-25

Here Are Tips On How To Get Out A Big Vote

Here are some of the things which the CIO Political Action Committee suggests should be done to insure a full turnout of the labor vote on election day:

First, cast your own ballot. Do it early, so that you set a good example and will be free to spend the rest of the day getting others to the polls.

Then, assuming that your local PAC organization has already thoroughly canvassed all eligible voters and has organized the lists for election day coverage, you should give it as much help as possible.

CIO councils and their PAC committees are the center of labor's political action. They will have organized a number of committees on which you may serve, such as:

1. A poll committee — which operates as near the polling places as state election law permits, checking off voters against the list of union members in each precinct, so that those who have not voted can be immediately identified.

2. A checking committee—which keeps in touch with the poll committee and passes on to the telephone committee the names of union members not voting.

3. A telephone committee—which telephones members to remind them to vote. If voters say they need transportation or a baby sitter, it passes this request on to the respective committees.

4. An automobile committee—which takes care of transportation requests, working from a list provided before election day as well as requests received by the telephone committee.

5. A baby-sitters committee—which provides a central nursery and handles requests at voters' homes.

6. A challenging committee—which operates at the polling place, challenging anything irregular or against the law and any voter recognized as a non-resident of the precinct, non-registered, or having already voted.

7. A lawyers committee—which investigates all cases where a voter is denied the right to vote and explains the election laws as necessary.

Individual precinct workers, assigned lists of union voters by the central PAC organization in their area, will also be needed. Their work will begin the night before election day, when they call on the people to remind them to vote for PAC-backed candidates.

The next morning, precinct workers again will try to reach men and women before they leave for work, urging them to vote.

A final job begins when the polls close and the count starts. Watchers should be assigned to every precinct. In many cases, an alert watcher can save an election from being lost by default.

In An 'Off Year,' Every Vote Is Doubly Important

NEXT WEEK, on Nov. 2, the American people will set the course of their future. They can block the GOP Administration's path to depression and special privilege—provided you, the individual voter, do your share.

That means casting your vote—and doing everything in your power to get others to do likewise.

That's a bigger order than it sounds. Even in 1952, when a record 59.7 million Americans voted, the turnout in terms of the percentage of potential voters was only 61% of those eligible.

Nearly 37 million U. S. citizens over 21—enough to have materially changed the outcome of the election and prevented the harmful economic policies which followed—didn't vote in 1952. In 1950, the last "off" or non-presidential election year, more than 56 million eligible voters failed to vote.

A big percentage of those not voting, surveys show, were union members. Elmo Roper, political forecaster, has estimated the unrealized potential vote among union members and their families at 18 million.

"Evidence indicates that over half the trade union members and even more of their families have never gone to the polls to vote," he pointed out.

As PAC Dir. Jack Kroll has pointed out, "some politicians just don't want people to register and vote, and particularly they don't want working men and women to vote. They like to keep the vote small, because a small vote is more easily manipulated or more easily controlled."

NEW YORK, which leads the nation in both population and number of workers in manufacturing, settled its 1946 and 1950 off-year elections with less than half of its registered voters balloting.

In terms of voting turnout, California, the No. 2 state in population, ranks 29th. Other big states with low voting ranks are New Jersey 22nd, Ohio 23rd, Missouri 26th and Michigan 30th.

In all but a handful of states the deadline for registration has now passed. Early reports show a drop in registration in several important industrial areas, making it doubly important that every registered voter votes this Nov. 2.

"We finally located somebody who thinks he can convince the CIO-PAC people to support Taft-Hartley, stop all federal aid to education, and reduce farm price supports."

Law Upheld

The Supreme Court last week rejected a challenge by the International Harvester Co. of Minnesota's law prohibiting employers from docking the pay of workers who take time off to vote.

The effect was to uphold earlier decisions by Minnesota courts fining the company $100 for deducting $3.50 from the pay of a worker at the firm's St. Paul plant who took two hours off from work to vote in 1952.

Time Off To Go To Polls

TWENTY-SEVEN states have enacted laws providing that workers may take time off from work for the purpose of voting.

They are Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

While the laws vary from state to state, they usually provide that workers, upon request to their employer, can take time off to vote without loss of wages or other penalty. Information about the law in each state can be obtained from local CIO councils and PAC committees.

Give A Buck To PAC —The Job You Save May Be Your Own

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., November 1, 1954 82 Vol. 17, No. 44

Election Eve Reminder—

Wherever You Are . . .

Whatever You're Doing . . .

On Nov. 2 Go To The Polls And VOTE!

The Job You Save May Be Your Own!

GOP Winds Up Campaign With Barrage Of Phony Job Figures

By GERVASE N. LOVE

THE EISENHOWER Administration called on the country last week to join it in rejoicing that the recession it denied ever existed has finally gone away.

Pres. Eisenhower extended the first bid to the jubilation in an ad lib interpolation in a speech before the National Security Industrial Association. Unemployment, he said, had dropped 400,000 in the last month.

The President didn't tell the whole story; total employment also dropped by 4000 from September to October.

Sec. of Labor Mitchell gave the details the following night in a major radio political address. It wasn't 400,000, he said, but 358,000, and the country ought to be happy that under the Republicans it has been enjoying "the most prosperous peacetime year in our history" after what he called two decades of war and depression under the Democrats.

THE CIO and the AFL promptly accused him of using "hand-picked statistics" on the eve of the election to portray a picture of prosperity that just doesn't exist.

"Of course, we are gratified that according to government statistics, unemployment is now supposed to be down 358,000," said Emil Rieve, chairman of the CIO Economic Policy Committee and president of the Textile Workers.

"But at this time, when unemployment is always at its seasonal low for the year, we cannot forget the 2.75 million men and women still unemployed. And after months of enforced idleness large numbers of these people have exhausted their unemployment compensation benefits. To these people the recession is still on, full force."

Rieve pointed out that while Mitchell in his speech reports workers being recalled to their jobs, he said nothing about textile, coal or other industries still operating at low levels, nor the fact that "the Census Bureau's figures on employment dropped, rather than gained, during the month of October."

"The fact of the matter," he said, "is this: These pre-election reassurances about unemployment from leaders of the Eisenhower Administration are nothing more than camouflage, persiflage and double-montage.

"Nothing — no last minute speeches, no tricky language, no sudden show of pre-election sympathy for the jobless—can hide the fact that the Republican Party will not and cannot adopt the sort of forward-looking program that will ensure a full-production, full-employment economy for our country.

"America wants a sound economic policy and program 52 weeks a year, not just Republican promises a week before election."

AFL Pres. George Meany declared Mitchell "withheld from the public" significant statistics "which definitely contradict his optimistic conclusions."

"Carefully selected figures . . . on a paid political broadcast just before election," he said, "leads to the conclusion that the Administration is more interested in providing the unemployed with statistical propaganda rather than jobs."

Realists among the unemployed gave scant heed to the Administration's invitation to elate. They were looking for jobs.

TYPICAL of them were 1500 jobless miners and industrial workers who descended on the tiny community of Donaldson's Crossroads, Pa., 18 miles south of Pittsburgh, in answer to a three-line classified advertisement for "male laborers" which appeared in four area newspapers.

State police had to be called to untangle the worst traffic jam in the town's history. The scrap metal firm that inserted the ad hoped for about 50 men to take up the rails of an abandoned trolley line.

Also typical were 600 men in New York who waited in line all night — some of them for two nights—to pay fees of $2.12 each and apply for 20 jobs at $47 a week as porters for the City Housing Authority.

Meantime, the Labor Dept. reported that factory hirings in September, at 35 per 1000 workers, were at the lowest rate for the month since 1930, when the figure was 33 per 1000 workers.

THE OCTOBER report of the Indiana State Employment Service indicated that Hoosiers, like workers in other states, are dubious about the passing of the recession that is supposed never to have existed.

Among other things, it showed employment in Calumet down 6500 in a year (2700 since July) and in Fort Wayne 9000 less than in October 1953.

And in Illinois, despite the gladsome GOP, relief rolls continued to mount. Public aid checks went to 80,367 persons during August, the latest report shows.

IS THIS PROSPERITY?—Last week the Monongahela Iron Co. advertised for 50 laborers to tear up an old trolley line near Washington, Pa., south of Pittsburgh. Some 1500 unemployed miners and mill workers turned out, found the jobs already were filled. Said one observer: "This is the biggest collection of bird dogs I've ever seen."

Less You Sell, The More You Earn, GM Reports

GENERAL Motors — riding the postwar version of the corporate gravy train of the less you sell, the more you earn —turned a 9% decline in sales into a 29% increase in net profits during the first nine months of 1954, it reported last week.

A sharp cut in taxes under the Eisenhower Administration's tax policies was the major factor in the profits increase.

GM's profit for the first three quarters was $584.9 million, or $6.58 a share, the second highest for a similar period in the firm's history, compared to $452.7 million, or $5.08 a share, in 1953. Net sales were $7.2 billion, down more than $700 million from last year's record $7.9 billion.

U. S. Steel didn't do badly, either. It declared the regular dividend on common and preferred shares though income in the third quarter was $44 million, or $1.44 a share, compared to $61 million, or $2.12 a share, in 1953.

Standard Oil of New Jersey reported new records in both sales and earnings for the first nine months. It estimated its net at $438 million, equal to $7.23 a share, compared with $432 million, or $7.13 a share, in 1953.

LABOR HELPS WAR ON CANCER—Gift of the CIO Steelworkers, a cobalt "bomb" used to treat cancer victims was dedicated at the Philip Murray Radio Therapy Center at Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh. From left: Dr. W. W. Maclachlan, Mercy president; Very Rev. Vernon F. Gallagher, Dusquesne University head; Mayor David Lawrence; USA-CIO Pres. David J. McDonald; Sen. Duff (R. Pa.) and Dr. G. R. Perryman. Power of bomb is equivalent to that of three million volt x-ray machine. (Page 2.)

The Price Of Dixon-Yates—

A Fight The People Can't Afford To Lose

PITY THE POOR BANKERS down Arkansas way—power rates are so high that even they can't afford to operate an electric stove.

This sad fact came to light when Arthur E. McLean, 62-year-old president of the Commercial National Bank in Little Rock, testified before the Senate Anti-Monopoly Committee.

Things were so tough, McLean reported, that he only toasted one piece of bread at a time and coached his neighbors in this routine because it saved, he said, several dollars a month.

McLean embarked on a damning indictment of the policies of the Arkansas Power & Light Co., a subsidiary of Middle South Utilities, one of the firms involved in the Dixon-Yates combine which Pres. Eisenhower personally directed to be the recipient of a power contract with TVA.

The banker said he was an advocate of free enterprise, that he voted for Eisenhower and still hoped he would make a great President. His only purpose in testifying, he said, "is to stop the greed of a few of the utilities who will destroy themselves if they don't act in moderation."

McLean learned about the utility's rates the hard way when he had an air conditioning unit installed. Under AP&L's rate schedule, the rates climb sharply after the first 1000 kilowatt hours.

"Most poor devils figured that if they have air conditioning they had to pay through the nose," McLean said but he decided to protest.

Then he learned about another gimmick used by the private firm—the rate jumped when the peak load exceeded a certain point for as long as 15 minutes in a month. Dolefully, he told the Senate group about a letter he wrote to AP&L in July 1953 telling them how he was trying to keep his total load under six kilowatts.

He was doing pretty well, he wrote, until his servants found some left-over waffle batter. Out came the waffle iron, up went the current demand past six kw. and "the cost of making those waffles will be $2.70," he mourned.

McLean said he yanked out his four-burner electric stove because operating it at capacity for 15 minutes it could draw 10.7 kw. and cost him an extra $28.89 a month. He put in a gas stove which he figured cost him 46c to run at the same rate.

Wash days at the McLean house, he added, could cost an extra $14.85 a month unless the air conditioning was turned off while the dryer and iron were in use.

AP&L countered with a $2 million damage suit against McLean, not for what he told the Senate probers, but based on speeches it claimed he made back home in Arkansas. The suit claimed McLean called the firm "the most corrupt corporation in history of Arkansas."

Sen. Langer (R. N. D.) erupted violently, stating: "This committee is not going to allow Dixon-Yates to intimidate any of its witnesses by bringing suit against anyone who did testify. As long as I'm chairman, I'm not going to be bluffed, scared or intimidated, and I will not allow this Dixon-Yates crowd, no matter who is back of it, to bluff anyone."

Former Gov. Sid McMath of Arkansas blamed the utility firm for his defeat in his bid for a Senate seat earlier this year.

"Their intense political opposition to any candidate or public official who opposes them proves that they do not want their power monopoly regulated by the state or federal government," McMath charged.

He attacked the Dixon-Yates contract, made without competitive bidding, and declared:

"This is a fight between the private power monopolies and the people of the U. S. It is a fight the people cannot afford to lose."

Attacks on Dixon-Yates and the secrecy surrounding the "deal" were continuing from every quarter.

Leland Olds, former chairman of the Federal Power Commission, said it was the first step towards destroying TVA as a yardstick for the utility field. He asserted the "Eisenhower-power trust partnership" had the objective of "rape" of the public interest.

Rep. Holifield (D. Calif.) said his study of the proposed contract revealed it to be full of jokers, "completely one-sided in favor of the company" and frosted with "legalistic double talk," to conceal the fact that the government was going to have to pay private power interests $500 million during the next 25 years.

At his press conference last week Eisenhower thought the government's interests have been "perfectly and splendidly protected" in the contract. But he said he would discipline the person—if he could find him—who "leaked" the secret details of the contract to a newspaper so that the public could get its only knowledge of the provisions.

Steelworkers Dedicate Cobalt Bomb For Cancer Aid In Murray's Memory

AN ATOMIC weapon was trained on the deadly scourage of cancer by the CIO Steelworkers last week in Pittsburgh.

The weapon—a cobalt bomb—was dedicated at the new Philip Murray Radiation Therapy Center at Mercy Hospital. The "bomb" dominated the attention of union officials, clergy and scientists in attendance.

The treatment room of the new center was made possible by a $100,000 gift of the USA-CIO in honor of their late president, who also headed the CIO.

A few wafers of radioactive cobalt no larger than several dimes are buried within a 3000-pound sphere of lead. Radiation from the Cobalt "60" penetrates the cancerous tissues of the patient with the power of a three-million volt x-ray machine, curbing and destroying diseased cells.

USA-CIO Pres. David J. McDonald declared that a memorial for Philip Murray which "should lengthen life is perfect." He explained:

"Phil Murray was a man who wanted to bring happiness to the poor. He wanted to place music in the homes where it was unknown, carpets on bare floors and pictures on bare walls."

The happiness which will come when a father or mother, husband or wife; son or daughter is helped by the cobalt bomb in the fight against cancer is a kind of joy Murray would consider perfect, McDonald added.

He echoed the sentiments of the Sisters of Mercy who operate the hospital, and of Murray, his predecessor, when he promised that the poor and the sick never will be turned away from the radiation center because they can't pay.

McDonald recalled that when the first A-bomb was dropped, Murray confided to him that this was "a fearsome thing" that must be put to work for the benefit of mankind.

The CIO affiliate's gift makes Mercy one of the few hospitals in the nation equipped with an atomic weapon of such potency against malignant cells.

Guests at the dedication were introduced by Dr. W. W. G. Maclachlan, president of the hospital staff. Speakers included Pittsburgh's Mayor David L. Lawrence; Sen. Duff (R. Pa.); Dr. C. R. Pennyman, who will be in charge of the new radiation center; Msgr. Joseph G. Findlan, who was delegated by Bishop John F. Dearden to bless the center, and Very Rev. Vernon F. Gallagher, president of Duquesne University.

Father Gallagher pointed out that the dedication took place on the feast day of the Archangel Raphael, "one of seven who stand before the throne of God and whose name, when translated from the Hebrew, means 'the healing of God'."

He called the bomb "a spark of God's power which has been placed in our hands."

Slump Forecast In Farmer's Pay

The Agriculture Dept. predicted that the farmers' share of the consumer's food dollar will drop to 43c next year, down a penny from this year and the lowest since 1940. The housewife won't profit, however, because the same forecast says "the cost of marketing those foods may be slightly higher."

Indians, Firewater & The Union

AN INDIAN can now drink a bottle of beer in Iowa without casting a furtive over-the-shoulder look for a skulking sheriff. The Indian gets his beer and the CIO Packinghouse Workers get credit for dumping a 115-year-old Iowa law.

Sioux City, named for an Indian tribe, was the locale for one of the last skirmishes in the Indian wars. David St. Cyr, Indian member of UPA-CIO Local 34 there, was arrested with a tavern keeper for violating Iowa's ancient ban on selling "firewater" to Indians.

UPWA locals hit the warpath, protested the discriminatory legislation. Municipal Judge George M. Paradise agreed and said the law was unconstitutional. Further, he added, it was "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable." The State has not appealed his ruling.

The union protest was organized by the Joint Anti-Discrimination Committee of Sioux City UPWA locals headed by Wade Miller.

New White House Grab For Civil Service Jobs Told

THE White House has started "a determined new drive" to grab jobs and win promotions in the federal service for those who have Republican political indorsements.

The Washington Post and Times Herald, which generally supports Pres. Eisenhower, last week broke the story of the latest attack on civil service procedures which makes the Republican National Committee part of the recruiting system for federal workers.

The paper said the White House has also set up a reporting system which can be used to check on how each agency fills vacant jobs and to make certain the agency cooperates with the Jobs-for-Republican campaign.

The orders for the drive are on White House stationery and are signed by a member of the Presidential staff. Accompanying the orders is a large chart showing the procedure to be followed from the vacancy in the agency to the Republican National Committee, to the GOP congressmen and senators and back to the White House.

Heads of federal agencies will be compelled to make detailed weekly and monthly reports to the GOP National Committee and the White House on how their job vacancies are being filled.

The Post story says the new Eisenhower policy "has the effect of relegating the Civil Service Commission to a back seat on federal personnel recruiting and promotion matters."

Bigot Bowles Gets In Trouble With Cops, Post Office, T-Men

THE WHITE supremacist, Bryan W. Bowles, Jr., whose group is charged with triggering demonstrations against school integration, is having trouble with tax officials, postal inspectors and the Washington police.

Bowles, self-styled president of the National Association for the Advancement of White People, met with internal revenue officials last week to discuss the $2000 they say he owes.

The claim arises from Bowles' operation of a roofing company in Baltimore. Government men say his firm was delinquent in paying withholding taxes and social security contributions on the wages of his employes.

The same day he met with federal officials Bowles paid a $16 fine and added costs in Arlington County, Va., on a speeding charge.

That night, the six-foot Bowles knocked down and kicked a much smaller Negro mailman in the lobby of a Washington office building after a dispute involving handling of the mail. Arrested on an assault warrant, his case was continued.

Postal inspectors meanwhile are checking to see if Bowles' latest escapade violates laws protecting mailmen.

Give A Buck To PAC —The Job You Save May Be Your Own

Election Eve . . .

—By Pascal

"This picture of Dad during the Hoover Administration reminds me to get to the polls early every election day."

"In two minutes the polls open and Mom and Pop are . . . WOW!!!"

"You must be terribly inconvenienced not having the voting booth brought to your office."

Tar-Bucket 'Slur, Slander' Of GOP Drive Rapped By Adlai

A CAMPAIGN of "character assassination, slurs and slander" was protested last week by Adlai E. Stevenson.

The 1952 Democratic presidential candidate said the Eisenhower Administration and the GOP-controlled 83rd Congress have bossed the nation with "empty boasts, broken promises and the give-aways."

"The Republicans should never have allowed themselves to get elected," Stevenson continued. "Being in office is like being inebriated. If there are any weaknesses in a man's character it certainly brings them out."

Head smear-leader for the Republicans, crisscrossing the country in campaigning efforts, was Vice Pres. Nixon, who revived the numbers racket involving federal firings as security risks.

The tar bucket has been much in evidence since reliable polls showed Averell Harriman (D.) leading Sen. Ives (R.) in the New York State governor's race. One smear after another was directed at him by Ives and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

IN WYOMING, where former Sen. O'Mahoney (D.) is running for election, he was charged with being a "foreign agent" because he served as legal consultant for the Cuban Sugar Council. As such, he was properly registered with the Justice Dept.

Joe Meek's campaign manager went so far in his attacks to link Sen. Douglas (D. Ill.) with communism that Meek himself had to back away from the fantastic charges.

A red smear was also directed at Sen. Murray (D.) in Montana and former Rep. Carroll in Colorado, although both are outspoken foes of the Communists.

Ironic

The Non-Partisan Fair Campaign Practices Committee, Inc., announced from New York last week that 60% of the 832 major party candidates for Congress had signed the clean campaign code that bars "personal vilification, character defamation or scurrilous attacks." The signers included 61% of the Democratic candidates, 59% of the Republican office seekers.

IUE Wins At 'Runaway' Bosch Plant

THE CIO Electrical Workers breached the wall of union resistance in Columbus, Miss., last week with a 121 to 74 election victory at the "runaway" plant of the American Bosch-Arma Corp.

Captive audiences, citizens-against-the-union committees and other familiar techniques were employed by the company and the city to "protect" workers from organization.

The plant was established to make auto parts earlier this year. It was formerly a department of a larger plant in Springfield, Mass.

Columbus gave the firm land worth $48,000 as an inducement to settle there, built roads and installed water mains. Wages before the election averaged 85c an hour.

IUE-CIO represents 2600 Bosch workers at the parent plant in Springfield and 10,000 Arma employes on Long Island.

'Shortest Boom In History' Seen In Auto Plants By Reuther

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther said last week that the Republican boom "will be the shortest boom in history," and he warned that widespread unemployment in the automobile and related industries is almost certain to show up in a few months.

In an interview with John W. Vandercook, recorded for use on the CIO-sponsored ABC Radio news show on Oct. 29, Reuther acknowledged that a few workers have recently been called back in the auto industry in connection with new model changes.

But, he said, the companies' production schedules practically guarantees joblessness later on because of heavy output for the next few months.

The companies will produce their own most optimistic estimates within about eight months, at that rate, he said.

REUTHER SHARPLY challenged statements of Sec. of Labor Mitchell about the fall in unemployment and its effect on the economy.

He said the Commerce Dept. tried to suppress for two days the figures on employment—and when the figures were released they showed that the number of jobs around the country had decreased by some 3000.

The drop in unemployment for the most part reflects people dropping out of the labor market.

He said there is fear and uncertainty among farmers and workers, both employed and unemployed.

The Administration's tax bill —with its 95% benefits for the wealthy and big corporations— has directly helped General Motors Corp., Reuther told Vandercook.

During the first nine months of 1954, GM made $1.2 million profits—and its profits after taxes represented a 25% return on the company's investments.

Pres. Eisenhower tried to convince people that widows, pensioners and dirt farmers would get the tax benefits, Reuther said. The facts show, however, that General Motors got more tax benefits than any of these groups, and more than the company's own 400,000 employes.

Reuther emphasized the dependence of farmers and workers on each others, and charged that the Republican Congress had done nothing to end the farm economic crisis.

REUTHER SAID he "did not subscribe" to the Eisenhower theory that election of a Democratic Congress would lead to "cold partisan warfare."

The record, the CIO President said, shows the Republicans in Congress supported Eisenhower only on "give-away items geared to big business."

When Eisenhower suggested programs for the people, Reuther said, the "Republicans in Congress dragged their feet." In political campaigns, he warned, candidates "love all the people." But, he added, voters must be guided "by what they did, not what they say."

The Good Work

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther received this letter from two Californians after they heard him on "Meet the Press" television program:

"My husband felt like a beaten man but after the program he said to send you a $10 donation for PAC. You made him feel like a new man. We're sorry it cannot be more. Keep up the good work."

CIO on ABC
Monday thru Friday
John W. Vandercook
AND THE NEWS

NLRB Give-Away Decisions Protested By CIO

EIGHT new jurisdictional decisions of the National Labor Relations Board last week were blasted by the CIO as "another give-away — this time a give-away of the rights guaranteed to labor under the Labor-Management Relations Act."

Pres. Eisenhower's appointees to the board rode roughshod over strenuous objections by Democratic members to bulldoze their way to new interpretations of the law which seriously weaken labor's position.

The eight decisions, like so much else in the GOP "business" Administration, concern themselves chiefly with the dollar sign to the exclusion of right and rights.

NLRB Chairman Guy Farmer and his fellow Eisenhower appointees, Members Philip Ray Rodgers and Albert C. Beeson, used a lot of language to say so, but in brief they said they couldn't be bothered with cases involving labor disputes unless they have "a pronounced impact upon the flow of interstate commerce."

CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg fired a hot reply. He said:

"The jurisdictional standards applied by the NLRB in eight decisions . . . constitute another give-away—this time a give-away of the rights guaranteed to labor under the Labor-Management Relations Act.

"The Wagner Act provision, carried over into Taft-Hartley, that workers employed in any business affecting commerce are protected in their right to organize, has been substantially abridged by the Labor Board in this series of 3-2 decisions, carried by the votes of the Administration appointees.

"The practical effects are to deny effective protection to workers in many industries, such as public utilities, retail stores, franchise dealers, office building maintenance and newspapers.

"These decisions . . . are part of a series of recent board decisions reversing well-established policies beneficial to labor, policies clearly permitted under the law and sanctioned by long congressional acquiescence."

The decisions were the first application of standards that were laid down several months ago, when the board started writing labor law by administrative fiat. They involve several CIO affiliates, including the Auto, Brewery and Utility Workers.

Abe Murdock, a minority board member, said in dissenting:

"It seems probable that at least 25% and perhaps as much as 33% of our past jurisdiction is now eliminated."

Facts Will Out

"Is everybody happy?" If not, you can't blame the "happiness boys" of the Eisenhower Administration for trying.

Such a week for economic baloney we've never seen—the week before the congressional elections. Everybody got in the act, from the President to his chief economic adviser, Arthur Burns, and on down the line to Sec. Mitchell, Sec. Weeks and Postmaster Gen. Summerfield.

"Is everybody happy?" The recession which the Republicans said never existed now—on the basis of a welcome one month drop in unemployment (a drop which was paralleled by a decline in employment as well)—now is proclaimed to be officially over.

"Politically expedient economic optimism" is CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther's apt description for the GOP trumpeters. And Chairman Emil Rieve of the CIO Economic Policy Committee has summed it up as "camouflage, persiflage and double-montage."

"Is everybody happy?" The facts will out, and they are that the nation's economy is still moving sidewise, carrying with it a potential of mass unemployment in the months ahead.

As the New York Times recently noted, "key economic indicators are not so bright." Industrial production is off 9% from a year ago; more than 25% of steel capacity is still idle; carloadings are down; wages at an annual rate are off $3.3 billion. And there are 145 industrial areas with substantial labor surpluses.

A Wall St. economist, Louis F. Licht, Jr. (surely no advocate of "gloom and doom), sees "pronounced stability in the economy continuing into 1956." If that stability is not changed to expansion, he adds, "the country will have 5,100,000 unemployed in 1955 and 7,200,000 in 1956."

"Is everybody happy?"

Protecting The Public

This is the week the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee begins its wrestling match with Pres. Eisenhower over the Dixon-Yates power contract.

It's a match that never would have been scheduled had the President given the same meticulous attention to the public interest that he has lavished on private industry since his "business" (which is what the people have been getting) Administration took offce.

Last week he told a press conference that the interests of the government, which are the interests of the people, have been perfectly and splendidly protected in the truly amazing contract between Dixon-Yates and the Atomic Energy Commission, which the Joint Committee has been asked to approve.

Into this dream world a harsh note of reality has been injected by members of Congress, by organized labor, by friends of TVA and even by an Arkansas banker. The same contract that the President found safeguarding the government interest was described by Rep. Holifield (D. Calif.), a member of the Joint Committee, as full of "jokers," "one-sided in favor of the company" and frosted with "legalistic double talk." Somebody must be wrong—and it isn't Holifield.

Former Gov. Sid McMath of Arkansas summed it up: "This is a fight between the private power monopolies and the people of the U. S. It is a fight the people cannot afford to lose."

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS

Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII November 1, 1954 No. 44

'—Pretty Bubbles In The Air'

In Other Words—

How Are Things At Old GOP Normal?

The Democratic Digest printed this article from the mythical Straight Off the Shoulder, which it described as "the official alumni magazine of Republican Normal:"

WELL, HERE IT IS FALL AGAIN, a new class of frosh ready to start at good old Republican Normal, and time for your Pigskin Prophet to give you the lowdown on football prospects for the fighting Neanderthals, who are going to wear the black and blue jerseys of old Republican Normal this year.

Coach "Ike" Eisenhower is going to rely on the Split P Formation again this year. That's the tried and true system that rolled up such an impressive record in '52. As Ike has often chuckled at alumni banquets, "What other team has got as big a split as the Neanderthals?"

Dashing Dick Nixon, one of the trickiest ball handlers of them all in his playing days, will be back as backfield coach, showing the boys all the tricks of the Split P Formation.

The squad has been full of zing in its peppy fall practice sessions and Director of Athletics Len Hall has injected a real note of humor into the workouts by having a tackling dummy made up to look like Harry Truman, the famous caller of the Dems.

Wild Bill Is In Old Berth

Wild Bill Knowland will be back again, and it looks like he'll be in his old berth as quarterback, despite the protests of some alumni that he didn't have a very good record last year.

Our scouts report that Joe McCarthy has been training hard all summer and is faster on his feet than ever. Joe seems to be having some trouble with the faculty and there is some sort of question about his eligibility. It would be too bad if Joe couldn't play on the team this year because everyone agrees with Coach Ike that Joe is the most offensive back the team ever had.

Bully Bill Jenner will be back, too, shifty as ever. As his admirers say, Bill has the skin of an elephant.

Coach Ike is pretty much building his team around the veterans who served under Coach Bob Taft before Ike took over. Ike and Athletic Director Hall have been working with the alumni to be sure all the boys have money enough to come back. As Ike says affectionately, "They may be slobs, but they're my slobs."

Grinding Guy Cordon is one veteran Ike wants back because he is a real tower of strength on power plays. Ike is hopeful that Kalm Karl Mundt will be back, too. Ike hasn't forgotten how valuable he is in running interference for Joe McCarthy.

Ike's got his eye on two red-hot prospects in Illinois and New Jersey. The Illinois boy is Jolting Joe Meek, a cocky player who is already talking as though he has made the team. "Hell, Coach would have to play me if I was blind in one eye," says Jolting Joe in his carefree manner.

The New Jersey boy is Cliff Case, as smooth a ball carrier as the state has seen in many a year. He is trying to develop a triple hand-off play, Congress to Ford to Senate. There are some rumors that Case may not matriculate this year. It seems that some alumni of old Republican Normal are trying to get Case to enroll at Rutgers. Where's your old school spirit, fellows?

Right Side Of Line Heavier

Ike's relying on a lot of line plays, right down the middle, but some sports writers think he may have to switch his strategy after he gets more familiar with his squad. The sports writers think Ike had better get a few unbalanced line plays, since the right side of his line seems to be shaping up as heavier and stronger than the rest of the squad.

Well, just a few random notes about the old campus before we close. Coach Ike took up golf this summer. Likes it fine. Prof. John Foster Dulles was back on the campus briefly after his sabbatical leave in Europe. Foster didn't like the foreigners, especially the French.

Atty.-Gen. Herbert Brownell has been invited to deliver the Harry Dexter White memorial lectures at the Law School this year. Backfield Coach Nixon has a dog. He is thinking of naming him Checkers. The cheerleaders have been practicing all summer.

You ought to hear them give out with the old school yell: Chocolate Malta, down with Yalta, Hiss, Boom, Bah! Margaret Chase Smith is back and seems like a good choice for Queen of the Homecoming Prom. She's been around on the campus for six years, and everybody needs her. Well, see you at Hoover Stadium on Homecoming. Yeah, team!

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

AS THE ROAR OF THE CAMPAIGN abated and the last "nonpartisan" political speech was ended, some of the politicians began to look again at the horrifying fact that on Monday, Nov. 8, the same old 83rd Congress will be back in business.

The Senate will go into session, after successfully stalling the issue until after the election, to sit in judgment on the Watkins committee's recommendation that Joe McCarthy be censured.

The House will not be in session, having completed its routine work and having nothing whatever to say about McCarthy. But a handful of House members — the lower chamber's representatives on the Joint Atomic Energy Committee—will find no refuge.

The Joint Committee, including the House members headed by Rep. W. Sterling Cole (R. N. Y.), was summoned for the day after the election for a discussion of Dixon-Yates, and the fat, profitable contract Pres. Eisenhower ordered the Atomic Energy Committee to negotiate with the Dixon-Yates private utility syndicate to trim down the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Dixon-Yates, according to Sen. Langer (R. N. D.), chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee in the dying 83rd, seemed likely to stir up as much of a rumpus in the Senate's resumed session as the McCarthy issue.

Langer and Sen. Kefauver (D. Tenn.), sitting as a two-man "anti-monopoly" subcommittee, gathered a lot of ammunition against Dixon-Yates during the campaign.

The Administration scheme was to slide the contract through by the device of having Cole's Joint Committee "waive" the provision of law requiring all AEC contracts with private utilities to be submitted for a 30-day study while the whole Congress was in session.

More Indignant Denials

Eisenhower indignantly denied, at the pre-election news conference which happened to be his first in 10 weeks, that he had asked Cole's Joint Committee to "waive" anything. But the AEC —an agency over which the President claims a special quality of control—requested the "waiver."

McCarthy, in the meantime, emerged from a long silence to lay some groundwork for his defense against the Watkins committee's censure recommendation.

Sen. Joe suffered intensely from a sinus affection during the campaign, it was said, and made no speeches anywhere for Republican candidates. He had called Eisenhower, in effect, a coddler of Communists, and dismal GOP nominees decided that they would rather have a visitation from the black plague than a McCarthy speech in their favor.

Joe popped up fighting, in a tentative sort of way, in the last 10 days before the election.

He fired a renewed demand at Army Sec. Stevens for the "facts" about who "promoted" and gave an honorable discharge to the now-celebrated "pink dentist," Maj. Peress. He fired a new accusation of "prejudice" against Sen. Watkins, a conservative Republican gentleman of remarkable personal rectitude and judicial temperament, who remained unterrorized.

Sen. Joe's idea seemed to be that if the Republicans lost the election it would somehow be a "victory" for McCarthyism and the right-wing lunatic fringe of the GOP against Eisenhower. Sen. Joe seemed to think that if Eisenhower lost, he himself would become the residual trustee in bankruptcy for Abraham Lincoln's party.

Tricky Dick Is Another Matter

Vice Pres. Nixon is another matter. Eisenhower committed himself to Nixon when, after the celebrated tear-jerking 1952 TV "Checkers" speech, in which Nixon tried to explain his private political funds, the General emotionally exclaimed that he liked "guts" and cried, "Dick, you're my boy!"

Eisenhower's "boy" campaigned in advance of Nov. 2 as if he were a kind of separate ruler of a Republican Party that the General had abdicated. Nixon concentrated on the Rocky Mountain States in which the swing of a few thousand votes might determine Senate membership, and he practiced McCarthyism.

The President was asked, at his pre-election news conference, whether he had approved Nixon's speeches. The answer was vague.

Nixon, of course, is pitching for the GOP nomination in 1956. He is a gambler who has come far by the application of sheer nerve and opportunism. He employs McCarthyism while posing as a clean-cut All-American type. He thinks that Eisenhower will not run for re-election in 1956 and he wants the candidacy himself.

Still, Nixon faces the tests of the upcoming Senate session on McCarthy and Dixon-Yates. It is not an easy spot, for him or the Senate.

Stuffers

Republicans are resorting to an old trick to corral votes. Workers in Oregon have found their pay envelopes stuffed with political propaganda favoring Sen. Cordon (R.).

Richard Neuberger, Democratic Senate nominee, branded this "the cruelest and crudest form of political pressure."

"It has been condemned by enlightened leaders of both the Democratic and Republican parties ever since it was first used by Mark Hanna over half a century ago," he said. "A working man's pay check may pay for his labor but it doesn't buy his vote."

Labor's World—

CIO Protests Arms For Arabs Threaten Peace In Middle East

A FIRM policy of promoting peace in the Middle East, rather than an imbalance of arms against Israel, was called for by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther last week in a message to a New York labor rally protesting U. S. arming of the Arab states.

Such a policy, Reuther said, "is of prime importance to the people of the U. S., who know that in the long run a foreign policy based on freedom-loving allies is the real defense of the free world against the threat of every form of dictatorship."

More than 1000 unionists from the New York area attended the meeting, which was sponsored jointly by the Jewish Labor Committee and the Trade Union Council for Israel. It passed a resolution urging parity for Israel with its Arab neighbors in Middle East defense planning.

Reuther's message was read by Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the CIO Clothing Workers and chairman of the CIO International Affairs Committee, who expressed doubt as to the fidelity of the Arab states to democracy.

"It is obvious," he added, "that they will use their American-delivered arms not to fight the Communists, but will use them against their mortal enemy, Israel. This we, who cherish freedom, cannot permit."

IN HIS WIRE, Reuther said that arming the Arab states without "effective guarantees" that the weapons will not be turned against Israel does not promote the cause of peace.

"Our government should stand firm," he said, "in its traditional friendship for Israel as a democratic country and equally firm in its insistence that a peace treaty be signed by the Arab states with Israel.

"Only on the basis of such a peace treaty can an effective regional security organization be established in which both Israel and the Arab states can participate.

"Only after such a peace can the essential strength of this whole area develop and provide a raising of peoples' living standards through giving them a share and a stake in their economic future."

AFL Pres. George Meany told the meeting that present U. S. policy in the Middle East "has all the earmarks of an anti-Israel policy."

75c Pay Asked In Puerto Rico

A 75c an hour minimum wage for Puerto Rico's electrical, instrument and related manufacturing industries was urged by Research Dir. David Lasser, of the CIO Electrical Workers, at a hearing by a Wage-Hour Div. industry committee in San Juan, P. R. IUE-CIO Pres. James Carey was the worker representative on the committee.

Lasser demonstrated that the present minimum of 45c in effect since May 1950, should be replaced by the 75c he proposed because the industry's products are largely shipped to the U. S., thus competing unfairly with mainland wages; workers require it to buy the essentials of life, and the "enormous" profits of the industry permit it.

8 Israeli Get Murray Awards

Eight students at the Max Pine Trade School in Tel Aviv, Israel, have been awarded Philip Murray memorial scholarships from a fund made available by a gift of $5000 from the CIO Steelworkers which was matched by Histadrut, the Israeli federation of labor.

Vic Reuther Named To CARE Board

VICTOR G. Reuther, assistant to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and director of CIO's Dept. for International Affairs, has been named a vice president and member of the board of directors of CARE.

He succeeds Dir. Leo Perlis of the CIO Community Services Committee, who was active in the establishment of CARE and was for some time the secretary of its board of directors.

Named as alternate for Reuther on CARE's board was Associate Dir. Daniel Benedict of the international affairs department, a former European director of CARE.

Murray D. Lincoln and Paul Comly French were re-elected president and executive director of CARE respectively.

Discussed at a meeting of the directors in New York City last week was a special campaign for distributing over a million special Christmas packages in 32 countries.

Information on Operation Reindeer can be obtained from the CIO Free World Labor Fund, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C., or the CIO representative to CARE, 660 First Avenue, New York 16, N. Y.

THE FREE labor movement in Japan has been strengthened in its battle against Communists by formation of a coordinating committee of unions affiliated with the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

The new grouping grew out of proposals made by an ICFTU delegation headed by Pres. Omer Becu and Gen. Sec. J. H. Oldenbroek. The latter hailed it as averting the possibility of a split among ICFTU affiliates, which in Japan are associated individually with the world organization, and with strengthening the nation's free labor movement.

The committee is composed of the six unions in the Joint Council of ICFTU-affiliated bodies, and five from Zenro, one of the national centers.

Representing nearly two million workers, it will recruit new ICFTU affiliations, popularize ICFTU programs and policies, and coordinate the views of its member unions on international trade union matters.

Britain

Affiliated unions have agreed to pay the British Trades Union Congress a special per capita tax of one shilling (about 14c) per member over the next three years to help pay for the new TUC Memorial Building, now under construction in London, and for a Colonial Assistance Fund, to help in the development of effective trade unionism in the colonies and other underdeveloped countries.

Spain

Pres. Robles Aranguiz of the Union of Basque Workers (in exile), arrested during the strikes at San Sebastian in 1953, has been released from prison after posting a large sum as bail. Two of the oldest members of the union who were arrested at the same time, Lasa Ascencio, 70 years old, and d'Ubillos Francisco, 72 years old, both former regional leaders, also have been released on bail.

Magazine Depicts Reuther As 'Mr. Full Employment'

THE CURRENT issue of Coronet magazine features a sketch of CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther by Washington Correspondent Sam Stavisky.

Walter P. Reuther

"In the eyes of millions, from CIO Clothing Workers hunched over sewing machines in New York to brawny lumberjacks in the Northwest," Stavisky says, Reuther is "Mr. Full Employment."

The article details Reuther's career from high school days in Wheeling, W. Va., to his ascendancy to the top post in CIO. Fired from his first job for trying to organize a steel corrugating plant in protest against Sunday work, he drifted north to Detroit.

"A volunteer organizer in 1937," Stavisky writes of early days in the CIO Auto Workers, "he was blacklisted in most of the auto plants.

"He took over the job of organizing the West Side auto workers' locals into a strong bloc (membership increased from 78 to 30,000); he helped run the Detroit and Flint sit-down strikes; and was one of the leaders in the drive to organize Ford. He was beaten twice and became a hero in the union wars."

Reuther became president of the CIO in 1952 following the death of the "able Philip Murray," the magazine article concludes. It reports this anecdote:

"Aren't you running too far ahead of the parade?" a follower asked anxiously not long ago.

"Sure," replied Reuther jauntily, "that is the only way you can be a leader!"

Farmers Co-op. Creamery Association — No 12307

LaMoure, N. Dak., 10- 195__ 77-125

Pay to the Order of Charles Roth — Dollars $ 1 80 Cents

Not Good After 60 Days

Farmers Co-op. Creamery Ass'n $1 and 80 Cts Dollars

The First State Bank, LaMoure, North Dakota

Farmers Co-op Creamery Association By Donald L. Lauf

Farmers Co-op. Creamery Association, LaMoure, North Dakota

Grade	Doz.	Eggs	Price	Amount
Extra	Oct	7	1954
No. 1
No. 2
Pullets	30		06	1	80
Short
Rots
			Total

THAT WIDENING SPREAD—This is a photostat of a check for 30 dozen eggs—$1.80—six cents a dozen. North Dakota farmers and workers meeting in Minot got a look at gap between what a farmer receives and what he pays. Same day this check was issued, eggs sold for 61c a dozen in New York retail market.

Cost Of Living In Gentle Downward Glide Of .3%

THE SHARPEST monthly drop in nearly a year, sparked by lower food prices, sent the cost of living dipping downward by three-tenths of 1% between Aug. 15 and Sept. 15, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported last week.

The consumers price index sagged from 115 in mid-August to 14.7 in mid-September, the bureau said, thanks mainly to a decline of 1.3% in food costs, the largest since last November.

A major drop in the food category was in coffee prices, which slumped 9.5% after months of steady increases. Potatoes, apples and tomatoes dropped sharply, reflecting seasonal supplies, but orange prices continued their rise and are now at the highest level since 1920. Pork prices dropped a little, but beef was higher.

The lower food costs were more than enough to offset increases in housing and apparel, the BLS reported. And food will be still lower when the October figure is compiled, predicted Mrs. Aryness Joy Wickens, acting BLS commissioner. No major escalator clause contracts were affected by the September report.

Here are the cumulative figures for the BLS index:

Period	Index		Period	New Index
1939 monthly average	99.4		Oct. 15	115.4
1943 monthly average	123.6		Nov. 15	115.0
1944 monthly average	125.5		Dec. 15	114.9
1945 monthly average	128.4		1954 Jan. 15	115.2
1946 monthly average	139.3		Feb. 15	115.0
1947 monthly average	159.2		Mar. 15	114.8
1948 monthly average	171.2		Apr. 15	114.6
1949 monthly average	169.1		May 15	115.0
1950 monthly average	171.2		June 15	115.1
1951 monthly average	185.9		July 15	115.2
1952 monthly average	190.6	(old index)	Aug. 15	115.0
1953 monthly average	114.4	(new index)	Sept. 15	114.7
1954 monthly average	114.9

Raise Urged For Teachers

BETTER PAY and working conditions for the nation's teachers were urged by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther in addresses before 8000 members of the New York State Teachers Association, southeastern zone.

"There must be something wrong with the moral fiber of a people willing to pay more for a week of war than a year of education," Reuther said.

He said a single week of World War II took more money than the cost of all forms of education in the U. S. for a year.

Noting that three out of four of the nation's elementary schools are substandard, he said that many teachers worked under conditions at which industrial workers would rebel. He said that average sweeper in the auto industry gets more in wages than hundreds of thousands of teachers get in salary.

Reuther urged the educators to "give leadership" in the fight to correct these conditions and, he promised, "we will help you mobilize the people of America behind that leadership."

LABOR MEMBERS—City Hall ceremony sees Sec.-Treas. Morris Iushewitz (left) of New York City CIO Council sworn in as member of city's Youth Board by Mayor Robert F. Wagner (right). Sec. James F. Quinn of AFL Council (center) also was named to agency. Youth Board deals with juvenile delinquency problem.

High Court Bars Rule On 'Fair' Prices

THE SUPREME COURT for the second time has refused to rule on the constitutionality of "fair trade" laws which allow manufacturers to set the retail prices of trademarked items.

The refusal leaves standing decisions of the highest courts in New York and New Jersey upholding fair trade statutes in those states. Both courts also upheld the validity of federal laws which make fair trading applicable to goods in interstate commerce.

The issue first reached the court in 1951, when all states but Missouri, Texas and Vermont and the District of Columbia had fair trading laws.

A gimmick in the law permits an agreement with one retailer to become binding on all others in a state. Congress in 1952 passed special legislation exempting fair trade provisions from the anti-trust laws.

The latest case to reach the highest court was appealed by Grayson-Robinson, Inc., which operates stores in New York City and Newark, N. J.

Quill, Uninvited To Subway Event, Goes In Tallyho

SPONSORS of the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the New York City's subways last week failed to invite Pres. Michael J. Quill of the CIO Transport Workers, but he arrived atop a 100-year-old tallyho.

Wearing a top hat, Quill was surrounded by TWU-CIO secretaries. Signs on the tallyho read "This Is Your Subway Service in '55" and "50 Years of New York Subway Progress."

Some 100 TWU-CIO members picketed the event, which was sponsored by the State-created Transit Authority, which operates the city transit system, and the Downtown Manhattan Association.

It's A Great Year --For Stockholders

There may be more unemployment now than a year ago but one group—the stockholders—has found the first nine months of 1954 even more lush than the same period a year ago. A Commerce Dept. report says cash dividend payments by corporations amounted to $6.4 billion so far this year as compared with $6 billion a year ago.

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

WITH THE HELP of exaggerated television and newspaper ads, FHA's deception-ridden home improvement loans, high-pressure salesmen and home-owners who don't read contracts before signing, buying storm-windows for a house has become one of the trickiest, over-priced deals you can get into these days.

Don't Get Gypped On Storm Windows

Certainly storm windows are vital for a house in a cold area. They pay for themselves (if reasonably priced). Not only do they keep you more comfortable by reducing the heat loss from your body to cold glass windows, but according to the University of Illinois Small Home Council, they save up to 20% of your fuel bill (but not 50% as salesmen sometimes claim). They also extend the life of heating equipment by reducing the load on it, and reduce condensation and frost formation on windows and sills.

But you don't have to pay $400 or $500 to secure the advantages of storm windows as many families have done and are doing on easy credit plans. The public seems to lose all sense of values at the sound of such words as "aluminum," "redwood" or "self-storing." High-pressure salesmen and television pitchmen use all kinds of deceptive gimmicks, such as bait offers of aluminum windows for $10, which they dissuade you from buying when you respond to the offer.

Even "legitimate" companies use exaggerated price lists. For example, one trade expert showed me retail price lists quoting $35 plus $3 for installation for aluminum storm windows that cost dealers only $14.75.

YOU SHOULD ALSO KNOW that many storm window dealers do not make windows but are simply order takers. So it turns out that aluminum storms are priced as high as they are not because aluminum is a precious metal or storm windows are really expensive to manufacture or have special gadgets.

The real reason for the high prices is that selling storm windows has become a high-pressure, high-cost business with heavy expenses for television, radio and newspaper advertising, and commissions to salesmen of 10 to 20% of the price you pay.

Actually there are few standard prices for storm windows. Salesmen and showrooms frequently charge different customers different prices, depending on the customer's attitude, how large the order is, and how busy the workshops and installers are at the time.

Not only are aluminum storms frequently overpriced but so are redwood ones. One reader recently wrote this department that they were about to close a deal with a salesman for eight "deluxe" redwood storm windows and a storm door for $460. With a little comparison shopping this family should be able to buy eight high-grade aluminum storms and the door for about $275-$300.

THE WOOD SASH everybody used for storm windows before salesmen discovered aluminum cost only $5-$6 a window for standard sizes, plus $1.50-$2 extra for fitting and hanging if desired. Chief advantage of aluminum windows is that most types now sold are a permanent installation and save changing storms and screens twice a year. This makes them especially desirable for (1) two-story houses, (2) older people and (3) very large windows which are hard to handle. But for many uses, if a man can save a couple of hundred dollars he will be quite well paid for his time spent changing windows.

If you prefer aluminum storms, here are tips on getting fair value:

1. Price lists dealers display are exaggerated, and show different prices for various sizes of windows. Actually all except unusually large sizes cost the dealer the same price from the factory, a little under $15. Thus a reasonable price would be $25 for a top-quality three-track window, including installation. Often you can get a better price from the showroom than from outside salesmen.

2. Extruded aluminum windows and doors are best. This type is thicker, has sharp corners and is not pliable like windows made of rolled aluminum bent to shape. The cheap rolled aluminum windows tend to get out of shape.

3. Three-track, self-storing windows are more convenient than two tracks (often shown on television) and are preferable if the cost is no more than $2-$3 extra per window.

(Copyright 1954 by Sidney Margolius)

Dingell Raps Ike's Health Bill

"A PERFUNCTORY feeble gesture" towards solution of the $9 billion annual health problem facing the U. S. was what Rep. Dingell (D. Mich.) called the reinsurance bill which Republicans will re-submit to the next session of Congress.

Sec. of Welfare Hobby said she hoped the measure would get American Medical Association support.

Dingell called Pres. Eisenhower and the Republican National Committee "naive" in trying to "dig from its grave" the bill which the last session's House voted 238 to 134 to recommit, and which the Senate left "hanging on the hook."

He called that measure "a transparent fake" and asserted it proposed a $25 million revolving fund for reinsurance "not of people needing health care or better health care, but of gigantic insurance companies who already have billions of dollars of resources."

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

THE WRITER had the pleasant experience of attending the convention of the Utility Workers of America, CIO, on Oct. 21-23 in Boston, Mass.

I had the honor of addressing the delegates, telling them what National CIO is doing on the organizational, political and legislative fronts. Joe Fisher was re-elected president of this fine organization and he and his associate officers took the oath of office and signed non-Communist affidavits right on the platform of the convention.

Brother Fisher in his address to the convention reported on the progress of the Utility Workers during the past year, and presented to the delegates the program for the coming year. The officers and members of this union have done an outstanding job for the workers in the utility industry, bringing to them increased wages, better working conditions, and greater security.

I talked with Fisher and the other officers about initiating a joint campaign to organize the unorganized workers in their field. The Organizational Dept. and its staff will cooperate in every way to help bring more workers under the banner of CIO.

WHILE IN BOSTON I had the opportunity of meeting with CIO Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson and committees from the New England States on the work being done and to be done in the political action and legislative fields.

Last week I attended the swearing-in ceremonies of Carl Winn, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Woodworkers, who will soon be going overseas as Far Eastern area labor adviser of the Foreign Operations Administration.

I had a sensation of mixed feelings during the ceremonies. I was glad to see the government get such a good man and glad that CIO has the men that can perform a real service for the government. At the same time I was sorry to see Carl leave CIO because we have great need for men of his caliber.

We of CIO all wish Carl the best of luck on his job of helping our country achieve unity with other nations.

CIO REG. DIR. IRWIN DeSHETLER reports that the CIO Oil Workers won an important election victory at the Filtrol Corp. plant, Los Angeles, Calif., by a vote of 285 as against 12 for no union. OWIU Rep. George Cody was in charge of the drive.

OWIU Sec.-Treas. Tom McCormick reports the following election victories: American Oil Co. (office), Philadelphia, Pa., OWIU 6, no union 0, other 3; Pure Oil Co., Atlanta, Ga., Southeastern Terminal Div., Chattahoochie plant, OWIU 7, no union 0; Pure Oil Co., Atlanta, Chattahoochie Bulk Plant, OWIU 23, no union 0.

Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett of the CIO Electrical Workers reports that the IUE won an election at American-Bosch, Columbus, Miss., by a vote of 121 of 74 for no union. Recognition was won at Bevko, Inc., Elmer, N. J., involving 207 employees, as a result of a strike.

Organizational Dir. John Maurillo of the CIO Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers Reg. 1, reports two election victories: E. A. R. Winarcke Co., Boonton, N. J., UGCCW 44, AFL 6, no union 6; New York-Ohio Chemical plant, Elkton, Md., UGCCW 13, no union 11.

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Cronin reports an election victory for the UGCCW at the U. S. Gypsum Co., Fort Dodge, Ia., by a vote of 262 for UGCCWA, no union 62, challenged 10.

CIO Rep. J. R. Light reports that in a representation election at Sumter Hardwood Co., Sumter, S. C., the workers favored the CIO Furniture Workers by a vote of 45 to 25 against, with one void.

Pres. Russell Taylor of the CIO Shoe Workers reports an election victory at the Ed White, Jr., Shoe Co., Paragould, Ark. Credit for the victory goes to Organizer John Spikes, under direction of Dist. Dir. Dave Wilson.

Sec.-Treas. Ross Blood, CIO Shipbuilding Workers, reports that workers at the Dow-Weld Co., Baltimore, Md., favored the IUMSWA by a vote of 38 to two for no union.

Organization Dir. Fleet Perrine of the CIO Rubber Workers reports an election victory at the Kirkhill Rubber Co., Brea, Calif., by this vote: eligible 541, URW 247, no union 223. CIO Rep. Frank Grillo deserves credit for this fine victory.

Students Blame Segregation Riots On Adult 'Agitators'

ADULT "ruffians" and "agitators" inspired recent demonstrations against integration of white and Negro students in Washington and Baltimore schools.

That's the report of 10 white high school students in those cities who went to New Rochelle, N. Y., to see how 1200 white and 400 Negro students get along in one high school.

They have taken the "success story" of the prosperous northern city of 70,000 population back to their own communities.

New Rochelle students contributed $300 and provided overnight lodging in homes for their visitors.

"Don't blame the pupils for demonstrations against non-segregation," said 23-year-old Robert E. Rodgers, a Korean war veteran, who attends Baltimore's Southern High School.

"A few parents started agitating, so pupils stayed away from school. It was as simple as shooting off a gun to start a herd of cattle running."

Other pupils told of being called "chicken" and threatened by adults in anonymous phone calls "if they dared to go to school next day" with Negroes.

Kohler Strikers Pledged CIO Aid

By ROBERT TREUER

THE TENSION-packed strike of the CIO Auto Workers at Kohler Co., nearing its eighth month, captured the limelight at the 17th annual convention of the Wisconsin CIO Council at Milwaukee.

More than 400 delegates, representing a membership of over 100,000, heard H. E. Lindemann, spokesman for the Kohler strikers, report on the bitter dispute at the plumbing ware firm.

He said the strikers are solid and determined, while the feudal barony of Kohler Co., near Sheboygan, is importing strikebreakers.

"Out of the 3000 strikers who started, 2740 are still out on the bricks," Lindemann said. "This represents the skilled and trained working force at Kohler, but management has brought in several hundred outsiders."

The convention voted all-out support for the strike—financial and moral.

DISCUSSION of the Kohler strike was the high mark of the three-day meeting, which was sparked by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

He called the Wisconsin CIO-PAC program "one of the best" in the nation but urged intensified efforts in the Nov. 2 election.

"The unemployment situation," Reuther said, "is not going to get better until the government in Washington takes corrective steps."

Delegates roared approval when he declared a Democratic victory will show the world "that America does know how to achieve full employment in peacetime."

Mrs. Edith Sampson, Chicago, also was cheered lustily during her speech on labor's role in world affairs. "The United Nations is your business," she said.

Council Pres. Charles M. Schultz was re-elected by acclamation. This was the first time there has been no opposition for the post in many years.

NLRB Charges Kohler Is Unfair

The National Labor Relations Board last week brought charges of unfair labor practices against strike-bound Kohler Co., and set a hearing for Dec. 13 in Sheboygan, Wis.

The firm was accused of discharging 50 workers "unfairly" and refusal to bargain on several issues as a result of a complaint filed by the CIO Auto Workers.

Pres. Allen Graskamp of UAW-CIO Local 833 said the company has "persistently failed to measure up to the requirements of the Labor-Management Act."

GOP 'Economy' Hit At Los Angeles Meet

THE FALSE economy of the Eisenhower Administration was lambasted by speakers at a Full Employment Conference, which was jointly sponsored by the California CIO and the Greater Los Angeles CIO Councils.

"Washington is full of politicians today who think only in terms of cutting the budget," said R. J. Thomas, assistant to CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe.

"It is extremely hard to get money to build schools, or for a program to create employment in the country. The responsibility for the failure to do something about unemployment is on the whole Administration, from top to bottom."

R. J. THOMAS
Hits inaction on jobs

Leslie Claypool, veteran news analyst and Los Angeles political writer, said:

"We are faced with a giveaway program in Washington that makes mink coats and deep freezes look like the kind of prizes that come in breakfast food packages."

CIO Reg. XIII Dir. Irwin L. DeShetler introduced Thomas and Claypool. The conference was concerned with unemployment problems in southern California and was part of the leadership program of the Southern California CIO Community Services Committee. The event was directed by Charles J. Harding, Southern California CIO-CSC director.

THE GREATER Los Angeles CIO recently joined with Los Angeles Central Labor Council and the American Trade Union Council for Histadrut in holding a testimonial luncheon for Madame Golda Myerson, Israel's Minister for Labor.

She paid tribute to former Pres. Truman, the late Philip Murray, CIO president, and the late William Green, AFL president, for U. S. assistance to Israel.

"I am convinced," Madame Myerson said, "that the United Nations' establishment of independent Israel was due in no small part to the magnificent support you gave us."

Council Sec.-Treas. Albert T. Lunceford, who recently returned from a trip to Israel, introduced Madame Myerson. Sec.-Treas. W. J. Bassett of the AFL Council, was chairman.

"LIKE I WAS TELLING YA, FRED—YOU NON-UNION GUYS ALWAYS GET HOOKED IN THE END!"

CWA Settles 4 Bell Pacts For 25,000

CONTRACTS covering more than 25,000 workers have been signed by the CIO Communications Workers and Bell System companies in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Maryland.

This brings the total number of Bell company settlements this year to 26 covering more than 258,000 workers. Remaining to be settled are six agreements on behalf of some 70,000 workers.

Largest settlement covers 9000 southern California plant employes of the Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co., who won increases of up to $2.50 a week, reclassification of four towns and withdrawal of a no-strike clause.

ANOTHER agreement brought similar gains for 4900 Oregon workers in all departments of the same company.

The Washington-Idaho Div. of the Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. granted the pattern increase and withdrew a proposed no-strike clause in a settlement covering 6700 workers in all departments.

An agreement with Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore City for 4500 workers brought increases of $1.50 to $2.50 a week. Offers of three other Chesapeake & Potomac companies—Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia—were below the pattern of other Bell settlements.

URW Settles At Goodrich

A MASTER agreement covering nine B. F. Goodrich Co. plants and the CIO Rubber Workers has been negotiated. It will expire Apr. 1, 1957.

Membership approvals and the negotiation of supplementary local union contracts are being awaited. Wages were not an issue, agreement on this point having been reached in September. Discussions were confined to general contract provisions, and improvements and clarifications were made.

Negotiations were broken off briefly and a call for a strike vote was issued but a hurry-up counter proposal by management brought the sides together again.

Goodrich plants involved are in Akron, Los Angeles, Oaks, Pa., Cadillac, Mich., Tuscaloosa, Ala., Miami, Okla., Riverside, N. J., Marion, O., and Clarksville, Tenn.

Utility Workers Face Up To Atomic Power

By FRED ROSS

A MUSHROOM cloud hung over the seventh constitutional convention of the CIO Utility Workers at Boston.

It wasn't a real cloud, but the symbol of the atomic age was there for more than 500 delegates to see. Speakers and the officers' report foretold the early development of plants producing electricity from the atom.

For the electric power industry will be the first to be affected by atomic power. An atomic power plant is being erected at Shippensport, near Pittsburgh, Pa., and the Atomic Energy Commission and at least seven industrial study groups are working on the cheapest way to make electricity from fissionable material.

UWUA-CIO Pres. Joseph A. Fisher said he believes that atom-produced electrical power will be in use in less than 10 years, the time generally accepted for its development.

Fisher also stressed the current, tough bargaining attitude of the industry. He said it established a pattern of 6c to 8c an hour increase, far below its ability to pay. To get these modest gains, he pointed out, the union had to resort to more strikes, strike threats and arbitration in the past 15 months than ever before.

The industry could not plead poverty. Falling off of industrial loads had been more than offset by the increase in residential and commerical loads. That was shown by the industry's profits. Fisher said that in 1953 the industry had its best financial year, and that profits for the first half of 1954 exceeded those of the first half last year.

The UWUA-CIO president warned the industry's tough attitude would continue until next spring when many contracts will be renegotiated—unless a Democratic Congress is elected.

He urged the delegates to seek companywide seniority as the most equitable way to protect the employment rights of all. Seniority now is usually on a plantwide basis.

PLANTWIDE seniority has been made obsolete by the growing recession, the increase of new automation plants, which are closing less efficient units, and the likely early development of atomic power plants.

While workers with long seniority are eligible to bid for jobs in the automation plants, there are not enough jobs for them in the new plants. Many of the workers with long seniority fail to seek the jobs in the automation plants because they are reluctant to be uprooted from homes they own.

Fisher summed up the problem: "A pound of uranium costing $35 has the heat potential of 1400 tons of coal. Three pounds of uranium costing $105 would operate a plant in a large city for eight hours whereas 4200 tons of coal to do the same job costs approximately $42,000."

The atom would not down. It bobbed up again in a discussion of the foreign policy resolution unanimously adopted by the convention.

"The Republican Administration," the resolution said, "has placed budgetary considerations ahead of military needs and has reduced the strength of American armed forces at a time when world tensions are increasing."

Sec.-Treas. William J. Pachler said it is a poor time to practice GOP economy when the Russians have a bomb that would destroy everything in a four-mile radius.

The convention also faced up to the impact of the atom on the electric power industry. It called on Fisher to appoint a permanent committee on public power and atomic energy.

A RESOLUTION adoped unanimously declared "the government, for national security reasons, has a paramount right in the development of nuclear fission for all atomic military weapons." It also said that "no license or use to private industry should be given that would in any way handicap the paramount right of the government to fulfill its responsibility in military uses."

The convention endorsed "the action of the 83rd Congress in enacting legislation granting limited use of atomic power and materials to private industry under rigid and exacting controls." The resolution continued:

"Monopoly should be avoided in civilian atomic energy development for non-military purposes by turning that development over to many hundreds of industrial competitors by license and control which would provide the usual patent safeguards necessary to spur private initiative and bring inestimable low cost benefits to all the people of the world."

The delegates reaffirmed the union's traditional stand on public power.

IT IS "no federal agency should construct or operate any project for the generation and/or distribution of electric energy, except for national defense, or where private industry fails or refuses to provide adequate service."

Fisher, Pachler, Vice Pres. and Organization Dir. Harold J. Straub, and Vice Pres. William R. Munger were re-elected by acclamation for three-year terms.

At Pachler's suggestion the delegates decided to hold the next convention during April 1956 at Atlantic City, where UWUA-CIO held its founding convention in April 1946.

THE CONVENTION called for the appointment of a labor representative on every state public utility regulatory body. This action resulted from the decision of the Massachusetts Dept. of Public Utilities in allowing the Boston Edison and 21 other companies to go from one-month to two-month billing — without a public hearing.

Concerned by the growth of state right-to-scab laws, the delegates called for intensified efforts to prevent the enactment of such measures and to bar such legislation by congressional action.

LABOR UNITY was discussed at Utility Workers convention at Boston by CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe (left) who was greeted by UWUA-CIO Sec.-Treas. William J. Pachler and Pres. Joseph A. Fisher. In right photo are Pres. J. William Belanger, Massachusetts CIO Council; Fisher, CIO Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson; Pres. John Horan, Boston CIO Council, and Val Murphy, Mass. CIO board member.

Automation

A new, automatic push button plant will produce two and a third times as much electricity in an hour as an old style one—with about a third as many men.

That's the story told by Cleveland delegates to the Utility Workers convention and it is typical of what is happening throughout the industry.

One of the old plants of the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. now employs 100 men and makes 290,000 kwh. A new plant now in operation employs 28 men and produces 420,000 kwh.

When a new unit is completed at the automatic plant it will employ 36 men and will produce 670,000 kwh.

'Refining'

Esso Standard Oil Co. has a new definition of poverty, according to Sec.-Treas. Thomas M. McCormick of the CIO Oil Workers.

The company pleads poverty when OWIU seeks wage increases, McCormick told the Utility Workers convention, but he added:

"The firm made $552 million last year. That's $1 million a day Monday through Friday, $2 million for double time Saturday, and $3 million for triple time Sunday. That leaves $32 million to take a vacation."

Riffe Explains Labor Unity Moves

"I WON'T sign a document (for labor unity) that will give away any of your rights," CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe told applauding delegates to the CIO Utility Workers convention.

Riffe criticized the refusal of the AFL Meat Packers to abide by a decison of Arbitrator David L. Cole ordering them to stop trying to wrest bargaining rights for 400 Swift & Co. employes at Moultrie, Ga., from the CIO Packinghouse Workers. It was the first ruling by Cole in a dispute under the AFL-CIO No-Raiding Agreement.

HE SAID that CIO representatives at the recent meeting of the AFL-CIO Unity Committee had declared themselves against discrimination on account of race, color or creed and shady dealings with employers.

Riffe said the subcommittee set up by the unity committee to draft a detailed plan for a union center was designed to "protect the interests of every union."

"If we can't work out a plan to protect your union and every other union—and in my heart I want labor unity very much—I won't sign a document that will give away any of your rights," he said.

The UWUA-CIO and its AFL counterpart, the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, signed the no-raiding agreement. A few days prior to the signing, the UWUA-CIO officers' report said, the CIO union withdrew from an organizing campaign among the workers of a New England firm represented by the AFL union.

After signing the agreement, IBEW at the request of UWUA-CIO withdrew a certification petition involving employes at a Pennsylvania electric company.

Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston stressed the danger of Communist infiltration into American institutions and the necessity of union political action. He praised UWUA-CIO for its early action in purging Communist influence.

"A majority of citizens may be right, but unless they vote, they may as well be wrong, come election day," he said.

ELECTION of a Democratic Congress was the theme of a number of speakers including Sec.-Treas. Thomas M. McCormick of the CIO Oil Workers; Rep. McCormack (Mass.), Democratic whip; CIO Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson; Robert Murphy, Democratic candidate for Massachusetts governor, and Pres. J. William Belanger, Massachusetts CIO Council.

Other speakers included Pres. John Horan, Greater Boston CIO Council; Rabbi Joseph S. Shubow, Temple B'nai Moshe, and Dr. Frederick May Eliot, president of the Unitarian Association of America.

POLITICS was in the air at UWUA-CIO convention. Sec.-Treas. William J. Pachler pins a guest's badge on Rep. McCormack (Mass.), Democratic whip. Vice Pres. Harold J. Straub is in center, and Vice Pres. William R. Munger is partially obscured by Pachler.

The Age of Automation
See Page 6

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., November 8, 1954 Vol. 17, No. 45

'Half Way To White House'

Demos Regain Control Of Congress

—See Pages 2 & 3

Getting Out A Big Vote— Throughout the nation, thousands of CIO-PAC block workers were out in force on election day, helping to get out the big vote which set a record for mid-term elections and underscored the Democratic victories in Congress and the states. At top left: Mrs. Dixie Pennoyer (center) checks off voting list in a Maryland precinct near Washington. At top right: PAC Worker Columbus Kinsey escorts Mozel Euston to the polls in Newark's 3rd Ward. She's an unemployed member of CIO Auto Workers Local 260. Some 2000 PAC workers were on the job in New Jersey. At bottom: Staff members and guests at PAC headquarters, with Dir. Jack Kroll at right center, smile as they watch the first returns on television. Kroll said he was "very pleased" with effective PAC work in the campaign.

Demos Move GOP Out Of 3 Big Statehouses

By GERVASE N. LOVE

THREE MAJOR industrial states, where unemployment became a major political issue during the campaign, turned Republican governors out of office on Election Day and replaced them with labor-backed Democrats.

In 10 large industrial states outside the South where governorships were at stake, Democrats won six, the GOP clung to four.

Twelve years of Republican rule under Gov. Thomas E. Dewey ended in New York State when the voters piled up a slim lead for Democrat Averell Harriman over the GOP hopeful, Sen. Irving M. Ives.

Harriman in a victory statement pledged the Democrats to "restore government with a heart" to the State.

There were indications, however, that the Democrats would have to fight to retain their victory. Harriman's margin was about 10,000 votes. The losers were demanding a recount, and Dewey ordered State Police to guard voting machines and records.

Pennsylvania Gain

Pennsylvania elected its first Democratic governor in two decades—State Sen. George M. Leader, who spearheaded a sweep of State offices. The Republican candidate, Lt. Gov. Lloyd H. Wood, suffered from his connection with the scandal-ridden Administration of Gov. John S. Fine.

Voters in the two largest cities, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, both with thousands of unemployed, rolled up impressive tallies for Leader. However, a score of counties that went Republican in 1952 also returned Democratic majorities.

The third turnover was in Connecticut, where Democratic Rep. Abraham A. Ribicoff, possessor of a fine record in Congress, turned back the bid of Gov. John D. Lodge (R.) for another term.

Ribicoff drew a heavy vote in the industrialized cities, where runaway plants and the recession have combined to create major unemployment problems, and tapped traditional sources of Republican strength in rural sectors.

Three other industrial states retained their Democratic governors by majorities which, in this year of close margins, were fairly sustantial.

Reelected were Democrats G. Mennen Williams, Michigan, to his fourth term; Frank J. Lausche, Ohio, to an unprecedented fifth term; and Dennis J. Roberts, Rhode Island.

AVERELL HARRIMAN
Close margin in New York

A. A. RIBICOFF
The same in Connecticut

G. MENNEN WILLIAMS
Fourth term in Michigan

R. I. P.

This space is respectfully dedicated to the votes residents of Washington, D. C., the nation's capital, were unable to cast on Election Day.

Republicans who regained office in big industrial states were Walter J. Kohler in Wisconsin, Goodwin J. Knight in California, and Theodore R. McKeldin—the man who nominated Pres. Eisenhower at the 1952 Republican national convention—in Maryland.

Democrats captured the top posts from Republicans in Arizona, where former U. S. Sen. Ernest W. McFarland beat out Republican Gov. Howard Pyle; Colorado, where former U. S. Sen. Edwin C. Johnson, who held the office 18 years ago, was chosen over Republican Donald G. Brotzman; Minnesota, where Orville Freeman defeated the GOP incumbent, C. Elmer Anderson; and New Mexico, where John F. Simms routed Alvin Stockton.

Victories in 18 of the 33 contests, plus holdovers, gave the Democrats 27 governorships and the Republicans 21. It is the first time since 1951, when they held 30 governorships, that Democrats have been in the majority.

FDR, Jr. Loses

Contests for other state offices also furnished some surprises. Among the greatest was the defeat of Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. (D.), for attorney-general of New York State by Rep. Jacob K. Javits (R.). Roosevelt, who was supported by the CIO in his primary campaign for the nomination for governor, was expected by many experts to lead his party's ticket.

Control of state legislatures was still largely undetermined as this edition of The CIO News went to press, although it became clear that despite Democratic gains, the Republicans retained their majorities in New York State.

Legislative majorities friendly to organized labor are increasingly important in industrial states as moves for "right to scab" laws, outlawing union security agreements, spread from the South into the North and Midwest.

Georgia and Louisiana voters approved amendments to state constitutions aimed at insuring the continuation of segregation in the schools.

In several states they approved bonuses for Korean war veterans; in Texas they gave women the right to serve on juries; in Ohio they voted to extend terms of state officials from two to four years, but in Colorado they defeated the same proposal.

In San Francisco, voters turned down one proposal for a bond issue to finance rehabilitation of the historic cable car system, but approved another to build a new ball park—first step toward obtaining a major league team.

ALP Bows Out As Legal Party

New York State voters apparently consigned the left wing American Labor Party to history in last week's election.

Its candidates failed by about 5000 votes to win the 50,000 votes it needed to poll to retain its legal status. In 1948, it won more than 500,000 votes for Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party presidential candidate.

He Didn't

Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic presidential nominee in 1952, did a double-take as he voted in Half Day, Ill., last week. Stenciled on the booth's canvas was the manufacturer's label: "Douglas Collapsible Voting Booth."

"Look, Governor, it's got your candidate's name on it," someone whispered.

"Yes, but I just hope he doesn't collapse," Stevenson replied.

He didn't.

Mitchell To Quit Democratic Post

Democratic National Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell will resign before the end of the year and return to his law practice in Chicago, he said on Election Day. He recalled that a year ago he had made public his intention of leaving the post after the 1954 election.

A TIDE of Democratic victories rolled across the nation from Rhode Island to Oregon last week to give that party the right to organize the Senate when it convenes in January.

At stake are the vital committee chairmanships which will go to veteran Democrats. The margin will be small—a single seat—but Sen. Morse (Ind. Ore.) has announced he will vote with the Democrats.

As one state after another reported its tally, it appeared that liberalism would no longer be a dirty word in the Senate and legislative interests would again be beamed towards people and not to big business.

The victory became certain on the Pacific Coast when Richard Neuberger graduated from Oregon's Senate to the national Capitol.

Some contests were notable for the razor-thin margin of victory and recounts are certainties in several states. In others, Democrats defeated their Republican opponents handily.

Sen. Douglas (Ill.) trounced McCarthyite Joe Meek by approximately 300,000 votes. Patrick V. McNamara, an AFL official, soundly whipped Sen. Ferguson, GOP policy leader, in Michigan.

On the negative side, J. Strom Thurmond, Dixiecrat presidential candidate in 1948, won a write-in campaign in South Carolina but promised to step down in two years and go through a regular primary canvass.

A Few Losses

There were losses. Sen. Burke (D.) trailed George Bender in Ohio by about 10,000 votes. Iowa's farm vote failed to return Sen. Gillette (D.). Rep. Sam Yorty (D.) missed on his bid to unseat Sen. Kuchel (R.) in California. New Jersey was the scene of a photo-finish race with Clifford Case nosing out Rep. Howell (D.) for a vacant Senate spot. A recount is in progress here.

Sen. Johnson of Texas will be the majority leader of the new Senate.

With Democratic organization of the Senate, the way was open for cutting Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) down to size. Attention will be focused too on the Senate attitude towards Vice Pres. Nixon, its presiding officer, who slithered about the country smearing some of those now returned with thumping majorities.

Among Fair Deal Winners In Close Senate Contests

Sen.-elect McNAMARA (Mich.)

Sen.-elect NEUBERGER (Ore.)

SEN. DOUGLAS (Ill.)

SEN. MURRAY (Mont.)

Sen.-elect BARKLEY (Ky.)

Fair Deal Forces Regain Congress Control

By EUGENE A. KELLEY

FAIR DEAL forces in American politics were striding down the comeback trail last week, "half way to the White House."

The mid-term congressional, state and local elections were highlighted by record balloting and a close division among voters. The major results:

1. The Democrats regained control of the House, with a clearcut majority of 29.

2. They also apparently have a one-vote margin for organizing the Senate, but the outcome may remain in doubt until absentee ballots are tabulated and recounts have been completed in several states.

3. In state contests, Democrats wrested control from the GOP in the big industrial states of New York, Pennsylvania and Connecticut, winning governorships in 18 out of 33 contests.

4. The Republican campaign pattern of "smut, smear and slander," with Vice Pres. Nixon as boss smear leader against a number of Fair Deal senators, backfiired and was rejected by voters in a number of major states.

Among labor-backed liberals returned to the Senate were veterans like former Vice Pres. Barkley (Ky.), and Sens. Douglas (Ill.), Humphrey (Minn.), Murray (Mont.), O'Mahoney (Wyo.), Green (R.I.), Kerr (Okla.), Anderson (N.M.), Kefauver (Tenn.), Sparkman (Ala.) and Neely (W. Va.).

Joining them will be Sens.-elect Neuberger (Ore.), McNamara (Mich.), who unseated GOP Policy Leader Ferguson, and Kerr Scott (N.C.). (Details on Page 2.)

5. A number of the most reactionary Republicans in the House were dumped—Michigan's Kit Clardy, for example, Chicago's Fred Busbey and Milwaukee's Charlie Kersten.

'Pocketbook Pinches'

"Pocketbook pinches" were a factor in several Democratic wins. All told, the Democrats took 19 seats from the GOP and picked up the lone independent seat, at the same time giving up only five seats to the Republicans.

For 36 hours the nation figuratively sat on the edge of its chair as close contests ding-donged back and forth between Democratic and Republican leads.

From some states came angry charges that Republicans were engaged in a "slow count," trying to rig the returns. And in several there were demands for recounts as ballot boxes were put under night and day guard.

These recounts or the official tabulation could yet change the outcome.

Instead of the "apathy" so much noted by the forecasters, it turned out the voters were merely keeping their own counsel. Long lines at polling places and a whopping 45 million-plus turnout—a record for off-year voting—dispelled the "apathy" myth before the Election Day sun went down.

Ike Cools Off

As usual, there was an abundance of post-election comment. From the White House came regrets for the promised "cold war of partisan politics" in the wake of Democratic victory. Pres. Eisenhower, compelled by the facts rather than desire, promised consultation with the Democrats on legislative proposals.

(From Nixon, front-runner in the tar bucket brigade, there was an uneasy but welcome silence.)

Rep. McCormack (Mass.), due to return as majority leader, called the victory a mandate "for action that will bring back prosperity and full employment."

Sam Rayburn of Texas, the Speaker-designate, still white with anger over GOP campaign smears, promised that come January he will make the Republicans "put up or shut up" on their claims of mass firings of security risks in the federal service.

Stephen Mitchell, Democratic national chairman, glowed: "We are at least half way back to the White House."

Harry S. Truman, beloved symbol of the Fair Deal, said the election results "suit me very well" and were "the best medicine a Democrat could have" to speed his recovery from recent surgery.

Ike's Pleas Fail

Adlai Stevenson, top Democrat, was "well pleased" with the returns, then added they had "nothing to do" with his political future. He found "quite interesting" the fact that three states—Michigan, New York and Kentucky — where Eisenhower campaigned vigorously, went Democratic and that normally-Republican Ohio voted that way by only a narrow margin.

The election set a number of "firsts" and hung up some new records. The 84th Congress will have at least 16 women, a new high. Sen. Smith (Me.) will be the only member of her sex in the Senate. Mrs. George P. Abel (R.) was elected from Nebraska but will serve only until Jan. 5.

Two Democratic women scored upsets. Mrs. Cora Knutson tumbled a Republican incumbent, to become Minnesota's first Congresswoman. In Michigan, Martha W. Griffiths won the 17th Dist. seat. Mrs. Iris Blitch won election from Georgia. Mrs. Edith Green (D.) comes to Congress from Oregon.

Charles Diggs, Jr., became the first Negro to go to Congress from Michigan. A State Senator, he saw his victory as more than political, saying: "It settles the deeper issue—the racial issue."

The biggest, most significant feature, though, was the capture of both chambers by the party out of power in off-year voting. There have been several instances of victory in one body or another at mid-term, but rarely has a party lost its grip on House and Senate after only two years of control of the White House and Congress.

Democrats picked up House seats throughout the country. The biggest gains were in industrial states like Pennsylvania, Michigan and Illinois.

Back On Job

The lameduck Senate returned to Washington this week. Main item on the agenda was the censure of Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) which GOP strategists carefully deferred until after the elections.

The controversial Dixon-Yates power contract also is certain to come up for discussion and criticism before the session adjourns.

STUDYING RETURNS at CIO-PAC headquarters in Washington on election night are PAC Dir. Jack Kroll (left) and CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg.

New Congress And The Old—

	House		Senate
	84th	83rd	84th	83rd
Democrats	232	212	48	46
Republicans	203	218	47	49
Independents	0	1	1	1

Kroll Praises PAC Work

"POCKETBOOK" considerations and the "domestic economic situation" were important factors in last week's elections in the opinion of Dir. Jack Kroll of the CIO Political Action Committee.

He noted that Pres. Eisenhower "made a lot of New Deal and Fair Deal promises" in the final weeks of the campaign which Kroll hoped would be fulfilled.

GOP victories were less the result of organized Republican activity, he thought, than the spur supplied by the President through the Citizens for Eisenhower group.

The CIO-PAC head noted that the party in power traditionally loses seats in off-year elections. It is extremely rare, he said, for the opposition party to overturn either house of Congress in these elections.

PAC-endorsed candidates fared as follows: Senate, 15 elected, nine defeated; House, 126 elected, 130 defeated; governors, eight elected and eight defeated.

Kroll observed that some of the "gutter" politics did the Democrats no harm "and did Vice Pres. Nixon no good."

"The tens of thousands" of CIO members who worked at the polls won praise from Kroll who said they were "becoming veteran campaigners with more savvy than ever before."

He said the election results showed PAC was functioning better than ever before, particularly in Michigan and Pennsylvania.

GOP Pours Out 'Smut, Smear, Slander' In Drive For Votes

"That's my boy," said Candidate Eisenhower of Candidate Nixon two years ago after the Vice President-to-be frantically explained away his political trust fund financed by big business interests.

"The tremendous job" of Vice Pres. Nixon was praised by Pres. Eisenhower as the Republicans wound up the mid-term congressional campaign with what Adlai Stevenson called a "frenzied outburst of smut, smear and slander."

The President confessed at his first press conference in weeks that he didn't know what Nixon—who has been running the GOP campaign—or other Republicans had been saying, but he was all for Dick nevertheless, and told him so in a letter.

What the last-minute GOP drive to label all Democrats as Communists amounted to, as Stevenson said on eve of the election, was being "disloyal to the deepest traditions of constitutional democracy."

"Here He Comes Now"

Nixon, for example, had claimed that the Communists were operating "within the Democratic Party." He charged Stevenson with "spreading pro-Communist propaganda." And daily he tossed out another batch of figures on "subversives and security risks" supposedly eliminated "by the thousands" from the government.

What started out as a "smile and smear" campaign — Ike's smiles and Nixon's smears—ended up pretty much all smears so far as the GOP was concerned.

The President, himself, even got into the act in his four-city airplane tour on the weekend before election. At Cleveland, he said he was tired of hearing "red herring every time the word communism was mentioned." That brought a charge from Stephen A. Mitchell, Democratic national chairman, that Eisenhower had joined the "smear and fear" drive.

In Detroit, hard hit by unemployment, the President claimed—without qualification — that 1954 is the "finest year in our history and we are on the upgrade by every index we have."

Repeatedly on his tour, he charged the Democrats with the belief that "the only time America is really prosperous is when she is at war." In this argument, Stevenson observed, the GOP simply was parroting "standard Communist propaganda for years."

The 1952 Democratic presidential nominee also observed that while Nixon was talking to the voters about "peace," only a few months ago he "was for sending American boys to fight in Indochina."

On the weekend before election, the GOP started flooding radio and TV programs with spot announcements. One Republican ad purported to quote a Soviet official as saying: "Defeat the Republican candidates. That is the order from Moscow. Return America to a New Deal-type Administration; Moscow orders that!"

Such was the Republican line—a "100% falsehood," as Democratic Chairman Mitchell observed, indicating legal action against the radio stations and a congressional investigation are ahead.

All of the "smut, smear and slander," noted Averell Harriman, Democratic gubernatorial victor in New York, was part of the Communist and Nazi technique of the "big lie."

But the "big lie" campaign failed in the case of Harriman and in several key congressional races. House Speaker-designate Rayburn (Tex.) said Democrats will demand the Republicans "put up or shut up" on their charges.

Philip Murray

1886 1952

Progress At The Polls

The Republicans' "great crusade"—whatever it was—came to an end in the 1954 elections. It is clear that the Republican program failed to stir the emotions and the support of the American voting majority.

Averell Harriman, elected governor of New York State, has pointed out that the voters want "government with a heart" in Albany. They want it in Washington, too. During the past two years, the big business group in government has shown it coudn't find the "heart" of government if it had a compass.

Some facts stand out, even at this early date:

• A prime goal of the GOP strategists was the defeat of the most dynamic Fair Deal Democratic Senators. Not one was licked. Such men as Humphrey, Douglas, Murray, Neely, Anderson, Kerr and others were re-elected. So, too, in the earlier southern primaries, were such stalwarts as Sparkman, Kefauver and Kerr Scott in North Carolina.

The liberal Democratic bloc in the Senate will be stronger than ever—with the election of men like Barkley in Kentucky, McNamara in Michigan, O'Mahoney in Wyoming and Neuberger in Oregon.

• Democrats won numerous key governorships—at a time when GOP policy was directed at throwing anti-labor programs back to the states. The importance of victories, like those of Harriman in New York, Williams in Michigan, Leader in Pennsylvania, Freeman in Minnesota, Ribicoff in Connecticut, cannot be underestimated.

• McCarthyist influences in the GOP took a shellacking. Many of these extremists hoped for a Republican defeat—so they could strengthen their control over the Republican Party machinery and tighten their chains on Ike.

But Clifford Case—prime target of these fanatics—was, barring a reversal by recount, the winner in New Jersey. Such pro-McCarthy Congressmen as Clardy in Michigan, Busbey and Bishop in Illinois—backyard of the Chicago Tribune—and Kersten in Wisconsin, were defeated.

• Unemployment—and distaste for GOP "care-nothing, do-nothing" policies—played a major role in many states. As the campaign developed, the GOP was forced to abandon those policies and to adopt, at least for campaign purposes, a Fair Deal outlook on jobs.

• The GOP's give-away policy program was clearly unpopular in areas most affected: states like Oregon, Montana, Wyoming, Tennessee.

Yes, this was a real victory for political action by labor and all the people. CIO-PAC did a magnificent job in state after state. Workers learned the issues; they went to the polls; they helped in the campaigns and coordinated their efforts with other liberal groups. By their support and enthusiasm, they beat back the threat of continued complete big-business control of government.

It was a demand of the people for "government with a heart"—the same sort of government America had during 20 years of New Deal and Fair Deal.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS

Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII November 8, 1954 No. 45

'Backfired, Didn't It, Richard?'

In Other Words—

The New Commie Infiltration Tactics

(Communist efforts at infiltration of U. S. groups have been stepped up. This article, digested from the Committee Reporter of the American Jewish Committee, tells why and what can be done to stop it.)

IN RECENT MONTHS, thousands of American community leaders who had never before received Communist literature in their personal mail have been startled to find themselves on the mailing list of the Communist Party.

During the same period, hundreds of organizations have been faced with the problem of infiltration of Communist Party members. Recently, the local group of a national public affairs organization, noted for its political sophistication and vigorous anti-communism, was so heavily infiltrated by Communists that it was forced to vote its own dissolution rather than run the risk of being converted into a Communist front.

Today, the party line has revived the "united front" tactic that was so successful in the Thirties and early Forties. Infiltration of all groups—right to left, pacifist to jingo isolationist—which can somehow be tricked or buffaloed into accepting the Russian version of "peace" is now the goal.

Infiltration of non-Communist groups is, of course, nothing new for the Communists. Nor has it ever been completely abandoned.

What lies behind these Communist tactics? At this time, when Communist influence and power in the U. S. are at a low point, why must civic and communal organizations maintain their vigilance against a relative handful of would-be infiltrators?

Failure of Communist (world) strategy coupled with the assumption of anti-Communist leadership by America called for "tactical revisions" by Soviet leaders. New policies had to be devised to end growing Communist isolation and at the same time, to isolate the U. S. from the rest of the non-Communist world.

In the U. S., the vehicle the Communists chose to ride to "unity" is what they call "McCarthyism." Just as Communist terminology gives unique dimensions to the word "peace" by equating it with victory for Soviet arms, so their definition of McCarthyism makes the term synonymous with all anti-Communist aid including military preparedness, foreign aid, internal security measures such as prosecution of spies and even factual reporting conditions behind the Iron Curtain.

To exploit America's growing aversion to demagogues who, in the name of anti-communism, trample on civil liberties, the Communists propagate the view that there is no difference between demagogy and legitimate anti-communism. Their slogan, "Anti-communism is American fascism," epitomizes this "smear" technique.

Communists see no virtue in the civil liberties programs engaged in by anti-Communists. Indeed they wage continual war against such efforts. They are particularly embittered toward liberals who fight dissemination of false and reckless charges and the disregard of due process with the same vigor that they oppose communism.

The infiltrating Communist presents a serious problem to groups based on voluntary association for specific objectives. For when a secret, well-disciplined band conspires from within for other purposes, the democratic process—whereby decisions result from free and open debate—is thwarted and the group activity is too often deflected to serve the aims of the Russian state.

The Most Effective Exposure

There is no simple formula against this technique of subversion without spreading false suspicion or stifling dissent. The first requisite is an awareness of Communist intent to infiltrate. The Communist Party cannot be dismissed as a dead issue or a fiction of the Sunday supplements.

Secondly, countermeasures must be accompanied by political astuteness and regard for justice and fair play. Various methods of dealing with the threat have been devised. But all of them depend on the ability to discern the camouflaged Communist.

Experience has shown that the most effective way to expose a Communist is to challenge his allegiance to Russia. Confronted with the demand to denounce the evils of the Soviet system, the Communist will almost always either reveal his opposition or argue that the issue is irrelevant. This evasion, when it follows a consistent pattern, soon becomes as revealing as an outright admission.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

BOTH DEMOCRATS and Republicans in the narrowly divided 84th Congress will have their eyes fixed on 1956 and the great prize of the presidency. A suggestion may be made that the manner in which the parties conduct themselves, as well as what they do, will be watched by the people.

Eyes On '56

Pres. Eisenhower admitted after the election that he had spoken too strongly when he tried to frighten the voters into the Republican column by predicting a "cold war" between the White House and a Democratic Congress.

The President seemed cheerful, restrained and well-balanced in his post-election comments. He would have been better advised had he exercised some restraint and balance, in advance, on his huckstering Vice Pres. Nixon and the Madison Avenue advertising boys who tried to repeat their 1952 success by smothering the country with last-minute TV "spot" appeals stressing the "Communists in government" theme.

The Democrats will have every right to resent and denounce any further attempt to portray them as "soft toward Communism," as the party of "war" and "treason."

The GOP Lunatic Fringe

It is not their business, however, to oppose everything the President proposes. Whenever he acts as a Chief Executive asking responsible support in the great fields of foreign policy and trade policy, in economic as well as military aid to our allies, he has a right to Democratic help against the lunatic-fringers of his own party.

Domestic policy is another matter, and here the Democratic obligation is clearly to serve as a check, a roadblock, to the passion of Eisenhower's millionaire advisers for giving away all the country's resources that are not nailed down.

There are more give-aways coming up in the next two years. The Dixon-Yates contract, now before the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, is important and should be stopped dead, but it strikes, after all, at only one federal power project.

The almost forgotten Hoover Commission, packed with big businessmen and their selected "experts," is scheduled to report its proposals for cutting down federal functions. The parallel Commission on Intergovernmental Functions, no longer headed by the extremist Clarence Manion, still seems likely to supplement Hoover by recommending that social welfare programs be trusted more broadly to the tender mercies of state legislatures dominated by business lobbyists.

It will be entirely proper for the Democrats to haul Interior Sec. McKay before an investigating committee to explain his devious maneuvers against federal public power. It will be proper to demand an accounting of the administration of the anti-trust laws.

Some Problems For Democrats

Democrats, however, have their own internal problem in regard to civil rights, labor and Eisenhower's trickle-down theory of prosperity. They came out of the election with stronger representation of the liberal Northern and Western wings—but with Dixiecrat Thurmond elected in South Carolina and some bitterly conservative prospective committee chairmen.

Sen. Byrd of Virginia would do well to remember that he can never hold on to a major committee chairmanship—Finance or anything else—unless the party's program appeals to the workers and other low-wage families of the industrial North and the expanding West.

Byrd voted last year against a modest increase in personal income tax exemptions that was warranted in equity. Had he and one or two other conservative Southerners voted for it, the Democrats all over the country would have had another effective campaign point—and two or three more senators might have been elected.

Southern Democrats will help neither their own constituents nor their party unless they realize that low-wage and union-harassing programs are a blow at the whole country's economic welfare.

Watch Out For Tricky Dick

Something must be done, of course, about the brash Mr. Nixon. The Vice President disclosed himself as a cold-blooded, unscrupulous campaigner who shot up the ladder so fast, and is now so eaten with ambition to succeed Eisenhower, that he abandoned normal restraints of decency.

He is the Vice President who just last April startled the public by insisting we would have to go to war to "save" Indo-China. Yet in his closing campaign address he had the gall to claim that the "self-restraint" and wisdom of GOP officials were the sole factors that saved us from "war."

He tried to build himself an empire within the GOP empire by concentrating overtly on the fake red issue in behalf of Mountain State and Pacific Coast senatorial candidates. The tactics didn't work in most states, but the gentleman revealed himself too plainly as capable of either self-deception or deliberate distortion.

A Senate vote to censure Joe McCarthy might be pretty meaningless unless Nixon should be chopped down, for the next two years, for his own adoption of practically all McCarthy's tricks and evils.

LISTEN TO THE CIO RADIO PROGRAM

John W. Vandercook AND THE NEWS

every weekday evening on the ABC Network

Economic Outlook Says—

'Mountain Of Gold' Is Behind Fight To Control Atomic Power

THE BATTLE for control of atomic energy "is certain to go on as long as there is a potential mountain of gold at the end of the atomic rainbow for whatever predatory interests manage to capture it."

That's what the current issue of the Economic Outlook says. It recalls that the United States has spent $12 billion creating a great new public domain: our basic knowledge, technical know-how, and materials in the field of atomic energy, or nuclear fission.

The CIO Education and Research Dept. publication says nuclear fission has demonstrated that it holds "enormous potential values in peacetime commercial fields, including electric power production. Benefits are ready to be harvested in many peacetime civilian fields."

There is evidence, the report continues, that electric power can now be produced, on a basis of government capital costs, at a saving in half or more of the United States.

Private Interest Drive

"Therefore," the Outlook says, "there is a great drive under way to let private interests (composed almost entirely of the nation's biggest corporate giants) take over the commercial development of the atom, leaving the nation only the field of war uses."

These interests, the publication goes on, "will not be satisfied with the right to own or use nuclear materials and patent the processes for their commercial use."

"They also want Uncle Sam to give them subsidies as well as the nation's multi-billion dollar assets which include the government-developed knowledge, discoveries and processes, a government market for by-products, and government underwriting of experimental work," the Outlook says.

During the 83rd Congress, the CIO publication recalls, the drive to take over the atom was partly rebuffed as a result of a heroic fight by a few congressmen and a small band of liberal senators, later joined by most of the Senate Democrats.

"The stake is far more than $12 billion," the article continues. "Private interest spokesmen try to picture it as less. They deduct the value of the A-bombs and the H-bombs that the government has built from the $12 billion spent.

Trillions Are Involved

"Actually, however, trillions of dollars (thousands of billions) are involved in the energy field. Recoverable uranium is presently estimated to hold up to twenty-three times more energy than all the coal, petroleum, gas and other conventional fuels on and in the crust of the earth. This means thousands of billions of dollars in value in uranium for fuel alone."

Energy is but one field of atomic values, the article goes on. Revolutionary new chemical, metal, transportation, food production and preservation, medical and other discoveries are being made. Tremendous new industries appear certain to evolve from this great domain, now owned by all the people of the United States.

"The partial victory of liberals in the electric power and patent fields has made it possible for another Congress to establish the pattern under which the nuclear arts, atomic energy, are released into our society. A little may be gnawed away under the existing act before another Congress can amend the Act of 1954. But establishing the major pattern is still possible," the Outlook continues.

"The decision roughly is between government monopoly, private monopoly dominated by business giants whose power in our society will be enhanced many times over, and the sort of middle course for which the liberals in Congress battled in July, 1954."

On The Ground Floor

Who's in on the ground floor? The CIO publication lists firms, named by Fortune magazine, to which the Atomic Energy Commission "has contracted out engineering, construction and operation of its projects . . . giving its private contractors access to all atomic secrets and both knowledge and experience in the nuclear field which other American businesses do not have."

They are DuPont, General Electric, Westinghouse, Carbide & Chemical Corp., Monsanto Chemical and the Sandia Corp., a Western Electric subsidiary.

In addition, there are the "teams" studying the conversion of nuclear into electric energy—Detroit Edison and Dow Chemical, Union Electric of Missouri and Monsanto, Commonwealth Edison of Chicago and Northern Illinois Public Service, and Pacific Gas & Electric and the Bechtel Corp.

'Small Potatoes'

Power from atomic energy must be made available in New England, Legislative Rep. Albert G. Clifton of the Massachusetts CIO Council told the New England Committee on Atomic Energy.

Up to now, Clifton said, the area has "the small potatoes of this whole new industry. Only 200 out of 400,000 workers in this industry are located in New England."

"Though we need business and jobs," he went on, "we now seem to be by-passed. The development of an atomic energy industry in New England can be achieved by imagination, perseverance and risk. Both aspects of power must be developed.

"Power must be made available from this industry in New England, as it has been in Oak Ridge, Hanford, Paducah, Savannah and Portsmouth, and low-cost power can be developed from atomic energy here now. Then the disadvantage we suffer in business and employment from high cost power can be directly offset," he declared.

Guernsey-Montgomery for the Economic Outlook, CIO.

Tomorrow's Factories Are Here Today—

GOP Policies Speed Drive For Automation

(Third article of a series)

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

INDUSTRY is agog these days with plans to "increase productivity" by taking advantage of automation and other new mechanical improvements now widely available for peacetime use.

Undoubtedly impetus has been given to these plans by lower corporation taxes, quick tax write-offs for plant expansion, give-away programs and other favors bestowed by the Republican big business Administration.

At open conferences and closed company meetings, industrial engineers, technicians, management men and others concerned with manufacturing processes have been buzzing like bees in a fresh clover patch, with ideas for bigger, better—and cheaper—production through automation.

Labor Not Heard

The voice of labor, however, is not heard at these affairs. Yet the great part of the plans for increased productivity at lower costs are of vital interest to workers, for the extensive use of automatic-controlled machines and new techniques means drastic changes in job ratings, employment opportunities and other matters about which workers should be forewarned.

It's true that a few spokesmen for management are aware of how such changes will effect human beings, but too many belong to the hard-boiled school of thought and believe they have a right to run their business the way they want without worrying over what it does to their workers.

Just let such matters alone and gradually necessary human adjustments will be made, they believe, closing their eyes to the personal suffering that can so easily be hidden in piles of statistics.

"We have a good deal of experience as to how the industrialists regard a new industrial potential," says Norbert Wiener in his book, The Human Use of Human Beings.

Industry Line

"Their whole propaganda is to the effect that it must not be considered as the business of the government but must be left open to whatever entrepreneurs wish to invest money in it. We also know that they have very few inhibitions when it comes to taking all the profit out of an industry that there is to be taken, and then letting the public pick up the pieces . . ."

Industrialists typically are willing and anxious to plunge ahead on technological improvements in industry, but they are backward in supporting social changes that might ease for human beings the upsets and adjustments such technological changes make.

Wiener calls it "one of the paradoxes of the human race . . . that the people who control the fortunes of the community should at the same time be wildly radical in matters that concern our own change of our environment, and rigidly conservative in the social matters that determine our adaption to it."

Some interesting and significant comments indicating attitudes of business, technical and professional men toward the social aspects of automation came out at a round table discussion on the automatic factory, sponsored last year by Fortune magazine. Representatives from 10 companies with a big stake in automation, including General Electric, were among those who attended the conference.

Technical matters took up much of the time of conference, but one of the questions discussed toward the end was: Is the automatic factory socially desirable?

Most of the speakers were enthusiastic about the possibilities of increased productivity under extended automation, but only two of the technically trained people at the round table, Fortune reported, seemed at all concerned about social consequences.

"These things take care of themselves," said one. "They have a feedback of their own . . . I don't think that it is the part, nor can it be the part, of industry to try to plan the social aspects of this thing."

A sociologist, who professed a concern about the lack of appreciation for leisure, said he was afraid many Americans looked on leisure as "a threat, a problem, a burden, or hazard," rather than a clear gain and that this is holding back automation.

In some concluding remarks on the round table discussion, Fortune said that "a company like General Electric, whose interests range from transistors to nuclear reactors and gun-laying radar systems, is in a better position than most to pull together the diverse components needed to automatize effectively . . ."

GE Holds Parley

A few months later, General Electric held a three-day productivity conference attended by the company's top officials at which a startling 10-year program was laid out that showed how GE planned to utilize what Fortune called its "better position."

When the CIO Electrical Workers heard what GE's program called for, the union's officials were alarmed, for their past experience with GE's hostile attitude in collective bargaining—as well as things said at the conference — indicated that unhappy days for thousands of GE members might lie ahead, threatening them with wholesale wage rate slashes, unemployment and speed-up.

Quoting words spoken at the conference, the IUE charged that GE's program to "increase the productivity of our workers by 100% in the next 10-year period" will mean that the total working force in 1964 will be no larger than today. As a GE official said, at the conference, the company will not need to increase its "labor force over the present level."

The Loss Of Jobs

Under GE's decentralization program, the IUE charged that the move to break up larger GE plants into smaller plants in rural areas, will mean "that large numbers of GE workers now on the payrolls will permanently lose their jobs." It will also "enable GE to get rid of high incentive earnings, set new and lower time standards in the new plants, and get rid of workers who have accumulated vacation, pension and other benefits," the IUE stated.

The IUE reported the significant remark at the conference that "today the labor relations atmosphere is more favorable to productivity improvement than it was immediately following the war and modifications of labor laws have given management certain freedoms of action that were denied it by earlier laws."

Nowhere in GE's plans for the change from mechanized to automatic production, stated the IUE, is "any consideration given to the welfare of the worker."

THE NEW INDUSTRIAL AGE is typified in these views. At left is an "electric brain," one of the many that direct "automated lines" at Ford's engine plant, an engineering marvel, near Cleveland, O. At right, a control panel shows by dials and liquids in transparent tubes what's going on in the vast tower system of sprawling chemical plant.

Question

STORY: When CIO Pres. Walter Reuther was being shown the automatically controlled machines at the Ford Motor Co.'s engine plant in Cleveland, a company official, pointing to the machines, asked Reuther: "How are you going to collect union dues from these guys?"

REPLIED REUTHER: "How are you going to get them to buy Fords?"

What Is Cybernetics?

Cybernetics, which deals with the fundamentals of automation, is the science of the study of messages, in particular messages of control.

The word, derived from the Greek, signifies the art of the steersman or pilot, explains Prof. Norbert Wiener, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He christened "cybernetics" in his book by that name published in 1948.

In his later and less technical book called The Human Use of Human Beings, Wiener writes that "we ordinarily think of communication and of language as being directed from person to person. However, it is quite possible for a person to talk to a machine, a machine to a person, and a machine to a machine."

The thesis of his book, Wiener says, is "that society can only be understood through a study of the messages of communication facilities that belong to it; that in the future development of these messages and communication facilities, messages between man and machines, between machines and man, and between machine and machine are destined to play an ever-increasing part."

Behind The Miracle Machines

JUST WHAT'S behind the big automatic miracle machines they tell us can do what men can do, but do it better and faster?

How do they work? What makes them run? How come they can perform functions ordinarily done by human muscles and brains?

A clue to understanding a little something of a very complicated subject lies in knowing about at least two of the most important factors contributing to the development of automation. These are feedback control and the automatic computer — often called the "electric brain."

Gordon Brown of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology told the recent CIO Steelworkers' convention that "the merger of computers and feedback in industrial control problems" has been the most significant advance in the past 10 years.

In a speech describing the tremendous implications of automation to all of us, Brown explained the term feedback by giving a simple illustration familiar to everyone. Taking the case of a man driving a car along a highway, Brown said that the driver, the highway and the auto constitute a feedback system.

The quantity which must be controlled in this simple system, is the direction the driver wants to go. The measuring element is his vision. The driver's eyes detect any error in the direction he wants to go—that is, any difference between where the car is going and where it should be going. His brain gives a signal to his muscles which turn the steering wheel so as to eliminate the error in direction.

"The unique feature of a feedback control system," Brown explained, "is the use of the quantity called the error, or the difference between what you have and what you want, to start corrections.

"We might say that feedback control systems profit by their mistakes, something that we humans do not always do.

"The word feedback has attained much prominence today because in automatic control the technique requires us to make a measurement of what is happening at the thing we wish to control. Since this thing is frequently at some distance from where we have the basic control signal, we feed the measurement back to the control point as a signal, and compare it with the control to give the error."

The automatic computer, the second important device in automation, mentioned by Brown, is "a machine which solves rapidly very complicated mathematical problems. It does quickly what had previously been done more slowly by slide rules and desk calculations for many years."

V. I. P. TREATMENT was accorded Mrs. Ellen Battle, first patient at beautiful new medical center of CIO Clothing Workers laundry division in New York City. At left, she reads inscription on lobby wall before registering (right photo) with Ada Bressler.

The Story Of Patient No. 1—

ACW Sets Pace At Health Center

By C. EDMUND FISHER
Special Correspondent

AT PRECISELY 10 a.m. one recent morning, a graying-haired grandmother walked into the New York Laundry Workers Joint Board Health Center and told the registrar, "I am Mrs. Ellen Battle. I have an appointment for an examination."

With that, Mrs. Battle became Patient No. 1 of the medical center built for the 20,000 members of the joint board, an affiliate of the CIO Clothing Workers.

But before she started through the center for a general physical check-up, there was a little ceremony that had to be performed.

A Free Health Plan

She was escorted outside the building on 34th St., near 3rd Ave. There, she was formally welcomed by Joint Board Manager Louis Simon and members of the medical staff. A corsage also went with the greeting.

A worker at the State Laundry in Brooklyn for the last eight years and a widow for 27 years, Mrs. Battle became a bit choked up over all this fuss. She had raised five children, who have 10 children, and has been too busy throughout her life for fanfare.

Nevertheless, when all the formalities were over, she expressed the warmth of her feelings over the fact that she and her fellow laundry workers now have their own health center, fully equipped, well staffed and free.

Shortly after she started through the process of the check-up, a man walked into the spacious, marble-lined lobby. He was John Wallerstein, a laundry worker for 45 years and a union man since 1912.

Slowly he looked over the surroundings, shook his head slightly and spoke out, "Well, I never thought a laundry worker would ever live to see such a place come true."

Cradle To The Grave

Wallerstein was Patient No. 2. He, too, was in for a general physical examination.

By week's end more than 100 visits had been made by laundry workers. The examinations cost them nothing.

All of this is consistent with the Amalgamated's long-standing and expanding health and welfare program. And, as one speaker noted at the health center's dedication exercises on Oct. 16, "The Amalgamated is taking care of its people from the cradle to the grave."

Extensive Service

Not too many years ago, as time is measured, laundry workers were among the lowest paid and most over-worked people in the country. Sickness and death rates were higher than average. Since becoming affiliated with the ACWA-CIO 16 years ago, the joint board has consistently raised wages, lowered hours and improved working conditions. And in the 1940's this group instituted an employer-paid social welfare program.

On a steaming hot June day last year, another goal for the welfare of the laundry workers neared fruition when ground was broken for the $1.3 million center.

Today, that goal has been achieved and the 32 doctors (all of them specialists) and 13 nurses and technicians are geared to handle comprehensive out-patient medical services. These include diagnostic, therapeutic and preventive services, plus dermatology, cardiology, gynecology, orthopedics, proctology, urology and a host of other phases of medicine.

The center is equipped with best up-to-date devices known to medical science.

Aided by a full-time administrative staff of 12 persons, the over-all policy is set by a joint body of five union and four employer representatives:

ACWA-CIO Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky and Sec.-Treas. Frank Rosenblum; Simon; Odell Clark, joint board assistant manager; Roger Douglas, joint board president; and industry representatives, Joseph Weiss, William A. Troy, Benjamin Albert and Al Abrahams.

Money for construction of the center and its operation are provided by a jointly administered fund made up of employers' pay roll contributions.

This is a milestone in the laundry workers' history and takes its place alongside two previously established health centers—those of the New York Joint Board and the Philadelphia Joint Board. The three serve 80,000 ACWA-CIO members. And a fourth, being built by the Chicago Joint Board, will be opened next year.

The New York Times said editorially the center is "an example of union welfare fund operations at their best—an example now particularly timely."

The underlying theme of the centers and the entire ACWA-CIO social welfare program is expressed by the late Sidney Hillman's philosophy of guarding and improving the general welfare of the people.

The fact that Mrs. Battle became Laundry Health Center Patient No. 1 is important in the sense that the workers' general welfare is paramount.

A Better Life

At the recent dedication of the ACWA's health center for laundry workers, Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky said:

"Our laundry workers have learned cooperation and mutual respect through years of struggle for a better life.

"They have emerged from a sweatshop industry, steadily improving their wages and working standards, obtained a comprehensive system of welfare benefits and have now achieved their latest dream—this beautiful health center which will minister to their needs."

HEAD nurse Maloney observes blood pressure test.

LAB Supervisor Catherine Alexander makes blood count test.

CHEST X-RAY with latest machine (left photo) is part of health center's program. Laundry Workers Joint Board Mgr. Louis Simon pins corsage on Mrs. Battle's coat as members of center staff (right photo) look on. From left, Dr. Julius Schwimmer, assistant director, Head Nurse Maloney, Dr. Benjamin Fishman, medical director, and Milton Arons, the center's administrator.

Clapp Sees TVA 'Liquidation' If Dixon-Yates Deal Stands

STEPPED-UP organizing efforts are urged by CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe at Kentucky CIO convention.

THE STAGE is being set for the "future liquidation of the Tennessee Valley Authority" by the Dixon-Yates power give-away, Gordon Clapp, former TVA chairman, testified before hearings of the Senate Anti-Monopoly subcommittee were recessed.

Clapp, whose term as chairman expired last May, charged the Atomic Energy Commission and the Budget Bureau with joining with TVA's "worst enemies" in a planned campaign to destroy the TVA.

The two government agencies and the two utility holding companies involved in the deal, he added, have a "long record of intent to cripple TVA."

"The plan and the scheme is to squeeze TVA into submission to the private utilities so they can dictate terms to TVA," he added.

AS TO PUBLIC POLICY, Clapp maintained it is "particularly unsound" to "whittle away" at an agency like TVA, which was established to provide a type of competition for private utility companies that have "the status of monopoly."

Later, the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee opened post-election hearings on the AEC's request that it approve the contract. Under the law, the committee can authorize the waiving of a requirement that any AEC contract lay before Congress for 30 days while it is in session.

It met as the Democrats warned the Eisenhower Administration to reverse itself on the Dixon-Yates deal, or run the risk of having it "thoroughly ventilated" when control of House and Senate shifts on Jan. 5.

Rep. Rayburn (D. Tex.), who will be next speaker of the House, said the "whole give-away program" will bear looking into, especially Dixon-Yates.

"Our boys have some pretty good toeholds to work on," he said.

HE INDICATED that if the GOP insists on the handout, the Democrats may refuse to vote funds for it. Republicans plugging the deal said this would be impractical.

The Dixon-Yates give-away involves a non-negotiated contract for a combine of Middle South Utilities, Inc., of New York, and the Southern Co., of Birmingham, Ala, for construction of a power plant at West Memphis, Ark. The power would be fed into the TVA system at Memphis, Tenn., to replace current sold to the AEC for its facilities at Paducah, Ky.

The proposed contract, according to newspaper articles, guarantees the combine a 9% profit under contract terms which, Clapp told the Anti-Monopoly subcommittee, make it a "risk-free, government-financed deal for private profit."

THE AEC advised the subcommittee, which is headed by Sen. Langer (R. N. D.), that only two of the four commission members—there was one vacancy at the time—voted to approve the proposed contract.

Kentucky CIO Blasts Power Deal

THE EISENHOWER Administration was severely criticized by the 15th annual convention of the Kentucky CIO Council for the Dixon-Yates power deal.

The convention, held at Ashland, condemned "the Dixon-Yates deal as an obvious attack on the Tennessee Valley Authority as well as a bold give-away of the taxpayers' money to private power interests."

The resolution also called on "Pres. Eisenhower to reconsider his order and stop the contract from being finally entered into."

Franz Daniel, field assistant to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, drew an ovation from the 300 delegates for a speech attacking the Administration's TVA and farm policies.

CIO EXECUTIVE Vice Pres. John V. Riffe praised the Clothing Workers for organizing 2500 new members in the past year in the State as well as the organizing efforts of other CIO unions.

"There is much more work to be done to bring unorganized workers of the State under the CIO banner," he added.

CIO-PAC Dir. Jack Kroll urged the delegates to work and vote for Alben Barkley, who was returned to the Senate, because he was one of the sponsors of Full Employment Act of 1946.

Council Pres. Al Whitehouse also called for concerted action for Barkley, who subsequently defeated Sen. Cooper (R.). Banners in the convention hall proclaimed, "CIO Supports Barkley" and "The Job You Save May Be Your Own! Vote for the 'Veep'."

Whitehouse, who is also director of CIO Steelworkers Dist. 25, was re-elected Council president.

Strike Voted By Times Guild Unit

Members of the CIO Newspaper Guild at the New York Times rejected management's contract proposal and voted to authorize local officers to call a strike. Among the unit's demands are a Guild shop and higher wages.

$1 Million For Monopoly Probe Sought

CONGRESS will be asked next year for a $1 million appropriation to permit the Senate Anti-Monopoly subcommittee to "undertake a relentless job of inquiry, evaluation and recommendation," it was announced last week.

Word that an over-all study of monopolistic practices and their effects is in sight came from Sen. Langer (R. N.D.), subcommittee chairman, and Sen. Kefauver (D. Tenn.), who have been conducting hearings into Pres. Eisenhower's Dixon-Yates power contract give-away.

In a joint statement, they said the evidence they have collected raises "grave doubt" as to the effectiveness of the Holding Company Act, which limits centralized control of power firms. The investigation, they added, is "long overdue."

SEN. LEHMAN (D. N.Y.) said an investigation will be started soon to determine if a private power company might obtain a monopoly on the St. Lawrence River project, a $600 million development far richer than the Dixon-Yates deal.

Lehman said he has reason to believe that an up-state firm will be given a contract which would "prevent consumers of New York State from sharing equitably in the benefits."

OATH OF OFFICE as Far East Area Labor Adviser of Foreign Operations Administration was taken by Carl Winn (second from right), formerly secretary-treasurer of the CIO Woodworkers, from R. E. Peterson (right), FOA personnel director. Watching (left to right) are Everett M. Kassalow, deputy director of FOA Office of Labor Affairs, and CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe.

Winn Named To FOA Post; Botkin Advanced By IWA

CARL WINN, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Woodworkers since 1947, has resigned to become Asian regional labor adviser for the Foreign Operations Administration.

BOTKIN

IWA-CIO Pres. A. F. Hartung announced the naming of William Botkin, the union's assistant director of organization since 1952, as Winn's successor. The appointment is subject to confirmation by the international executive board.

Winn has already been sworn into his FOA post, and is temporarily on duty at FOA headquarters in Washington before going to Japan. An IWA-CIO official since the union was founded 18 years ago, he formerly was secretary of Boommen's Dist. 11 and was an international vice president when he joined the Navy during World War II.

Botkin was a charter member of IWA Local 3-2 in Aberdeen, Wash. This is the second time he has followed Winn into office. He succeeded the latter as international vice president in 1942, and was reelected in his own right in 1945 and 1947.

He was in private business in Portland, Ore., from 1949 until he was called back to the union's service in 1952. Like Winn, he lives in Portland.

Bigot Bowles To Face Jury

Bryant W. Bowles, president of the self-styled National Association for the Advancement of White People, will face a Washington, D. C., jury Jan. 5 on charges he assaulted Roscoe V. Cooper, a Negro mailman.

Wage Boosts To 8c Won In UPA Pacts

WAGE increases ranging from 4c to 8c an hour and other benefits were won recently by the CIO Paperworkers in negotiations with several companies.

Some 1500 UPA-CIO members in five states obtained a 7c across-the-board raise in the first multiple contract with the giant Container Corp. of America.

Other benefits are time and a half for Saturday, double time for Sunday and triple time for holidays, seven paid holidays, a week's vacation after a year, two weeks after three years and three weeks after 15 years.

Increases of from 3c to 8c an hour and fringe benefits were obtained at Moser Bag and Paper Co., Cleveland.

A 7c PACKAGE, including a 5c hourly wage increase, was negotiated at the Eddy Paper Co., Detroit. The pay hikes and increased insurance benefits are retroactive to July and seven paid holidays also were gained.

Despite tough management resistance, 5c an hour increases were won at Milprint, Inc., Milwaukee, and at National Carbon Coated Paper Co., Sturgis, Mich.

Campbell Box and Tag Co., South Bend, Ind., also granted a nickel an hour general wage boost.

JOINT MEETING—Adlai Stevenson, leader of the Democratic Party, is greeted by leaders of two state CIO councils. From left: Executive Vice Pres. Joel Jacobson, and Pres. Paul Krebs of New Jersey CIO Council; Dir. Michael Mann of CIO Reg. II; Stevenson, Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky, CIO Clothing Workers; and Pres. Louis Hollander, New York CIO Council. Session was held shortly before the election.

CHATTING with Pres. Gaston Tessier (center) of Intl. Federation of Christian Trade Unions at CIO luncheon in his honor in Washington are Robert Oliver (left), aide to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, and Msgr. George Higgins (right), assistant director, Social Action Dept., National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Respect For Morality Urged By Christian Union Leader

RESPECT for moral values is more necessary than ever in today's world, Gaston Tessier, president of the Intl. Federation of Christian Trade Unions, told a group of CIO officials and staff members at a luncheon in his honor in Washington.

Tessier, a veteran European trade unionist, is a former president of the French Confederation of Christian Trade Unions, and brought greetings to CIO members from the organization he heads.

A member of the national committee of the resistance movement during World War II, he has been a member of the French Council of State since 1949 and is in this country as a member of France's United Nations delegation.

He told the CIO group that the Christian labor movement represents several million workers throughout the world, including many in Africa and the Far East. It developed in Continental Europe, he said, because national governments there were not like those in English-speaking nations, "which admit the existence of Christian ethics . . . and are not atheist states."

"Our labor movement is a true labor movement, and is even admitted to be such by our enemies," he said. "We are ready to work with other labor movements which are willing to act in good faith."

He stressed the importance of human dignity and the natural rights of all men, including workers, and declared that communism, and often capitalism, violate both.

Labor's Ties With Religion Told In New CIO Booklet

"We of labor seek a union in spirit with all men of good will."

That's what CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther says in the new pamphlet "Religion Speaks to Labor," issued by the CIO Community Relations Dept.

"There are many races and creeds and colors, many conditions of life, many and changing problems, but there is a basic truth to which all men can aspire — justice under God—and in seeking that truth we become as one," Reuther said.

"Churches of all faiths, because of their concern for the welfare of working people, recognized the right to organize and bargain collectively. Almost every denomination has stated this right through its official governing bodies.

"We trust you will think about these principles. We trust you will gain a deeper understanding of the moral principles of the trade union movement."

The booklet contains statements by the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths supporting the right of workers to organize and bargain. The National Council of Churches of Christ, encyclicals by Pope Leo XIII on The Condition of Labor and by Pius XI on Reconstructing the Social Order, and the Central Conference of American Rabbis are quoted.

Also included are quotations by governing bodies of the following churches: Methodist, Baptist, Lutheran, Presbyterian, the Disciples of Christ, Protestant Episcopal, Evangelical United Brethren, Evangelical and Reformed, Church of the Brethren, and Congregational Christian.

Common goals of religion and labor are stressed in statements by a number of CIO leaders, including Pres. David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers; Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky, Clothing Workers; Pres. O. A. Knight, Oil Workers; Pres. Emil Rieve, Textile Workers; Pres. James B. Carey, Electrical Workers, who is also CIO secretary-treasurer; Pres. Joseph A. Beirne, Communications Workers; Pres. Elwood D. Swisher, Chemical Workers, and CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe.

The pamphlet—No. 253—may be ordered from the CIO Community Relations Dept., 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C., at 15c a copy, 100 for $5, and 1000 for $40.

Murray Memorial Mass To Be Held

A memorial requiem mass for the repose of the soul of the late CIO Pres. Philip Murray will be said Nov. 9, the second anniversary of his death, in St. Matthew's Cathedral, Washington, at the request of the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation.

The celebrant will be the Very Rev. Msgr. George G. Higgins, assistant director of the Social Action Dept. of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Labor's World—

United Fruit Drives To Regain Guatemala Peasants' Land

THE UNITED Fruit Co. is trying to turn back the clock in Guatemala to the old atmosphere under which corrupt and oppressive dictatorships were possible.

It has asked the new government headed by Col. Carlos Castillo Armas to review the expropriation of its vast land holdings, chase off the peasants to whom they were distributed, and restore its title to the acreage.

The land was expropriated under a 1944 law enforced during the Communist-dominated regime of former Pres. Arbenz. The old law has been supplanted by the new government with a temporary act which allows the owners of expropriated lands to petition for a review—with the hope of recovering them.

The principal United Fruit areas are 234,000 acres in the province of Escuintla which has been divided among landless natives who began working it last year, and 180,000 acres in the province of Izabal which was expropriated but not distributed because of the change in regimes.

THE ARBENZ government accepted United Fruit's own valuation of the two plots, the identical basis on which it collected taxes for decades—$600,000 in the case of the Escuintla land, which the firm now evaluates at $7 million; and $650,000 for the Izabal acreage

The company sets the total value of its expropriated land at $16 million, a figure the U. S. government is backing in spite of the fact that United Fruit paid taxes on a fraction of that valuation for generations.

The company has claimed it needs the land as a reserve for growing bananas, since other areas are infested by Panama disease. It goes far beyond normal reserve requirements, in the view of disinterested observers, and has lain idle for generations while landless peasants were forced into a sort of economic serfdom.

Italy

The U. S. government cancelled offshore procurement contracts with two Italian firms whose workers reversed an anti-Communist trend and recently voted for a majority of factory council candidates backed by the Red-controlled General Confederation of Trade Unions. The cancellation came after Guiseppe Di Vittorio, general secretary of the union, had ridiculed the possibility of such a move.

Germany

Delegates to the recent convention of the German Trade Union Federation (DGB) in Frankfurt directed the officers to draw up a program for gaining the 40-hour week, a larger share of the national income for workers, extension of workers participation in the national economy, and full employment.

G.N.L.

O'Dwyer Hailed By New York Labor As 'A Real Friend'

LIFETIME honorary memberships in CIO and AFL unions were presented to ex-Mayor William O'Dwyer at a luncheon staged by the labor groups in his honor last week in New York City.

The onetime general and ambassador to Mexico was hailed by Pres. Michael J. Quill of the CIO Transport Workers and Sec. Morris Iushewitz of the New York City CIO Council.

HORSE-AND-BUGGY ERA—Lack of an invitation didn't stop Pres. Michael J. Quill of CIO Transport Workers (center foreground) from going in tally-ho to 50th anniversary celebration of New York City's subways. Seated behind him and wearing a top hat is Pres. Matthew Guinan of TWU-CIO's biggest Local 100.

GOP Overtone Cited In Employment Census

SERIOUS questions concerning a possible political tinge to figures on employment and unemployment have been raised by statisticians.

Their concern that the GOP affiliation of most Census Bureau interviewers may have colored the rosy estimates released just before the elections seems to be well founded.

Labor economists in the recent past have doubted whether the figures were always a true reflection of the unemployment situation.

A THREE-MAN panel was named by Commerce Sec. Weeks to study the matter and, although it reported Aug. 16, their analysis was kept under wraps because it found "there are serious weaknesses in the labor force survey."

The panel includes Dr. Frederick F. Stephen, professor of social statistics at Princeton University; Lester R. Frankel, vice president of Alfred Politz Research, Inc., and Lazare Teper, research director of the AFL Ladies Garment Workers. All are well known statisticians.

They found 66% of the interviewers making the monthly surveys were Republicans appointed since early in 1953 with the approval of local GOP leaders. They found that the interviewers exercised their own judgment in evaluating the answers of some of those with whom they talked.

They found that budget cuts made by the Republican-controlled 83rd Congress made it hard to do a proper job.

DESPITE THE REPORT of the panel, Labor Sec. Mitchell contended the interviewers and experts who work on the monthly reports were those who served under the previous Administration.

The fear that politics may have biased statistics was freely expressed at a meeting of the New York area chapter of the American Statistical Association.

They questioned whether an interviewer hired through the recommendation of a local political organization would or would not be biased. The panel report suggested that some bias was inevitable when information was gathered by a partisan group of interviewers.

Another point made by the group was the number of persons who should be included in the labor market. Why, for example, it was asked, did several hundred thousand students and housewives, who normally enter the labor market during the summer, suddenly fade away without showing up in the current unemployment figures?

This became an issue in the October figures when it was pointed out that while unemployment had dropped as students went back to college, employment had dropped, too.

New Claims Climb For Jobless Pay

Just before election day, the Labor Dept. reported that new claims for state unemployment compensation benefits are increasing.

In the week ending Oct. 16, new claims totalled 272,000. That was a climb of 18,800 for the week. Total benefit claims climbed to 1,480,000. That was a gain of 21,900, after a decline the previous week.

Economic Report—

U. S. Industry Still Lags Behind '53; No Major Rise Is In Sight

With this issue, The CIO News presents a digest of the first issue of "Economic Newsletter," a new publication of the CIO Dept. of Research and Education giving key highlights of economic developments:

1. Industrial Production: September's index dropped to 125 from last September's 133, a decline of 7%. This index was off 9.5% from the peak in July 1953.

Non-durable goods (textiles, shoes, etc.) production declined 5.5% from last year's peak, with a slight rise in August and September. Durable goods (autos, steel, etc.) production fell 14% from last year's peak and currently is still lower than in early 1954.

2. Employment: September's total employment was 62.1 million. This was 200,000 lower than the number at the same time last year, and 1.1 million lower than the August 1953 peak, as shown by the Census Bureau.

Manufacturing employment dropped to 16 million this September from 17.5 million last September. On a seasonally adjusted basis, employment of production and related workers declined steadily, month by month, from May 1953 until September 1954. In spite of a slight seasonal upturn this September, employment is still 14% below May 1953.

3. Unemployment: September's unemployment, according to the Census Bureau, was 3.1 million or 4.8% of the total labor force. This is about 2.5 times greater than a year ago when the figures were 1.2 million or 2% of the total labor force unemployed.

4. Consumers Price Index: This barometer, misnamed the "cost-of-living" index, stayed at or near its all-time peak. The August index was 115.0. All-time peak in October 1953 was 115.4. The 1954 highs were January and July. The drop from July to August this year resulted largely from a .6% drop in food prices, the first since March 1954. Food prices, however, were still only .2% lower than the 1953 peak.

5. Personal Income: Personal income, at an annual rate, dropped in August to $258.4 billion, down $2 billion from a year ago.

Wage and salary payments were down by $3.5 billion, and farm income was off $500 million.

Incomes from dividends and personal interest, however, increased, and professional, business and rental income remained stationary. Personal income would have declined even more had there not been unemployment compensation and federal old age benefits to cushion the decline.

6. Farm Income and Parity: Net income of farm operators was $12.2 billion for the first eight months of 1954, against $12.6 billion for the same months in 1953. From the peak of $16.7 billion in 1948, farm income dropped to $12.7 in 1949, rose to $16 billion in 1951, declined again to $14.2 billion in 1952, and since has continued to decline. Prices farmers pay have increased 1% in the past year, while prices they receive have decreased 4.5%.

7. Unemployment Compensation: New claims for the week ending Oct. 9 were 279,456, an increase of 32,000 over the preceding week and 64,000 over the same week in 1953. Continued claims numbered 1,514,000, a drop of 22,000 from the preceding week, but a rise of over 753,000 from the same week in 1953.

8. Labor Surplus Areas: In September, 145 labor market areas were classified as having "substantial labor surplus" (more than 6% of the labor force unemployed). Last September, only 42 areas were so classified. Forty-eight of the 145 areas are classified as having "very substantial labor surplus" (more than 12% of the labor force unemployed).

9. Retail Sales: For the first eight months of this year, retail sales were 2% below last year's sales. In only two months did the sales equal those of the same months last year.

10. Steel Production: For the week starting Oct. 18, estimates rated steel production at 73.6% of capacity. In spite of the slow rise in production recently, this was a drop of 387,000 tons from production at the same time in 1953.

Farm Buying Power Dips To 13-Year Low; Dairy Profits Up

THE HIGHER prices Mrs. U. S. Housewife pays at the corner grocery or the supermarket don't mean that the American farmer is now towing his plow with a Cadillac.

For example, farm prices in mid-October averaged about 2.8% below the same time last year. Farm costs averaged about 1% above a year ago. The parity ratio, which indicates the farmer's buying power, has dropped to a 13-year low of 87%.

Indeed, the farmers are being squeezed as much by the Eisenhower Administration as the workers and homemakers. While their income is slumping, the profits of the processors are climbing like a homesick angel.

Typical is the case of National Dairy (the Kraft Corp.) whose profits have jumped a wonderful 36% since 1952. Profits that year were $27.8 million. Next year they were up 11% to $30.8 million. This year, profits of $38 million have been rung up.

At the other end of the string, the prices received by the farmer for his milk to be turned into cheese, butter and other products has sunk 26.1% since 1952. That year he got $4.10 a hundredweight for his milk. It slid to $3.55—a 14% drop—in 1953 and is down to $3.03 a hundredweight at present.

The National Farmers Union's Newsletter reported that two years ago the Borden Co. stockholder could buy 10 shares on the market at $50 each, totaling $500. The 11 shares (including a bonus share) into which this investment has grown could be sold this week for $757—an increase of 47.5%.

Two years ago, the Newsletter continued, a dairy farmer could buy two milk cows for $500. Two years later, two average milk cows were worth only $292—the farmer's $500 investment has declined in value 42%.

★

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

NOT ONLY is the storm-window business ridden with rackets, as this department previously reported, but if you aren't careful, you also can seriously overpay in buying aluminum storm doors.

More Tips On Storm Windows

As with storm windows, many sellers never advertise a definite price, as you can see from their ads. The dealers leave it up to the salesmen to get what prices they can. But when dealers do advertise a definite price, as on television and in newspapers, you have to be equally on guard.

In many cases, advertised low prices for doors and windows have proved to be "bait"; the products are obviously poor quality and the salesman tries to trade you up to a much costlier door or window.

The big gimmick in aluminum doors is the fancy grills. The salesman quotes you a high price for the door—often $75—and tells you he will "throw in" a grill. This is a phony bargain since he has already added on a large charge for the often over-elaborate grill.

Usually good-quality storm doors cost the dealer $27 up. Even after allowing for the dealer's profit and costs of selling and installation, you should not have to pay more than $50-$55 for the average good-quality aluminum storm door.

Here is how to tell if you are getting a good-quality door for your money: It should be the heavy extruded aluminum. Preferably it should be made with corner blocks—special inserts inside the corners to hold the door rigid and prevent sagging. You can tell if the door has such corner blocks by two screws countersunk in the corners to hold the inside block.

The door should have a vinyl plastic sill sweep at the bottom to make it weather-tight. In fact, some careful makers put on two sill sweeps for extra protection. Too, the door should be completely weather-stripped. Installation should include a silent air door check and chain stop. Some dealers give you a knob key lock, others only a less-expensive handle lock, but this should not be a decisive factor in shopping for doors.

What is more important is to make sure you get the doors or windows you saw in the showroom or that the salesman showed you, and that if you are financing the purchase through an FHA loans, that you do not sign the completion certificate until the job is completely installed to your satisfaction.

The seller cannot get paid by the bank until you do sign the completion certificate. But once you do sign, you have no recourse to the dealer—you simply owe the money to the bank. Sometimes these completion certificates have been misrepresented to buyers or their wives as "delivery receipts."

ALSO BE ON GUARD when a dealer or salesman offers "free" gifts or special combinations, such as throwing in storm doors "free" if you buy storm windows. The likelihood is that the dealer has simply added on the price of the doors, or other "gift," to the price of the windows.

Instead of being "sold" doors and windows, go out to the dealers' showrooms and shop them yourself, trying out the various makes for convenience and sturdiness, comparing prices including cost of installation, and writing down the specifications so you can be sure the dealer delivers what you bought. Too, check with the local Better Business Bureau in your town as to the reputation of the dealer.

Jobs For Older Workers Called 'Everybody's Problem'

"EVERYONE'S problem" is the problem of employment of older people, according to Undersec. of Labor Larson.

"The problem is much broader than the question of the special needs of people over some arbitrary age such as 65," he told the third conference on the "Problems of Making a Living While Growing Old," in Philadelphia.

"It extends to any age at which discrimination may become an impediment in getting or holding a job, whether the age be 65, 55, or 45."

Larson said the real objective "is to permit workers to obtain and hold suitable employment without discrimination because of age as long as they want to work and are able to do the job."

"A man should not be forced to retire by discriminatory practices," he said, "if he prefers to work; and he should not be forced to work by lack of means if he should prefer to retire.

THE STATES were invited by Undersec. of Labor Larson to help write a model state workmen's compensation act.

The invitation was extended at the sixth annual conference of the Southern Association of Workmen's Compensation Administrators at Orlando, Fla.

Larson said the Labor Dept. has a "rough first draft" of a model act, which it intends "to send to you and other state administrators to get all possible additions, changes and criticism."

"The great advantage of not having had uniformity among the various acts has been the freedom of every state to experiment and develop a wealth of statutory solutions to the problems that its particular experience has thrown in its path," he said.

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

THE WRITER had the pleasure of being in his home State of Kentucky to address the convention of the Kentucky State CIO Council in Ashland, Ky.

I remember well that not too many years ago this Council was flat on its back, broke and without leadership, struggling for existence. Al Whitehouse of the CIO Steelworkers stepped in as president and under his guidance and leadership a strong Council has been built.

I take this opportunity to congratulate Whitehouse and his associate officers on the splendid job they have done in the past year. The Council through their leadership has done a fine job on legislative work on a State level, and, of course, contributed a great deal to the election of Alben Barkley to the Senate. We are all very happy about Barkley's victory.

In addressing the delegates in attendance at the convention I told them that the only way to settle their day to day problems in the mills and plants across the State was to continue to organize the unorganized workers, to build a strong labor organization. Our problems are such that we cannot depend upon government boards or agencies to protect our wages, working conditions and security.

I WAS SHOCKED TO READ in the newspapers that approximately 38% of all the working people in my home county at Pikeville, Ky., are unemployed. A majority of the workers in the county are coal miners and the coal industry has been hit very hard by unemployment.

This problem, however, can be solved if the President and his Administration would take an honest, deep interest in the uemployment situation all across the country.

We of CIO encourage any plan that will help alleviate the hardship of the unemployed workers of the country. We must do all that we can to keep strong hands busily at work.

CIO Rep. Miles Sweeney reports that the CIO Glass Workers won a representation election at the Streator Mfg. Co., Streator, Ill., by a vote of 115 to 56 against.

Sec. Treas. Al Hartnett of the CIO Electrical Workers reports that recognition was won at the Hugh E. Eby Co., Philadelphia, Pa., where 300 employees were involved. The UE contract expired Oct. 15, 1954 and the company recognized IUE-CIO the next day, after employees had voted unanimously to disaffiliate from UE and join IUE-CIO.

CIO REP. DAVID STERNBACK reports the following two CIO Packinghouse Workers election victories: Tropical Distillery, Camuy, P. R., UPWA-CIO 24, Free Federation (Ind.) 2; P. R. Distillery Co., Arecibo, P. R., UPWA-CIO 38, Free Federation (Ind.) 2. UPWA Reps. Gumersindo Ramos and Juan Claudio are to be congratulated for these victories.

CIO Reg. Dir. Michael Mann reports that the CIO Steelworkers won an election victory at the Metal Parts Machining Corp., Watervliet, N. Y. Mann also reports an IUE victory at the Newark Rivet Works, Newark, N. J., by a vote of 145 to 2.

IUE-CIO Optical Local Wins Wage, Other Gains

NUMEROUS contract gains have been scored recently by Optical Workers Local 408 of the CIO Electrical Workers in New York City, according to Business Mgr. Sebastian J. Rebadlo.

An arbitrator's award gave the union a 4c hourly wage increase at Crown Lens and Reflecto Letters, two firms operated by one owner, retroactive to July 1. Also provided was a 3.5% contribution to the welfare and insurance fund, boosting life insurance to $1250 and hiking other payments and services.

A 7.5c an hour increase was won for workers at Tru-Vue Optical Co. Other contract conditions remain unchanged.

A similar pattern was negotiated with Vogue Optical Co., plus super-seniority for the shop steward. Manson Optics Corp., Brooklyn, gave a 7.5c hourly increase under a wage reopener.

AN INCREASE of 12.5c an hour was won from Optical Zyl Mfg. Co. under terms of the wage reopening clause.

At Biltwell Optical Co., Inc., the union won a 5c increase for employes earning more than $1.25 an hour. Workers receiving less got a 5c boost in July.

A new retail establishment, Green Shield Optical Plan, Hempstead, L. I., agreed to a contract providing for the union shop, insurance and hospitalization coverage, $85 weekly for dispensers and shopmen; $100 minimum for optometrists, and a liberal vacation plan.

Wood Pacts Are Argued

A SEVEN-MAN panel has begun hearings on the issues in an 84-day strike of the CIO Woodworkers and AFL Lumber Workers in Oregon and Washington.

The panel was set up by the Northwest governors as the strike involving 100,000 workers neared an end. The walkout began June 21 to back demands for a 12.5c wage increase.

The employer group gave its presentation last week. Rebuttal arguments will be heard Nov. 22-23. The panel then has until the end of the year to consider the evidence and make its recommendations.

Chester D. Dusten is the panel member from IWA-CIO. Earl Hartley serves for the AFL union.

Island Wage Boosts Urged By Carey

HIGHER minimum wages in Puerto Rico's electronics industry were urged last week by Pres. James B. Carey of CIO Electrical Workers on his return from the island.

Carey, who is also CIO secretary-treasurer, served as one of the three labor members of a Wage-Hour Div. industry committee.

With employer members dissenting on a 6 to 3 vote, the committee recommended increases in minimum wages in three categories, as follows:

Lenses and thermometers, from the present 45c to 60c hourly; household appliances, from 45c to 65c, and general division, from 30c, 45c and 58c to 70c.

Carey reluctantly seconded these increases — made on the motion of public members — after his proposal of 75c and compromise figures were rejected.

David Lasser, IUE-CIO research director, presented the case for labor. Lasser remained in Puerto Rico to take Carey's place on light machinery and plastic industries committees for other wage hearings.

CAREY SAID that Wage-Hour Administrator William R. McComb should be able to issue an order on the electronics industry committee's recommendations in about three months after a hearing is held in Washington.

He served notice that if the industry goes to court to block McComb's order, the IUE-CIO is ready to take legal action to institute a 75c an hour minimum.

He said that about 21,000 workers are employed in the three industries, where a large number of the companies are subsidiaries of American firms.

Carey pointed out "the profits are so large in the electronics industry that they equalled nearly 300% of the wages paid."

"In comparison with this, the United States industries had profits after taxes equal to from 16% to 20% of wages," he said.

"The profits after taxes for the 12 companies reached a fantastic figure of $2500 per worker, equal to more than $1.30 an hour."

Carey said that he met with the leaders of CIO, AFL and independent unions on the island. He pointed out that the CIO Packinghouse Workers have organized more than 100,000 workers, including some 60,000 employed in the sugar cane fields and mills.

He said he would meet with UPWA-CIO leaders to seek transfer to IUE-CIO of locals in industries over which the electrical union has jurisdiction.

FIFTH anniversary of chartering of CIO Electrical Workers was marked by Pres. James B. Carey (right) and Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett at union headquarters.

Steel Union's Assets Top $17 Million

NET WORTH of the CIO Steelworkers is in excess of $17 million, the semi-annual audit showed last week.

Covering the first six months of 1954, the audit indicated an increase of more than $1.2 million over the last half of 1953. The membership was given as almost 1.2 million in 2700 local unions.

Accompanying the auditors' report is a letter signed by USA-CIO Pres. David J. McDonald, Sec.-Treas. I. W. Abel and Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes outlining the important events during the audit period.

Chief among these is the winning of wage, pension and insurance improvements in "Big Steel" negotiations for a total 12c package.

The union has shown a net gain in assets of over $4.3 million since June 1953.

Place Your Order Now!

Big Annual Convention Issue Of The CIO NEWS

The big annual Convention Issue of The CIO News will be published on Dec. 13, immediately after the 16th CIO Constitutional Convention in Los Angeles.

What the CIO convention does will be big news for all CIO local unions and councils and all CIO members. The CIO News Convention Issue will tell the full story—in news reports, pictures, features and texts. Send in your order now to insure prompt delivery of the Convention Issue.

Special Rates

• BUNDLE ORDERS: Rates for bundle orders are 2c per copy for any quantity up to 1000; 1¾c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000; and 1½c per copy for quantities of more than 2000. Special rates for large orders.

In sending lists of addresses for bundle orders, please indicate the quantity to be sent to each address. To facilitate bookkeeping, please send checks with smaller quantity orders.

• INDIVIDUALLY MAILED ORDERS: Rates for individually mailed copies are 2¼c per copy for quantities up to 1000; 2c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000; and 1¾c per copy for quantities of more than 2000. Special rates for very large orders upon application.

If individual mailing is desired, this may be arranged by sending us mailing strips not more than 2½ inches wide.

Regular Rates

Apart from the special rates for the Convention issue, unions which wish to take this opportunity to begin subscribing regularly to The CIO News may begin their bundle order or group subscription order with the Dec. 13 issue at the regular rates, which will be provided on request.

Just Clip and Mail!

THE CIO NEWS
718 Jackson Place, N.W.
Washington 6, D. C.

We desire to place an order for the special 1954 Convention Issue of The CIO News.

Please ship .....in bundle lots to the enclosed address.

Please have the 1954 Convention Issue individually mailed to membership lists for which we will furnish mailing strips.

The total number of names to which we desire the paper sent is..... . ☐ Check Inclosed ☐ Bill Us Later

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... Zone ..... State .....

Organization .....

Welfare Practices Hearing Planned By CIO Group In N. Y.

OPEN hearings on the administration of health, welfare and retirement plans will be held by the CIO Committee on Ethical Practices in the Hotel Commodore, New York City, on Nov. 22 and 23.

Experts in union welfare funds and insurance problems from insurance firms, state and federal government agencies, universities, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and organized labor, as well as independent experts, have been invited to present their views, according to Jacob S. Potofsky, committee chairman and president of the CIO Clothing Workers.

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, who also heads the Auto Workers, and Pres. David J. McDonald of the CIO Steelworkers will appear the morning of Nov. 23. Rank and file beneficiaries of the programs will tell their stories that afternoon.

The hearings are the first of their kind ever to be conducted by organized labor in this country, Potofsky said. They are designed to produce a full and frank discussion of every phase of welfare fund administrative practices.

Serving with Potofsky on the committee are Pres. Joseph N. Curran of the Maritime Union; Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes of the Steelworkers, and Arthur J. Goldberg, CIO general counsel, who serves as director.

The committee was created by the CIO Executive Board at a meeting early in October, following a number of revelations of apparent malpractices in the administration of health, welfare and retirement funds.

At that time, the board noted that the "vast majority" of union welfare funds "are administered as they should be, as a sacred trust on behalf of the beneficiaries."

"We have been determined . . . that the administration of welfare funds shall meet the highest ethical standards for the handling of fiduciary funds," it added.

The board directed the committee to investigate charges involving such funds within the CIO, and to report back recommendations for prompt remedial action; and to formulate recommendations for standards for such funds, including legislation if necessary to make sure they are honestly administered.

In preparation for the hearings, the committee circulated a nine-page questionnaire to CIO international unions. It sought detailed information on the number of union health, welfare and retirement programs, the form of administration, means of auditing, international union authority to approve plans and to correct abuses, how insurance is placed, and the costs of administration.

Just Wait— Caddie May Arrive In '55

JUST BE PATIENT, Cadillac output will be increased. If you're one of the 90,000 with an unfilled order for a Caddie, take cheer from the word from Detroit — production will be jumped to 150,000 next year.

Not all of them are coming to Washington for use by Eisenhower Administration officials, either. The Wall Street Journal confides that Texas, California and lower Florida "are important markets to Cadillac."

This year's production was estimated at a record 123,600. No price tag has been put on the 1955 models yet but prices on other General Motors products have been upped.

One reason for the higher output of Cadillacs is the loss of business because prospects couldn't get immediate delivery.

EVERY VOTE COUNTS—Clarence E. Brickley, striking member of CIO Communications Workers Local 1162, left his hospital bed to vote in NLRB election which CWA won 787 to 264 for rump union group. Local has picketed Tonawanda, N. Y., Western Electric plant since June 17.

Schenectady City Council Backs IUE Plea On Jobs

THE REPUBLICAN-controlled Schenectady, N. Y., City Council has called on the Eisenhower Administration to halt rising unemployment.

The Council acted at the request of CIO Electrical Workers, which represents workers at the giant General Electric "mother" plant, and the CIO Steelworkers' local at American Locomotive.

The Council adopted a resolution urging the President and the government "to take positive steps at the earliest possible moment to arrest the transfer of industries from existing locations to new locations."

It also pointed out that such transfers are contrary to Defense Manpower Policy No. 4 which called for the full use of existing plants.

THE RESOLUTION specifically called for a nationwide minimum wage of at least $1.50 an hour, changing federal laws and regulations which deny accelerated tax amortization to companies failing to disperse plants, and withholding government contracts to firms transferring their facilities.

Because of transfers of operations, employment at the GE plant has fallen from 21,000 to 17,000. And it will decline some 3000 more if plans to move two large departments are put into effect.

The Council also passed another resolution directed against the diversion of M-48 tank contracts from the locomotive plant.

The resolution requested "the President to revise the current policy of concentrating the production of defense items, such as tanks, in the hands of a single larger producer," an obvious reference to General Motors.

Reuther To Be Honored At City Of Hope Dinner

A TESTIMONIAL dinner for CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther will be held Dec. 9 at the Statler Hotel, Los Angeles, during the CIO convention, with the proceeds going to the City of Hope National Medical Center.

Pres. Joseph A. Beirne of the CIO Communications Worker, who is chairman of the CIO Community Services Committee, will be the dinner chairman. The City of Hope, near Los Angeles, is a free, nonsectarian national medical center where union members have been admitted since its inception in 1913.

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

'Best Job' By CIO-PAC Pays Off In California

CALIFORNIA strengthened its liberal delegations in Congress and the Legislature in last week's elections in spite of a one-party press and a "barrelful" of money thrown against CIO-endorsed Democratic candidates.

"There is no question in my mind that the best job ever done by CIO unions in California was done this year," commented Sec.-Treas. John A. Despol of the CIO-California Industrial Union Council.

"A substantial improvement in both quality and quantity of political action work was noted. Some of our CIO-endorsed Assembly candidates beat AFL-endorsed candidates.

"I estimate Sen. Kuchel (Republican candidate for reelection) spent half a million dollars in the last two weeks of the campaign. More money was spent on the reelection campaign of Gov. Knight (R.) than on any gubernatorial race in the history of California."

Twelve of the 28 congressional candidates endorsed by the CIO Political Action Committee—all Democrats—won their contests, giving the liberal forces one more in the congressional delegation.

Forty out of 68 endorsed candidates for the State Assembly won their races, putting liberals in contention for the speakerships. For the Senate, eight of the 12 PAC-endorsed candidates won.

NINE-PAC-endorsed congressional candidates were reelected. They were Reps. Engle, 2d Dist.; Moss, 3d Dist.; Shelley, 5th Dist.; Miller, 8th Dist.; Hagan, 14th Dist.; King, 17th Dist.; Holifield, 19th Dist.; Doyle, 23d Dist., and Sheppard, 27th Dist.

In the 12th Dist., Democrat B. F. Sisk defeated the GOP incumbent, Rep. Hunter. In the 13th Dist., where Republican Rep. Bramblett declined to run again following his conviction on a payroll padding charge, Timothy L. O'Reilly, PAC-endorsed Democrat, routed the Republicans' Charles M. Teague.

James Roosevelt, Democratic son of the late Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt, won in the 26th Dist. to replace Rep. Yorty, who was defeated in his attempt to replace Kuchel in the upper house.

One PAC-endorsed incumbent was defeated—Rep. Condon, liberal labor lawyer who had been denied clearance to attend atomic bomb tests. His 6th Dist. seat was filled by John F. Baldwin, Jr. (R.).

Walter Urges New Inquiry Unit

Rep. Walter (D. Pa.), who is in line to become chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee in the next Congress, last week proposed that the committee be abolished and its functions be transferred to the Judiciary Committee.

LABOR MEETS THE WINNER — Averell Harriman (center), successful Democratic candidate for New York Governor, meets with Pres. Louis Hollander of New York State CIO Council (left) and Vice Pres. Jack Rubenstein of CIO Textile Workers.

GM Doubles The Take For Stockholders

GENERAL Motors, which has been selling less and earning more, is taking better care of its stockholders than of its employes—as might be expected.

The country's largest manufacturer boosted profits 29% in the first nine months of the year while "suffering" a 9% drop in business. Last week it increased its quarterly dividend to shareholders by 100%—from the $1 it had been paying every three months since the start of 1951 to $2.

GM stockholders, including the duPont Co., thus collect $5 per share in 1954, second only to the $6 paid in 1950. Their total kitty for the year is $435 million. Meantime, thousands of GM employes are still laid off.

THE GOODYEAR Tire & Rubber Co., disregarding drops in both sales and profits in the first nine months, increased its dividend from 75c to $1 a share and voted a two-for-one stock split. It had declared a 3% stock dividend in December 1953.

And Standard Oil of New Jersey, which sold more and earned more in the first three quarters of 1954, voted to pay out more, too. It declared a year-end dividend of $1.25 a share.

There Are No Neutrals Left (See Page 6)

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., November 15, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 46

Boss' Gang Shoots Picket

—See Page 2

Law Of Jungle Comes Back— Shotgun, rifle and pistol fire from company owners and thugs on J. W. Banta Towing Co. boat at Cairo, Ill., dock (right) wounded Gordon Knapp (left), NMU organizer. CIO and AFL are working together to organize crews of river boats. Story on Page 2.

Looking At Congress— CIO's legislative program was shaped in the light of recent election gains at a legislative conference in Atlantic City last week. At left, CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Cronin tells R. J. Thomas, aide to Executive Vice Pres. John Riffe, about gains made in Illinois congressional races. At right, Robert Oliver, director of the CIO Legislative Dept., presides at discussion of outlook for enactment of better and fairer laws in Democratic 84th Congress. Hyman Bookbinder of the department (left) explains a chart. Story on Page 3.

PHILIP MURRAY Memorial Foundation presents $100,000 grant to Roosevelt University. (Left photo) Roosevelt Pres. Edward J. Sparling accepts check from CIO Pres. Walter Reuther. Foundation Dir. Arthur Goldberg watches. (Center) Trustee Frances Perkins speaks while Cyrus Ching, also a trustee, grins. (Right photo) Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey presents Foundation certificate to Max Lerner, chairman of the board.

Roosevelt University Gets $100,000 From Murray Memorial Foundation

THE PHILIP MURRAY Memorial Foundation last week presented a $100,000 gift to Roosevelt University, in Chicago, to establish a Philip Murray chair in international studies.

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, a trustee of the foundation, made the presentation at a Washington luncheon. The check was accepted by Pres. Edward J. Sparling of Roosevelt.

The Philip Murray chair at Roosevelt University will be the first of its kind in the United States. It will enable the university to expand its curriculum in the field of international affairs. At a later date, the university will announce selection of a professor to fill the chair.

Reuther, in presenting the gift, recalled Murray's long association with Roosevelt. The late president of the CIO and the Steelworkers had been a trustee of Roosevelt for many years. Reuther is also a trustee of Roosevelt.

Recalling the university's achievements, Reuther noted it has "been conscious of, and alert to the activities of the free, democratic labor movement" of the U. S. and the free world.

The Foundation, he said, was "doubly blessed" at the opportunity of helping Roosevelt in Murray's name.

The gift, he said, "symbolizes both Phil Murray's interest in liberal education for the young people of America regardless of race, color, creed or economic status; and it also symbolizes Philip Murray's interest in constructive international relations in which the labor movement of the world must, and will, play a great role."

Sparling called the gift a "pioneering grant which will extend the horizons of international studies to include the welfare of all peoples everywhere.

"It will," he said, "provide a center for research on the economic, social and political institutions developed by groups of people within all nations . . .

"The Philip Murray memorial chair will strengthen and enrich the Roosevelt University policy of presenting students with the facts that broaden the basis for human understanding."

Calling the gift "especially appropriate," he expressed the hope that it would "presage the greater participation of labor in the field of higher education all over the country."

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who is also secretary-treasurer of the Foundation, presented the Foundation's certificate to Max Lerner, chairman of the board of Roosevelt University. The Foundation's director, CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg, presided.

Shot From Struck Boat Wounds NMU Picket

GORDON KNAPP, CIO Maritime Union organizer was shot and wounded at Cairo, Ill., last week as some 15 men opened fire on a group of unarmed strikers from a Mississippi River tow boat.

The pickets included crew members of the M/V Kishwaukee, owned and operated by the J. W. Banta Towing Co., Plaquemine, La. They were on duty at Peddie's Landing, where two barges carrying petroleum products had been left by the Kishwaukee after the crew went on strike.

THE BANTA family returned to the landing at daybreak three days later with two boats lashed together trailing a tow of barges. The men, including four members of the Banta family, were armed with shotguns, pistols and rifles. They ordered the pickets to release the struck barges.

When the order was refused and while the Kishwaukee and the M/V George W. Banta were still in midstream, Capt. J. W. Banta reputedly gave an order to fire.

Knapp, who narrowly escaped being shot through the heart as he turned to answer a shout from another picket, was wounded in the upper part of his left arm. A slug from a .45 automatic splintered the bone.

He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, Cairo, where he is recovering.

He swore out warrants charging four members of the Banta family and a fifth man, James Dixon, with shooting with intent to kill.

"There was a barrage of shots with Banta screaming to 'get that four-eyed S.O.B. (Knapp) in the checkered shirt,'" said Charles Barranco, Jr., CIO field representative who is coordinator of the Rivers Joint Organizing Committee.

The committee was set up last August by NMU-CIO, the CIO Marine Engineers and the AFL Masters, Mates and Pilots with headquarters in St. Louis, to organize crews on river craft.

THE BANTA company became one of the first projects when the Kishwaukee's chief engineer, J. P. O'Laughlin, asked assistance in organizing her crew. O'Laughlin had signed up a majority of the crew in the unions and subsequently was fired for union activity.

He notified the committee that the Kishwaukee was going into Cairo and that the crew was ready to strike for recognition. Committee representatives, including Knapp, met the boat to talk to the crew.

They were ordered off by Capt. Bert Banta, a relative of the owner, after a violently abusive scene during which he threatened them with a meat cleaver, a knife and a shot gun. The crew walked off with them and set up a picket line.

Murray Death Anniversary Mass Said

THE MEMORY of the late Philip Murray, president of the CIO and of the Steelworkers, was marked on the second anniversary of his death, Nov. 9, by a mass in St. Matthew's Cathedral, Washington, said by Msgr. George G. Higgins, assistant director of the Social Action Dept. of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

In a brief talk, Msgr. Higgins said that Murray typified the basic belief in God characteristic of U. S. economic life, especially in the labor movement.

Many CIO and Steelworkers' leaders and staff members attented the mass, which was requested by the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation.

Others present included AFL Pres. George Meany, Sec.-Treas. Joseph D. Keenan of the AFL Electrical Workers, Sec. of Labor Mitchell, Sen. Murray (D. Mont.), Commissioner Thomas E. Murray of the Atomic Energy Commission, former Dir. Cyrus W. Ching of the U. S. Mediation & Conciliation Service, Charles E. Murphy, formerly counsel to former Pres. Truman, and David Stowe, another former Truman White House aide.

PHILIP MURRAY BUILDING — Checks totaling $7808 towards new national headquarters of CIO Electrical Workers, named for late CIO president, are presented by three RCA locals. Holding checks are IUE-CIO Pres. James B. Carey, Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett and Local 110 Pres. Bernard Kavanagh. Sketch is of proposed building.

Heroic CIO Member Cited For Rescue

Claude D. McCoy, a member of CIO Communications Workers Local 3301 in Bowling Green, Ky., has been nominated for the Carnegie life-saving medal. A neighbor, A. C. Dodson, had fallen across a 4000-volt live wire. McCoy knocked the wire loose and administered artificial respiration until a doctor and ambulance arrived.

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

McCarthy Censure Debate Under Way

THE SENATE began its debate on censuring Sen. McCarthy last week with the Wisconsin Republican apparently doing his best to force his colleagues into a verdict of "guilty."

The traditional dignity of the upper house of Congress tottered under bitter exchanges that found McCarthy indulging in such unbridled, angry tirades against members of the committee which recommended his censure that one of them, Sen. Case (R. S.D.), warned that his new "abuse" could reinforce the recommendation.

The hearings were held in sort of a circus atmosphere. While the drama—or perhaps melodrama—was being acted out on the Senate floor, the galleries were crowded with tensely attentive spectators.

Long lines of those who could only hope for a seat threaded through corridors and at times down the stairs to the next floor.

CAPITOL police called on Washington police to reinforce them when rumors spread that extremists on both sides were looking for trouble, but the worst that developed was cheers for McCarthy as he entered the chamber.

The debate opened with Sen. Watkins (R. Utah), the chairman, giving the censure report.

It recommended clamping down on McCarthy because of his obstruction and abuse of a 1951-52 Senate subcommittee which investigated him, with special reference to finances; and because he "intemperately abused" Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker in questioning him during hearings last February.

McCarthy promptly began to question the 67-year-old, ailing Watkins (who was suffering from the after-effects of an abdominal operation) as if he were a district attorney pounding away at a recalcitrant witness, instead of one Senator querying another.

McCarthy based his attack on his charge that the committee included members who were "prejudiced" against him; and his claim that the 1951-52 Elections Subcommittee was guilty of "dishonesty" and "illegal" in what it did, and that he was justified in defying it.

WATKINS upheld his refusal, during the hearings, to permit McCarthy to introduce evidence against the earlier subcommittee, pointing out that the 1951-52 investigation was beyond the scope of the censure committee. He denied McCarthy's claim that he was not permitted even to criticize it.

"You reaffirmed all that you had said," Watkins declared. "You made it abundantly clear that you had not made any mistake, that you were 100% right and the committee was apparently 100% dishonest."

McCarthy's friends in the upper house were reported working desperately behind the scenes to grind out some sort of compromise to soften the censure.

SMILES OF VICTORY—Sen.-elect Neuberger (D. Ore.), whose victory cinched the Democratic majority in the Senate, beams as he forged into the lead in returns. His wife, Maurine, a victor in her own right, won reelection to the Oregon Legislature.

84th Congress Marks Time As 83rd Goes Into Finale

BY EUGENE KELLEY

WASHINGTON'S spotlight was focused on the center-stage maneuverings of the lame duck 83rd Congress last week, but its Democratic-controlled successor waited impatiently in the wings—and some of the stars rehearsed their lines for the January opening.

There were some last-minute shifts in the cast of the 83rd. Five new senators took their oaths, replacing others who died. Some will sit only until this session ends.

Mollifying messages to the Democrats came from the White House in the wake of the election returns. Bipartisan foreign policy talks were set up for this week and Pres. Eisenhower was described as eager for "close, cordial and constructive" relations between the executive and legislative branches.

In the victory-conscious Democratic camp there were no-nonsense statements, making it plain that cooperation would "depend a great deal upon the attitude of the Administration."

Party leaders still rankled under the campaign attacks of Vice Pres. Nixon, whose "soft on communism" smears were never disavowed by the White House.

Sen. Johnson (Tex.), Democratic leader, outlined his party's seven-point "positive" legislative program.

It features improvements in labor laws, a bipartisan foreign policy, safeguards against monopoly in the atomic energy field, an attack on economic problems, rescue of agriculture from fear of a crash, a building of the nation's defenses against Communist aggression, and a vast reclamation program.

Crystal Ball

Getting on with the business of organizing the 84th Congress, Speaker-designate Sam Rayburn (Tex.) promised the Democrats would conduct some investigations of their own. One, he said, would be a ventilation of the "Nixon-Dixon-Yates" power contract.

Rayburn said Democrats are "rather bitter" about charges of "pinks and left-wingers" in the party. He contended, "there are just as many patriotic Democrats as there are patriotic Republicans."

Election Gain 'Significant' CIOers Feel

THE UP-COMING 84th Congress, its leaders and the major issues likely to be before it, were weighed by CIO experts at a two-day legislative conference in Atlantic City last week.

Participating in the meeting were all CIO regional directors, key state industrial union council officers and legislative directors, headquarters staff experts, members of the CIO Legislative Dept. and Washington legislative representatives of CIO international unions.

The make-up of the new Congress was analyzed by PAC, state council and other CIO representatives having first hand knowledge of the newly elected candidates.

It was generally agreed that the elections brought significant gains to the liberal forces in the national legislature.

Besides laying detailed plans for CIO's major legislative objectives in 1955—which will be spelled out at the National CIO convention in Los Angeles next month—the 60 participants also recommended improvements in legislative field operations designed to mobilize grass-roots support for progressive laws.

UGCCW Wins 10c Atomic Plant Raise

THE LONG-STANDING wage dispute in the atomic energy field ended last week when 4500 CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers by a "pretty good margin" accepted a package proposal offered by the Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Corp. on the eve of a new strike.

The 3500 union members at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and 1000 at Paducah, Ky., voted to take a pay boost of 6c an hour retroactive to Apr. 15, and an additional 4c effective Jan. 15, 1955.

The proposal came from the company, which operates the country's only sources of Uranium-235 for the Atomic Energy Commission, at the climax of a 20-hour mediation session

The new agreement becomes fully effective Jan. 15. It then will carry wages ranging from $1.68 to $2.50 an hour, as well as more liberal holiday provisions.

The dispute began last Feb. 15, when negotiations started. Bargaining later broke down when the company refused to go beyond its original 6c an hour offer, and the union staged a four-day strike in July. The walkout ended when the Eisenhower Administration obtained an 80-day Taft-Hartley Act injunction. When the writ expired, the workers again rejected the offer.

Meantime, the National Labor Relations Board set Nov. 16 and 17 for a bargaining election at the newest atomic energy plant, at Portsmouth, O., on petition of the UGCCW-CIO.

The plant is operated for the AEC by the Goodyear Atomic Corp. and now has about 1000 production and maintenance workers and firefighters. It is scheduled to employ 4500 workers by 1956.

The Chemical Workers and CIO Oil Workers last week set dates for conventions at which they will act on the pending merger proposal.

The OWIU will open its postponed convention in the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland, on Feb. 25, 1955. The UGCCW has scheduled a special convention for the following day in the Municipal Auditorium. On Feb. 28, the two groups will meet together for final action on the merger.

CCL To Help UAW Strikers Raise Funds

THE CANADIAN Congress of Labor has undertaken a nationwide collection of funds for striking members of the CIO Auto Workers at Ford Motor Co. of Canada plants in Windsor and Oakville, Ont., and the Massey-Harris-Ferguson Co., Toronto.

In an appeal, Sec.-Treas. Donald MacDonald said the CCL regards the strikes as of "national significance," and believes they may be long drawn-out. The employers' stand is evidence of a "very definite and determined policy" by all managements to resist all union efforts to increase wages, he said.

Still Another GE Operation Falls To IUE

A RUNOFF election at Rome, Ga., last week brought the CIO Electrical Workers their 61st victory in a General Electric Co. plant and the seventh in the South in the big chain.

IUE-CIO now represents more than 100,000 GE workers. The Rome plant builds medium transformers and is a runaway operation from Pittsfield, Mass.

An election last month between the IUE-CIO, the AFL Electrical Workers and no union was inconclusive. Last week's score was IUE 218, no union 177. A particularly bitter anti-union campaign by GE was offset by aid from the CIO Auto, Textile and Communications unions in the area and from the IUE local in Pittsfield.

A memo from the company to its supervisors listed among the reasons for moving to Rome the fact that its population was "85% of Anglo-Saxon descent, willing to work, and 15% Negro."

'Jobs Were Key To Election Outcome'

JOHN W. VANDERCOOK, ABC news commentator whose nightly program is sponsored by the CIO, found the election returns confirming his repeated pre-election comments on the unemployment situation.

"The Democrats estimated correctly—and the Republicans seriously underestimated—the political effects of industrial unemployment and of part-time employment," Vandercook said after the election.

"Those districts and states where the industrial slowdown this year has been most marked are precisely those which most decisively rejected Republican candidates and the Republican philosophy."

During his three-week, 10-state, 6000-mile tour, covering grass-roots campaigning, Vandercook had repeatedly reported that GOP candidates were ignoring unemployment.

Following his tour, Vandercook reported only one mishap: an ailing throat which made it inadvisable for him to address a meeting of community and labor leaders in Boston. Fear that the added strain of a speech would find him voiceless for the following night's broadcast caused CIO officials to advise he cancel his plans to speak and spend the evening visiting with guests at the dinner.

Strike Silences Vandercook In Washington Area

THE CIO'S nightly radio program, "John W. Vandercook and the News," was not heard in the nation's capital last week. A strike by an AFL union at WMAL, American Broadcasting Co. affiliate in Washington, was responsible.

As the strike started, the CIO invoked a strike clause in its contract with ABC, prohibiting the station from carrying any mention of the CIO's sponsorship or the CIO's commercials.

Reuther Was Right

The law of the jungle returned to the labor-management scene last week. In Cairo, Ill., a peaceful picket, exercising his American rights, was shot and wounded.

Disciples of Taft-Hartleyism will probably throw up their hands in mock horror at this report, claiming they deplore such violence. But the clear fact is that Taft-Hartley, state "right-to-scab" laws and anti-labor injuctions create the exact climate which breeds such lawlessness.

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther warned the Senate, early this year, that failure to repeal Taft-Hartley's union-busting provisions would return American labor relations to the law of the jungle.

We take no satisfaction in noting that this prophecy has been fulfilled. We cite it as evidence that the Administration can no longer delay its clear duty to redeem the Eisenhower promise of fair and just labor relations laws.

Congress Must Act

That curious piece of legal mumbo-jumbo, the Dixon-Yates contract, which reeks of government subsidy and guaranteed profit, yet whines about free enterprise, has now been signed.

Why the Administration felt called upon to ram through this never-well-explained, clearly questionable document has not been made clear. The obvious political reason is because the Democrats will control the Senate next year and won't be giving away the people's money and resources.

But the need for a hard, cold examination of Dixon-Yates and the shenanigans that accompanied this strange business has not expired with the signing of the contract. Now the need for full-dress, public hearings is even more apparent. We hope the new Congress will get to this task early next January.

McCarthy Again

The Wisconsin nuisance went on trial last week, amid repeated rumors that his GOP colleagues of the Nixon stripe were trying to find a formula for slapping him lightly on the wrist and forgetting the whole matter.

But Sen. McCarthy himself was as sneering, insulting and stupid as ever. In his usual arrogant style he referred to himself as the spearhead of anti-Communist activity in this country. That false and demagogic characterization really needs no answer. Any schoolboy can recognize it as typical of the neighborhood bully.

However, the New York Times has offered a description of McCarthyism which is not only apt but timely and deserves reprinting. It defines McCarthyism in these words:

"It is the invasion of personal rights, the irresponsible attacks on individual and institutions, the disregard of fair democratic procedures, the reckless shattering of mutual trust among the citizens of this country, the terrorization of loyal civil servants—these are all elements of McCarthyism.

"It is the disruption of orderly governmental processes; it is the destruction of the constitutional relationship between the equal branches of our Government; it is the assault on federal agencies most intimately concerned with the actual 'cold war' or a potential 'hot' one; it is contempt for the Bill of Rights and for the ordinary rules of public and political decency.

"It is the encouragement of fear, the undermining of self-confidence, the pandering to emotionalism; it is the divisive force of accusation, recrimination and suspicion. All of this is McCarthyism; and it can only help our enemies."

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS
Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director
Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII November 15, 1954 No. 46

Jungle Law—1954

In Other Words—

An Open Letter From Kenya Colony

For nearly a year James Bury, a member of the CIO Packinghouse Workers and formerly a member of the Canadian Congress of Labor Executive Council and secretary-treasurer of the Vancouver (B. C.) Labor Council, has been in Kenya, Africa, as a representative of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions. Here are excerpts from an open letter he wrote delegates to the recent CCL convention in Toronto.

By JAMES BURY

THIS IS THE FIRST TIME in a long while I've missed a CCL convention. Much as I'd like to be with you, Kenya to Toronto and back is a little far for a week's trip even if I could find an oversize gold nugget to finance it. So I thought I'd drop you a note on my recent wanderings on the Dark Continent.

It's been almost 11 months since I joined the ICFTU. Most of it has been spent in Kenya, where I've been working with African trade unionists to strengthen the labor movement. I can say without hesitation that the last 11 months have been the toughest—and the most interesting—I've ever experienced.

To understand the trade union situation here you almost have to get a picture of political developments. A civil war has been raging in Kenya since 1952. The Mau Mau attacks and the measures taken by the Kenya government against them have turned Kenya into one big armed camp.

Let me give you some examples. On Apr. 24, after a series of Mau Mau raids, the Administration began a mopping up operation. Over 30,000 suspected Mau Mau sympathizers were picked up by the police and army, of whom 19,000 were detained in camps for screening.

Union Leaders Arrested

Half of the full time or part time union officials in Kenya were arrested and sent to camps, and despite repeated requests and interventions, we were able to clear only a quarter.

One of our local union officers was shot in the leg. He was sitting in the offices of the Kenya Federation of Trade Unions (affiliated to the ICFTU) when some trigger-happy policeman shot a bullet through a wall. The guy confessed, months later, when we presented the evidence against him.

Naturally, this kind of atmosphere not only hinders the growth of the trade union movement, but virtually paralyzes it. Many workers now feel that participation in it means a one-way trip to a detention camp. Actions of the police and army have given them plenty of reason for feeling that way. Some of our members have been beaten for holding union cards. Almost every union leader has been tailed constantly by the police.

All this is a bit heartbreaking, because the need for strong unions is damn obvious, and the emergency has made my job so much tougher. Living conditions for Africans are hard to imagine. Of course I have no sympathy for the murdering tactics of the Mau Mau. But I can understand why they've made so much headway.

Europeans Hold Good Land

A small European settler group of 40,000 has monopolized all the good land in Kenya and almost five million Africans are trying to eke out an existence in native reserves. The Administration has done little in the way of opening up more arable land through irrigation, nor has it taught the African more efficient methods of agriculture.

The minimum wage for industrial workers (often the maximum) is $7 a month. Chances for advancement are practically nil. On $7 a month, you're lucky if you stay alive.

I'm afraid it would require a couple of hours for me to tell how bad conditions really are. Take my word for it, they're lousy. And the Africans in Kenya are fed up. They no longer want to remain the hewers of wood and the drawers of water.

They see Africans in other territories governing themselves. But here 40,000 Europeans elect 14 members to the Legislative Council while only six Africans sit in Parliament—and these are appointed by the Governor. The days of unopposed white supremacy in Kenya are over.

Despite the emergency, we are making some headway. There are 10 unions, all affiliated to the federation. Nominally the federation has 50,000 members, but by no means all of it is dues paying. My job has been to act as a father confessor, legal adviser and union representative. I've run schools for workers, helped in negotiations, set up new union constitutions and performed a host of other duties. Life, as I said at the beginning of this letter, is far from dull.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

IT WOULD BE PREMATURE one supposes, to suggest that Vice-Pres. Nixon is standing by with an anxious hand, ready and willing to nudge Mr. Eisenhower toward refusal of a Republican renomination in 1956.

The Vice President Wants Up

Still, the brash young man from California is talking remarkably like a politician who imagines that the travail of the GOP centers on McCarthy, and that he himself is just the fellow to succeed Gen Eisenhower and "reunite" the divided wings of the Republican party.

It can't be proved that Nixon is unwilling to wait for Mr. Eisenhower to jump, but insists on giving his chieftain a push out of political status.

The Vice-President, indeed, persists in paying public tribute to Mr. Eisenhower, in fulsome terms. It isn't true, he says, that the White House hasn't fought the alleged menace of domestic Communism. Mr. Eisenhower, he argues for print, is a great guy doing a great job against the Reds, and he, Richard M. Nixon, is glad to give the President a character reference.

Still, the Vice-President, fresh from his energetic campaign schedule, shows a remarkable facility in attributing GOP election losses to the "split" over the Wisconsin Senator.

From Illinois to the Pacific Coast, Nixon told U. S. News and World Report in an interview, the "McCarthy issue hurt" because it "divided the Republicans" and produced "apathy" among many who normally might have contributed money and votes to the GOP cause.

Old Guard 'Disappointed'

"Shrewd" local leaders in Illinois and Michigan, he added, had told him that the "fall-off" in GOP votes was "due to a certain extent to disappointment" by some Republicans about the "handling of the McCarthy issue."

These statements cannot be considered in a vacuum.

Nixon knew, when he gave the interview, that his next job was to preside over the Senate's "censure" session on McCarthy. He also knew that the Eisenhower Administration decision to resist McCarthy, after nearly a year of toadying to the Wisconsin Senator, was reluctantly accepted by the President as a necessary resort.

What did he mean, then, by attributing Republican defeats from Illinois and Michigan to the Pacific to the Administration's "handling of the McCarthy issue"?

The returns did not warrant it. A pro-McCarthy stuffed shirt in Illinois, belatedly endorsed by the President and vice versa, took a savage licking from Sen. Paul Douglas (D.). Three McCarthyite GOP House stalwarts—Clardy of Michigan, Kersten of Wisconsin and Busbey of Illinois—were hurled out of office.

Tricky Dick Looks To Career

Nixon's personal assaults on liberal Democrats in the Rocky Mountain states failed where he went up against veteran and trusted New Deal stalwarts.

Nixon's post-election comments make sense, so far as this observer can see, only if he has decided, finally, that his own career will not be advanced by a firm anti-McCarthy and pro-Eisenhower stand.

They make sense if he is persuaded that his own brand of junior-grade McCarthyism—an accusation that Mr. Truman was "soft" toward traitors—will work where the cruder, ruder McCarthy fails.

They make sense if he thinks he can gather in his own hot anxious hands both pro-McCarthyites and other Republicans who think the Wisconsin Senator is a horror. They make sense if he suspects that Mr. Eisenhower, who does not like the White House, will refuse to run again and that he, Dick Nixon, can seize the role of Crown Prince.

The McCarthy "censure" session got under way with Sen. Joe seeming to try to censure most other members of the Senate rather than submit to any indignities himself.

Ominously, reliable reports indicated that pro-McCarthyites and "middle of the road" Republicans were planning some "softening" amendments to the Watkins committee's proposal of condemnation.

Put The Blame On Ike

The idea, obviously, was to tell Mr. Eisenhower, insistently, that he was "wrecking" his party by counter-attacking the Wisconsin Senator and to persuade the White House that Joe should be let off with a slap on the wrist.

The President has taken bad advice many times, but it seemed inconceivable that he would allow his whole Administration to be repudiated by admitting he lacked the strength to suppress a rebel who had traduced GOP officials, as flagrantly as he used to assail Democrats, for private purposes.

It is not tolerable for the rest of the government to be abused, any longer, by that man, or to let him get away any longer with a claim that anyone who criticizes him is "doing the work of Communists."

Mr. Eisenhower is coming close to a showdown within his own party. The pro-McCarthyites will simply treat him with a greater contempt for any indication of a willingness to deal with or coddle the Wisconsin Senator.

There is no better time for the President to find out whether Sen. Knowland, his own GOP Senate floor leader, is for him or against him in the clutches.

Book Review—

A Testament Of Faith To Our Heritage Of Native Liberalism

(For more than a quarter of a century, Charles W. Ervin was closely connected with the CIO Clothing Workers. When he died almost two years ago, at 86, he was known as the "dean of American labor newspapermen." This review of his newly-published autobiography is by Alexander Uhl, an editor of Press Associates-PAI.)

By ALEXANDER UHL

NO ONE who ever knew Charles W. Ervin in his last years could ever think of him as an "old man" even though by that time he had long since become one of labor's "grand old men."

Even in his eighties he would bounce into newspaper offices, his smile bright as ever, his eyes shining, seeking to advance in one way or another the cause of labor and liberalism.

His autobiography, "Homegrown Liberal," from first to last, is the story of a man who never faltered, who had a burning faith in American democracy, who never for a moment let political phonies fool him or management-trained seals pull the wool over his eyes.

The span of his story runs all the way from the "hard times" that followed the post-Civil War wave of inflation down to the election of Dwight D. Eisenhower to the presidency. And the saltiness of Irvin's comment on both events, although they are almost 80 years apart, does not vary in the slightest.

Not Just On Paper

A newspaperman all his life, Ervin knew at first hand the struggle of American workers to organize and he is never happier than when recounting the victories labor scored. He writes of the sweatshops, of the terror of the coal fields in the early days, of the savage battles that management waged to keep workers from building their unions.

CHARLES W. ERVIN
(from a bust by Jo Davidson)

Yet Ervin was never content simply to put the words on paper. He was always in the thick of things, whether the picket line when he was helping Sidney Hillman organize the garment workers in Philadelphia, or running for governor of New York in 1918, or thinking up schemes to blast the economic Bourbons down to the last days of his life.

He had, too, a genius for friendship and his book is filled with warm reminiscences of such friends as Robert LaFollette, George Norris, Joe Davidson, Eugene Debs, Heywood Broun, Morris Llewellyn Cooke, Ernest Gruening, Sidney Hillman, and scores of other fighters in the cause of labor and of liberalism.

Yet quite apart from the warm, human, eyewitness account of the rough and tumble events of the past half century, Ervin's autobiography is a magnificent refutation of what has become a part of reactionary propoganda — the constant charge that the great ideas of social and economic reform which have been part of our lives for so many years are "Communist" in their origin or the products of "foreign 'isms'."

Ervin's life was a magnificent proof that humanitarianism, faith in the workingmen and women of America, the demand for social and economic reform, belief in democracy and faith that change can be accomplished through the ballot is American to its very core.

There is not a page of Ervin's book that reveals the faintest trace of "foreign" thinking; there is not a page that does not reveal his passionate love for America, for the ideas of a Jefferson or a Lincoln or a Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Ervin's burning contempt for communism comes through a score of times; his loathing for dictatorship whether that of a Hitler or a Stalin glows through his denunciation of their regimes. Yet never for a moment did he surrender to hysteria or the urge to destroy basic American freedoms. His faith was well grounded in the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights and the Constitution.

The General Welfare

American freedom meant more to Charles Ervin than the freedom to make money; it meant the freedom to put into practice the pledge in the Constitution "to promote the general welfare."

The last sentence of his book, written just before he died, expresses the thought:

"Yes, I am a partisan—of the welfare state. A most thorough partisan, I think. Nothing else matters to me in politics but promoting the general welfare."

"Homegrown Liberal" is well named. Ervin was American to the core. And liberal to the core. His life can serve as a beacon to every homegrown liberal in the land.

"Homegrown Liberal," by Charles W. Ervin. Dodd Mead & Co., $4.

Church Hits Scab Law Drive

THE CATHOLIC Archdiocese of St. Louis has called on more than 400,000 Catholics in the metropolitan area to refuse to contribute to funds being collected by the Missouri Chamber of Commerce to obtain a right-to-scab law.

The St. Louis Register, official publication of the Archdiocese, said the campaign for the law "is clearly opposed to Catholic principles concerning the rights of labor and management."

Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter heads the archdiocese. An editorial in the paper concluded:

"In particular they (Catholics) should contribute no funds for this cause and should refrain from aiding it in any way."

The Register's editorial, under an eight-column banner on Page One reading "'Right to Work' Bill Threat to Labor Unions," said:

"The real aim of this campaign, although it pretends to be interested in protecting the individual worker, is to destroy labor unions by making them ineffective.

"By outlawing all forms of the union shop, employers are free to hire as many non-union workers as they please and to lower wages and working conditions accordingly.

"It is the constant and clear teaching of the Catholic Church that workers have a natural right to organize. This has been plainly stated by the Popes."

The Catholic Church's opposition to right-to-scab laws was also stressed recently by Rev. John F. Cronin, assistant director of the Social Action Dept. of the National Catholic Welfare Council.

Writing as guest of Msgr. George Higgins, also an assistant director of the department, in the latter's syndicated weekly column, he said such laws sometimes get public support because they appear to be in keeping with traditional American opposition to compulsion.

Basic Objection

"Why have church authorities opposed bills which, on the surface, seem to be so consonant with general American attitudes?" he asked. "Obviously because the surface indications are deceptive.

"These proposals are not really designed to protect the right to work; rather they are aimed at neutralizing labor's right to organize.

"The basic objection to a right-to-work law is that it practically forces conflict between labor and management.

"Labor-management relations are poisoned by the suspicion engendered by the situation.

"The argument that compulsory unionism violates workers' rights would come with better grace if its proponents were workers. There has been no ascertainable worker sentiment for this alleged right. The advocates of 'labor freedom' are employer groups. This fact alone would arouse suspicion as to the sincerity of such legislation."

'No Good'

Ray Mills, president of the Iowa State AFL, recently told a story which illustrates some of the intended confusion about "right-to-work" law:

"I had a fellow call me up and say, 'Ray, I lost my job. Can they do that? What about the right-to-work law?' I told him that law didn't do him a bit of good and was not meant to do him any good."

BANNERS TELL THE STORY—Sheboygan, Wis., labor rallies to pledge solid support to CIO Auto Workers until they win victory over Kohler Co.

MORALE BUILDERS are strike kitchen cooks. Meals have been served at the kitchen 24 hours a day for more than six months of strike.

FARMERS' SUPPORT for the walkout is enlisted by the Sheboygan County Win-the-Strike Committee at the annual county fair.

'There Are No Neutrals Left' In Long UAW Strike At Kohlerville

This report on the long strike of the CIO Auto Workers at the Kohler Co., near Sheboygan, Wis., is by Frank Wallick, a UAW-CIO publicity representative. It was distributed by the Press Associates-PAI.

By FRANK WALLICK

LIKE THE union song about Harlan County, Ky., "there are no neutrals left" in the six-month strike against Kohler Co., near Sheboygan, Wis.

This large industrial city along Lake Michigan has been choosing up sides from the day that members of Local 833, CIO Auto Workers, "pulled the plug" and went on strike last Apr. 5 against the firm. Organized labor —AFL, CIO and independent unions—early backed the strike.

A vain, industrial baron, Herbert V. Kohler (uncle of Wisconsin's Governor), has thrown his personal fortune of several million dollars into a costly campaign to break the Kohler strike. The long strike has already cost the company over $6 million in overhead and wasted material, not including the value of lost sales.

A Union Town

Always a strong union town, casting a top-heavy vote against Sen. McCarthy in 1952, the working people have never completely recovered from the disastrous defeat suffered by a valiant AFL federal labor union in 1934. Guns in the hands of company thugs killed two workers and wounded 47 others in the 1934 strike.

Old Curmudgeon

Pres. Herbert V. Kohler of Kohler Co. convicted himself in the eyes of the community when he told the Wisconsin Labor Board that he favored the use of tear gas and bragged of an arsenal of guns. He shocked board members by admitting he carried a billy club.

When the Wall Street Journal printed these facts on its front page, Kohler's critics in Sheboygan joked: "When the old man goes to a club, they'll make him check his weapons at the door."

Kohler Co. officials, who spearheaded the '34 massacre of workers, today hold key jobs in the current attempt to break the strike. A tremendous picket line, called by UAW-CIO Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey "the biggest picket line I've seen anywhere for 15 years," numbered some 2500 and patrolled the company's gates in the early days of the strike.

Under Wisconsin's "right-to-scab" law the union was ordered to reduce picketing, an order later enforced by an injunction. This legal maneuver did not shake the solidarity of the strikers, but increased the company's overhead as it tried to operate with a fraction of the firm's veteran workers.

The chief strike issue centers on union demands for arbitration and seniority rights. The company has tried to keep the whip-hand by offering only watered down versions of these standard contract provisions.

No love is lost between Gov. Kohler (who proposed arbitration of the strike to his uncle) and the present ruling clan of Kohler Co. While the Governor's own father ran the company during the 1934 strike and was also Governor of Wisconsin, the unsavory reputation the 1954 strike has gained throughout the State didn't help Kohler in the recent campaign.

Students at the University of Wisconsin, many of them working their way through school and living on a shoe string budget, are contributing heavily to support of the Kohler strike.

One student said that the money collected "isn't very much but in the light of the rumors that I have heard about college students scabbing at Kohler during the summer, it might help the strikers' morale to know that there are some college students who sympathize with their efforts."

Like A Prison

The forbidding brick walls of the Kohler plant cast their prison-like shadows on Kohler Village, founded by the Kohler family to keep workers happy and chase away unions.

History is catching up with this barony. While the company's industrial relations director serves as a sort of foreign minister for Herbert V. Kohler, in dealing with the outside world, the 2800 workers on strike patiently wait for either a palace revolution or a change of heart.

FELLOW CIO MEMBERS in Lake County, Ill., send a truckload of food to the strike kitchen of Local 833, UAW-CIO.

CHARGE DIDN'T STICK—Jury dismissed the charge of unlawful assembly brought against these men who had participated in neighborhood demonstrations against scabs.

COMMUNITY EFFORT with plenty of help from organized labor built the new Lower Bucks County Hospital (right photo) near Bristol, Pa. Labor members on hospital board of directors are shown (left) with Burgess Anthony Niccol: standing, Niccol, Jesse Daugherty, John Spadaccino and Tom Connelly; seated, Rene Tritschler, Frank Flatch and John Daugherty. Union members already have contributed $650,000.

Book Review—

European Trade Unionism Given Scholarly Analysis

AN IMPORTANT addition to any trade union library is Prof. Adolf Sturmthal's new, scholarly analysis of the European trade union movement: "Unity and Diversity in European Labor."

The author has succeeded in presenting concisely and clearly the essential background necessary for a basic understanding of the European union movement and the fundamental differences between European and American concepts of unionism.

AT THIS crucial time in international affairs, when the European trade movement assumes a major role in the battle between democracy and dictatorship, it is imperative that American unionists understand the European concept of unionism, the problems which are peculiar to Europe, and the differences in historical background between the unions of the various European democracies.

Prof. Sturmthal has provided that understanding. He has been especially successful in integrating historical perspective and current problems so that both become clear to the average reader.

"Unity and Diversity in European Labor" also deals with the most burning issues facing European unions at this time. In particular, the author treats with knowledge and sympathy the problems of collective bargaining in the current European economy, and the role of unions in nationalized enterprises.

In his concluding chapter, he touches on relations between unions and labor governments, and weighs the influence of labor governments upon union behavior—a topic of great interest to American unionists.

Prof. Sturmthal, who teaches at Bard College, is a widely known authority on the European labor movement. His current book is certain to enhance his reputation.—H.C.F.

"Unity and Diversity in European Labor" by Adolf Sturmthal; The Free Press, Glencoe, Ill.; $3.75.

Penna. Left Wing Petition Called 'Trick' By CIO, AFL

CIO AND AFL leaders in Pennsylvania have warned their members against signing Progressive Party petitions for a special session of the State Legislature.

"The use of AFL and CIO on these petitions is unauthorized by us and our unions have no connection with the Progressive Party or any of their activities," the trade union leaders said.

They called the signature drive "a typical left wing trick to create the public impression that their group has labor support."

PRES. HARRY BOYER of the Pennsylvania CIO Council and Pres. Joseph T. Kelley of the Philadelphia CIO Council issued the warning for their members. Pres. Joseph A. McDonough of the Pennsylanvia Federation of Labor and other AFL leaders signed the joint statement.

Noting that the Progressive Party had been under FBI probe and "branded as a straight left wing group," the labor leaders warned that innocent workers might sign the petitions and could lose their jobs by being listed as poor security risks.

"While it is true," the joint statement said, "that Labor's League for Political Education, political arm of the AFL, and the Political Action Committee, political arm of the CIO, have demanded a special session of the Pennsylvania Legislature for the purpose of taking action in the field of unemployment and other legislation affecting labor, such action was done in convention and through the legitimate and elected representatives of the CIO and AFL."

The two labor groups said they have neither authorized or circulated any petitions "nor do we ever join with the Progressive Party in any public activity."

"We do not recognize this group as a legitimate representative of AFL and CIO unions," they concluded.

Give A Buck To PAC —The Job You Save May Be Your Own

Community Has A New Hospital Thanks To CIO-AFL Backing

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

A GENEROUS share of the credit for the new $3.5 million ultra-modern community hospital recently erected on a 20-acre tract of former farm land in lower Bucks County, near Bristol, Pa., and now open for patients, belongs to union labor.

Contributions and payroll deduction pledges from industrial workers in the area, members of the CIO and AFL, will total close to $1 million when all are in. Around $650,000 is already in the bag with more coming in as deduction pledges fall due.

(Let those who still think unions have no social responsibility but are concerned solely with the wages and working conditions of their own members take note.)

BACK IN 1950 when the proposal for the hospital was first put forward by certain leaders concerned with the medical and health needs of this rapidly growing industrial area, doubt was expressed that the community could swing the project. Some felt no help could be expected from unions.

But as it turned out, the Bucks County CIO Council was the first community group to go on record as pledging financial and moral support for the hospital.

Then in 1951 the United Labor Hospital Committee, composed of representatives of both CIO and AFL locals, was formed under the leadership of Frank Flatch, member of the Auto Workers and president of the Bucks County CIO Council. The drive for funds it sponsored turned out to be a success that startled the community and won a new respect for unions in the area.

BESIDES the Bucks County CIO Council, 21 CIO locals, six AFL locals and one independent union of plant guards are represented on the United Labor Hospital Committee.

The CIO unions include several locals of the United Auto Workers, whose Local 130 at the Kaiser Metal Products Corp. is the largest in Bristol; five locals of the United Steelworkers including members employed at the big new Fairless Works of U. S. Steel near Morrisville, Pa.; four Glass Workers' locals, whose members work at Rohm & Haas (chemical and plastics), as well as various locals of the Gas, Coke & Chemical; Textile, Transport, Electrical, Paper, and Retail & Wholesale unions.

Nearly $12,000 was subscribed directly by the United Labor Committee, and more than $500,000 was contributed by individual workers in area plants during building fund drives in 1951 and '53.

Citizen CIO

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, featured speaker at the dedication of the Lower Bucks County Hospital, said he was most happy "to find this monument to what we stand for here in Bucks County."

"I am very proud that the CIO could participate in making this wonderful new hospital possible," he said. "We are not only workers, we are also mindful that every worker is a citizen. We know that labor can solve problems only by joining together with others in working for basic human values."

America will be judged, he said, "not by our great wealth alone, not by the size of our material resources, but by how we translate these into human values."

Further donations and pledges made this year will bring the total contributed by labor in the area close to $1 million.

The new Lower Bucks County Hospital is the first non-profit hospital for the general service of the area to be built in the county, and is the most modern and best equipped in the Delaware Valley.

It was built as a joint enterprise of labor, industry and the general community, and is governed by a board of directors with equal representation from each of the three cooperating groups.

At present there are 21 directors on the board. Representing labor are vice-president of the board, Pres. John Daugherty, UAW Local 130; Tom Donnelly, USA Local 4889; Pres. Jesse Daugherty, Glass Workers Local 88; John Spadaccino, same local; and Rene Tritschler, AFL Butchers, secretary of the board. Another labor member will be elected in 1955.

The hospital was built under the Hill-Burton Act, which provides that the government will match the funds raised by donations with 40c on the dollar.

It is designed ultimately to care for 300 patients but at present has 150 beds. Basic facilities, however, are adequate for 500 beds envisioned for the future.

THE UNITED LABOR Hospital Committee, representing some 11,000 CIO and AFL workers, has donated and pledged close to $1 million to help build this $3.5 million community hospital in Lower Bucks County, Pa.

Strike Anniversary Finds Port Arthur Morale High

TAFT-HARTLEY set off a dynamite charge under Port Arthur's CIO pickets last week, but it failed to shake the determination of the Texans whose strike has just entered its second year.

Representation elections requested by the management of five stores were conducted by the National Labor Relations Board. Under the one-sided requirements of Taft-Hartley, only the scabs inside the struck establishments were permitted to vote on the question of union representation.

As expected, Sabine Area CIO Local Industrial Union 1814 did not get a single vote. Pickets patrolled the stores even as the scabs inside went through the motions of voting. The union was on the ballot, but took no part in the poll.

Rep. George W. Cowart of the CIO Oil Workers, in charge of the walkout, said that picketing and other strike activities would continue despite the NLRB election. The outcome, he said, "proves exactly nothing."

He reaffirmed earlier statements that the union is "willing to meet with any employer or other official representatives of the employers for the purpose of discussing ways and means of settling this dispute in keeping with the law."

Two chain stores, Woolworth's and McLellan's, and locally-owned enterprises were involved in last week's elections.

The strike went into its second year with scarcely a ripple. Morale of the strikers is described as "unbelievably high."

The first walkouts began in October 1953, and within a few weeks spread to involve more than a score of stores, hotels, drive-ins and restaurants.

Some contracts have been signed with individual establishments but the majority are still holding out. So are the strikers.

Financial aid is being extended by the National CIO, the CIO Auto Workers and the CIO Oil Workers, as well as groups in Texas.

Pressure to discontinue the strike has been heavy from many sources in the community, including some of the churches, but Local 1814 members have resisted firmly.

CWA Strike Of 167 Days Ends In Win

A MAJOR victory for the CIO Communications Workers ended a 167-day strike at Western Electric's plant in Tonawanda, N. Y., near Buffalo, last week.

CWA-CIO won all its basic objectives, the company none. This was especially true on seniority, the item on which the firm provoked the strike June 7. Instead of a weakened clause, the new contract is improved in this respect as well as others.

The walkout actually was prolonged an extra month because Western Electric wanted the right to fire strikers after they returned to work.

Agreement was reached on contract terms Oct. 6, but this dispute dragged out the strike. The firm's resistance melted after a rump organization was trounced in a representation election.

As the strike began, the company wanted to junk seniority provisions. The union won on every point. Attempts at weakening the arbitration section also failed.

Western Electric made no wage offer when the strike started. The settlement provides for increases of 5c to 7c an hour for day rate workers, and 4c to 6c to piece rate workers, and is added to the earnings average of $2.09 an hour.

Christmas Eve was agreed upon as a holiday, and an 18-month contract was signed. The firm wanted a shorter duration, the union wanted a longer one—so it would not be forced out on strike again so soon.

DC School Bias Stand Praised

The District of Columbia CIO Council joined with other civic-minded organizations last week in praising the "firmness" with which school and District officials dealt with recent demonstrations against school integration.

THE V FOR VICTORY sign being shown by these CIO Furniture Workers demonstrates their confidence in the outcome of their strike at Lignum Vitae Products Corp., Jersey City, N. J. The firm specializes in making police clubs and billies.

Ship Hospital Budget Cuts Hit By CIO Maritime Bloc

THE EISENHOWER Administration last week was charged by the CIO Maritime Committee with continuing to cut funds for Marine Hospitals and trying to kill the program by "attrition."

Hoyt Haddock, executive secretary of the committee, said that he had learned that the Budget Bureau "will recommend a sharp cut in appropriations for Marine Hospitals."

Merchant seamen are treated free of charge at the hospitals, established some 100 years ago for that purpose.

"We have predicted that since the Administration was blocked from eliminating the Marine Hospitals in one stroke, it would seek to destroy the program by the attrition method," Haddock said.

"THIS METHOD is to keep cutting appropriations for a program until it becomes so small and meaningless that it is completely scrapped."

He urged members of the CIO Maritime Union, which belongs to the committee, to send telegrams opposing the proposed budget cut to Pres. Eisenhower, and to their senators and representatives.

Haddock praised the work of joint maritime union committees in cooperating with local government officials in seeking to avert the cut. He also lauded the continued efforts of Mayor Burns, Jacksonville, Fla., on behalf of the hospital program.

"For the last two years the maritime unions have been successful in their fight to save the hospitals by the joint action of the majority of seagoing unions via the Conference of American Maritime Unions," Haddock said.

Several CIO unions are affiliated with the conference.

"The end result of their fine work was that the Administration decided not to eliminate the Marine Hospitals in one stroke," Haddock said. "Instead, it requested Congress to appropriate $33,040,000 for fiscal year 1955. Congress appropriated $33 million which enabled the hospitals to remain open."

Weihrauch Named To NPA Council

Pres. Milton Weihrauch of CIO Electrical Workers Dist. 4 has been named as a member of the national council of the National Planning Association. He will be one of a group of about 30 New Jersey leaders who will make plans for the future in the economic, military and political fields.

40 Hours Pay For 37½ Hours Won By UFW

FORTY HOURS pay for a 37½-hour week has been won by the CIO Furniture Workers in a new contract with the T. M. Miller Casket Co., Scranton, Pa.

The shorter week was negotiated in the hope that it would result in the recall of some half dozen laid-off workers, according to CIO Field Rep. Elmer Chatak, who assisted the bargaining committee of UFW-CIO Local 506.

The average hourly rate in the plant is $1.45. Local Pres. Edmund Corrazini headed the bargaining committee.

Police Club Firm Forces New Strike

WHENEVER the contract of the CIO Furniture Workers is up for renegotiation at the Lignum Vitae Products Corp., Jersey City, N. J., the union has been forced to strike to get better conditions.

The present strike is no exception, but it is the longest, having been in progress eight weeks. Previous strikes have lasted from one to four weeks.

Some 40 members of UFWA-CIO Local 76-B, with headquarters in New York City, are on strike. It is a case of sons against fathers; children of two of the strikers who have been employed at the plant more than 40 years are crossing the picket line to work at the plant.

THE PLANT makes police clubs and billies, sections of venetian blinds and bocce balls used in turf bowling.

These products are made of the tough wood of the lignum vitae tree, which grows in African jungles.

Accustomed to striking to gain their demands, the UFWA-CIO members are determined to walk the picket line until a satisfactory agreement is reached.

'Men Or Marionettes?' Labor Artist Asks Some Questions

PROTEST against "creeping totalitarianism in the United States" is the theme of a pamphlet of cartoons titled "Men or Marionettes?" by Frank Hanley, labor cartoonist.

The tone of the pamphlet is set by the very first cartoon, in which a flag-draped character proclaiming the new order says: "Controversy is conspiracy—liberalism is license—dissent is disloyality!"

A typical cartoon appears at right and speaks for itself. In a short introduction, Hanley, who draws for the ACWA Advance, says he felt compelled to get out the booklet because he found "loyal American friends of mine unwilling to discuss social legislation, foreign policy, or anything politically controversial."

"It's too dangerous!" he continues. "Patriotism seems to mean petrification . . . By a lucky chance I am still free to protest this evil. I did 'Men or Marionettes?' because I had to . . . because I love America."

Price of the booklet is 25c a copy or $1 for five copies, from Hanley at 3944 47th St., Long Island City 4, N. Y.

BUSY SPOT at Lehigh County fair in Allentown, Pa., was the booth of County CIO-PAC which passed out 100,000 pieces of literature. Booth was staffed by members of CIO Clothing Workers shirt local when photo was made.

TRADE UNION reception for United Nations delegates found Jacob S. Potofsky (center), chairman of CIO International Affairs Committee and president of the Clothing Workers, deep in conversation with (left to right) U Hla Aung and Thankin Chit Maung, Burma; Khemjati Punyaratabhan, Thailand, and Dr. Luis Beltranena Valadares, Guatemala.

AEC Signs Dixon-Yates Pact As Liberals Keep Up Bitter Fight

CHARGES and counter-charges ricocheted around Capitol Hill last week as the dubious Dixon-Yates power give-away came under scrutiny before the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy.

"The opening wedge in the crippling of the Tennessee Valley Authority," was the way the contract was described by Alex Radin, general manager of the American Public Power Association.

Radin charged that the government would pay twice over for a steam generating plant and still never own it under the proposed contract terms. Administration officials hotly defended the deal, Democrats assailed it as another in the series of GOP give-aways.

As the week neared an end, the Atomic Energy Commission finally worked up enough nerve to sign the argeement—but only after liberal pressure had forced a slight modification of the original terms.

The document signed limits Dixon-Yates to a $600,000 a year profit, a tidy sum but less than the loss-proof $900,000 originally planned. Another change was insertion of a recapture clause, still another calls for AEC approval of the builder of the combine's West Memphis, Ark., power station.

The AEC acted after Pres. Eisenhower had again turned the heat on it. A statement said all members signed except Commissioner W. F. Libbey, who was not present.

In testimony before the Joint Committee, Gov. Frank G. Clements (Tenn.) declared the contract is "part of a national conspiracy by private power companies to destroy the TVA."

Authorship of the disputed contract is a closely guarded secret. In its haste to ram the deal through, the Administration urged the committee to waive review of the terms for 30 days while Congress is in session before it becomes effective.

Foes of the contract lost their bid to have the AEC withhold signing the contract until it could be studied by the new Congress. The vote, 10 to 8, was on strict party lines.

Rep. Holifield (D. Calif.) immediately promised he would offer legislation "on the very first day" of the January session of the 84th Congress to "nullify" the contract.

Backstage feuding within the AEC was revealed during the hearings. Thomas E. Murray, a member, charged that the preoccupation of Chairman Lewis L. Strauss and other AEC members had "needlessly plunged that body into politics."

New Member

The Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee got a new member at the height of its battle royal over the Dixon-Yates give-away—Sen. Gore (D. Tenn.), a strong opponent of the deal.

The Democrats named Gore to replace Sen. Johnson (D.), who leaves the Senate in January to become Governor of Colorado. The change gave the Democrats an immediate seat on the committee pending Johnson's departure.

Labor's World—

U. S. Union Leaders Honor UN Delegates of 27 Nations

DELEGATES and representatives to the United Nations from 27 nations were honored by the U. S. labor movement at a recent reception in the Carnegie International Center in New York.

Heading a CIO delegation was Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO International Affairs Committee and president of the Clothing Workers. Pres. George Meany led an AFL group.

In a brief talk, Potofsky stressed the "profound moral obligation" of the more favored nations to help underdeveloped countries. He cited the backing organized workers in the U. S. have given to former Pres. Truman's Point IV program, "labor's own Point IV program" through the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions, and the Foreign Operations Administration under the Eisenhower Administration.

"We wish to see more Point IV, rather than less," he said. "We wish to see the UN increase its efforts along this line, and the CIO pledges active support of similar measures."

He also voiced opposition to racial segregation and discrimination.

"We seek to accelerate the day," he added, "when colonial peoples will be emancipated from foreign rule and will emerge as independent states."

The reception was given by A. Philip Randolph, chairman of the Trade Union Committee for Racial Justice and president of the AFL Sleeping Car Porters. It was designed to familiarize UN delegates with the active interest of U. S. labor in the UN, particularly in eliminating racial and color barriers that divide nations and peoples.

France

The French government will build 240,000 new worker housing units in 1955 instead of spreading that number over the next three years, Premier Mendes-France announced. At the same time, he said the minimum wage law ($61 to $70 a month) will be more strictly enforced.

Japan

Workers and churches in Japan and America alike must work together, Rev. Masanao Fujita, of Tokyo, a member of the Committee on Occupational Evangelism of the United Church of Christ in Japan, said in a radio address at Columbus, O., during a visit to headquarters of the National Religion and Labor Foundation. Japanese unions are now real bargaining agents, he said, and not "feeble company unions."

Sweden

Swedish industrial workers have the highest wages in Europe, according to a survey conducted by a Swiss metal industry employers' organization. Skilled workers in Sweden, the survey showed, average 23% higher than their counterparts in Switzerland, unskilled workers 27% higher. By contrast, the French skilled worker averages 8% less and the unskilled worker 16% less than in Switzerland.

Nigeria

The Nigerian government has advised the All-Nigerian Trade Union Federation, an affiliate of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions, that it will be consulted on labor matters as "the organization most representative of trade union opinion."

Biblical City Is 85% Unionized

Can your city match this? David Tuviahu, labor Mayor of Beersheba, Israel, now on a visit to the United States, reports that 85% of the total population of Beersheba are union members.

Beersheba always has been the center of the Negev desert industrial area. Today it has a trade union agreement covering miners, glass, oil and chemical workers, teachers, engineers, clerical, railroad and textile workers, all members of Histadrut, Israel's labor movement.

Tuviahu, who is a member in good standing of Histadrut, reports that Beersheba has grown from a village of 3000 in 1948 to a city of 20,000 with the help of the Israeli labor movement.

—(PAI)

ILO Metal Trades Parley Backs Full Employment

PRACTICAL methods of achieving labor-management cooperation in the world's metal-working plants were agreed upon at sessions of the International Labor Organization's Metal Trades Committee conference just ended in Geneva.

Victor G. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers, who also heads the CIO Dept. for International Affairs, was elected president of the workers' representatives. The sessions were attended by delegates of labor, management and government from a score of nations.

A significant memorandum adopted by an overwhelming vote held that "sharp economic crises resulting in widespread unemployment are avoidable through appropriate action."

Sustained full employment, the group voted, "can be built only on a solid foundation of adequate consumer purchasing power, of steadily rising living standards, of greater economic security especially for the lower income groups, and of rapid economic development of underdeveloped countries."

The memorandum attached great importance to measures to promote the rapid growth of real income and the expansion of employment.

Programs for developing economically underdeveloped countries, the memorandum declared, should be planned and executed in close cooperation with the United Nations and its specialized agencies. Extra attention should be given, it went on, to the desirability of concentrating efforts on over-all, integrated projects.

McKay's Timber Monopoly Move Hit By Hartung

"DANGEROUS new precedents which can only lead to more monopoly in the timber industry" were protested by Pres. A. F. Hartung of the CIO Woodworkers.

He directed the charge at new regulations drafted by the Bureau of Land Management of the Interior Dept. Hartung, who is a member of the Oregon and California Land Grant Administration Advisory Committee, set forth his views in a "minority report" to James F. Doyle, BLM area administrator.

He said that the new proposals indicate the bureau "is abandoning its past excellent traditions of demanding reciprocal future road-use agreements when it gives rights-of-way through federal timber."

"Tied in with this," Hartung declared, "are new regulations which could be used by the bureau or any company holding a strategic area of private land to veto sale of any Oregon and California timber behind the private timber indefinitely — or until the private owner was ready to make a deal.

"Or, if Interior Sec. McKay wanted to, he could order the usual protections on behalf of competitive bidding abandoned in large measure. More power is placed in the hands of bureaucrats, with fewer restrictions on their activities."

TRANSATLANTIC Foundation scholarships for study at universities overseas go to five U. S. trade unionists, including two from CIO. From left, Irving Krantz, Charles Dawson of Portland, Me., ANG, Pres. Harold Taylor of Sarah Lawrence College, Carl Pippin, CWA Local 3908, Montgomery, Ala., and Isaiah Murray.

The Woman's Angle—

New PAC Groups Stay On Job; Checking The Vote Is First Task

By ESTHER MURRAY
CIO-PAC Field Representatives

ONCE THE ELECTIONS were over, we wondered if some of the political enthusiasm of our CIO women would ebb and they would turn with a sigh of relief to plans for Thanksgiving dinner and Christmas shopping lists.

Mrs. Murray

But the daily mail indicates this is not the case. Most of the PAC women's committees which were set up to meet the immediate needs of this year's election tell us they want to continue their organization and they are asking us for suggestions.

Probably the most valuable project which can be undertaken now is a study of election returns to learn why the elections went as they did and where PAC's strength and weakness lie. It is a wise woman who will clip from her local papers and save reports on the voting by precinct, ward or district. Two years from now these figures will be full of meaning for her.

Why not have your group get together with your local PAC chairman or the campaign manager of a PAC-endorsed candidate and ask him to help you analyze the election returns?

Some Pertinent Questions

Study those precincts where the majority of the voters are working men and women. How well did they turn out to vote? You can discover this by comparing the number of registered voters with the number of ballots actually cast.

You may be able to decide why the voting went as it did by asking some pertinent questions. Did economic conditions, such as high prices, or unemployment, bring out the voters in your city?

Were there local issues, such as tax levies, changes in local laws, or bond issues which induced a heavy vote? Is there any evidence of voters switching from one party to another? Did precincts which were predominantly Republican in 1952 go heavily Democratic this year—or vice-versa? Why?

When the votes were all tallied in 1952 there was much talk about the Republican landslide being evidence of a country-wide trend toward conservative policies in government.

Using the same yardstick today, we must recognize that if there was such a trend in 1952 it was short-lived and the 1954 elections have proved that the American people are basically liberal, in the sense they believe the government's concern should be for the welfare of the majority of the people — workers, farmers, small businessmen — instead of the moneyed interests of the country.

Each one of us should be asking ourselves, about now, what did I do to help my candidates? Am I satisfied with the election, and if not, what am I going to do about it? The answer to that last question is, of course, to begin now to plan for 1956.

Watch The Legislatures

Now we have the job of keeping our CIO women informed as to what their elected officials stand for, how they keep their campaign promises and whether they are the people we want back in 1956.

Of enormous importance is your state legislature because the trend in Washington has been to refer to the states more and more responsibility for social welfare.

A profitable project for local PAC women's groups would be to study the make-up of their legislatures and try to analyze the men and women who were elected in terms of whether they can be depended on to fight for better schools, health and welfare benefits, and protection against "right to work" bills which are in reality anti-union measures.

Your PAC chairman will be able to tell you what legislation is likely to come up affecting these matters as well as unemployment compensation, workmen's compensation and similar issues. By watching the newspapers you can learn how your representatives stand and can let them know how you would like them to vote. If you keep a record of their votes you will have a splendid guide to determine whether you will support them in the next election.

Sylvia Yuster, chairman of the Greater Los Angeles CIO-PAC Family Participation Continuing Committee, reports that the group will meet soon after Election Day to plan a year-round program. The committee now includes representatives from every union in the area and, writes Miss Yuster, "is enlisting more and more members every day."

PAC Groups At Work

In the weeks before the election the women were organized into groups to work in campaign headquarters of PAC-endorsed candidates and to do telephoning from their homes.

The 41 delegates who attended the Family Participation Conference in Knoxville, Tenn., decided they wanted to set up a permanent group and continue the work begun at the conference.

They adopted a resolution asking the local CIO Council to create a women's sub-committee of PAC with a liaison woman to sit on the Council. They named a continuing steering committee which will meet Nov. 9 to plan a conference for housewives. Geneva Sneed, CIO Clothing Workers staff representative, was chairman of the conference in Knoxville.

A year-round PAC program to reach CIO wives and homemakers was recommended by delegates to the recent Women's Forum on Political Action sponsored by the Milwaukee County CIO Council. Adaline Markison, Government Workers, and Doris Zier, of the Auto Workers Auxiliary, were co-chairman for the meeting.

TRADE UNION support of United Nations Children's Fund is pledged by Sec.-Treas. Morris Iushewitz (left) of New York City CIO Council and Vice Pres. Charles S. Zimmerman of AFL Ladies Garment Workers during visit at United Nations headquarters with Maurice Pate (right), executive director of the fund.

Concert Orchestra Tour Sponsored By Steel District

THE CIO Steelworkers will sponsor a new tour of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra through steel areas, it was revealed at the union's Dist. 9 conference in Newark.

Conference Chairman Erwin Leppert, of Allentown, Pa., told delegates that the tour would include such steel centers as Scranton and Bethlehem, Pa., and Newark.

In explaining why his union sponsors tours of the 88-piece orchestra, Leppert said:

"Since our union was started in 1936 the United Steelworkers has improved the economic status and brought security to the men in the steel mills. But man does not live on bread alone. We must not neglect our spiritual life."

USA-CIO Pres. David J. McDonald is a member of the orchestra's board of directors.

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

TAX DEDUCTION: "My car was submerged in the recent hurricane. It was covered by insurance and I was reimbursed for the repair bill. Can I deduct for the damage to my car?" —A. R., Flushing, N. Y.

Answers To Your Buying Questions

Answer: Not in this case, since you were reimbursed. But any non-reimbursed damange to cars, shrubbery, house, other possessions, in the recent hurricanes or any other storms is deductible, including any excess of loss over the amount for which you were reimbursed.

INSURED SAVINGS: "You say the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. is similar to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. I have a magazine, Your Investments, of Feb. 1940, which says FDIC is much superior." —G. E. W., So. Miami, Fla.

Answer: The FSLIC insures deposits in savings and loan associations. FDIC insures deposits in banks. The insurance is similar in the respect that both FSLIC and FDIC are Government-sponsored corporations insuring deposits up to $10,000. The difference is that more of the funds of savings and loan associations are invested in mortgages, and thus are not as liquid as bank investment portfolios.

The FSLIC might tend to wait longer before declaring a savings and loan association in default, and proceeding to repay the insured depositors. Thus you might have to wait longer to get your money out of an insured savings and loan association that gets into difficulties, but ultimately you would. As an added reassurance, FSLIC has promised prompt payment in case of default.

But the public should also realize that not all savings and bank associations do have FSLIC deposit insurance (most banks do have FDIC insurance). All Federally-chartered savings and loan associations do have deposit insurance (such associations have the word "Federal" in the names). Some state-chartered associations also have it.

MUTUAL FUNDS: "Was interested in your article, "Shopping The Mutual Funds." I have been looking through Investment Digest Mutual Fund Directory of Aug. 2, 1954. I find there are 138 U. S. funds listed. I find Investors Mutual of Minneapolis has almost as many shareholders as the four balanced funds you have mentioned. They have over 1000 times as many shares outstanding with about the same balance between cash, bonds, preferred stocks and common stock. They will reinvest all dividends and profits at asset value and their management fee is one-eighth of one per cent per quarter." —H. R., Milwaukee, Wis

Answer: Investors Mutual is the second largest balanced fund in the country, second only to Massachusetts Investors Trust. It has a successful past-performance record. However, it is sold through general investment and securities dealers, but only by direct salesmen and mostly in rural areas, and generally on a contractual or monthly-installment plan.

Note that our previous article pointed out the advantages of outright voluntary purchases of mutual-fund shares, rather than installment buying, since you do not lose as much if you have to retrieve your investment, and also, more of your money immediately goes to work earning dividends. Investors Mutual's management cost comes to one-half of one per cent a year, which is reasonable.

WASHING MACHINES: "Our water is supplied by a well with an electric pump and automatic bottled-gas heater. A neighbor has put doubt in my mind about an automatic washing machine with suds saver. Would this use more water than the wringer type?" —M. Z. J., Naperville, Ill.

Answer: Wringer machines do use less hot water. Home economists recommend having a 50-gallon hot water tank with an automatic washing machine. With gas heat, which has faster recovery than electrically-heated hot water, you may be able to do with a minimum 30-gallon hot water supply. The advantage of the suds-saver feature is for doing two or three loads at a time.

(Copyright 1954, by Sidney Margolius)

Big Banks Eye Lost Interest, Seek Curb On Credit Unions

THE BANKERS, who never seem to have enough money no matter how hard they work, are gunning for the credit unions again.

The American Bankers Association is conducting a survey of the "poor man's banks," and is expected to come up with a drive for legislative controls intended to steer such business to the banks themselves.

What it boils down to is this: When credit unions were small and few in number, the bankers didn't bother about them. But now there are about 14,500 of them in the U. S., with seven million members who have $1.7 billion invested.

This looks like a lot of money. But a recent study by the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia puts them in their proper perspective. They may look like big business, the survey showed, but their dollar volume is comparatively small.

What really bothers the bankers is all the money they are not getting in interest because of the credit unions' low rates, a maximum of 1%. Private banking institutions collect an average of 4.8%, according to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., with some private lenders demanding and getting 8 or 9%.

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

LAST TUESDAY, CIO members gathered together in St. Matthews Cathedral in Washington, D. C., to attend a requiem mass for Philip Murray celebrated by his friend, Msgr. George G. Higgins. The mass marked the second anniversary of the death of that great leader who had stood at the helm of CIO for more than 10 years and who had, during that same time, built his own union, the United Steelworkers of America, into one of the most powerful trade unions in the world.

Yes, it is two years since that Sunday morning in San Francisco when the news was flashed around the world that Philip Murray was dead.

Every one of us has our own memories of what that announcement meant to us personally, and to our movement. And while time has helped to assuage our sense of personal loss, we are still very much aware of what his leaving has meant to us and to the cause to which his life was dedicated.

Often, since his death, we have attempted to measure his contribution to the American way of life. We still must conclude that the contribution is immeasurable. There is no measure by which to judge the value of what he did to increase the dignity of the lives of the American people, and of men and women abroad.

WITHIN this past week, the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation announced a grant of a substantial sum of money to Roosevelt University, Chicago, for the establishment of a Chair of International Affairs. Prior to that, grants were given to institutions caring for the sick, the orphans; to organizations championing the rights of minority groups; to labor movements abroad; to religious bodies, and to help the United Nations.

These contributions reflect the breadth of interests that characterized Philip Murray. While his major efforts were devoted to building a strong labor movement by organizing unorganized workers in all industries, his concern for people knew no boundaries of geography, race, class or status.

Allan Haywood, who followed his "buddy" in death within a few months, often applied to Philip Murray, Kipling's description of a man as one who could ". . . walk with kings, nor lose the common touch." All of us who knew him and worked with him recognized the aptness of the remark.

FOR PHILIP MURRAY possessed the two qualities that description implies—greatness and humility. Many have said of him that he was the most humble man they have ever known; many have testified to the great power he wielded.

It was the combination of these two seeming contradictory qualities, greatness and humility, that made Philip Murray the unique person he was.

At the Atlantic City Convention of CIO one month after Philip Murray's death, an old friend of his, Father Charles O. Rice, said, "We, who were privileged to know him, may thank God that he lived at all, and thank God that he lived to serve us all so long."

I know I speak for all of CIO when I say that so long as we live we will revere Philip Murray's memory and strive to follow his inspiring example.

ACWA Gains $116,000 After Allentown Mill Fails

ACTION by officers of Allentown Local 19 of the CIO Clothing Workers against a bankrupt clothing firm has enriched 1100 former workers in the plant by $116,000.

ACWA declared that if it had not been for the alertness of the officers, headed by Vice Pres. Ruben Block, "it is doubtful whether the wages of the workers would have been saved."

The Reading Clothing Manufacturing Co. closed down its plant in June 1953. Negotiations between the union and trustees of the bankrupt firm led to the payment to the workers.

The payment was not only carried out in accordance with the agreement but the referee announced that former employes who received checks for wages and vacation from the company and failed to cash them prior to bankruptcy could bring their checks within 30 days to the Berks County Trust Co. for payment.

Very few times in Pennsylvania, ACWA reports, have employes of a bankrupt firm been able to collect all vacation pay and all wages and even outstanding wage checks which had not been cashed. —(PAI)

Steel Offers Aid To Machinists

Co-operation and assistance of the CIO Steelworkers to 1100 striking AFL Machinists at Dominion Engineering Works, Lachine, P. Q., Canada, has been offered by USA-CIO-CCL Canadian Dir. C. H. Millard.

He said the strike issues were identical with those of the Steelworkers with the parent company, Dominion Bridge Co., where a strike vote has been taken by the 1200 employes. —(PAI)

CIO News Sent To Civic Leaders

The Richland County CIO Council, Mansfield, O., has subscribed to The CIO News for 870 professional people and civic leaders in the community.

NLRB Gives More Voice To Employers

A NEW ruling under which an employer can influence the results of a collective bargaining election in case of a raid was handed down by the National Labor Relations Board in a split decision last week.

The board disregarded its Midwest Piping doctrine, which had stood since 1945, by deciding that the William D. Gibson Div. of the Associated Spring Corp., Chicago, was not guilty of an unfair labor practice because it renewed an agreement with Local 3485, CIO Steelworkers, while the AFL Machinists had a board election pending in a move to carve out a tool room unit.

THE DECISION means that an employer can influence the results of a pending election in a raid by either signing with the old union or refusing to sign with it. It would have no effect, however, where a no-raiding agreement is in effect.

The Midwest Piping doctrine prohibited an employer from signing any contract while a collective bargaining election was pending. NLRB Chairman Guy Farmer and Members Ivar H. Peterson and Albert C. Beeson voted to junk it.

Member Abe Murdock voted with them, but because he feels the IAM sought bargaining rights for an inappropriate unit. Member Philip Ray Rodgers dissented, claiming the decision destroys the employer's neutrality.

IN THE GIBSON case, the company had been dealing for some years with the Steelworkers for its 500 production and maintenance employes. While negotiations for a new agreement were under way, the IAM asked recognition for the tool room employes. When denied it, they filed for an election.

The company signed a new union shop pact with the USA, and later discharged 17 tool room employes who refused to pay dues. Twelve were rehired after agreeing to pay the dues and dropping claims for back pay.

BALLOON bearing message of Crusade for Freedom behind the Iron Curtain is sent aloft by Vice Pres. Joseph W. Childs, of CIO Rubber Workers, from Munich, Germany, during tour to see Radio Free Europe in action.

Continental Can Pact Set By USA

A CONTRACT covering 34 plants of the Continental Can Co. in the U. S. and Canada has been signed by the CIO Steelworkers.

Some 15,000 workers are covered by the pact, which provides a 5c across-the-board increase, improved pensions patterned on the basic steel formula, improved insurance benefits and other gains.

Negotiations also included agreement on the application of an added 2c an hour per worker for the elimination of geographical differentials. The firm agreed last January to apply this amount as of Oct. 1, the pact's effective date.

Two additional holidays—Good Friday and general election day—have been added to make a total of eight in the new contract.

USA-CIO Pres. David J. McDonald signed the contract with Dist. 30 Dir. James Robb, chairman of the negotiating committee, and others.

Mitchell Plans To Name Union Advisory Group

LABOR Sec. Mitchell said last week he will set up an advisory committee of union leaders to advise him on legislative and other labor matters.

He said he planned to extend invitations to the CIO, AFL, Mine Workers and the Railroad Brotherhoods to help him form the group.

He added that he also plans to set up a separate advisory group of employer representatives. The two advisory panels would not meet jointly. Mitchell said he sought advice on Taft-Hartley Act changes, minimum wage legislation and other matters.

Place Your Order Now!

Big Annual Convention Issue Of The CIO NEWS

The big annual Convention Issue of The CIO News will be published on Dec. 13, immediately after the 16th CIO Constitutional Convention in Los Angeles.

What the CIO convention does will be big news for all CIO local unions and councils and all CIO members. The CIO News Convention Issue will tell the full story—in news reports, pictures, features and texts. Send in your order now to insure prompt delivery of the Convention Issue.

Special Rates

• BUNDLE ORDERS: Rates for bundle orders are 2c per copy for any quantity up to 1000; 1¾c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000; and 1½c per copy for quantities of more than 2000. Special rates for large orders.

In sending lists of addresses for bundle orders, please indicate the quantity to be sent to each address. To facilitate bookkeeping, please send checks with smaller quantity orders.

• INDIVIDUALLY MAILED ORDERS: Rates for individually mailed copies are 2¼c per copy for quantities up to 1000; 2c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000; and 1¾c per copy for quantities of more than 2000. Special rates for very large orders upon application.

If individual mailing is desired, this may be arranged by sending us mailing strips not more than 2½ inches wide.

Regular Rates

Apart from the special rates for the Convention issue, unions which wish to take this opportunity to begin subscribing regularly to The CIO News may begin their bundle order or group subscription order with the Dec. 13 issue at the regular rates, which will be provided on request.

Just Clip and Mail!

THE CIO NEWS
718 Jackson Place, N.W.
Washington 6, D. C.

We desire to place an order for the special 1954 Convention Issue of The CIO News.

Please ship .....in bundle lots to the enclosed address.

Please have the 1954 Convention Issue individually mailed to membership lists for which we will furnish mailing strips.

The total number of names to which we desire the paper sent is..... ☐ Check Inclosed ☐ Bill Us Later

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... Zone ..... State .....

Organization .....

Rieve Sends White House Plan To Ease Textile Depression

A WHITE HOUSE request for a plan to relieve the textile industry's long-standing depression was revealed last week by Pres. Emil Rieve of the CIO Textile Workers.

Rieve's proposals were contained in a letter to Gabriel Hauge, administrative assistant to Pres. Eisenhower, on Oct. 27. He withheld announcement of the proposals until after the elections to avoid any political implications.

In his letter, Rieve noted that "the problem is so grave, so complex and has persisted so long that the need for a remedy outweighs political considerations."

Rieve made these suggestions:

- Distribution of textiles to needy nations overseas as part of the Mutual Security program, in the same way that coal and agricultural products are now handled.
- Distribution of clothing to needy Americans, in the same manner as surplus foods.
- Re-establishment of textile stockpiles for the armed forces.
- Supplementary unemployment benefits for workers in distressed areas who have exhausted their state insurance.
- A federal research program to study consumer trends and investigate new uses and markets for textiles.

Rieve's plan was the result of a letter to Eisenhower congratulating him on the decision to send coal abroad but urging similar relief for textiles. About a month later Hauge replied that the White House would be interested in a plan.

Defining the scope of the problem, Rieve wrote that since 1950 the textile industry has "suffered a sharp and continuous shrinkage."

Some 270 yarn and weaving mills have been liquidated, most of them in the woolen and worsted division. Employment of production workers has fallen by 275,000 since the first quarter of 1951.

"In any other basic industry, this degree of dislocation and distress would long since have attracted national concern," Rieve wrote. "But the textile industry is the most widely dispersed, both in ownership and in physical plant, of all the basic industries in our country.

"Instead of a few, large spectacular failures, as would result under similar circumstances in the steel or auto industries, we have undergone a multiplication of small, local disasters, none especially newsworthy in itself but having a devastating impact in sum." he continued.

Rieve said the problem is further complicated by the fact that the typical textile mill is in a small community where it is the largest or perhaps the only source of employment. Also, he advised, the typical textile worker is older than the average in other industries and these factors hinder the absorption of displaced textile workers elsewhere.

Perhaps, Rieve suggested, "if the government takes the initiative the industry itself will ultimately develop sufficient sense of industry-wide responsibility" to correct its shortcomings.

The TWUA head emphasized "that in its own, undramatic way the textile industry is as vital to the defense and to the well-being of our country as the blast-furnaces, the auto plants and the mines."

Reminder

CHECK your imprinted address. If it is incorrect in any way, fill out correctly the spaces provided and return.

NAME.....

LOCAL NO.....UNION.....

HOME ADDRESS.....
(Street)

.....
(City) (P. O. Zone)

.....
(State)

cut out

Please mail this form to National CIO, 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington 6, D. C. It is important that the Union and Local No. be shown on this form as a means of identification.

11-15

Thousands Laid Off By Hudson

SEVERAL thousand Hudson auto workers have joined the ranks of the Motor City's unemployed, despite Eisenhower Administration reports that prosperity has returned to the auto center.

The mass layoffs at Hudson came as the firm, now merged with Nash in the American Motors Corp., ended production on cars made in Detroit plants. From now on the Hudson will be made in the former Nash plants in Kenosha, Wis.

Pres. Joss Chatwin of Hudson Local 154 of the CIO Auto Workers said the production cuts would slash Hudson employment from 16,000 last year to 2000.

Jobless workers have seniority running as high as 39 years, the lowest seniority affected by the last layoff was 20 years.

The union, Chatwin said, is fighting for the right to transfer to the Kenosha plants with full seniority rights. The company has refused to allow this transfer.

MEANWHILE, an indefinite postponement has been ordered in the UAW-CIO's appeal against rulings involving $700,000 in unemployment claims for 11,500 Ford workers.

First U. S. Strike

The first strike on record in the U. S. occurred in New York in 1803, when a number of sailors struck for more pay. An early report of the strike said that "it seems to have been settled by the arrest of the leader and his lodgement in jail."

Non-Resident Relief Ban In Michigan Hit By UAW

A DETROIT Welfare Commission plan to get the Legislature to deny relief funds to natives of other states with less than three years' residence in Michigan was denounced by officials of the CIO Auto Workers.

Dir. Norman Matthews of Reg. 1 and Co-Directors Edward Cote and Joseph McCusker of Reg. 1A called the plan "cruel and unjustified," and said it seeks to penalize "those who are least at fault for their plight."

The trio declared that "the natives of other states on our city's relief rolls are there because of the auto industry's callous and inhuman practices of recruiting workers in labor surplus areas to come to Detroit to work when the auto makers need extra help temporarily to meet production schedules."

In the spring of 1953, they said, 38 auto corporation teams were recruiting in the South. But just a few months later, these "recruits" and workers with seniority in the industry were laid off, the UAW officials said.

"The answer to the problem does not lie in the Welfare Commission's heartless attitude of trying to force workers to 'leave and starve elsewhere,' which seems to resemble Defense Sec. Wilson's 'they'll-go-back-South-when-it-gets-cold' remark," they continued. "The answer lies within the auto industry itself."

Factory Jobs Inch Upward

FACTORY employment edged upward instead of showing the usual decline in October, the Labor Dept. reported last week.

Employment in manufacturing was 16,036,000 in early October, or about 17,000 more than the month before, it said.

It attributed the increase to 80,000 more jobs in transportation equipment factories—mostly auto plants. Normally, there is a 50,000 decline between the two months.

Non-farm employment was still more than 1.5 million below the level of October 1953, the department reported, although it rose by 110,000 during the month to 48.6 million. In most non-manufacturing industries, it added, employment continued at "relatively high" levels, although there were further drops in mining and transportation.

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

LEON KEYSERLING

Act Now On Recession—Keyserling

A LEADING economist, Leon K. Keyserling, called for "a sense of urgency" in dealing with the current recession lest we slide "glacier-like" into deeper economic troubles.

Keyserling delivered the first of three lectures sponsored by the Sidney Hillman Foundation at Washington's Howard University. The former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers under Pres. Truman charged that five million Americans "have been deprived" of full-time jobs.

HE SAID that annual production is $30 billion less than it should be and the average family's income is $500 under what the nation's resources should produce.

The most important lesson of the Great Depression, he said, "is that the most dangerous thing we can do in the current situation is to let a slight depression get worse."

Not until four years after the depression began in 1929 was a recovery program started, Keyserling said.

"By then it was too late," he added.

Pioneer Kentucky CIO Leader Dies

Peter J. Campbell, 82, one-time CIO regional director in Kentucky and an officer in the State CIO Council, died recently in Louisville.

As an officer in several plumbers' union, he was also secretary-treasurer of the Kentucky State Federation of Labor for some 40 years.

HAPPY DAYS?—Things were never better, the GOP optimists keep saying but it might be hard to convince these men of it. Hungry, they are among Michigan's 285,000 jobless. Daily they line up for free lunch at the Capuchin Fathers monastery in Detroit, an indication of how things are even with auto production increasing.

The City of Hope (See Page 6)

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., November 22, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 47

Auto Contract Goals Set

U. S. Action Urged In Second River Shooting

—See Pages 2 & 3

Auto Employers Take Notice— Eight-point bargaining program the CIO Auto Workers will give industry in 1955 called for deep thinking by the 1100 delegates to the union's Economic and Collective Bargaining Conference in Detroit, as lower left photo shows. But there were lighter moments too (lower right), when Pres. Walter P. Reuther found time for a laugh with Dir. Caroline Davis (left) of the UAW Women's Bureau, and Lillian Hatcher, of the Fair Employment Practices Dept. At top, Reuther explains the program, which includes guaranteed annual employment, wage increases and a two-year contract, replacing present five-year pacts. (See Page 3.)

Jobless Pay Boost Drive Pressed In 2 States

LABOR GAINS in the recent elections brought action in two key industrial states to alleviate the plight of the jobless whose unemployment was a major factor in the voting.

1. In Pennsylvania, where Democrats took over both houses of the Legislature from the GOP, Democratic Gov.-elect Leader is planning a bill to forestall cuts in unemployment compensation.

2. In Michigan, the five CIO Auto Workers regional directors wrote State GOP Chairman John Feikens that the Republicans now have a chance to prove they learned a lesson from the election. They can support improvements in Michigan's unemployment compensation law in the coming legislative session, the UAW said.

3. Not so heartening was the situation in Pittsburgh, with Allegheny County officials considering dropping the surplus food distribution program because of alleged bungling in administration.

The possibility of emergency legislation to prevent unemployment compensation cuts in Pennsylvania was discussed by Leader because the State's fund is nearing the "peril point."

When the fund reaches $339 million, a reduction in maximum benefits from $30 to $20 weekly is mandatory under present law. The fund is in no danger of being washed out since it presently is at the $410 million mark.

But during the campaign, Democrats said that the GOP had employers pay their contributions a month in advance to avert a possible slash prior to the election. Whether the rush bill will be introduced in the 1955 Legislature depends on the unemployment situation in January.

THE LETTER from Michigan UAW-CIO regional directors to Feikens came in response to a newspaper interview quoting Feikens. He had said the Republican Party must rebuild with more emphasis on "getting over to the people the fact that the Republican Party is and can be a liberal party close to the concerns of the people."

UAW Directors Norman Matthews, Joseph McCusker, William McAulay, Robert Carter and Leonard Woodcock reminded Feikens that the CIO would seek unemployment compensation amendments increasing benefits and duration, and eliminating "vicious disqualifications" written into law by the GOP.

Their letter said that this would be "an outstandingly important test" because "comparison of the production schedules of the auto corporations for the months immediately ahead with their projections of total output for 1955 clearly points to unemployment in the second half of the year even more serious than our State has experienced this year."

Buttressing their argument was the report from the Michigan CIO that the unemployment picture "isn't as rosy" as the State Employment Security Commission claims. The MESC had pointed to a drop of 45,000 in unemployment compensation claims as a result of the end of the model-changeover period in the auto industry.

"The fact still remains," the Michigan CIO said, "that despite the call-back, the State still has a hard core of unemployment of better than 200,000—workers with little or no chance of finding jobs in the months ahead."

The Wayne County CIO Council and the UAW were at least partially cheered by a victory in the long fight for distribution of surplus foods to needy persons in the Detroit area. The Detroit Welfare Commission approved a $3 million annual program of food distribution.

IN SAN FRANCISCO, there was dramatic evidence to bear out unofficial State estimates that unemployment in the Bay Area is 50% higher than a year ago.

Six thousand jobless men and women tried frantically to jam into the post office long before dawn on a rainy morning to file applications for about 2000 temporary jobs on the Christmas mails paying $1.56½ an hour for 10 days at the most, depending on the flow of mail. Reinforced post office guards had to call city police to help.

In Washington, GOP economists were cheerily trotting out their optimistic forecasts about the nation's economy again. This time it's 1955 they're saying will be a "second-best year."

The year ahead will be "a little better than this year," they say, but not quite as good as 1953. And they again expressed "confidence" that Pres. Eisenhower will request emergency measures should the optimistic forecast go wrong. But they set neither Groundhog Day nor the return of the robins in the spring as a deadline for such action.

A Study In Contrasts

A $7 billion melon was distributed to stockholders in the first 10 months of this year by those corporations which publish their dividend figures.

It is estimated that these dividends approximate two-thirds of the total. So total corporation dividends would add up to about $10.5 billion.

The total of publicly-reported cash dividends in October alone was $594 million, or 7.5% more than October 1953.

A 1c decline in the average rate for non-overtime factory work from the preceding month was registered in mid-October, despite new wage increases.

Since the first of the year, the straight-time average hourly pay has fluctuated within a narrow 2c range—from a low of $1.74 to a high of $1.76.

Layoffs in high-wage durable goods industries have offset the effect of negotiated wage adjustments.

Justice Dept. Action Urged After Second Rivers Shooting

CREW member James Kennedy pickets struck barges at Cairo, Ill., where NMU Organizer Gordon Knapp was shot.

HARD on the heels of a second shooting in the strike of the J. W. Banta Towing Co. of Plaquemine, La., the Rivers Joint Organizing Committee (CIO-AFL) lodged a formal complaint with the Justice Dept.

The complaint was presented by RJOC Coordinator Charles Barranco, Jr., who appeared personally at the department and left a four-page letter for Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell detailing the history of the strike and several possible violations of federal law on the part of the Banta family, owners of the struck firm.

The second shooting occurred at O-Kan Harbor, Gallipolis, O., where the M/V Frank W. Banta had been picketed by crew members on strike.

Gallia County Asst. Prosecuting Attorney Warren Sheets and Sheriff George Ehman threatened to arrest picketers, Barranco said. The strikers then withdrew to a picket boat in the river and strikebreakers were escorted aboard.

DURING THAT incident, Barranco's complaint charged, the sheriff lined the bank of the Ohio River with deputies armed with rifles and submachine guns.

"Then he was seen running down the bank and firing two shots in the direction of our pickets," Barranco related.

The first shooting, which wounded CIO Maritime Union Organizer Gordon Knapp, occured at Cairo, Ill., where Knapp and crew members were peacefully picketing struck barges the Banta Co. had been towing. When the strikers refused to release the barges, four members of the Banta family, along with other armed persons, opened fire from mid-stream, wounding Knapp in the arm.

No one was injured at Gallipolis, but Barranco charged various violations of federal statutes and violations of the civil rights of the striking crew members.

THE RJOC LETTER to Brownell asked for "immediate and stern action" by the Justice Dept. "so that our membership is protected from intimidation, coercion and further violence and bloodshed."

The major federal violation charged was that "J. W. Banta, in a press interview in New Orleans, La., admitted that he had transported arms and men from Louisiana to Illinois to break the strike."

Barranco's letter also said that another family member, Frank W. Banta, had similarly admitted importing strikebreakers to Ohio to man the vessel tied up at Gallipolis and bearing his name.

PRIOR to the escape of this boat, Barranco said in his complaint, "the assistant prosecuting attorney of Gallia Conuty broke the picket lines and informed the pickets that if they dared to picket they would be picked up and held on 'suspicion.'"

The RJOC letter noted that both the sheriff and the prosecuting attorney were informed by Barranco that "the principals of the J. W. Banta Towing Co. were fugitives from justice and were wanted by the Cairo police" on charges of shooting with intent to kill. Warrants to that effect had been sworn out by Knapp against four members of the Banta family.

"Yet they not only refused to take any action to apprehend these men, but actually took further course of action against our union people," Barranco related.

Walter Ends Move On Inquiry Group

Rep. Walter (D. Pa.), slated to become chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee in the 84th Congress, abandoned his fight to abolish that committee.

Walter told newsmen his position after being informed that Speaker Martin (R. Mass.) said there would be little or no Republican support for the proposal. Walter wanted to transfer committee functions to the House Judiciary Committee.

CIO Opens Hearing On Welfare Fund Rules

ADMINISTRATION of union health, welfare and retirement programs will be scrutinized and suggestions for improvements received by the CIO Committee on Ethical Practices at an open meeting in the Commodore Hotel, New York, on Nov. 22 and 23.

The hearings are part of the CIO's over-all examination of welfare fund operations touched off by recent allegations of malpractices in a few instances.

They are in keeping with the CIO Executive Board's pledge to use its constitutional powers to investigate such charges, "to preserve the integrity of our movement and to keep it free from taint," and to "take prompt and effective action on our own initiative against financial corruption by union officials."

The hearings will get under way with introductory comment by the committee members—Chairman Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the CIO Clothing Workers; Pres. Joseph N. Curran of the Maritime Union, Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes of the Steelworkers, and CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg, who serves as committee director.

The rest of the opening session will be devoted to a round table discussion to which insurance company executives have been invited along with Murray Lattimer, industrial relations consultant and former chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board. Several union technical experts also will be present.

ALSO to be heard during the two-day session will be representatives of federal and state governments, independent experts, rank and file beneficiaries of union welfare programs and the heads of a number of CIO unions.

The committee will have before it the results of a nine-page questionnaire, sent to all CIO international unions, seeking detailed information on welfare plan programs and their administration.

CIO Wins By 3 To 1 Vote At Big Ohio Atom Plant

WORKERS at the nation's newest atomic energy plant in Portsmouth, O., won an NLRB election by a three to one margin over the AFL Atomic Trades Council.

The CIO Chemical Workers got 689 votes to 227 for the AFL and 215 for "no union."

Approximately 1200 workers are now employed by Goodyear Atomic Corp., which operates the plant for the Atomic Energy Commission. The facility is scheduled to expand to employ about 4500 by 1956.

UGCW-CIO also represents production workers at the nation's only two plants producing fissionable Uranium 235. Both plants are operated by Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Corp., one at Paducah, Ky., and the other at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

UGCCW just won a new 10c package raise for the 4500 union members at those plants after prolonged bargaining and a four-day strike, which was ended by a Taft-Hartley injunction against the strike.

Auto Workers Unveil 1955 Bargaining Goals

JOE ROSENTHAL, past president of San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild, stands with his family before Marine Corps Memorial inspired by his famous Iwo Jima flag-raising photograph.

By GERVASE N. LOVE

THE ECONOMIC package the CIO Auto Workers will seek from the auto industry when major contracts open next year was spelled out last week end at the union's National Economic and Collective Bargaining Conference in Detroit.

Its main feature is a guaranteed annual employment plan which would assure all employes with two years' seniority 52 weeks of work, or cash payments which would enable laid-off workers to maintain customary standard of living.

In addition, it would give protection to probationary workers against short weeks, and against longer layoffs without advance notice.

The demands also include a wage increase made up of two factors—5.3c an hour to compensate for failure to apply properly the theory behind the 1948 wage formula, and consolidation into base rates of whatever amount may be in the cost of living increase float (now 7c) at the time of negotiations.

Shorter Contracts

The conference, made up of 1100 delegates from locals throughout the country, also accepted the recommendation of the international executive board that the principle of five-year contracts be junked.

Instead, they voted to limit agreements to one year unless they contain cost of living escalator and improvement factor clauses, and to two years if they do.

The bargaining program in addition calls for major readjustments in the escalator table and improvement factor provisions, a 25% increase in pensions with the union having a voice in the investment of pension funds, an improved disability pension plan, full non-contributory health security protection jointly administered by management and union, stronger overtime rate clauses and a greatly improved preferential hiring program.

UAW Pres. Walter P. Reuther, who also heads the CIO, told a Detroit press conference that the union "is united as it has never before been united on a set of demands."

He declined to reveal any of the steps the union may take to gain its objectives.

"If there is going to be a strike, and I pray there will not be," he said in answer to a question, "the strike will undoubtedly take place against the company which has shown the least moral responsibility. We are going to put a penalty on the absence of those virtues."

He conceded the employers probably will oppose the guaranteed annual employment plan, which he said is based on "the economic facts of life" and is both "economic justice" and "economic necessity."

Employment Plan

In material prepared for the conference, the executive board said the employment plan will:

- Provide the strongest practical incentives to employers to plan for regular, fulltime, year-round employment for all seniority workers.
- Provide regular income sufficient to maintain the living standards of laid-off workers when the employers fail to provide such employment.
- Protect all workers against short work weeks and all seniority workers against layoff.
- Integrate guarantee payments with unemployment compensation.
- Be jointly administered with decisions made independently of unemployment compensation agencies.
- Be financed through a combination of pay-as-you-go and a reserve trust fund, with provision for re-insurance.

The guarantee means that all employes able to work and available for work would be guaranteed "40 straight time hours of work or pay at their regular rates for every week, unless notified in advance that they are to be laid off for the entire week."

AUTOMATION must be met by the CIO Auto Workers with a program adapted to the challenge of a better life in a framework of full production, the international executive board reported to the UAW National Economic and Collective Bargaining Conference.

The board listed the steps the union must take to get the worker his full share of the prosperity implicit in the "dramatic technological advances" which many hail as the third industrial revolution.

They are attainment of guaranteed annual employment, solution of the manpower displacement problem, revision of job classifications and wage structures, contracts of shorter duration, political action—and the shorter work week.

"After the guaranteed annual wage has been secured," the board said, "the shorter work week will take its place at the top of our collective bargaining agenda along with the continuing fight for higher living standards. The fight for the shorter work week and for higher living standards must go hand in hand."

The board maintained that establishment of the guaranteed annual wage "becomes imperative" in the face of "new and revolutionary technological changes developing in our economy."

Potential For Chaos

"The wealth-producing potential of automation," it said, "is matched only by its potential for disruption and chaos unless harnessed in the interest of the nation as a whole.

"Workers must be provided with employment and income security so that the nation can meet these revolutionary possibilities with a minimum of disruption and hardship. The guaranteed annual wage represents the most essential element of that needed security structure."

With machines replacing men, the board warned, the UAW-CIO must negotiate skilled training contract clauses.

"Our union is committed to the struggle to make the fruits of technological advances available to all," they said, "and to work for abundance for people at home and abroad. From the secure platform provided by the guaranteed annual wage and with the freedom provided by short-term contracts, the UAW-CIO will continue to fight for an ever-expanding national output."

UAW Goals In Summary

The eight-point collective bargaining program adopted by the CIO Auto Workers National Economic and Collective Bargaining Conference in Detroit provides:

1. A guaranteed annual employment plan which would give all workers with two years' seniority 52 weeks' work, and protect non-seniority workers against short weeks and layoffs without advance notice.

2. A wage increase of 5.3c an hour to raise rates to the level they would have reached had the theory behind the 1948 wage formula been properly applied; incorporation of the "float" in the cost of living increase into base rates; an increase in the amount of the annual improvement factor, and a new cost of living escalator table reflecting the proper relationship between index points and wage rates.

3. A new pension formula to yield a minimum of $25 per month for five years' service on normal retirement at age 65 by basing payments on $2.50 a month for each year of service instead of the present $1.75, with removal of the present 30-year limit on accumulation of credits; also an improved disability pension plan.

4. Improved health security protection programs based on non-contributory financing by employers, instead of the present contributory plans.

5. Overtime at the rate of time and a half for Saturdays as such, double time for Sundays and triple time for holidays.

6. A two-year limit on duration of contracts containing escalator and improvement factor provisions, one year for those without them.

7. Preferential hiring by any plant of a multi-plant corporation for employes laid off in any plant of that company; and for all plants under contract, preferential hiring for laid-off workers in the same industry and area.

8. Inclusion of model clauses in contracts which lack them, with authority for company councils and local unions to include demands to meet special problems.

Deadlines

The CIO Auto Workers' major contracts in the auto industry, of five years' duration, all expire next year. The dates:

General Motors, May 29; Ford, June 1, and Chrysler, Aug. 31.

IUE Wins Again At Lamp Plant

A VICTORY of the CIO Electrical Workers in an NLRB election at Trenton, N. J., ousted the Communist-dominated United Electrical Workers and brought the workers of all Westinghouse lamp plants into IUE-CIO.

Some 650 workers are employed at the Trenton plant. The CIO union conducted a six-month campaign prior to the election, which ended UE's 13-year reign as collective bargaining representative.

IUE-CIO now represents 66,000 employes in the Westinghouse chain organized in 27 locals.

The CIO union recently was certified by the Ontario Labor Relations Board to represent 350 employes at the new Westinghouse plant at Brantford.

IUE-CIO Local 455 at the General Electric plant at Trenton helped start the campaign at Westinghouse's Trenton plant. Rank-and-file leaders from IUE-CIO Local 410 at the Westinghouse lamp plant at Bloomfield, N. J., pointed out that their rates averaged 14c an hour higher than those at Trenton.

The recently organized IUE-CIO Local 422 at the Fedder-Quigan plant at Trenton, also aided the campaign. During the last week of the drive, the IUE-CIO Westinghouse Conference Board met in Trenton and participated in the final pre-election activities.

Oh, Senator, What You Said!

Carried away by the sound of his own voice, Sen. Capehart (R.) last week twice referred to himself as "the able Senator from Indiana." Modest Homer was explaining to the Senate why he had to go to an economic conference in Rio de Janeiro.

2 Chrysler Locals Vote Strike; Plane Pact Settled

Recent developments in CIO Auto Workers' contracts and negotiations include:

CHRYSLER: Nearly 27,000 employes of the Chrysler Corp. Automotive Body Div., members of Local 212 in Detroit and Local 265 at Evansville, Ind., voted by a 9-1 margin to strike in order to settle long-standing grievances.

UAW Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey, director of the Automotive Body Div. of the union's Chrysler Dept., said he would seek immediate strike authorization from the international executive board.

Among the matters in dispute are the reinstatement of 25 office workers who were discharged prior to a recent National Labor Relations Board election: a contract for the office workers; grievances growing out of production standards; health and safety grievances; reclassifications resulting in lower pay; seniority violations, and "a general breakdown of collective bargaining."

FAIRCHILD AIRCRAFT: The first new union shop in the industry negotiated in three years was contained in a new contract reached by Local 738 and the Fairchild Aircraft Corp., Hagerstown, Md. The pact also increased wages from 6c to 10c an hour, provided 5c per hour improvement factors in October 1955 and again a year later, and consolidated 3c of the 6c per hour increase under the cost of living clause into the base rate.

The health and welfare plans and seniority provisions were improved, vacations were advanced to include three weeks after 15 years, and intra-plant inequities were corrected.

MARTIN AIRCRAFT: In another aircraft agreement, Local 842 and the Glenn L. Martin Co., Baltimore, Md., agreed on a 7c an hour average wage raise and a 5c per hour improvement increase on June 30, 1955. The hikes come on top of a 5c improvement increase last June 30.

The modified union shop was retained, pensions were increased from $112.50 to $140 a month, and improvements were chalked up in vacation, insurance and seniority clauses.

KAISER: The Kaiser Motors Corp. and its subsidiary, Willys Motors, Inc., will consolidate all motor vehicle operations in the latter's plant at Toledo, O. The shift involves moving the Kaiser engine division from Detroit, foundry division from Pontiac, Mich., and stamping works from Shadyside, O.

Edgar Kaiser said the biggest factor in deciding on the move was the constructive and cooperative action of Local 12 at the Willys plant, which he described as "the finest example of union-company cooperation in the history of Kaiser Enterprises."

The UAW's Demands

The collective bargaining program the CIO Auto Workers have prepared for presentation to employers next year is strictly in keeping with the CIO's traditional belief that "what's good for the country is good for CIO."

For the country as a whole will reap the benefit, not merely the union's members, if the employers take the same long view as the democratically chosen representatives of their workers.

The mere establishment of the guaranteed annual employment plan—entirely apart from the other contract improvements to be sought—would mean a continuing pool of purchasing power in the hands of more than a million men and women which would have beneficial economic effects throughout the country.

For when workers have money, they spend it. And spending creates sales, which in turn create jobs for other workers and profits for their employers.

Honest Welfare Funds

This week at public hearings in New York City, the CIO is offering clear evidence that it seriously intends to make sure all union welfare fund administration meets the highest ethical standards.

Out of these hearings will come a concrete, practical trade union program for protecting these assets, held in trust for the workers who are the union. CIO has said there is no room in the labor movement for crooks or Communists. Now it is proving that it means just that.

Forty Years Young

We tip our hats in salute to the New Republic magazine—on its fortieth anniversary.

The New Republic is one of the best of the journals of liberal opinion. Through the years, it has been a good friend of labor and a supporter of every sound cause to advance the economic and social advances of the people.

The New Republic deserves a round of applause for its services and contributions to American thinking. And, even more importantly, it deserves support from old readers and from people who ought to subscribe but don't.

Legal But Unjust

A 4-4 tie vote in the U. S. Supreme Court has upheld an Iowa decision that a widow could not sue a cemetery for refusing to bury her late husband—an American Indian killed overseas in the American Army during World War II.

The four justices who voted to uphold the state court decision probably had good reasons in law for voting as they did. But somehow, we can't help believing that justice—inside the law or outside—rests on the side of the widow and not on the side of a cemetery that practices this sort of discrimination.

The U. S. Senate

The U. S. Senate, with its strengths and its weaknesses, is an integral part of our American democracy . . . a bulwark of the right of the free representatives of free people to speak their mind.

Joe McCarthy, during recent weeks, has been throwing mud at the democratic institution—a not unusual posture for the junior Senator from Wisconsin.

It is immensely gratifying that Senators of both parties, liberals like Monroney, conservatives like Watkins—have come so staunchly and with so much dignity and pride to the defense of the Upper House.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS
Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, Milton Plumb, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII November 22, 1954 No. 47

When The Frost Is On The Bumpkin

In Other Words—

A Farmer Speaks To Labor

The article below is a digest of a speech given at the recent Virginia CIO Council Convention by John B. Vance, president of the Virginia Farmers Union, which in a year has increased its membership of 200 to 6000 farm families.

By JOHN B. VANCE

THE FACT that I am here today is proof that the farmers of our great Commonwealth are becoming more and more conscious of a basic principle which labor recognized many years ago—that those of us who constitute the producers of this country must of necessity unite in a strong, aggressive organization if we are to protect our own interests, and secure our just and fair share of the national income.

In my own mind—and more and more people are becoming conscious of this fact—it is an absolute necessity that farmers understand the problems of labor and that labor understand the problems of farmers.

The interrelationship between a strong, healthy American agriculture and an economic climate which is healthy for the worker is a relationship which does not exist and which must of necessity be recognized. There must be a common understanding between farmers and labor due to one very important basic fact—we are each other's best customers.

When agricultural prices are favorable, the farmers are able to buy more and more of the goods produced by labor. When jobs are plentiful, when the worker is being paid a decent wage, then he is able to buy more and more of the things we produce on our farms.

What Harms Farmers Harms Labor

Generally speaking, I feel that farmers recognize that prosperity for labor is a basis for national prosperity. However, it should also be recognized that economic dislocation for farmers harms labor and destroys national prosperity.

You know, as I do, that industry maintains prices by cutting production and laying off workers. If workers are laid off, there is curtailment in their purchasing power and, therefore, less demand for farm products. On the other hand, if the farmer can't sell his commodities, then he can't buy manufactured goods.

A farmer's production line cannot be turned off with a switch, simply because his crop is in the ground, then if he gets anything for it at all, he must harvest it regardless of price. Neither can he fire his wife and kids. History shows that invariably when prices fall, the farmer reacts opposite to industry. He attempts to make up in increased production what he has lost in income and unit price. This vicious cycle is the historical basis of every depression in the history of this country. They were all farm led and farm fed.

Bensonism

Any increase in dairy price support levels next year would be a "serious mistake" and bad for the dairy farmer, said Agriculture Sec. Benson at a news conference.

It is very gratifying to me, and it should be to millions of farmers, to know that labor is well aware of the economic interrelationship of farmers and labor. I was particularly impressed by a letter written earlier this year by your national president, Walter Reuther, to the chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

What a pity that our own Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson does not have the same conception of the agricultural and economic situation as the great labor leader!

Instead, the farmers find themselves in the sorry plight of having a Secretary of Agriculture with an almost perfect batting average of reducing farm price supports at every opportunity; a Secretary who is obviously influenced by the big business-processor-middleman crowd; a Secretary who has used the vast powers of his office in an attempt to discredit the farm price support program in the eyes of the public, who has attempted to set city consumer against the farmer, and even farmer against farmer in his desperate effort to kill the farm programs.

I am greatly disturbed by the apparent self-satisfied indifference of high officials of the Administration towards the rising number of unemployed people in this country.

We should never be satisfied with a static economic climate. Instead we must strive to move forward to the extent that in the future there will be social and economic security for workers in their jobs, as well as farmers on their farms. To me, this is an essential prerequisite to the continued growth of our country.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

MANY PEOPLE who opposed Mr. Eisenhower's presidential election, who disbelieve in much of his leadership, must face the fact that he will be President for the next 25 months, and that it will be necessary to protect the General, many times, against his Republican "friends."

On Backing Ike When He's Right

In the field of domestic policy he is frequently wrong.

Pres. Eisenhower tends to act as if the only men he can trust are his old Army comrades and the millionaires. He seems to think that the millionaires, since they have made or inherited financial fortunes, are smarter, brighter, and more sound than the lesser breeds who are merely scholars, intellectuals and profound students of public affairs.

The President's domestic program is a give-away, trickle-down program. He has been rightly opposed on tax policy, where he favors special privileges to the rich; on his hostility to public power; on his give-aways of grazing and forest lands; on his strange theory that he serves the people by voluntarily sloughing off federal functions.

But in the field of foreign policy, where he has been working to hammer out a forceful but peace-seeking program to strengthen the security of the free world, Eisenhower deserves a quality of support much broader than he is getting from his Republicans.

Was any American President since Lincoln so cursed as Eisenhower by bitter-end warmongers and reckless marplots of his own party?

He has McCarthy and Jenner to deal with. Most damaging of all, he has the earnest, honest but stolid ranter, Sen. Knowland of California, saddled on him as official GOP Senate floor leader.

The Unofficial Ambassador

This reporter has never understood what Sen. Taft had in mind when he personally "appointed" Knowland as "temporary" floor leader, in Taft's absence during his final sickness, and thus gave Knowland a green light to demand the job permanently.

The effects, however, are clear. The chief Senate Republican policy spokesman goes raging around the world, messing up an orderly management of difficult foreign affairs, and raging up and down the country telling audiences what a dunce Eisenhower is.

Knowland makes himself practically an unofficial ambassador to Formosa, acknowledging no responsibility, however, to the State Dept. He makes speeches threatening to resign as Eisenhower's leader and fight for American withdrawal from the United Nations if Red China is "ever" admitted.

He trots to the Southland to make a speech suggesting that we break diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. He gets up on the Senate floor, in the midst of the McCarthy censure debate, to launch an all-out attack on Eisenhower's diplomacy and demand a full-scale congressional "agonizing reappraisal."

What has the President done to deserve this? Well, he refused last Spring to approve an American atomic air strike to "save" the beleaguered French fortress of Dien Bien Phu following the refusal of the British to participate or approve.

On Sept. 12, at a National Security Council meeting in Denver, he overruled the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Defense Dept. and the State Dept. and refused to approve American bomb strikes at the Chinese mainland to "save" the coastal islands of Quemoy for Chiang Kai-shek. (Gen. Ridgway, Army Chief of Staff, was the only dissenter from this rash recommendation of the Pentagon warhawks.)

Gazing Into The Abyss

The President, as Chalmers Roberts of the Washington Post and Times Herald found an intimate willing to say, "has twice gazed into the abyss" of all-out nuclear war—and has refused to originate or provoke it.

His economizers have cut defense appropriations too heavily, and the free world's strength is not what it would have been had the Truman budget and program been maintained. But Eisenhower has maintained the basic principles of free world cooperation, of mutual help between nations of the Atlantic community.

He has, steadily, pulled away from the rash campaign promises of "liberating" the Soviet satellites, and has talked of the simple fact that modern war would atomize both the vanquished and the presumed victor.

When he talks this way, he needs the sustenance of the people to nourish his strength against the men of violence, the "preventive war" agitators, in his own party.

★ Postmaster General Summerfield scornfully suggests that the majority of citizens don't know or care anything about the Dixon-Yates contract designed to whittle down the Tennessee Valley Authority. The theory seems to be that what the people don't know the GOP is doing to them won't hurt them.

LISTEN TO THE CIO RADIO PROGRAM

John W. Vandercook AND THE NEWS

every weekday evening on the ABC Network

John Vandercook Says—

GOP Gets Way Out On Limb In Hosannah For Private Power

When the Republican majority on the Joint Atomic Energy Committee voted to ram the controversial Dixon-Yates deal through before the Democrats take over Congress, CIO-sponsored Commentator John Vandercook took occasion to review the issue. Excerpts of his comments on ABC follow:

By JOHN W. VANDERCOOK

WHEN PRES. EISENHOWER was asked about the troublesome, and still more than faintly mysterious, promise of the federal government to enter into a contract for electric power with the Dixon-Yates combine—on a guaranteed profit and non-competitive basis—the President declared that he still favors that deal because no better way, he thinks, has been offered for the Atomic Energy Commission to get the additional electric power it needs.

If, added Eisenhower, there is any politics in this thing, it isn't by his choosing—someone is making it that way. That, considering the doubts and questions that have been raised about that much-questioned agreement, can well be believed.

Soon after the President had finished speaking, an action was taken down at the Capitol at a meeting of the Joint Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee, which has been holding hearings on the whys and wherefores of the Dixon-Yates deal. Democratic Sen. Pastore of Rhode Island offered a resolution to call upon the Atomic Energy Commission not to sign the Dixon-Yates contract. The Republicans are anxious to get this thing out of the way, fast, while they still have a majority on the Atomic Energy Committee.

An Argument Hard To Follow

How anxious they are came out still later, when it was revealed that Eisenhower had backed his consistent and always slightly puzzling enthusiasm for the Dixon-Yates contract by writing the Chairman of the Atomic Energy Committee, urging its quick acceptance.

In his letter the President made the curious point that the principle of using private rather than public power to supplement the energy resources of the Tennessee Valley Authority represents "justice to the country as a whole."

"If," wrote the President, "the federal government assumes responsibility in perpetuity for providing the TVA area with all the power it can accept, it has a similar responsibility to every other area and region and corner of the United States."

An argument that's pretty hard to follow.

"Hurry, Friend—There's Not A Moment To Lose"

Variety of ways of doing things has been a feature—a desirable feature—of the life of our country from its beginnings. Never, that I know of, have the supporters of such great and complicated undertakings as TVA and the Columbia River developments that cross state lines, and involve everything from preserving bird nests to irrigation, made any proposal so radical as the one the President has now backed into.

That all power should be public power, if there is any public power. Contrariwise, Eisenhower seems to be taking the view that if all electric power everywhere cannot be provided by public projects, then all of it should be supplied by private companies; two extreme attitudes that, examined in a good light, would appear to make no sense whatever.

Eisenhower may not have chosen, in the past, to make that private power deal a political issue. But from here on in, he has chosen to do so. And so has the Republican Party.

Put simply, the Republican Administration has now put itself on record as believing that any private project for the production of electric power, even for the use of a public enterprise like the Atomic Energy Commission, and even if it is more expensive to the taxpayers, is somehow, mysteriously, more desirable than any comparable public project.

The Most Severe Test Of A Man

A story behind the story of the recent firing of John Paton Davies by Sec. of State Dulles, as related recently over CBS by Commentator Eric Sevareid:

By ERIC SEVAREID

SOME TIMES, to add to the meaning of headlines, a reporter must be personal. Eleven years ago I was a war correspondent, flying toward China over the infamous "Hump."

There came a terrifying moment when the passengers, mostly GI's, stood near the door, trying to summon the courage to bail out of the crippled plane.

Precious moments passed. Then one of the three civilians aboard, the diplomat who clutched a dispatch case to his chest, gave us a wry smile and leaped out. His action broke the paralysis; we all followed; and all of us, but one, survived.

In the weeks that followed, we were never entirely sure we would get out of those jungle mountains; in such circumstances men learn truly to know one another; who is weak; who is afraid; who is impetuous, and who is strong, and calm and prudent.

'The Civilian With Courage'

As the time passed, the GI's and I began to recognize the civilian with the carefully guarded dispatch case as one among us with a calm and natural courage, as one who would never panic, who never complained. He was the one we chose, for common sense and discretion, to deal with the touchy and dangerous Naga head hunters, our undecided hosts.

Mostly we feared Japanese patrols, and a day came when we heard there was a Jap patrol not far away. The Colonel in charge gave orders that we three civilians, in case of attack, were to take our guns and try to escape, while the soldiers remained to fight. It was the diplomat who said, "In the first place this would be dishonorable. In the second place, we'd never get out." Fortunately, there was no attack.

After we emerged into India and the military reports were in, there was a move in the Air Force to decorate our diplomat for his outstanding personal conduct. I do not know if he ever received the decoration. But none of us in that strange party, I think, would have disputed the choice. For I thought then, as I think now, that if ever again I were in deep trouble, the man I would want to be with would be this particular man.

I have known a great number of men around the world, under all manner of circumstance. I have known none who seemed more the whole man; none more finished a civilized product, in all that a man should be—in modesty and thoughtfulness, in resourcefulness and steady strength of character.

The name of this man is John Paton Davies. He is the man Secretary of State Dulles, on the recommendation of a five-man board, has just broken on the wheel of official disgrace. The Foreign Service officer dismissed, three years short of retirement and pension, after giving twenty-three years of his life—and almost life itself—in the arduous service of his government.

Eight times he was investigated; eight times he was cleared. One by one the politically inspired charges of communism or disloyalty or perjury were dropped; the ninth board came up with something new, called defects of character. Davies is not, concluded the board and Dulles, of sufficient judgment, discretion and reliability.

Sufficient, one may ask, unto what? Their test can only have been of supernatural design. I saw their victim measured against the most severe tests that mortal man can design. Those, he passed—at the head of the class.

KEENLY INTERESTED—Pres. Joseph A. Beirne, CIO Communications Workers, and wife visit the City of Hope.

WELL PLANNED — This aerial photo shows symmetrical design of the City of Hope. Note that the buildings are grouped around the central one without crowding.

OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY is shown by patient to Sec.-Treas. I. W. Abel and Dist. 38 Dir. Charles Smith, CIO Steelworkers.

Labor Takes Care Of Its Own At City Of Hope Medical Center

By FRED ROSS

"Man is his brother's keeper."

That's the idea behind the City of Hope, national non-sectarian medical center at Duarte, near Los Angeles, where thousands of union members have been restored to health free of charge.

It was begun more than 40 years as two tents by a few dreamers with this idea of human brotherhood in their hearts.

The fruition of the dream is 75 beautifully landscaped acres on which are hospital buildings equipped with the most modern, scientific apparatus available.

Much time and many words could be spent on the history of this "people's movement," as it has been called. From its beginning, the City of Hope had the support of organized labor.

Support Earned

It has earned that support. It has returned thousands of trade unionists, including many members of the CIO, to their families and to normal, productive lives.

There have never been any questions asked at the City of Hope regarding origin, color, creed or religion. Trade unionists and members of their families have been the greatest recipients of the facilities of this renowned center.

Its doors have been open to workers and their families who cannot afford the long and costly treatment accompanying catastrophic disease.

Treatment is administered to patients with a full regard to human dignity, for personalization rather than institutionalization is the keynote of care at the City of Hope.

Welcome Guests

Every patient is made to feel that he is a welcome guest. Nothing is spared to make him comfortable and happy. Every effort is made to heal the patient physically, mentally and spiritually. These are reasons why the City of Hope is uniquely a working man's hospital.

The center is devoted to a three-pronged frontal attack on specific diseases — cancer, leukemia, tuberculosis and heart ailment amenable to surgery—through treatment, research and medical training.

The latest techniques and methods are employed, such as the Maxitron x-ray therapy unit, an isotope laboratory, and a recently purchased cobalt beam unit.

Concrete evidence of labor's aid in this fight against disease is found on the grounds of the center, where buildings and other facilities bear the names of local and international unions. And the hundreds of union patients who are receiving the finest medical care testify to the fact that labor takes care of its own.

Constant Research

There is a constant search at the center for new methods, new techniques and new cures for diseases. The medical training program of the City of Hope will train doctors, research specialists and technicians for communities throughout the United States.

In this day when the atom is split for good and evil, producing the health-giving isotope as well as the death-dealing bomb, the future of civilization rests with men and women dedicated to hope.

That was why CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther—who with AFL Pres. George Meany is an honorary chairman of the national labor council of the center—said:

"The City of Hope is a great trade union enterprise. As a pioneer in medical care, the City of Hope has saved thousands of workers' families from being swept under by financial disaster. The world of the City of Hope must move forward. It merits the active interest and support of every trade union and worker's family."

Testimonial

One highlight of the coming CIO convention will be a testimonial dinner for CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther at the Statler Hotel, Los Angeles, Dec. 9, with the proceeds going to the City of Hope.

Chairman Joseph A. Beirne of the CIO Community Services Committee, who is president of the CIO Communications Workers, is dinner chairman.

PATIENT David Varella is visited by Pres. Manuel Garrega of UAW Local 509. Building at right is gift of ACWA Local 4.

WELCOME GUESTS are Los Angeles ACWA Manager Jerome Posner, Joseph Fisher and Sarah Rozner.

PROUD of her husband is patient Louise Thorpe. He is nephew of athlete, the late Jim Thorpe. She is showing his picture to Bob Goss and Odella Clayton, OWIU.

PHILIP MURRAY Hearing Room is dedicated at American Arbitration Assn. headquarters in New York. At left, Philip Murray Memorial Foundation Dir. Arthur Goldberg speaks. At right, honored guests at ceremony pose. Seated (from left) CIO Exec. Vice Pres. John Riffe, AAA Pres. Whitney North Seymour; CIO Sec.-Treas. James Carey. Standing, Arthur Goldberg, Leo Cherne, George Thursby, James Thimmes and J. Noble Barden, AAA executive vice president. The presentation was the latest in a series of gifts from the $1 million fundation.

Book Review—

'A Happy Liberal' Recalls When The People Came First

BACK in the good old days, when concern for the general welfare was more than an empty phrase in Washington, Morris Llewellyn Cooke was a familiar and well known figure.

Trained as an engineer, Cooke became a major public servant because he was a liberal and a fighter. His biography, "The Life and Times of a Happy Liberal," dramatically tells this story.

THIS IS no expose of New Deal-Fair Deal secrets. Rather it is a case study of a man, born to the security of a wealthy Quaker family, who became one of the best loved and most hated men of our time.

Cooke's greatest single accomplishment was probably America's great rural electrification program, carried to a magnificent victory over the all-out opposition of the private utilities. He was the first REA administrator and his continuing battles with the utilities made newspaper headlines for years.

He was also a true friend of the labor movement and his co-authorship of "Organized Labor and Production" with the late Philip Murray resulted in one of the most unique books ever published on the subject of labor-management relations.

COOKE ADMIRED and liked Murray and the two became close friends. But Cooke's restless energy and his talent for straightening out tough problems soon resulted in his being moved to other battlefronts by Pres. Roosevelt, whom he served as devotedly as he later served President Truman.

During the Fair Deal days, Cooke was chairman of the famous Water Resources Policy Committee and was active in clarifying ways and means of putting the Point Four program into operation.

Throughout his years of public service, Cooke has won renown as a "happy liberal"—a warrior who never forgot how to laugh and enjoy life. He is clearly the "happy warrior" of both the New and Fair Deal. —A.J.Z.

"The Life and Times of a Happy Liberal" by Kenneth E. Trombley; Harper & Brothers. $4.

Arbitration Group Hails Murray As Hearing Room Dedicated

THE ABIDING belief of Philip Murray in voluntary arbitration was honored recently when the American Arbitration Association dedicated its new Philip Murray Hearing Room honoring the late CIO president.

The room, made possible by a grant from the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation, will be used for arbitration sessions. Participating in the simple dedication ceremony were AAA and CIO officials.

Leo Cherne, executive director of the Research Institute of America, made the principal address, praising the late president of the CIO and the Steelworkers. His death, Cherne said, "was a loss all Americans suffered."

Arthur J. Goldberg, Foundation director and CIO general counsel, praised the AAA's use of the Foundation grant. He characterized the AAA's "integrity and impartiality" as "essential to the arbitration process."

James G. Thimmes, vice president of the Steelworkers and of the CIO, spoke briefly and CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey hailed the CIO-AFL no-raiding agreement as an essential first step toward labor unity.

Other speakers included George M. Thursby, assistant vice president of U. S. Steel, who expressed the "respect and admiration" shared by all who were associated with Murray.

Howard Coughlin, president of the AFL Office Employees Union, said he was certain the new hearing room would be used "in the spirit of justice which characterized so much of Phil Murray's activities."

William H. Davis, former chairman of the War Labor Board, said he "never found Philip Murray to be an angel, but he was never vague, never sloppy, never shifty." Davis said Murray was "a perfect citizen of a democratic civilization.

Whitney North Seymour, president of the American Arbitration Assn., presided at the ceremonies.

Murray Grant Aids Harvard Labor History

THE PHILIP Murray Memorial Foundation has announced a $35,000 contribution to Harvard University to help underwrite a history project of American labor-management relations during the past quarter century.

CIO Textile Workers Pres. Emil Rieve, Foundation chairman, and Arthur J. Goldberg, CIO and CIO Steelworkers general counsel, Foundation director, made the announcement in a letter to Harvard Pres. Nathan Pusey.

The project will be headed by Prof. John Dunlop of Harvard. The Foundation said it fully recognized that "in the tradition of Harvard University, the standards of scholarship and the interpretation of events would, of course, be the responsibility of those scholars working on the project."

THE FOUNDATION said it believed that a "scholarly and an objective account of the events of this era is greatly needed." Such a study, it declared, can make a "genuine contribution towards the understanding of current labor-management relations and can provide valuable historical perspective on a number of issues of public policy."

"We are happy to join with other interested groups from business, labor and research organizations to support this vital study," Rieve and Goldberg said.

The Harvard president, in a letter of acceptance, said that it was a source of "real satisfaction that the Foundation established to honor the memory and contributions of that great American labor statesman, the late Philip Murray, should make a grant to support the study of the history of our recent labor-management relations."

JOHN DUNLOP

"THE PROFOUND changes of this era need to be placed in perspective," the letter continued. "A careful review of these developments should yield rich rewards.

"It is an index of the significant changes wrought in the past quarter century in labor-management relations that a foundation has been established to honor a leader of labor, and that such a foundation should make a grant for a scholarly undertaking to a university," Pusey concluded.

'Unionism Is Education For Democracy, And Teachers Need Some Of It,' Says Carey

DEMOCRATIC unionism is, in itself, adult education for democracy, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey told the National Adult Education Conference in Chicago last week.

At the same time, he indicted the "timidity of the academic world in its relations with the nation's working men and women and their organizations."

Carey, who is also president of the CIO Electrical Workers, expressed the belief that "the nation's teachers need an adult education program."

TOO OFTEN, he explained, the labor movement has found that teachers will not even help themselves by unifying against threats aimed at academic freedom. They are willing, he said, to let labor and liberals wage their fight for them.

He noted that "teachers will not even participate jointly with democratic labor when labor is fighting education's battle against intellectual oppression, book-burnings, loyalty oaths, and the harassments of the fake super-patriots like the Minute Women, Ku Klux Klan and others."

The teachers, Carey went on, are reluctant even to join with democratic labor when unions fight in city councils, state legislatures, and in Congress for larger educational appropriations for primary schools, high schools and colleges.

MEMBERS of the teaching profession, he continued, have been afraid to associate themselves with democratic labor when unions have been fighting for better salaries for teachers themselves.

Where, Carey asked, were the teachers when organized labor and liberals were fighting and battling to convert the revenue from the nation's tidelands oil reserves to American education?

Here, he said, was a perfect example of labor and liberals waging an all-out battle for our educational system, for the nation's teachers, "while the teachers themselves—for the most part—sat back in academic ivory towers and let us do the fighting."

He called the tidelands oil controversy "a shameful performance or lack of performance by the nation's teachers."

Teachers, Carey said, know the crying need for more schools, more teachers, better salaries for teachers, better equipment for present schools. But, he added, "in this fight the teaching profession abdicated its responsibilities."

CIO on ABC
Monday thru Friday
John W. Vandercook
AND THE NEWS

'Face Up To The 20th Century'—

1000 Cone Mills Workers Hear Reuther At Big TWUA Rally

LOW WAGE policies of textile mill owners in South were denounced by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther at TWUA rally at Greensboro, N. C.

By KEN FIESTER
Special Correspondent

THE FUTURE progress of industrialization in the South depends upon raising the living standards and wage rates of southern workers, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther told a rally in Greensboro, N. C., a big Dixie textile center.

"When the textile mill owner fights against the efforts of his workers to organize he may think he is fighting his own battles, but actually he is fighting against himself," Reuther said. "Some day the textile industry in the south must face up to its 20th Century responsibilities."

The meeting was sponsored by the CIO Textile Workers in connection with its campaign in the Cone Mills, where an NLRB election will be held in two weeks.

Communications Workers were also asked to join in, since CWA has launched a drive at the local Western Electric plant. The general public was also invited.

An audience of 1000 braved a chill rainstorm to attend. Among the crowd were executives of Cone Mills.

REUTHER NOTED that sweepers—the lowest labor classification—earned $1.75 an hour or more in auto plants, while the sweepers in southern textile mills received only $1.03. Average hourly earnings in auto were about $2.10, he said, while they were only a little more than $1.25 in southern textiles.

"Obviously, you southern textile workers are very much underpaid," he continued. "Can you in the Cone Mills say that you are first-class economic citizens? No; you are second-class economic citizens.

"You get second-class wages, but when you go into the stores, to buy the necessities of life, you pay first-class prices like anyone else.

"It is economically wrong and it is morally wrong."

Average weekly earnings of industrial workers in Michigan were $85.44 according to the last government reports, Reuther said, while in North Carolina they were $47.

Yet, he went on, the differential hasn't helped to produce southern jobs; the South has lost 80,000 textile jobs, 20,000 in North Carolina alone, in the last three years.

"Man-hour productivity in the textile industry has been going up at the rate of 5% a year—but wages haven't," he said. "The last southern textile wage increase was in 1951, while workers in other industries have since had raises of 30 to 40c."

But wages are not the only reason—not even the major reason—why textile workers should organize, Reuther continued. The stakes are the future of freedom and democracy throughout the world.

"WE WILL NOT defeat communism on the military battlefield," he said. "Yes, we must be strong; but this is merely the negative aspect of the struggle. The issue will be decided on the field of human progress."

Reuther discussed the challenge posed by automation, citing examples from the auto industry, and warned that the development would quickly spread to such industries as textile. Only through the full cooperation of free industry and free labor can the challenge be met, he said.

William Pollock, TWUA executive vice president, introduced Reuther.

South's Low Wages Scored At Tar Heel CIO Meeting

GROWING unemployment and depressed industrial wages in the state were items of principal concern to delegates at the recent convention of the North Carolina State CIO Council in Raleigh.

On the state legislative front, a key resolution dealt with "the people's right to know." It called for repeal of a measure passed by the General Assembly providing for secret sessions of the Joint Appropriations committee.

William Pollock, CIO Textile Workers executive vice president, made a blistering attack on the Republican Administration as "a government whose primary concern is for the interest — for the corporations, the stockholders and the financiers."

Attacking Republican claims that this is the "second-best year" in the economic history of the country, Pollock declared that the phrase "means unemployment."

"Right here in the South, to cite only one example, some 80,000 textile jobs have disappeared in the last three years. Here in North Carolina, the most progressive, the most liberal and the most prosperous state in the South, the average weekly earnings of industrial workers are just $47 a week, the very lowest of all the 48 states."

New officers are H. D. Lisk, TWUA, president; Carlee Drye, CIO Steelworkers, executive vice president, and J. W. Holder, CIO Communications Workers, executive secretary and treasurer.

No-Strike Vow Dropped As Oil Parleys Stalled

THE CIO Oil Workers have rescinded their commitment not to strike for a general wage increase because of "flat refusals of wage increases by all companies."

OWIU's Policy Committee adopted its new collective bargaining statement, and reaffirmed its original wage demand for a 5% general hike or its equivalent, at a meeting in Denver.

The original "no-strike" pledge was made, the statement said, "to meet objections often made by employers against bargaining under pressure of a strike threat." Since adoption of the program more than five months ago, the union said, requests for wage increases "have been flatly refused by all companies excepting a few very minor and small cases."

"A STRONG CASE existed for a general increase greater than 5%," the OWIU-CIO said, "but in a spirit of cooperation and reason, this committee asked only a modest 5% increase, or its equivalent."

The factors justifying that boost, the union noted, have increased in the interim. Oil industry wages, it reported, have "stood still" since the last general 4% increase in mid-1953. The statement listed increases won in other industries "operating under generally poorer economic conditions."

"We can only regretfully conclude that the oil industry is taking advantage of our pledge not to strike," the committee said.

"By its behavior the oil industry has demonstrated that it does not want to establish wages on a basis of reason and equity, but that it will increase wages only when forced to do so by economic pressure."

NLRB Bargaining Order Appealed

Richfield Oil Corp. has asked the U. S. Court of Appeals to set aside a National Labor Relations Board order that it bargain with the CIO Oil Workers over a stock purchase plan.

IUE Vet Returns To Legislature

One of the many CIO election victories in state contests was that of John Welsh, veteran member of the CIO Electrical Workers in Philadelphia.

Welsh, who has been active in PAC work for Local 113, was elected to his fourth consecutive term in the Pennsylvania Legislature. He has been local treasurer for years and a leader in civil rights and anti-discrimination work.

FULL EMPLOYMENT and steady production was supported by Metal Trades Committee of Intl. Labor Organization in meeting in Geneva at which Victor G. Reuther (right), U. S. worker delegate and assistant to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, was elected president of Workers' Group.

Labor's World—

'Operation Reindeer' Gains Backing Of CIO Unions

THREE MAJOR CIO unions have contributed funds for 3500 Christmas food packages made available under CIO's "Operation Reindeer" for trade unionists in other countries.

The CIO Steelworkers have arranged for 2000 packages to be distributed to union members in Bolivia and Chile, especially in non-ferrous mining; the CIO Textile Workers have bought 1000 packages for textile workers in England, France, West Germany, Italy and Greece, while 500 Guatemalan railroad workers will receive the gifts through the CIO Transport Workers.

In addition, the three internationals—and others as well—are soliciting their locals for contributions.

THE FOOD PACKAGES may be purchased for 50c each under a program developed by the CIO International Committee, the Foreign Operations Administration, and CARE, of which CIO is a member.

Each package contains from 13 to 15 pounds of basic foods, from U. S. surplus food stocks, packaged by CARE to conform to dietary preferences of the different countries. The receiving countries will pay ocean freight, and CARE will distribute the parcels in each country to free trade unions which in turn will distribute them to individual members.

Union groups at all levels which buy 100 packages—$50—or more may designate the country or countries to which they are to be sent.

Participating locals will get receipts from those who get the packages. They may, if they wish, maintain a correspondence with the recipients. The packages offer an opportunity to help unions abroad strengthen themselves by helping their neediest members.

Checks should be made payable to the CIO Free World Labor Fund and sent to the CIO Dept. for Intl. Affairs, 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington 6, D. C. The deadline is Dec. 1.

Steel Unionist Gets FOA Post

Manuel E. Casas, a CIO Steelworker from Chicago, has been appointed to a Foreign Operations Administration post as project manager for Latin American teams visiting the U. S.

Casas is a ladle craneman in U. S. Steel's South Chicago Works and a member of USA-CIO Local 65. He has worked in Chicago steel plants for 18 years and prior to that handled correspondence with Latin American accounts for a local bank.

Guild Asks FTC To Probe Big Newspaper Mergers

THE FEDERAL Trade Commission has been urged by the CIO Newspaper Guild to investigate recent newspaper sales and suspensions.

Executive Vice Pres. Ralph B. Novak called for the probe in a letter to FTC Chairman Edward R. Howrey. He asked that the inquiry be included in the commission's announced investigation of business mergers.

Novak cited as "glaring examples" of needless mergers the sale of the St. Louis Star-Times to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the Washington Times-Herald to the Washington Post.

"The Guild believes," he said, "that the profit motive alone was responsible for these mergers and that the financial condition of neither paper warranted its sale."

Such suspensions, Novak said, "serve to dramatize the extent to which the newspaper industry has shrunk since the turn of the century and the resulting drift toward local newspaper monopoly—in the realm of ideas as well as at the cash box."

He noted that as this year opened only 87 of the 1488 cities in the U. S. have competing dailies.

The Case Of The Senate Vs. Joseph R. McCarthy

"The issue before the American people is simply this, does the Senate of the United States have enough manhood to stand up to Sen. McCarthy?"—
—Sen. Ervin (D. N.C.).

THE SENATE'S manhood and integrity underwent its second week of test as it dealt with the matter of censure for Joe McCarthy.

Some Senators waded into the fray with flying fists, others wrung their hands futilely on the fringes of the battle and still others huddled in cloakrooms trying to devise ways of taking Wisconsin's bully boy off the hook. Most Democrats remained aloof, watching the GOP wrestle with their prodigy-turned-problem child.

Late last week the Senate was recessed until Nov. 29 because McCarthy was hospitalized. Earlier developments were:

1. Rejecting any "compromise with indecency," Sen. Watkins (R. Utah) said he would add a third censure charge for McCarthy's latest effronteries on the Senate floor.

2. Goaded by McCarthy's attacks on the censure committee, usually conservative Senators like Ervin, Stennis (D. Miss.) and Johnson (D. Colo.) fired back angry replies.

3. An olive branch was dangled in front of McCarthy by Sen. Case (R. S. D.), who switched his views on censure and hoped McCarthy could apologize and the Senate could forgive and forget.

4. In public and in private McCarthy's defenders attempted to quash the proceedings or avoid trampling the McCarthy toes. These include Sens. Jenner (R. Ind.), Dirksen (R. Ill.), Welker (R. Ida.), Malone (R. Nev.) and Bridges (R. N.H.)

McCarthy resorted to his usual tactics and has assailed Watkins as "cowardly" and "stupid" and the special Senate session as "a lynching bee."

He branded the censure committee as the "unwitting handmaidens" of the Communists.

Watkins, blazing mad, charged McCarthy with "guerilla warfare" against the committee and pointed out that earlier counts on which he could be censured were dwarfed by the most recent outbursts by McCarthy against the Senate and its committee.

"How," demanded Watkins, "can the Senate hold up its head among other free deliberative bodies of the world unless it does something about this matter?"

The Senate was not a jury, Watkins reminded, but was a court in the McCarthy proceedings. "No other court in the land," he said, "would stand for such contempt proceedings before it."

Watkins' answer and the wild McCarthy antics which provoked it have probably torpedoed the chances of the McCarthyites of succeeding in their efforts to appease both the dignity of the Senate and the trigger-tempered McCarthy.

Reaching quickly to the heart of the matter, Ervin silenced an apology for McCarthy by Jenner with the statement that a charge that McCarthy is being "persecuted" for his investigations of communism "has no more substance than a dream."

Several Senators pointed to McCarthy's still unexplained financial shenanigans, including the uses to which he put funds given to him to investigate Communists.

Still unexplained, too, was the financial backing for a group which is seeking 10 million signatures around the nation on pro-McCarthy petitions aimed at persuading the Senate to drop the censure move. Front men for the organization include some high-paid pensioners from the armed forces' top brass.

Blooper

Sen. Jenner (R. Ind.) accidentally reminded the Senate of something McCarthy prefers to forget. Reviewing Wisconsin's 1946 election campaign, Jenner admitted the "Communist conspiracy" helped unseat the liberal late Sen. Robert LaFollette.

"They permitted the election of an unknown young Wisconsin judge named Joe McCarthy who, they thought, would be easier to handle than Bob LaFollette," Jenner declared in what started out as a defense of McCarthy.

The Issue

Warning against "sticking our heads in the sand like ostriches," Sen. Ervin (D. N.C.) told the Senate it must face squarely the issue of Sen. McCarthy's censure.

"Sen. McCarthy besmirches throughout the length and breadth of this land the reputation of all who dare oppose him or express disapproval of his senatorial conduct. Every senator sits in this chamber under this Damoclean sword . . . if he does anything to incur Sen. McCarthy's easily-provoked wrath," Ervin said.

Neely Leads Drive To Gain 10% Federal Pay Increase

DEMOCRATIC Senators moved last week to redeem a campaign promise by raising the pay of federal workers.

More than 1.5 million classified and postal employes would get a 10% increase with a $400 minimum on any raise under the terms of a bill to be introduced by Sens. Johnston (S. C.) and Neely (W. Va.).

The increase would be retroactive to Aug. 23, the date that Pres. Eisenhower vetoed a 7% increase. A similar measure will be introduced on the House side by Rep. Dingell (D. Mich.).

"POLITICAL emancipation" of federal employes through modification of the Hatch Act's restrictions was called for by the United Postal Workers of the CIO Government & Civic Employees at the Massachusetts CIO convention.

The same group urged enactment of an annual pay raise of $800 retroactive to July 1. It favored a congressional investigation of labor conditions at the South Postal division of the Boston post office.

A resolution cited a "reign of terror" in the custodial branch of the service in Boston, "supervisory snooping," "tyrannical officialdom" and discrimination against CIO members in the postal service.

New Republic Anniversary Is Hailed

THE 40th anniversary of the founding of the New Republic magazine is being celebrated this week with the publication of a 128-page anniversary anthology number.

It is the largest issue in the weekly's history, and the first time that the outstanding writing of previous years has been collected in a single number.

Part of the ceremonies included a dinner at the Willard Hotel in Washington last week, at which former U. S. Attorney Gen. Francis Biddle served as toastmaster. Henry R. Luce, editor-in-chief of Time magazine, spoke on The Liberal Tradition. CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther served on the sponsoring committee.

In addition to reprinting material from past contributors, the special issue includes a historical sketch of the New Republic by former editor Bruce Bliven, and a reappraisal of founder Herbert Croly as a journalist and of the role of a liberal weekly in the United States today.

Six Get $30,000 In Back Pay, Jobs

Illegally discharged six years ago by an Ann Arbor, Mich., firm for their organizing efforts, six members of the CIO Lithographers recently received $30,000 in back pay and their jobs.

They were fired in 1949, the National Labor Relations Board found the company guilty in 1951, but the case dragged through the courts for three years.

Bay State CIO Hits McCarthy's Record, Urges Senate Censure

By EUGENE A. KELLEY

McCARTHYISM, labor unity and post-mortems on the elections occupied the attention of more than 800 delegates to the Massachusetts State CIO Council.

Expanding on the original resolution, delegates condemned Sen. McCarthy for his anti-labor voting record and his investigative methods, and also recommended that the Senate approve the motion of censure contained in the Watkins committe report.

The most heated debate of the three-day session emerged at mention of the controversial senator's name. Aware of the Bay State's reputation for sympathy towards McCarthy, the resolution was carefully worded to allow the antis to condemn him without being so strong that it would be too unpalatable for his defenders.

The executive board which submitted the resolution underestimated the mood of the convention. Amendments submitted from the floor were carried by an overwhelming 10 to one vote calling for McCarthy's censure. A move to table the resolution and close debate was defeated by an even stronger margin.

The Council said "the true test of a man's anti-communism was his willingness to fight conditions of social injustice on which communism breeds." It noted that McCarthy voted against social justice and the American working man on 52 out of 62 roll calls.

Several speakers pushed the cause of labor unity and predicted merger between the CIO and AFL within a year. Among these was Pres. Henry J. Brides of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, who called CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther "a man of vision, a man of integrity, a man who stands for unification of all workers."

"Once and for all," Brides said, "men and women who work for a living will come into their own. Some unions have not seen the light of day but I am quite sure they will come along and get into the fold under the leadership of two great presidents. Then watch the enemies of organized labor shiver in their pants."

New England Dir. Joseph Salerno of the CIO Clothing Workers said the heads of both CIO and AFL are "working sincerely for labor unity without dismembering any union. They are working for peace without pieces," he declared.

EXECUTIVE Vice Pres. William Pollock of the CIO Textile Workers asked the delegates, "What happened?" in the recent elections.

Pointing to higher than average unemployment, more exhausted unemployment benefits than in any other state, Pollock continued:

"If the Democrats cannot unite by themselves, it is our job to unite them; not because we are Democrats but because we, as workers and the chosen representatives of workers, desperately need liberal representation in Congress."

The convention also heard addresses by Pres. L. S. Buckmaster of the CIO Rubber Workers, Pres. Max Greenberg of the CIO Retail-Wholesale Union, Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and Bishop Norman B. Nash of the Massachusetts diocese of the Episcopal church.

Pres. J. William Belanger and Sec.-Treas. Salvatore Camelio were named without opposition to their seventh terms.

CIOer Heads Accident Boards

John Moulin, a CIO Steelworker and a labor member of the Illinois Industrial Commission, has been elected president of the International Association of Industrial Accident Boards. It is the first time the association has chosen a labor representative as president.

Quick, Hawkshaw, The Unabridged!

SECURITY OFFICERS, plagued with acute cases of mccarthyitis, may soon be equipped with dime-store dictionaries. They certainly need them.

That was proven by the latest horror story about security officers—this one from the still red-faced Eastern Industrial Personnel Security Board.

The board has just ordered former Chief Petty Officer Charles Christie, World War II combat veteran, reinstated in the job from which he was bounced five months ago as a "security risk"—all because they didn't know the difference between "psychoneurotic" and "neurodermatitis."

Reinstatement came when the board admitted that "neurodermatitis" was a skin disease—not a mental condition. That disease, which caused Christie's discharge from the navy, was listed on his discharge papers.

Some security officer, who didn't know that neurodermatitis was what GI's called "jungle rot," had Christie bounced. The security board has refused to reveal the name of the security officer who needed a dictionary.

Said Christie: "I've been through five months of torture waiting to be cleared . . . You don't know how it feels to be told you're no longer trustworthy."

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

The Woman's Angle—

PAC Women's Groups Proud Of Work, Prepare For The Next Round

By ESTHER MURRAY
CIO-PAC Field Representative

CHEERS FOR THE LADIES! Many a candidate who won on Nov. 2 owes some measure of his success to the hardworking, enthusiastic CIO women who put aside their household chores or took time off from their jobs in shops and plants to help on election day.

Mrs. Murray

While there has not been time to get the complete picture from all the areas where our CIO women worked, every report to date, has been a glowing one filled with pride and satisfaction in a job well done.

Doris Zier, UAW Auxiliary member in Milwaukee, expressed the feeling of all of us in her letter:

"Many suppers were late during this campaign, the midnight oil burned quite often, your feet were sore and you said, 'no more'. But when you were called on to help once more, you did it. There is no pay for the job (monetary, that is) but in your hearts I think you had more than one payday, from the thanks of the candidate you worked so hard for, to those of your neighbor who wasn't a registered voter. What can one say to you except once more, the biggest thanks. You girls were grand."

Work Through Many Groups

Many women worked through the women's PAC committees set up following a Family Participation Conference in their area. Others worked through local unions, auxiliaries or local CIO councils. Where there was no formal organization, many simply volunteered their services to CIO-supported candidates.

Patterns are emerging from the many reports received so far which indicate the great interest which had developed among the women. Everywhere, CIO women, especially wives of union members, have turned out in greater numbers than ever before. There is a feeling among the women that they would like to continue a political action program, concentrating on educational projects until it is time to start the next campaign.

TYPICAL CIO-PAC Family Participation Conference was held at Knoxville, Tenn. Speakers included Esther Murray and Eleanor Coakley of National PAC staff, and Tennessee CIO Exec. Sec. Matthew Lynch.

Some definite plans have been made. Virginia is looking forward to a statewide conference early in 1955. Tulsa women would like another conference, too, and TWU in Tulsa is setting up an auxiliary.

Permanent committees for PAC have been set up in Fort Dodge, Des Moines and Newton, Iowa; Evansville, Ind.; Little Rock, Ark.; Atlanta, Ga.; Los Angeles, Calif.; Pueblo and Denver, Colo,; Philadelphia, Pa., and Knoxville, Tenn.

Most important of all, even in areas where CIO-supported candidates were defeated, the women are already thinking about how they can be more effective in the next election.

You can imagine how anxious we are to get these reports because our program for next year will be based on them and they will serve as a yardstick when it comes to planning for 1956. If you have a story to tell about what the women in your community did in this election, do let us hear from you soon.

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

CAN THE MODERN ELECTRIC PANELS now being widely promoted give you reasonably-priced heating for your home besides their undeniable advantage of cleanliness and convenience?

Panel Heating Is Expensive

The answer, for most homeowners in most areas, is that this heating method is still very expensive, especially for a whole house. The possible exceptions are areas where low-cost electricity is available, such as the Tennessee Valley, the Pacific Northwest, and the Dakotas, Montana and a few other regions where electricity costs have been brought down by NEA cooperatives.

Other exceptions are some Southern states and Southern California, where the heat demand is small enough so that fuel cost may not be the overriding consideration it is in any cold part of the country.

At least two surveys this department has seen show that electrical heating costs much more than gas or oil. The Long Island, N. Y., Lighting Co., which is pleased to sell either electricity or gas, found in a survey of homes that had electric glass panels, that costs were frequently 50-60% higher than the estimated cost for gas (and oil is still cheaper than manufactured gas, especially for smaller homes).

This survey confirms an analysis made by the National Bureau of Standards several years ago, which found that on the basis of rates then prevailing in Washington, D. C., costs of heating by electricity ran several times that of fuel oil, and were also higher than gas.

Fuel Oil Costs Climb

More recently the costs of fuel oil have gone up. Manufacturers of electric-panel heaters have been arguing that if your local electrical rate is 1.5c per kilowatt hour, the cost of electrical heating will be only about 15% more than oil, and approximately the same as gas providing the area to be heated is well insulated and has storm windows.

However, a comparison of costs indicates that even at 1.5c per kwh, electrical heating is still costliest.

According to the National Bureau of Standards, the efficiencies are not the best possible. Efficiencies obtainable with coal can probably be improved 15 or 20% over those shown, by careful firing and economical use of fuel.

The still-high cost of electrical heating does not deny its other advantages. Besides its cleanliness and space-saving convenience, electric panels make it possible to build a home without a chimney or furnace room. Is is useful also as a supplemental source of heat, or for rooms where only part-time heat is required, and where installation costs for other heating systems would be excessive.

But if you already have a heating system you can hook on to when you finish an attic or basement room you will still find it generally cheaper to do so than to install electric panels. For example, it may cost $150 to add convectors for an attic room to an existing hot-water system, and less than $100 to install a 1000-watt electric panel, but the fuel saving will soon compensate for the extra installation cost.

(Copyright 1954, by Sidney Margolius)

Trouble Seen For GOP On 2 NLRB Vacancies

ONE OF the stormier petrels on the National Labor Relations Board, Albert C. Beeson, has notified Pres. Eisenhower that he will be unable to accept reappointment when his term expires soon.

Beeson was confirmed by the Senate last February after a minority report from the Senate Labor Committee turned all but two Democratic votes against him.

Forces friendly to labor said he had not completely severed his ties with the Food Machinery & Chemical Corp., San Jose, Calif., of which he was vice president in charge of industrial relations. They also maintained that he could not be impartial because of his long record of representing management against unions.

IN FILLING another major NLRB post, Eisenhower was running into additional difficulties. He nominated Theophil Carl Kammholz, a Chicago lawyer, to succeed George J. Bott as general counsel. Bott's term expires Dec. 16.

Chairman Smith (R., N.J.) of the Senate Labor Committee sought to rush the nomination through at the special session, but Democrats refused to attend a meeting. Kammholz was reported unwilling to take a recess appointment and risk confirmation by a Democratic-controlled Senate in the next Congress.

The President also nominated John Marshall Harlan, of New York, for associate justice of the Supreme Court, and Joseph Campbell for comptroller general.

Pennsylvania CIO Pledges FEPC Fight

PRES. HARRY BOYER said that the Pennsylvania CIO Council would continue to fight for a State fair employment practices law.

He spoke at a Philadelphia conference of the Labor Committee on Human Rights, attended by representatives of more than 500,000 CIO and AFL members in the State.

Boyer said labor certainly should not "relax its vigilance" in the battle for the law, now that a Democratic Administration will replace the Republicans at the capitol in Harrisburg.

Guild Strikes Authorized At 3 N. Y. Dailies

THREE UNITS of the CIO Newspaper Guild in New York City have voted strike authority to committees negotiating with the Times, the Post and the Daily Mirror.

Since the vote at the Times, management has made a contract offer of an immediate $3.40 weekly pay raise with an additional $2.40 weekly after one year, along with other improvements including a better job security clause.

EDITORIAL and commercial employes of the Mirror voted 308 to 0 to strike after management failed to make "a single cash offer" during six weeks of negotiations. The Guild said that instead of trying to settle the dispute, the Mirror had "brazenly sought to undermine the Guild."

Guild officers and a Mirror unit committee were authorized to launch a strike at a "suitable "time, leaving the door open for a possible quick settlement.

Wage increases ranging from $2 to $15 a week were won by the Toronto (Canada) Guild from the Toronto Telegram.

Shoe Union Steps Up Drive On Pennsylvania Open Shops

A STEPPED-UP organizing drive in southern central Pennsylvania was authorized at a recent meeting of the executive board of the CIO Shoe Workers.

A dozen USWA and CIO organizers are now assigned to the area. The board decided to assign another of its staff in the drive, and called on CIO for additional organizers for the region, where there are only 2000 organized workers out of 25,000 in the shoe plants.

The board also opened a union label campaign. A USWA-CIO union label booth will be placed at the CIO convention in Los Angeles next month, and efforts will be made to have more manufacturers use the label when contracts are renegotiated next year.

The board accepted the report of Pres. Russell Taylor proposing amalgamation of the 65,000-member USWA-CIO and the 50,000 AFL Boot and Shoe Workers.

Taylor said a combined union would "place us in a better position to organize the entire shoe industry and to induce the independent shoe unions to join" the amalgamated group.

He pointed out that with the 30,000 independent union members, the proposed union would have a membership of 145,000. There is an estimated total of 225,000 in the industry.

Merger talks have been held by committees of the two unions during the past two years, and the two groups have cooperated in negotiations with employers.

The board endorsed the CIO Community Services Committee and the CIO Committee on Ethical Practices named by Pres. Walter P. Reuther to police the operation of union welfare funds.

Wholesale Food Prices Up Again

Wholesale food prices rose for the fourth consecutive week to the highest level since Aug. 24 on the Dun & Bradstreet index. The latest figure is $6.88, up from $6.80 the week before and $6.51 in the same week last year.

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

IN CAIRO, ILL.—a city once famed as the dividing point along the Mississippi River between freedom and slavery—a CIO Maritime Union organizer was shot and wounded by an employer and his armed thugs who opened fire from midstream upon a group of peaceful strikers.

Recently, in Wisconsin, a strike-bound employer boasted publicly of maintaining a virtual arsenal in his plant for possible use against strikers.

These acts of violence and threats from employers are indicative of the savage bitterness with which certain employers all over the country are fighting our unions.

In Port Arthur, Tex., CIO men and women have entered their second year of strike. CIO has worked throughout that long period to settle the strike on the basis of what is right. The employers, however, have refused to change their position. They have resorted to every vicious means possible to break the strike. Despite this, the workers are determined to carry on; because of their courage and determination, CIO still hopes for a settlement on just and honorable terms.

ALL OVER THE NATION, in almost every state, our people have had to strike because employers have refused to recognize our unions or carry on honest collective bargaining. Their position is that they know what is right—that the workers should have nothing to say about the conditions under which they work, the hours they labor, or the wages they receive. In this attitude they reveal they have not advanced one inch from the days of the bloody Homestead strike.

I wonder how long these men, these employers, will continue to oppose trade unionism and persist in their attempt to destroy collective bargaining? It is about time they awake to the realities of today and recognize collective bargaining as a vital part of our economy and our society.

If they continue to fight this way, they will be doing nothing but committing suicide. Meantime, they are aiding and abetting communism, which abhors a strong, independent labor movement, but at the same time uses employer hostility to unions in this country with telling effect in its propaganda campaigns abroad.

We live in a changing society. Labor recognizes that fact. Employers should recognize it, too. We should work together to help build that new society on the basis of what is right, or we may be forced to accept something none of us wants.

CIO REG. DIR. MICHAEL MANN reports a recent CIO Steelworkers' victory at the Standard Building Products Co., in Brooklyn, N. Y., in which USA-CIO received all of the 16 votes cast. In Newark, N. J., he reports, the CIO Auto Workers won an election at the Ronson Corp., 59 votes to 5 for an independent union and 4 for no union.

A. R. Kinstley, assistant organizing director of the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, reports an important election victory at the Ozark Smelter & Mining Co. in Coffeyville, Kan. He says full credit should be given to CIO Field Rep. Howard Rizer and UGCCW Rep. Chester Walczak, who brought this only unorganized plant of the Sherwin-Williams chain into the union fold. Five previous attempts had fallen short of victory. UGCCWA-CIO received 92 of the 182 votes cast.

Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett of the CIO Electrical Workers reports the following election victories: Bicknell Thomas Co., Greenfield, Mass., IUE-CIO 4, no union 3; Westinghouse Corp., Trenton, N. J., IUE-CIO 329, UE 301 (this plant, controlled by UE for 13 years, was the last Westinghouse lamp plant in UE); Fort Wayne Wire Die, Inc., Fort Wayne, Ind., IUE-CIO 22, no union 8; General Electric Co., Rome, Ga., IUE-CIO 218, no union 177 (this victory gives IUE-CIO its seventh GE local in the South); Barker-Williams, Bristol, Pa., IUE-CIO 29, UE 20 (thus ending 15 years of UE control). He also reports that the Sobel Co., Easton, Pa., recognized IUE-CIO after a two-week strike.

Sec.-Treas. T. M. McCormick of the CIO Oil Workers reports the following election victories: Cities Service Pipeline Co., Oklahoma, Missouri and Illinois, OWIU-CIO 60, no union 8; Filtrol Corp. Control Laboratory, Salt Lake City, OWIU-CIO 10 (unanimous); Filtrol Corp. Chemical Plant, Salt Lake City, OWIU-CIO 80, no union 25; Sinclair Refining Co., Camden, N. J., OWIU-CIO 6, independent 1.

CWA Signs Two Bell Pacts, Has Three More To Settle

SETTLEMENTS have been reached by the CIO Communications Workers with two more Bell System companies, bringing wage increases to some 11,000 employes.

Some 7000 workers are covered by agreement with one company, Chesapeake and Potomac of the District of Columbia. Increases ranged from $1 to $2.50 a week for most workers, with plant engineering assistants getting $3.50 a week.

Close to 4000 employes of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. of West Virginia won similar $1 to $2.50 increases. In Lewisburg about 75 workers obtained an additional $3 to $4.50 a week through upgrading. After a hard battle, both companies gave up demands for retrogression.

Three CWA-CIO contracts with Bell System firms employing some 57,000 workers remained unsettled. These companies are Southern Bell, with more than 49,000 employes; Chesapeake and Potomac of Virginia, and Illinois Bell, where bargaining is proceeding for some 2000 traffic workers in the Chicago toll office.

TWU Offers Strike Aid To Machinists

THE CIO Transport Workers have pledged "all-out cooperation" to the AFL Machinists in their contract dispute with six major air lines.

The Machinists scheduled a walk-out "on or after Nov. 19" of some 20,000 ground employes of Capital, Eastern, National, Trans-World, Northwest and United Airlines.

Creation of a Presidential fact-finding board last week, however, deferred strike action 60 days.

In a letter to IAM Pres. A. J. Hayes, TWU Pres. Michael J. Quill said that union members employed by the various air carriers "are prepared to offer you all-out cooperation, if and when you are compelled to take strike action to secure from these companies the wages, hours and working conditions which are so long overdue their workers whom you represent."

"Our cause is a common one," Quill's letter continued, "and I am very happy that our organizations will be able to work together to achieve our common goals."

QUILL suggested that a joint committee of the two unions be established to act in an advisory capacity on ways in which TWU members could help the IAM.

The Machinists are seeking a 5% wage increase, along with other concessions.

Both TWU and IAM were early signers of the CIO-AFL No-Raiding Agreement. Prior to the signing, IAM had sought to dislodge TWU from representation of ground employes of American and Pan American World Airways.

Hiring Hall Pact Signed

THE CIO Maritime Union has signed a stipulation with the NLRB agreeing to open the union and employer operated hiring hall to non-members.

The agreement between the union and the board came after some sixty complaints by seamen who charged they had been discriminated against by the NMU.

After a nine-month investigation, the NLRB issued a complaint the end of October. Since then the NMU and the NLRB have been working out details of the stipulation agreement.

NMU Gen. Council Herman Cooper called the agreement a "welcome conclusion to extended negotiations because it eliminated almost 200 cases against NMU.

Vandercook Again On Air In D. C.

CIO-sponsored Commentator John W. Vandercook was back on the air in Washington last week as ABC station WMAL settled its four-day strike of announcers and performers. The strikers, members of the AFL Television and Radio Artists, won a $25 increase in top weekly minimums.

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

VEHEMENT PROTEST against proposed cuts in New York City's transit service and layoff of workers is voiced at meeting by Counsel John F. O'Donnell, CIO Transport Workers. Behind him are Pres. Matthew Guinan and Sec.-Treas. Ellis Van Riper (holding paper), TWU Local 100.

Correction On Georgia Report

The CIO News in its Oct. 25 issue incorrectly reported that Pres. H. L. Wingate of the Georgia Farm Bureau Federation, identified as the "original sponsor" of that State's right to scab law, had condemned the measure in addressing the Georgia State CIO Council convention.

Place Your Order Now!

Big Annual Convention Issue Of The CIO NEWS

The big annual Convention Issue of The CIO News will be published on Dec. 13, immediately after the 16th CIO Constitutional Convention in Los Angeles.

What the CIO convention does will be big news for all CIO local unions and councils and all CIO members. The CIO News Convention Issue will tell the full story—in news reports, pictures, features and texts. Send in your order now to insure prompt delivery of the Convention Issue.

Special Rates

• BUNDLE ORDERS: Rates for bundle orders are 2c per copy for any quantity up to 1000; 1¾c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000; and 1½c per copy for quantities of more than 2000. Special rates for large orders.

In sending lists of addresses for bundle orders, please indicate the quantity to be sent to each address. To facilitate bookkeeping, please send checks with smaller quantity orders.

• INDIVIDUALLY MAILED ORDERS: Rates for individually mailed copies are 2¼c per copy for quantities up to 1000; 2c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000; and 1¾c per copy for quantities of more than 2000. Special rates for very large orders upon application.

If individual mailing is desired, this may be arranged by sending us mailing strips not more than 2½ inches wide.

Regular Rates

Apart from the special rates for the Convention issue, unions which wish to take this opportunity to begin subscribing regularly to The CIO News may begin their bundle order or group subscription order with the Dec. 13 issue at the regular rates, which will be provided on request.

Just Clip and Mail!

THE CIO NEWS
718 Jackson Place, N.W.
Washington 6, D. C.

We desire to place an order for the special 1954 Convention Issue of The CIO News.

Please ship .....in bundle lots to the enclosed address.

Please have the 1954 Convention Issue individually mailed to membership lists for which we will furnish mailing strips.

The total number of names to which we desire the paper sent is..... ☐ Check Inclosed ☐ Bill Us Later

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... Zone ..... State .....

Organization .....

The Give-Away Boys In Washington—

Dixon-Yates Heads For The New Congress

By ED LASHMAN

A LAME DUCK committee of the GOP 83rd Congress last week heeded Pres. Eisenhower's request to waive congressional safeguards against the Dixon-Yates deal, but the utility combine still has a tough row to hoe.

By a 10 to 8 straight party line vote, the Joint House-Senate Atomic Energy Committee voted to waive further congressional review of the controversial contract. Committee Democrats thus lost their long fight to prevent consummation of the deal, but promised more opposition to come.

Principal objection to the contract still centers around the invasion of the TVA domain by private utilities. "The whole purpose of Dixon-Yates," said Sen. Gore (D. Tenn.), "is to alter the TVA program."

The utility executives now must apply to the Securities and Exchange Commission for approval of the issuance of bonds necessary to get the $107,250,000 power plant built. Hearings on the financing arrangements are certain to be ordered.

Democrats have promised to "ventilate" the contract in hearings before the Atomic Energy Committee, which will be headed by Sen. Anderson (D. N. M.) in the 84th Congress. A key Democrat said the hearings may also embrace AEC contracts with Electric Energy, Inc. and Ohio Valley Electric Corp., which supply AEC installations directly.

Favoritism

"Galloping federal favoritism" is what Rep. Holifield (D. Calif.) calls the Dixon-Yates contract, pushed by the powerful private utility lobby and supported by the GOP.

Sen. Gore (D. Tenn.) pinned it down more exactly when he heard of the President's letter to the Atomic Energy Committee, urging waiver of the 30-day Congressional review period.

"The gift tag on the Dixon-Yates deal now has Pres. Eisenhower's name on it," he said.

The 'Ebasco Fiasco'

Dixon-Yates, under its new corporate name of Mississippi Valley Generating Co., will put up a 650,000 kilowatt steam generating plant to supply TVA power to Memphis, Tenn. Now a contract revision calls for prior approval by the AEC of the contracting firm.

That issue arose when the "Ebasco fiasco," in construction of a plant by a group of private utilities at Joppa, Ill., was brought up by committee Democrats.

Ebasco Services, Inc., was the contractor on the project, and congressional committee testimony showed that the cost of the Joppa operation to supply power for the AEC's Paducah, Ky., installation ran $40 million above estimates.

Ebasco Services is the former Electric Bond and Share Co., utilities holding company, broken up by the government several years ago for monopolistic and questionable financial practices. It provides management, financing, contracting and engineering services for a number of utilities, some of which, including part of the Dixon-Yates group, belonged to the holding company.

Income Tax Paid

The General Accounting Office, the government's top financial watchdog, said that the contract as signed is a lot better than when first submitted, but that there are still loopholes for hidden profits. Acting Comptroller Gen. Frank H. Weitzel said the contract is "better than it was" but that he still wouldn't call it "good," in testimony before the committee.

Sen. Gore pointed out that although a $600,000 annual profit ceiling is now part of the contract, there is no limit the company can make on the 50,000 kilowatts of power over and above the 600,000 it will be feeding TVA customers in Memphis.

Gore also objected to a provision tacking $536,250 onto the company's power bill to take care of estimated taxes. He said there was "a very glaring possibility of a tax repayment windfall" when he learned that amount was supposed to be paid even if the company's actual taxes were less.

Eisenhower got back into the act again last week when he wrote members of the committee urging them to waive further congressional action. The construction of new power plants at federal expense, his letter said, "implying a purpose of continuing this process indefinitely in the future," was "wholly indefensible."

No Clear Sailing

When the contract with Dixon-Yates was originally directed by the President, despite the objections of a majority of the AEC, the TVA had said it could build a steam generating plant for $140 million less, over the life of the contract.

Comment from leading Democrats indicated that the utilities combine of Middle South Utilities, Inc., and the Southern Co. had far from clear sailing ahead.

In a television debate with Sen. Hickenlooper (R. Iowa), Sen. Kefauver (D. Tenn.) said the contract will be a "running sore . . . for years to come" and will cost Pres. Eisenhower bipartisan support for his programs in the new Congress.

Sen. Sparkman (D. Ala.) said that the Democrats will try to sidetrack the contract in the next Congress and he has "a feeling the contract will never go into effect."

Kefauver also said he "would support" any move by a Senate antimonopoly subcommittee to investigate the Dixon-Yates group, as part of a general investigation of alleged monopolies.

Anderson declined to say whether the Atomic Energy Committee will conduct a new inquiry. But he said "the next round probably will start when Congress gets back."

Alex Radin, general manager of the American Public Power Association, has termed the contract "a bad one which could not be improved sufficiently" to make it worthy of support because it is "designed to destroy the TVA 'yardstick' of low-cost electricity."

ALMOST GOT IT, BUT NOT QUITE—Here are the Dixon and Yates of the Dixon-Yates power deal by which the GOP Administration is moving in on TVA. Edgar H. Dixon (left) and Eugene A. Yates listen at Joint Atomic Energy Commission hearing, before contract waiver was voted.

Tub-Thumpers Of The Far Right, Retired Brass Join Manion Group

AN UNIMPRESSIVE collection of far-right wing tub-thumpers and apologists for the ultra-rich, leavened by a handful of militarists, has been dredged up by the For America organization to serve as its national policy committee.

For America is the tory outfit welded together by Gen. Robert E. Wood, retired board chairman of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and one of the original and loudest America Firsters, behind a facade of states' rights, "enlightened nationalism," and opposition to communism, "super-internationalism," and everything that has taken place since McKinley.

Wood is co-chairman with Clarence Manion, former dean of the Notre Dame Law School, whose ardent support of the nationalistic Bricker Amendment reputedly cost him his job as director of the Intergovernmental Relations Committee.

AMONG THE OTHER old-line viewers with alarm on the policy committee are Frank E. Gannett, publisher of 23 newspapers and founder of the notorious Committee for Constitutional Government; Sumner Gerard, CCG treasurer; Dr. George S. Benson, proprietor of Harding College, at Searcy, Ark., and of forums for teaching anti-unionism to business executives.

Also former Rep. Sam Pettengill, Indiana Democrat who bolted the New Deal to become a right wing Republican and one of the fairest ornaments of the CCG; Frank Chodorov, associate editor of the magazine Human Events and a CCG pamphleteer; Edward F. Hutton, millionaire New York financier and "angel" for many tory causes; Robert M. Harriss, who was Father Coughlin's broker and is now one of the warmest supporters of Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.); and former Rep. Thomas H. Werdel (R. Calif.).

CLARENCE MANION

For America is largely made up of CCG and America First stalwarts, supporters of the proposed constitutional amendment to limit the federal taxing power to 25% of income (a device to kill things like social security), and rabid opponents of practically all New Deal and Fair Deal legislation.

MILITARY MEN on the policy committee include Gen. Mark W. Clark, Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer; Gen. James A. Van Fleet; Gen. Bonner Fellers, who was named executive director of the group; and Adm. Ben Moreell.

Manion has another iron in the fire, the Manion Forum of Opinion, for which he has been soliciting funds from prominent Milwaukee industrialists, according to Press Associates-PAI.

The letter asks money to "cut our monster federal bureaucracy to size . . . restore rights to the states . . . rip away confiscatory taxation . . . and purge colleges, schools and labor unions of Communist bile."

The Milwaukee Labor Press pointed out that the emphasis on states' rights means enacting the right to scab law.

Bigot Bowles' Trial Delayed

The trial of Bryant D. Bowles, head of the National Association for the Advancement of White People, was delayed in Delaware when his attorneys filed a motion to dismiss charges based on remarks which sparked demonstrations against admitting Negroes to Milford schools.

UPWA Member Dies A Hero

George Washington, a CIO Packinghouse Worker, died a hero's death at Syracuse in a vain attempt to save a seven-year-old girl from drowning. Charlene Ayers fell into the Oswego River while picnicking with her family.

Steel Union Lists 2 Scholarships

Dist. 31 Dir. Joseph Germano of the CIO Steelworkers has announced that two scholarships, each worth $3000, will be awarded annually to high school graduates from the Chicago, Calumet and Gary area. A seven-man board of trustees will administer the program.

Stalling On Integration Is Protested

ATTORNEYS for the Negro parents who won the original ruling against school segregation and for the American Veterans Committee filed briefs with the Supreme Court last week asking for immediate integration.

CIO took the same position in its "friend of the court" brief filed prior to the court's history-making decision last spring.

"There is an impressive body of evidence which supports the position that gradualism, far from facilitating the process, may actually make it more difficult," the parents' brief said.

"Our submission is that this (segregation), like many wrongs, can be easiest and best undone, not by 'tapering off,' but by forthright action."

AVC's argument was that only by allowing children to select any school where geographical districts are not established, or by assigning children solely on the basis of geographical proximity to a school could the Constitution be complied with.

All four states affected by the original court ruling filed briefs asking for a gradual ending of segregation.

Price Prospects for Christmas (See Page 6)

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., November 29, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 48

CIO Hears Welfare Policing Plans

By GERVASE N. LOVE

BROAD agreement on some general principles intended to keep union health, welfare and pension funds operating honestly and at top efficiency came last week at precedent-setting hearings conducted by the CIO Ethical Practices Committee.

After two days of discussion by committee members, union leaders and technicians, insurance company executives, independent experts and educators, and a pat on the back from Sec. of Labor James Mitchell, the areas of agreement were outlined by Arthur J. Goldberg, committee director and CIO general counsel.

Goldberg made it clear the areas of general agreement would not necessarily cover the recommendations the committee will make to the National CIO convention opening Dec. 6 in Los Angeles, as other evidence and studies have to be taken into consideration. But as he summarized them, they were:

1. The area of union health, welfare and pension funds, because of its rapidly growing importance, is one of the major public interests of the times.

2. Such programs must be honestly and efficiently administered at the lowest cost commensurate with the benefits received by the CIO members they protect.

3. Because of variations in the conditions under which they are negotiated and administered, and the benefits they yield, no rule of thumb for a proper administrative cost is possible.

4. There should be the fullest possible publicity on all phases of operations, with disclosure to union members, in layman's language, of all details including salaries, expenses and commissions paid, if any.

5. Commissions should be paid to insurance agents and brokers only when they are actually earned.

Union witnesses testified that all too frequently huge commissions are paid for which no work is done, in some cases because of state legal requirements. Insurance company spokesmen defended the agency system, which was not under attack as such, and disclaimed knowledge of unconscionable unearned commissions.

6. Unions, at both international and local levels, must undertake education campaigns among their members to give them greater familiarity with the protections they have and how they operate for the individual's benefit.

7. All funds should be audited regularly by outside auditors, with the audits given wide publicity. Some witnesses maintained that appropriate legislative bodies should enact laws requiring the filing of such audits with the proper authority.

8. Union officers paid salaries by their unions and company representatives paid salaries by their firms should not be paid any salaries whatsoever from any health, welfare or pension fund.

9. International unions should have the authority to supervise and control the administration of welfare funds negotiated by local unions, with revision of international constitutions to provide such power where it does not now exist.

There appeared to be no general agreement on the desirability of legislation at either state or federal levels aimed at assuring honest and efficient administration of the funds. However, a number of witnesses—including educators and independent experts—said they felt self-regulation by the unions was preferable to regulation by government.

The hearings were held in the Hotel Commodore, New York. Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the CIO Clothing Workers, the committee chairman, was unable to attend because of illness. CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, also president of the CIO Electrical Workers, sat with the committee throughout the session.

The Committee was created as an outgrowth of charges involving the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union. Recommendations will go to the CIO convention opening in Los Angeles Dec. 6. (More details and pictures, Page 2.)

Operation Goldfish Bowl— The CIO invited everybody and his brother to take a hand in its study of health, welfare and pension fund operation—and everybody came, from union leaders to business leaders, when the CIO Ethical Practices Committee held hearings in New York last week. At top left are (left to right) CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Committee Members James G. Thimmes and Joseph N. Curran, and Committee Dir. Arthur J. Goldberg. Sec. of Labor James Mitchell (top right) praises the CIO's determination to protect its members. Some of the press and audience are shown below. Recommendations of the committee will be presented to CIO convention.

Reuther Hits Insurance Firms On Kickbacks

THE GUILT of union officials who "milk" union health, welfare and pension funds must be shared by employers and insurance companies, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther told the CIO Ethical Practices Committee at its hearing on the administration of such funds in New York last week.

"Corrupt union officials who have disregarded their sacred trust belong in jail," he said bluntly in a statement read by his assistant, Victor G. Reuther.

"We insist that those employers or insurance company officials who have provided the bribes or ignored their trustee responsibilities are equally as guilty and belong in adjoining cells.

"The payment of high commissions, even when agents and brokers perform no service to earn them, is a constant temptation to split fees with anyone—management or labor—who helps throw business to an agent or broker. . . Yet some state laws compel insurers to pay such commissions."

He defended the right of unions to participate in the administration of funds, basing it on "their well-founded distrust of management's handling of insurance matters." But he declared that "CIO unions are prepared to shoulder their responsibility for elimination of abuses."

Sees Greater Gains

And while cleaning house, he added, CIO unions will make "even greater gains in retirement and health security."

Reuther's statement was one highlight of a two-day public session without precedent among union techniques.

It involved an open hearing by the committee on ways and means of making the Administration of health, welfare and pension funds fool-proof against dishonesty, corruption and inefficient administration.

It was open to the press. A wide range of people who ought to have an interest in the operation of such funds was invited to appear and give any testimony they wanted.

The invitations brought out employers, insurance company executives, union officials and technicians, educators; experts from the fields of insurance and fund administration, accounting and education, and representatives from fields as far apart as medicine and investments. Many others sat through the sessions.

Give And Take

Arthur J. Goldberg, director of the committee and general counsel for the CIO, described it as "Operation Goldfish Bowl," and that's what it was.

There was constructive give and take between union experts and insurance company executives, honest advice from the authorities on safeguards against both dishonest and inefficient operation.

There was no agreement on the need for legislation to prevent maladministration in any form from eating into the benefits that belong to the workers, but a lot of those present indicated they believe nothing will ever take the place of honesty.

The meeting got under way with brief statements by the two committee members present, Pres. Joseph N. Curran of the CIO Maritime Union and Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes of the CIO Steelworkers; CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey—who has administered the finances of the CIO since 1938—and Goldberg.

Sec. of Labor James P. Mitchell, in a brief statement offering his department's facilities for the committee's investigations, described the hearing's "openness and frankness" as "refreshing," and warmly commended the CIO for "admirably seeking" to solve its problems.

There followed a panel discussion with Murray Lattimer, insurance consultant and former Railroad Retirement Board chairman, as presiding officer.

Insurance Firms Hit

The union technicians who participated were sharply critical of some insurance company practices—payment of commissions where no work is done, refusal to give information on the ground the employer is the "customer," failure to be specific about different expense items, and others.

Joseph Swire, welfare expert for the CIO Electrical Workers, pinpointed one of the union gripes, huge and often unearned commissions that are "an inducement to kickbacks and corruption."

"There's just too much loose money floating around in the insurance business," he asserted. ". . . I think the high commissions paid brokers provide too much incentive for seduction."

Executives representing some of the country's companies defended the agency system and denied all knowledge of excessive commissions either earned or unearned.

Union officials outlined health, welfare and pension plans that operate for their members. Among them were Curran, Carey, both as CIO secretary-treasurer and president of the Electrical Workers, and Hyman Blumberg, executive vice president of the Clothing Workers. John Tomyko and Bernard Greenberg of the Steelworkers, Jerome Pollack of the Auto Workers and Dena Wechter of the Amalgamated Insurance Co. also testified.

DETAILS of CIO Clothing Workers' welfare and pension plans were explained for CIO Ethical Practices Committee by Executive Vice Pres. Hyman Blumberg (left). Technical discussion included (left to right, center photo) Jerome Pollack of Auto Workers, Vice Pres. N. E. Horelick of Equitable Life, and Bernard Greenberg of Steelworkers. At right, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther's statement is read by his assistant, Victor G. Reuther.

Excused

Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO Ethical Practices Committee and president of the CIO Clothing Workers, was unable to attend the committee's sessions in New York last week.

He became ill shortly before the hearing was due to open, and went into a hospital for a complete physical checkup. He is not seriously ill.

Summary Of Welfare Plans Gained By CIO Unions

Main points summarized from answers to the questionnaire on the conduct of union health, welfare and pension plans, sent to all CIO international unions by the CIO Ethical Practices Committee, follow:

A total of 4,623,000 CIO members are protected by union-negotiated hospitalization plans; 4,549,000 by life insurance programs; 4,495,000 by sickness and accident benefits; 2,851,000 by surgical benefit plans; 2,233,000 against accidental death or dismemberment; and 2,221,000 by medical protection programs.

Health and welfare programs affecting only about 3% of the CIO members covered are administered exclusively by unions.

In addition, 3,283,000 CIO members are protected by union-negotiated pension and retirement plans. About 75% of the workers covered receive their benefits through trust funds, with the trustees selected exclusively by the employer in about 90% of such cases. About 20% have benefits protected by insurance companies, and about 5% appear to be covered on a pay-as-you-go basis of financing.

Testimony

Copies of testimony at the New York hearings of the CIO Ethical Practices Committee, in slightly abridged form, will be available soon after the first of the year.

They may be ordered now from the CIO Publications Dept., 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

VAST COMMISSIONS, earned or unearned, on union health and welfare insurance were protested by Joseph Swire (left), of CIO Electrical Workers, as Murray Lattimer, panel chairman, listened.

Greenberg Tells Hearings How RWDSU Cleaned House

CREATION of the CIO Ethical Practices Committee by the CIO Executive Board to recommend rules for the administration of health, welfare and pension funds—and to make sure they are administered properly—was touched off by charges involving five New York City locals of the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union.

How the international union handled the situation was described by Pres. Max Greenberg at the committee's hearings in New York last week.

"The five local unions were suspended and administrators were appointed," he said. "Three of the local unions acceded to the international's suspension order.

"In a fourth, we had to take physical possession of the local offices, an action that was approved by the membership of the union at a meeting a few days later.

"The fifth local was expelled from the RWDSU for refusing to accede to the suspension and to the appointment of an administrator."

The administrators, in charge while the locals' books and records are being examined, will make recommendations aimed at avoiding future dishonesty to the members, Greenberg said. If justified, they will file charges against the officials.

EXPERIENCE of CIO Retail-Wholesale Union in meeting dishonesty was described by Pres. Max Greenberg.

"DISCRIMINATION IN JOBS Is Labor's Enemy" said poster at recent CIO-AFL sponsored human rights conference in Philadelphia. From left are Joseph Schwartz, AFL Garment Workers Local 190 manager; Mildred Philips, ILG-AFL; CIO Council Pres. Joseph Kelly; AFL Central Labor Union Manager Norman Blumberg and Sheppard M. Lyles, CIO Steelworker and Philadelphia human relations commissioner.

Carey Raps Move To Name Upton To NLRB

THE PROPOSED nomination of former Sen. Upton (R. N.H.) to NLRB membership was denounced last week by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who challenged Upton's fairness and impartiality.

"On the record of his Senate voting," Carey declared, "Upton is a reactionary whose sympathies and attitudes are those of big business and management."

Carey recalled that Upton was soundly trounced in the New Hampshire primaries by Sen. Cotton, the only GOP senatorial candidate who had CIO-PAC endorsement.

"The irony, of course," said Carey, "is that we of labor helped defeat a reactionary in the Senate only to have him thrown at us in an even more crucial position—the NLRB."

Carey, who is also president of the CIO Electrical Workers, reminded that labor opposed appointment of Albert C. Beeson to the NLRB. He said it had been hoped that Pres. Eisenhower would "this time nominate somebody not pro-labor but somebody impartial, somebody without heavy prejudices . . ."

THE NLRB, meanwhile, ruled that a company which pleads poverty in turning down a union demand for a wage increase had better be able to prove it can't pay. The decision was unanimous, a marked contrast to the usual 3 to 2 split decisions these days.

The ruling involved the AFL Ironworkers and the Truitt Mfg. Co., Greensboro, N. C. The firm said it couldn't afford a 10c increase.

The board's decision said denial of "reasonable proof" to the union of its inability was refusal to bargain. It emphasized that company failure to substantiate its claim does not mean it must accede to the union demands.

First Rivers Pact Gained By CIO-AFL Organizing Drive

THE FIRST agreement between the Rivers Joint Organizing Committee (CIO-AFL) and an unorganized towing company was signed last week, RJOC Coordinator Charles Barranco, Jr., announced.

Mid-Continent Barge Line Co. of Alton, Ill., signed a stipulation with Barranco for the RJOC and the participating unions, agreeing to grant recognition, the union shop, substantial pay raises and to rehire three crew members previously fired.

Mid-Continent said it would begin negotiations with the CIO Maritime Union, the CIO Marine Engineers and the AFL Masters, Mates & Pilots for all crew members within 30 days of signing the stipulation.

The towing company agreed to a wage scale equal to that paid by American Barge Lines, a union company, which amounts to raises of $100 to $200 monthly for crew members.

BARGES that the M/V Mid-Continent Queen had been towing were struck in St. Paul after the vessel pulled away from the bank, leaving three crewmen ashore. The three were the first ones off the boat when the walkout began. Barranco said the barges were released to the company on signing of the stipulation.

Meantime, Barranco released text of a memorandum to the U. S. Coast Guard, accusing the service of "giving protection to strikebreakers" in connection with another strike at Gallipolis, O.

That tieup involved the M/V Frank W. Banta, which had been picketed by the unions in a strike that resulted in the shooting of NMU organizer Gordon Knapp at Cairo, Ill.

Barranco was to meet with the Coast Guard at week's end to discuss its "refusal" to check port security cards of Banta crews, its "refusal" to take steps "to ameliorate the situation" after strikers at Cairo had been fired on and local police had requested its assistance, and the "apparent protection of the Coast Guard" for an "illegal strikebreaking attempt."

Barranco said police in Cairo, Ill., "still haven't served the warrants" against the Banta family for the shooting, "even though all four of them are at large in Louisiana." He said that he had received an acknowledgement from the Justice Dept. of the RJOC complaint in which the department agreed to check the Banta case for federal law violations.

CIO Officers Meet Before Convention

Meetings preparatory to the CIO convention will be held this week in Los Angeles.

The CIO Executive Committee will meet Tuesday and the CIO Executive Board Wednesday.

Some 700 delegates are expected to attend the convention, which will be held Dec. 6-10 in the Statler Hotel.

Beirne Urges Granges To Meet With Labor

A PROPOSAL for annual meetings of state Grange organizations with state CIO Councils to work out joint programs was voiced to the National Grange by CIO Communications Workers Pres. Joseph A. Beirne.

Beirne said such meetings should produce "programs beneficial to the farmer, the worker and all other citizens within the various states."

"Speaking for the CIO, I guarantee participation if we get such programs underway," the CWA president told the 88th annual national meeting of the Grange in Spokane, Wash.

REFERRING to the recent congressional election, Beirne said that "American farmers and working people went to the polls to confound the teachers of national discord."

"I hope that their action in repudiating big-business government has proved to both political parties that they can ignore the people's needs only at their own peril, and that farmers and workers will unite to insure government of, by and for the whole people."

Beirne, who is a CIO vice president, was severely critical of the loss to the American economy of "an $8 billion drop in wages and salaries in 1952." The farmers gained no benefit from this drop, he said.

"It has not meant lower prices to the farmer. Quite the contrary, living costs have continued to inch upward."

Instead, he pointed out, "with an increased standard of living for America's urban population, there would be no artificial food surpluses." Millions of American families still have incomes of less than $3500 annually, Beirne noted. He said that this is "below the minimum standards required for healthful living."

THE CWA president reminded the Grange of CIO's strong support of fair parity prices, saying that "parity guarantees the farmer an equitable relationship between the prices he pays for manufactured goods and the prices he receives for his products."

The past two years, he said, have been "marked by a revival of the trickle-down theory of national welfare, which holds that if enough meat is fed to the fat cats, sufficient gristle will be left over for the people."

The CIO, Beirne said, joins with the Grange in supporting programs designed to maintain the welfare of the family-size farm as essential to the welfare of America.

Recount Set In Close Ohio Senate Race

POSTING $75,000 with Ohio election officials, Democrats will obtain a partial recount of the state's Nov. 2 ballots to determine if incumbent Sen. Burke (D.) actually was unseated by GOP Rep. Bender's 6100-vote margin.

A recount is already under way in New Jersey, where Clifford Case (R.) had an announced plurality of 3370 votes over Rep. Howell (D.). The results may not be known until January.

Ohio law requires a $10 deposit for each precinct to be recounted. Counters will work on ballots at 7500 polling places in 22 counties that include the cities of Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and Toledo and comprise 75% of the state's vote.

Democratic Chairman Stephen Mitchell said there was "strong indications of errors and irregularities" in the Ohio returns and predicted victory for Burke in the recount.

McCoy May Quit

Whitley P. McCoy, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, was reported to have resigned, effective Dec. 1.

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

N. Y. News Unit Authorizes Strike

The CIO Newspaper Guild's unit at the New York Daily News has voted 535 to 22 to authorize a strike call "should management refuse to agree to an improved contract consistent with the best settlements on other papers and without any retrogression."

'Operation Reindeer' Is Rolling

CIO'S "OPERATION REINDEER," which is making Christmas food packages available for overseas trade unionists, picked up speed as new contributions came in from a number of international and local unions.

The CIO Auto Workers contributed 10,000 packages to be assigned to various countries.

The CIO Utility Workers have arranged to send 400 packages to Indochina, Korea, Greece, Italy and Guatemala, while the CIO Furniture Workers contributed 100 packages.

Various Locals of the CIO Textile Workers arranged for distribution of 740 packages in 16 different countries; the CIO Packinghouse Workers sent 200 packages to Haiti; and the CIO Free World Labor Fund, directly, is sending 2000 packages to Honduras for flood victims.

Other CIO unions including the Clothing Workers, the Communications Workers and the Oil Workers are soliciting their locals for contributions.

The solicitation produced one individual contribution, too. One of the CWA office employes who was stuffing envelopes with the mimeographed solicitation letters, picked one out of the stack and forwarded it to the CIO Dept. for International Affairs with her check for $5 to pay for 10 packages.

The food packages, which cost 50c each, contain from 13 to 15 pounds of basic foods from U. S. surplus food stocks. CARE distributes the parcels to free trade unions which, in turn, distribute them to individual members.

Checks should be made payable to the CIO Free World Labor Fund and sent to the CIO Dept. for Intl. Affairs, 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

Ship Unions Sign Pact For N. Y. Harbor

A NO-RAIDING agreement covering several thousand railroad tugboat workers in the New York harbor was signed last week by the CIO Transport Workers and the AFL Masters, Mates and Pilots.

Both unions pledged "to cooperate with each other jointly, in organization" and to fight raids jointly "against each or both of our respective organizations."

William Smith, field assistant to CIO Vice Pres. John V. Riffe, who presided at the ratification meeting in New York City, pointed out that the agreement was prompted by the raiding attempts of Dist. 50 of the Mine Workers.

THE CHIEF OBSTACLE to the agreement was removed when it was agreed that TWU-CIO Local 1463 would petition for a National Mediation Board election among the Jersey Central captains and Baltimore & Ohio deck hands, who are now represented by the AFL union.

It was agreed that "this election will be conducted strictly and solely on an organizational basis, without any reference to personalities and character assassination on either side."

Heading The Wrong Way

The built-in bias (and heads-in-the-sand clarity) of the big business members of Commission on Intergovernmental Relations named by Pres. Eisenhower was demonstrated again last week, in the matter of what to do about improving unemployment compensation benefits.

A task force of this commission—through which some people want to repeal the New Deal and the Fair Deal—is coming up with some recommendations. According to unofficial reports, the task force by a 6-5 majority wants to reduce sharply such federal standards as now exist over state jobless pay practices and to cut deeply taxes paid by employers toward the program.

The composition of the task force majority is interesting: The Shivercrat head of the Texas Unemployment Div. and officials of General Electric, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Standard Oil of Calif., and A. & P. chain stores—a blue ribbon collection from Dun & Bradstreet. It's to the credit of CIO's representative on the group, Leonard Lesser of the Auto Workers, that five task force members dissented.

Actually, the nation needs not the whittling down of unemployment compensation, which big industry wants, but rather a building up of the state systems. And with a majority of legislatures meeting later this winter, that's a job for State CIO Councils throughout the nation.

Some Advice To Consider

Speaking of the businessmen who want to use an ax on unemployment benefits in a period of continuing recession, Prof Sumner Slichter, the Harvard economist, says that the nation will not recover from the present recession until wages are increased and prices are lowered.

The reluctance of the Eisenhower Administration "to fight recession with fiscal policy" was condemned by Slichter at a recent Boston bankers' conference. He made these points:

- "A recovery which does not push production in 1955 well above the levels of 1953 cannot be regarded as satisfactory." (Note: Industrial production now is 5% below October a year ago and 9% below the 1953 peak.)
- "The government blundered badly in not making greater tax cuts last winter and spring when the economy needed more stimulus than the government gave it." (Note: Wage and salary income now is off $5.5 billion from last year's peak. And the fight for a fair tax cut law will be renewed in the next Congress.)
- "Another year must not be permitted to pass without wages rising to keep pace with gains in efficiency." (The recent collective bargaining and economic conference of the CIO Auto Workers is but one of many demonstrations of labor's concern in that basic field.)

Prof. Slichter has offered some good advice for government and for management. Labor can add some convincing clinchers.

Moving Forward

The recent representation victory of the CIO Chemical Workers at the Goodyear Atomic Corp. plant at Portsmouth, O., is the result of hard work under the leadership of CIO Organizational Dept. representatives. For months, atomic energy workers have been getting a kicking around from the Atomic Energy Commission and the big corporations which operate its plants. Now that the bulk of the basic production workers in three big atomic energy plants are in CIO, they've a chance for a better deal.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS
Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene A. Kelley, Ed Lashman

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII November 29, 1954 No. 48

'Yes, Virginia, There Is A Santa Claus'

In Other Words—

Freedom In An Age Of Business

Big unions are essential to match big business, declared Solomon Barkin, research director of the CIO Textile Workers, in an address at Wellesley (Mass.) College. A portion of his talk, "Freedom In An Age of Business," follows.

By SOLOMON BARKIN

BIG BUSINESS is a challenge to the American people. Its power and dominance must be kept under constant surveillance. The new prestige it cultivated in the post-war years has served it well in acquiring new privileges and incentives and in extending its authority.

BARKIN

The influence of big business upon our political and cultural life has increased greatly. Our present day economy requires a strong trade union movement, a high level of taxes and a federal administration responsive to many equalitarian and diverse interests to maintain a reasonably balanced society.

The essentials for countervailing pressures have waned, as a result of the present Administration's responsiveness to big business. We have no systematic procedures or adequate countervailing force to pressure big business constantly, so that it will act in the public interest, promote national efficiency, assure adequate utilization of resources and the lowest possible prices for services and goods needed to maintain and expand a full employment economy.

This force in our democratic society can only be made a reality with a national Administration which is not allied to big business.

The enforcement of the anti-trust laws is inadequate. The courts have not been too helpful and the Dept. of Justice has not always been sufficiently vigilant. Nevertheless, these laws and court decisions have slowed up big business which constantly tends to cartelize its powers.

A simpler procedure for enforcement is imperative. We need specific legislative definitions of undesirable practice, and real power to regulate wherever abuses are shown.

The Public Interest

Continued self-examination and self-correction under leaders of integrity will insure the present place of labor unions in U. S. life, Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor from 1933 to 1945, stated in the first of the Sidney Hillman Memorial lectures at the University of Wisconsin.

"Labor unions are private associations fraught with the public interest and as such they are expected to perform certain functions and services and to set high standards of conduct," Miss Perkins said.

Big corporations must be incorporated by the federal government and subject to an identical system of limitations. The federal agency should be furnished with regular reports on policy performance and results, and should be entitled, on its own motions or on public complaints, to survey individual corporations for behavior in conflict with the public interest.

The beneficiaries of public privileges and financial incentives should be particularly responsible for meeting tests of constructive business practice, progressive management, reasonable price levels and genuine collective bargaining. Where the market itself cannot effectively operate to pressure prices and production to efficient levels, we must substitute public review.

The Use Of Tax-Exempt Funds

The present Corrupt Practices Act prohibits corporations from intruding into our political life. A code is necessary for limiting the use of tax-exempt funds and corporate payrolls to influence our social, cultural and communal institutions.

Big corporations are public institutions dominated and governed by private interests. Those who abuse their power should be dissolved. The others should be subject to constant public scrutiny.

Our growing national economy and the era of high employment we have enjoyed produced new opportunities for the individual worker. The union was able to bargain for him an ever-rising standard of income, a more independent and dignified status on the job and greater participation in the determination of his conditions of work. These gains should not be lost.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

IN THE NEW CONGRESS that meets in January, liberals face a double obligation in regard to the notorious Dixon-Yates contract. The first is to stop the contract itself, the second to develop a substitute to fill the power vacuum in the Western Tennessee section of the TVA country.

It is of major importance to kill the contract if for no other reason than to rescue the Atomic Energy Commission from the political mud in which it is now mired up to its neck.

No one would have complained had Pres. Eisenhower ordered the AEC to contract with a private-utility syndicate for power needed for its own requirements. The AEC already has such contracts.

But the President was not satisfied with such an arrangement. He told the Budget Bureau to tell the AEC to make a contract with Dixon-Yates in behalf of TVA—in effect, to force TVA to buy Dixon-Yates power whether or not it wanted to.

Testimony before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee and the Joint Atomic Energy Committee made it clear that this order created bad blood between AEC and TVA leaders and engineers.

Two presidential nominations to fill AEC vacancies are now blocked, at least temporarily, because Sen. Kefauver (D. Tenn.) knows or suspects that with little study they have approved the AEC role in Dixon-Yates.

One may argue that Kefauver "shouldn't" allow this consideration to carry weight. Inevitably, however, it does carry weight, and it is Eisenhower's responsibility.

Suffering A Political Kickback

He tried to use the AEC for a political objective—the curbing of what he describes as TVA's "creeping socialism"—and any agency that allows itself to be used politically is going to suffer a political kickback.

David Lilienthal has pointed out that the AEC never was previously involved in politics, that its members served as nonpartisans devoted to a single purpose—atomic energy for defense and for peace. Eisenhower's own initiative has destroyed this nonpartisanship and this proper devotion to a single objective.

The Dixon-Yates deal is bad simply as a power operation, forcing money out of taxpayers to hem in TVA with what might become a network of private utilities owned by long-time TVA enemies. As policy, thrusting the AEC into politics, it is an example of gross mismanagement of public affairs.

Congressmen who have fought Dixon-Yates this year, however, face a further obligation to come up with a sound alternative.

There is no doubt that Memphis and West Tennessee will have a power shortage in 1957 unless new steam generating facilities are constructed promptly.

The best solution would be an appropriation to the TVA allowing that agency to go ahead with its earlier plans for steam-generating facilities at Fulton, Tenn.

These facilities were recommended in Pres. Truman's last budget in January, 1953, but knocked out of the revised budget proposals submitted by Eisenhower. Congress can take affirmative action, however, without an Eisenhower recommendation.

Chance For Affirmative Action

TVA has been built in the past with federal advances, all of which are being repaid with interest on or before schedule. There is no sound reason for discarding this tested system. Democrats and liberal Republicans who have fought Dixon-Yates negatively have a chance for affirmative action on the TVA appropriation bill.

If White House opposition blocks funds for TVA, another alternative would be to revise the basic law and give TVA clear authority to finance the Fulton plant with revenue bonds based on its own earnings.

Gordon Clapp, the able former TVA chairman, thinks that if necessary TVA ought to accept a temporary power shortage, to do nothing rather than allow itself to be forced in the Dixon-Yates matter. He may be right—and the mere blocking of the private deal would at least salvage the AEC from its present ugly situation.

The constructive thing, however, would be for Congress to speak its mind so clearly in granting TVA the power of expansion that the White House would abandon its mistaken attitude of hostility. This is one goal to which the new Democratic majorities in the upcoming 84th Congress should devote themselves insistently.

Out In Open

A new political party that is to be "pro-McCarthy" and "anti-Eisenhower" is being organized by a group of Oklahoma Republicans.

John W. Beck, financial editor of the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, is chairman of the group, now known as the Constitution Club. He said supporters are circulating petitions to gain official recognition for the "Constitutional Party."

The new party, Beck said, would be affiliated with the Constitution Party which entered four candidates in the recent Texas general election.

LISTEN TO THE CIO RADIO PROGRAM
John W. Vandercook AND THE NEWS
every weekday evening on the ABC Network

Labor's World—

ILO Puts Forced Labor Question On Next World Parley Agenda

THE QUESTION of forced labor will be placed on the agenda of the 1956 Intl. Labor Organization's general conference, the ILO Governing Body unanimously voted last week at its meeting in Rome.

The decision was agreed to by the representatives of 20 governments—including the Soviet Union—and by 10 worker and 10 employer delegates. The Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions, with the support of the CIO and other elements of the U. S. labor movement, has been pushing for such action for years.

The ILO adopted a convention (treaty) on forced labor in 1930, but it was aimed principally at non-metropolitan territories. The Governing Body instructed Dir.-Gen. David A. Morse to consult ILO government-members on their reaction to extending the same standards to self-governing countries.

ON BUSMAN'S HOLIDAY—Sec. Harry Block of the Pennsylvania CIO, also a vice president of CIO Electrical Workers (right), meets Bruno Storti, of secretariat of Italian Confederation of Labor Unions (CISL) at its Rome office. Other man is O. Bartelli of U. S. Operations Mission.

Britain

The General Council of the British Trades Union Council has voted to suspend the National Amalgamated Stevedores and Dockers for violations of TUC rules growing out of alleged raids on the membership of the Transport and General Workers Union. NASD units touched off the last month's dock strike, which eventually involved some members of the Transport and General Workers, but this action was not involved in the suspension.

Israel

CIO and AFL unionists gave Israel "invaluable aid" in "the most bitter days of our history," Mrs. Golda Myerson, Israel's Minister of Labor, said in a speech in Los Angeles. Mrs. Myerson, one of the founders of Histadrut, the Israeli federation of labor, said the aid of U. S. union leaders and members "helped make it possible for us to lay a solid foundation for a Jewish state."

ICFTU

The Regional Activities Fund of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions, set up to help free trade unions in underdeveloped nations, has received voluntary contributions from affiliates totaling more than $780,000, according to a report to a recent meeting of the Regional Activities Fund Committee in Brussels. The CIO has given $160,000. —G.N.L.

Reuther To Lead CIO Delegation On Visit With Mexican Unionists

TOP CIO officials, headed by Pres. Walter P. Reuther, will pay an official visit to Mexico's largest trade union federation, the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM) in Mexico City Dec. 11-13.

The delegation will visit the Mexican capital on the invitation of Sec.-Gen. Fidel Velazquez on behalf of CTM's more than a million members. Announcement of the visit was made by Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the CIO Clothing Workers, who is also chairman of the CIO International Committee.

The visit will emphasize the close ties that have been established between CIO and CTM in implementing the "good neighbor" policy. Mutual problems affecting hemispheric labor relations will be discussed by leaders of the two labor federations.

A group from the CIO Auto Workers will also make the trip to continue parleys begun last June when a delegation of Mexican auto workers visited Detroit. A liaison committee was formed to coordinate activities in the auto industry on both sides of the border, especially in plants owned by the same firms.

REUTHER'S VISIT will be the first official call by the head of a major U. S. labor federation on Mexican labor leaders since the late AFL Pres. Samuel Gompers visited Mexico in 1924.

The delegation will arrive in Mexico City Dec. 11 and will be guests of the CTM national committee at a dinner. The next day they will meet with Mexico's Pres. Adolfo Ruiz Cortines.

Highlight of the visit will be a meeting to be attended by more than 1000 Mexican unionists. The visitors will be introduced by Alfonso Sanchez Madariaga, a ranking official of CTM. Also scheduled to speak is Sec.-Gen Luis Alberto Monge of the Inter-American Regional Organization of Workers (ORIT).

Besides Reuther, the CIO party will include Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who is also head of the CIO Electrical Workers; Pres. O. A. Knight of the Oil Workers, who is chairman of the CIO Latin American Affairs Committee; Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers; Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes of the Steelworkers; Sec.-Treas. Frank Rosenblum of the Clothing Workers; R. J. Thomas, assistant to CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe; General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg; Victor G. Reuther, assistant to the CIO president; Associate Dir. Dan Benedict of the Dept. for Intl. Affairs; Publicity Dir. Henry C. Fleisher; George L-P Weaver, assistant to Carey; and Ernst Schwarz, secretary of the Latin American Affairs Committee.

CCL Urges Lower Taxes To Halt Growing Recession

LOWER TAXES, higher income tax exemptions and increased public investment to boost purchasing power and employment were urged on the Canadian government by the Canadian Congress of Labor.

The proposals were in a brief which emphasized the seriousness of unemployment and contained additional suggestions for action in other areas.

"We are in the midst of an unmistakable recession," the CCL said bluntly. "It is no longer merely a possible danger, as it was a year ago. It is a fact, and has been for the last eight or 10 months.

"It is no longer, as it was a year ago, just a matter of coal and textiles and agricultural implements and motor cars. The crisis in all these is still with us, and has become worse; but it has also spread, though usually in milder form, to a whole host of industries, and affects every major sector of the economy."

No-Raiding Pact For Canada Signed

A no-raiding pact has been signed by Canadian Congress of Labor—to which CIO unions in Canada belong—and The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, with which AFL unions are affiliated. The agreement will become effective next Jan. 1 and remain in force during the ensuing year.

Economic Report—

Some Trends Are Favorable, But Not Enough For Full Employment

This is a digest of the new monthly Economic Newsletter, published by the CIO Dept. of Education and Research:

MOST ECONOMIC indicators show slightly favorable trends this month. We do not think the improvements will continue long enough or increase enough to insure growth in the economy.

Underlying weakspots remain: Government and business spending will be lower next year. Unless consumer spending can make up for this decline, full-time jobs for all those able and willing to work won't be possible.

1. INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION: October's index rose to 125 from last month's 124, an increase of less than 1%. But it is still 5% below October last year, 9% below the peak in July 1953. Greater steel production accounted for most of this month's rise, as auto companies scheduled production of new model cars and stepped up their orders for steel.

2. EMPLOYMENT: October's total employment was 62.1 million, no change from September. A drop of 300,000 in farm employment was matched by a rise in non-farm employment, which kept the Census figure steady. Manufacturing employment: stayed at 16 million, 1.3 million below a year ago. Employment also lagged behind last year in such other important employment groups as mining, utilities, construction and trade. It rose slightly in government, finance and service.

3. UNEMPLOYMENT: October's unemployment, according to the Census Bureau, dropped to 2.7 million or 4.2% of the total labor force. This is about 2.25 times greater than a year ago, when unemployment numbered 1.2 million or 1.8% of the total labor force. Unemployment dropped 358,000 from September, while employment stayed the same. Census figures explain this inconsistency by showing a decline in the number of people looking for work.

4. CONSUMERS' PRICE INDEX: September's index dropped to 114.7 from 115.0 in August, a decline of three-tenths of 1%. Lower food prices, particularly for fresh fruits and vegetables, accounted for the change. Rents continued their slow, steady, upward climb.

5. PERSONAL INCOME: Personal income, at an annual rate, rose in September to $287.4 billion, up $2 billion from August, but still slightly below a year ago. But wage and salary income stayed the same, still $5.5 billion below the peak of last year. The seasonal upturn in farm income plus increased unemployment compensation payments and old age benefits mainly caused the rise in personal income.

6. PARITY: The October farm parity ratio (relation of prices farmers receive to the prices they pay) dropped to 87, the lowest point since 1941. Prices farmers pay were down slightly, while prices they receive have decreased 1.6%, chiefly in livestock, corn, fruits, and vegetables.

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

YOU WILL FIND some gift items less costly as you start your annual Christmas shopping this year, especially if you select wisely. There are some better values available in clothing and household appliances traditionally given for Christmas.

Buying For Christmas

The high cost of toys is just as high as last year. However, there is more price-cutting at the retail level. A plan recently announced by the Toy Guidance Council, Inc., to stop such price-cutting by preventing certain toys from getting into the hands of retailers who sell them for less, has been chilled by the Anti-Trust Div. of the Justice Dept., whose lawyers suggested to the council that they all first talk this over.

The council's plan was especially aimed at discount houses and "toy parties" held in private homes, where toys are offered at reduced prices to those attending. But apparently certain aspects of the plan may be in restraint of trade, which is illegal, so moderate-income families will still be able to shop for reduced prices on toys for their kids.

IN CLOTHING ITEMS for adults, the most noticeable savings this year over last are in the synthetics as nylon, orlon, etc. This Christmas you can buy well-made nylon tricot slips for as little as $4, compared to closer to $5 last year. (But beware low-priced lingerie with a great deal of showy lace with disguises its basically poor quality. Better-quality lingerie generally has conservative trim.)

Many household appliances and television sets are cheaper this year. Reductions of $10 and more are available on refrigerators for people planning a big family gift. Some brands of smaller appliances, such as pop-up toasters, are also more reasonable this year.

Here are tips on buying best gifts for your money in other items:

TOYS: Most of the toys a child will have for the rest of the year are those he gets for Christmas. So rather than novelties any major investment should go for playthings he will use all year like big building blocks, either the hollow wood ones, or the less-costly corrugated-paper ones which are surprisingly strong; science and handicraft tools; large, sturdy housekeeping toys; dolls with costumes that have easy-to-handle fastners; rhythm and musical instruments; construction and transportation toys, and sports and active play equipment.

One expert source for guidance in selecting play materials is the Arts Cooperative Service, an association of nursery teachers, which supplies schools with play equipment. You can get its catalog for 25c from the co-op, at 324 Amsterdam Ave., New York 24, N. Y.

The co-op features a double easel adjustable to three heights for $10.95; the Jonathan slide, at $9.95 (a strong, portable slide, five feet long with masonite surface, which can be used as a bridge, gangplank or in other play ideas); a strong rope ladder with metal rings for attaching to a hook or bar, at $8.95, and hobby-horse sticks on wheels for $2.95.

DOLLS: Dolls run into money chiefly because the clothes cost so much. You can buy an 18-inch doll without clothes for $5, but much the same doll with a dress, hat and parasol will cost $8.50. Each additional article of clothing raises the price considerably. Sometimes it is less expensive to buy an undressed doll and buy separate clothing—available in different sizes to fit standard-size dolls.

WATCHES: As this department has pointed out, the watch and jewelry business is notorious for its exaggerated list prices. Many retailers give discounts off these prices but beware some of the disreputable credit jewelers who get high prices for watches and jewelry.

(Copyright 1954 by Sidney Margolius.)

School Bias Cases Delayed; Local Integration Plan Asked

ARGUMENTS before the Supreme Court on ending segregation in public schools have been postponed by the Court until Justice-designate John M. Harlan takes his seat.

Confirmation of Harlan's nomination was delayed until January, at the earliest, when the new session of Congress convenes.

The Senate Judiciary Committee decided not to act when Sen. Eastland (D. Miss.) objected to immediate consideration of the nomination. Party leaders agreed that only non-controversial nominations should be handled in the special session.

AT WEEK'S END, the Eisenhower Administration made its position known by urging the Court to direct lower federal courts to supervise integration on a local basis.

In a "friend of the court" brief filed by Atty.-Gen. Brownell, the Justice Dept. said that problems involving in desegregation will vary from area to area and that the program should be carried out by school authorities under lower court supervision.

The department suggested no immediate deadline for complying with last Spring's Court decision outlawing school segregation, but it said the transition "should be as prompt as feasible."

ACW Bank Ups Capital

THE AMALGAMATED Bank of New York, the city's only labor bank, increased its capital stock from $1 million to $1.4 million, Jacob S. Potofsky, president and board chairman, announced.

Founded in 1923 by the CIO Clothing Workers with an original capitalization of $300,000, the bank's current capital and surplus is $3 million. As of Nov. 1 it had total resources of $52,826,821, an increase of over $10 million in the past year.

The Amalagamated Bank has pioneered a number of progressive banking services, among them the first personal loan department of any commercial bank, instituted in 1923.

Knife Stuck Into Soil Conservation

ANOTHER hassle is brewing over further cuts in government aid to farmers.

The latest Administration move to penalize small family farmers is contained in recommendations that soil conservation functions be turned over to the various states.

The Committee on Federal Aid to Agriculture made the proposal Sept. 30 but it was kept under wraps until after the elections.

Their report went to the President's Commission on Intergovernmental Relations and will eventually find its way to the Eisenhower desk. An even more bitter battle is expected than that touched off by Agriculture Sec. Benson's earlier moves to gut the federal soil conservation service.

THAT MOVE abolished seven federal regional offices and transferred personnel to state control. Even more far-reaching changes are now suggested.

The committee's report anticipates the strong opposition certain to result. It has been noted that if federal funds are given to the states for soil conservation work the result will be "48 different programs, some good, some bad and the majority probably indifferent."

Reuther Asks CIO Aid For Cancer Society Campaign

CIO AFFILIATES have been urged by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther to support the American Cancer Society's 1955 fund raising drive through community federated plans, or independently where no such programs exist.

In a letter to Elmer H. Bobst, chairman of the society's campaign committee, Reuther noted that cancer is "one of the most critical public health problems menacing our nation today."

"The American Cancer Society is attacking the disease with a three-point program of research, education and training," Reuther wrote.

"Because of its record of public service in the cause of fighting cancer, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, in line with the policies of our CIO Community Services Committee, heartily endorses the American Cancer Society."

The CIO president also urged "active CIO participation on the boards and committees of local Cancer Society units, and in the development of their programs and policies affecting the welfare of the entire community."

UAW-CIO Protests New Blue Cross Plan

The CIO Auto Workers in Michigan protested a new Blue Cross hospitalization plan because it would cost an individual "approximately $35 more" for a two-or three-day hospital stay than he pays presently.

The UAW charged that the new plan "puts the burden on the consumer for the failure of Blue Cross, hospitals and doctors to provide economy" in hospital service.

BLS Index Inches Down; Auto Workers Lose Penny

AN ALMOST imperceptible drop in the cost of living will cost 1.3 million CIO Auto Workers 1c an hour in wages.

The consumer price index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics declined by two-tenths of 1% between September and October, or 114.5% of average 1947-49 prices. It was barely under the record 1954 low set in April and 0.8% below the all-time high of October 1953.

The decline, BLS said, was due to falling food prices and lowered price tags on major household equipment items. UAW-CIO members will feel the impact in their Dec. 6 paychecks as a year's gains in escalator wage clause benefits are wiped out.

Here are the cumulative figures for the BLS index:

Period	Index		Period	New Index
1939 monthly average	99.4		Oct. 15	115.4
1943 monthly average	123.6		Nov. 15	115.0
1944 monthly average	125.5		Dec. 15	114.9
1945 monthly average	128.4		1954 Jan. 15	115.2
1946 monthly average	139.3		Feb. 15	115.0
1947 monthly average	159.2		Mar. 15	114.8
1948 monthly average	171.2		Apr. 15	114.6
1949 monthly average	169.1		May 15	115.0
1950 monthly average	171.2		June 15	115.1
1951 monthly average	185.9		July 15	115.2
1952 monthly average	190.6	(old index)	Aug. 15	115.0
1953 monthly average	114.4	(new index)	Sept. 15	114.7
1954 monthly average	114.9		Oct. 15	114.5

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

THE WRITER wants to touch briefly on two happenings this past week that represents steps forward to our goal of true labor unity. Charles Barranco, Jr., Coordinator of the Rivers Joint Organizing Committee, reports the signing of a stipulation with the Mid-Continent Barge Line, Alton, Ill.

The signing of this stipulation was achieved by the joint effort of the CIO Marine Engineers, CIO Maritime Union and the AFL Masters Mates and Pilots. All three unions were recognized by the company, which also agreed to a union shop for a bargaining unit that includes every man aboard the vessels from the captain down to the deck hands. The crews will realize wage increases from $100 to $200 a month.

Across the country in New York, a "no-raiding-general cooperation" pact was signed between the Masters, Mates and Pilots, AFL and the Railroad Div. of the Transport Workers Union, CIO. The pact ruled out all interference with present contracts and pledged cooperation and joint action in furthering each other's organizational drives.

As expressed by the national officers of both unions, the pact marked a "new stride in inter-union relations." I am very pleased that this office, through the assistant, William J. Smith, was able to bring these two unions together so that an understanding between them could be reached.

AS WE MOVE TOWARD our national convention in Los Angeles and look back over the past year, I find that the CIO, and especially the organizational staff under my direction, has done a good job with the responsibilities with which they have been charged. Whether it has been legislative, PAC, or local union service work the staff has done well. Those men assigned to international unions have worked hard to organize the unorganized workers despite many obstacles that have been devised by the employers.

We continue to move forward even in this difficult year. We have refused to accept the attitude of "it can't be done." We will continue to organize the unorganized workers in all industries as long as there is a job to be done and as long as we retain the faith and the conviction that we can "roll the union on."

CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler reports that the CIO Retail, Wholesale Union won an election victory at Jaybee Manufacturing Corp., Los Angeles, Calif., by a vote of 14 to 2 against. Intl. Rep. Al Bregnard was in charge of the campaign.

CIO Reg. Dir. Paul Christopher reports that the CIO Steelworkers won a representation election at the Tennessee-Alabama Pipe Co., Rockwood, Tenn., by a vote of 116 for USA-CIO to 2 against.

CIO Reg. Dir. Michael Mann reports that the CIO Auto Workers won an election at the Ames Metal Moulding Co., Inc., Paterson, N. J., by a vote of 10 to 6 no union.

Southern Dir. Carey Haigler of GCEOC-CIO reports an election victory for the CIO Brewery Workers among the production and maintenance workers at Canada Dry Ginger Ale Co., Atlanta, Ga., by a unanimous vote. CIO Rep. Waldo Rasnake assisted Brewery Rep. Ed Gerchak in this campaign.

IUMSWA Wins Lockout At Maryland Drydock Co.

THREE DAYS of round-the-clock negotiations resulted in the settlement of the 19-day lockout of some 4000 IUM SWA-CIO members at the Maryland Drydock Co., Baltimore.

The union also won a 5c an hour across the board increase, a 15c an hour additional hike for certain types of work, increase of hospitalization from 70 to 120 days and extended medical coverage through larger company contributions to the Blue Cross and Blue Shield funds.

IUMSWA-CIO also made the company back down from its attempt to weaken the seniority provisions and won the institution of the seniority clauses in effect with the Shipyard Div. of Bethlehem Steel.

The union also won on the immediate cause of the lockout, the firm's attempt to change the beginning of the work week.

Participating in the round-the-clock session were Pres. John J. Grogan, Vice Pres. Andrew A. Pettis and Sec.-Treas. Ross D. Blood. They were aided by Local 31's negotiating committee headed by Pres. Curtis Lundy and Exec. Sec. Charles Russell.

Guild To Sign No-Raiding Pact

The CIO Newspaper Guild was authorized at the recent meeting of its executive board to sign the CIO-AFL no-raiding pact. The Guild had withheld its endorsement until its effect on the union's operations could be clarified.

Lashman Joins CIO News Staff

Appointment of Ed Lashman as an assistant editor of The CIO News was announced last week by Henry C. Fleisher, editor and CIO Publicity Dept. director.

Milton Plumb, an assistant editor and chief congressional writer for the past three years, is transferring to the CIO Legislative Dept. staff. Lashman is a former member of the CIO Organization Dept. and CIO-PAC staffs.

Maryland CIO Hits Scab Laws As 'Give-Away' To Employers

By FRED ROSS

"ANOTHER give-away to low-wage employers bent on perpetuating sweatshop conditions" is the way the 16th convention of the Maryland CIO Council branded the so-called "right-to-work" laws.

Meeting in Washington, some 150 delegates representing more than 80,000 CIO members called on the Maryland Legislature to defeat a right-to-scab bill, which is expected to be introduced at the next session.

"It is a shameful distinction that southern states should have led the way in these attacks on workers' fundamental rights," declared the resolution, which was passed unanimously.

LABELING the right-to-scab laws as "utterly reactionary concessions to those opposed to health, social and economic growth with a stunted South as the main objective," the convention called on states with such laws to repeal them.

"Too many laws have already been passed that hinder organizing in states throughout the country," said CIO Exec. Vice Pres. John V. Riffe.

Riffe also complimented the Council for a "wonderful job" in the November election, in which some 70 PAC-supported candidates for Congress, the Legislature and local offices were elected in the state.

"For the first time," Riffe said, "the Republicans as well as the Democrats recognized in the last election that organized labor holds the balance of power."

But he warned the delegates not to expect too much cooperation from the Administration and Congress in the next two years. Riffe called on the delegates to work with their Council and their local and international unions in organizing the unorganized and providing better service for CIO members.

REP. BOLLING (D. Mo.), who spoke at the convention banquet, called for the support of liberals in Congress in order "to hold the line" for labor. He pointed out that even when the Democrats had a majority of 60 in the House in the 81st Congress, an attempt was made to pass the anti-labor Wood Bill. The Democrats now have a majority of 30 in the House.

"The American people have begun in the 1954 election to repair the mistakes they made in 1952," Bolling said. "A great deal of work needs to be done to assure that the American people are aware of the true meaning of events in Washington."

Fin. Sec. Robert Martin of the 7500-member CIO Auto Workers Local 738, Hagerstown, was elected Council president, defeating Patrick Zembower, Rubber Worker, Baltimore, by a vote of 436 to 89. Mrs. Audrey Smid, Communications Worker, Baltimore, did not seek reelection to the post.

Charles A. Della, Steelworker from Baltimore, was reelected to his sixth term as secretary-treasurer. He defeated Arthur Trabert, USA-CIO, also of Baltimore, by a vote of 317 to 170.

CIO on ABC
Monday thru Friday
John W. Vandercook
AND THE NEWS

FOUR-WAY HANDSHAKE is exchanged at the Maryland CIO Council convention at Washington by CIO Reg. III Dir. George Craig, Council Pres. Audrey Smid, CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe and Council Sec.-Treas. Charles A. Della, who was elected to his sixth term in the post.

Council Meets In D. C. To Protest Bias

The convention of the Maryland CIO Council decided that the Council would continue to hold its annual meetings in Washington until Maryland hotels lift their racial bars.

A resolution pointed out that "many of our brothers are denied in the State of Maryland equal employment opportunities, the right to advancement, the conveniences provided by private sources for public use . . . hotels, restaurants, recreational facilities."

CWA Settles Another Pact

A SETTLEMENT has been reached by the CIO Communications Workers with another Bell System subsidiary, the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia.

Some 6500 employes of the firm are covered by the agreement, which will bring immediate increase of $1 to $2.50 a week for most of them. Only two Bell System pacts remain unsettled—those with Southern Bell and Illinois Bell, covering 2000 in Chicago.

USA Defeats Mine-Mill In Tennessee

THE COMMUNIST-dominated Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers were wiped out in Tennessee as two local unions in Rockwood moved into the CIO Steelworkers in recent NLRB election victories.

The first involved Tennessee Products Corp. where employes gave USA-CIO 70 votes to 55 for Mine-Mill. They subsequently won a contract with standard benefits and general wage increases.

Workers at this plant then helped USA-CIO organizers make contracts at Tennala Pipe Co., a subsidiary, where employes had overthrown Mine-Mill a year and a half ago and formed the unaffiliated Tennala Foundry Workers Union, Local 1. That election was won with 116 votes for USA-CIO to 2 for no union with one vote void.

Horace Brook, USA-CIO representative, who worked on the campaign with M. C. Weston said that this second election "completely wipes out the Commie-led Mine-Mill outfit in Tennessee."

IUE Sues GE On Firings, Suspensions At Louisville

THE CIO Electrical Workers have filed suit in federal court to compel General Electric to arbitrate, "in accordance with the contract," two discharge cases and the disciplinary suspension of 1200 workers.

In the discharge cases, the IUE complaint said that GE dismissed two members of Local 201 in Lynn, Mass., when they invoked the Fifth Amendment in congressional hearings inquiring about Communist membership or activity.

The union said the discharges were in accord with a "unilateral company policy which was adopted without consultation with the union, and in violation of the union's contract."

The union seeks to compel arbitration, which GE refused after IUE processed the cases through the grievance procedure. The two men are Donald Morrill and Alex Gregory, long-time GE employes.

The other case involves IUE-CIO Local 761 in Louisville, Ky., where GE suspended 1200 employes for allegedly participating in an illegal work stoppage.

Their cases remained unsettled after processing through the grievance procedure. IUE also seeks to compel arbitration in this instance, in line with a contract provision for "arbitration of grievances involving interpretation and application of the contract."

California CIO Speaks Out For Civil Rights

By HENRY SANTIESTEVAN

THE THEME of freedom set the tone of the fifth annual convention of the CIO-California Industrial Union Council last week in Oakland.

The quiet, hard-working convention, attended by some 450 delegates, was highlighted by:

1. Adoption of a series of vigorous civil liberties resolutions "upholding the freedom to read" and urging "fair procedures for investigating committees."

2. Approval of a State legislative program giving "top priority" to efforts to improve unemployment and workmen's compensation acts.

3. Support for comprehensive regional development, power and conservation programs, after an address by Rep. Holifield (D. Calif.) condemning the Dixon-Yates deal as "an attempt to kill TVA and give private ownership to those people who are putting up the Dixon-Yates plant."

4. A call upon California Republicans in Congress to support the pending Watkins Committee recommendation for censure of Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.).

In approving a series of resolutions on "civil liberties and freedom," the convention struck sharply at attempts by certain groups and individuals to "remove books from sale, to censor textbooks, to label 'controversial' books, to distribute lists of 'objectionable' books or authors, and to purge libraries."

"We are deeply concerned about these attempts at suppression," the resolution said. ". . . We trust Americans to recognize propaganda and to reject obscenity. We do not believe that they are prepared to sacrifice their heritage of a free press in order to be 'protected' against what others think may be bad for them."

In supporting the Watkins Committee recommendation to censure McCarthy, the convention warned:

"FOR THE Republican Party to remain a major American political party it must meet the challenge of McCarthyism. . . . It must expel those authoritarian elements which seek to seize power in the name of republicanism."

The delegates asked that "top priority be given to attempts to amend the State unemployment compensation law to set an individual's primary benefits at no less than 85% of his weekly wage, and make benefits payable for not less than 39 weeks.

The State's workmen's compensation act was called "outdated and antiquated," and delegates asked for a "complete revision."

CALIFORNIA CIO leaders get together at convention in Oakland. From left: State CIO Council Sec.-Treas. John A. Despol, Pres. Manuel Dias, George Roberts, CIO-PAC western representative, and Irwin A. DeShetler, CIO regional director for the Far Western states.

Difference on one basic program measure came over a point in a comprehensive resolution on regional development and conservation, adopted by the convention.

SPOKESMEN for the CIO Utility Workers objected to a clause calling for federal transmission of power from federal dams, and giving priority to "municipally and co-operatively owned utilities."

Mrs. Esther Murray, CIO-PAC director of women's activities, told delegates the CIO and other liberal groups "are setting the pattern of the campaign issues two years in advance of 1956."

Franklin Williams, West Coast general counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told delegates, "The fight for FEPC is a fight for a democratic nation."

Other speakers included Victor Feather, assistant secretary of the British Trades Union Congress; George Roberts, CIO-PAC western representative; and Dr. Carl Manck, Oakland educator.

California CIO Council officers are Manuel Dias, Auto Workers, president, and John A. Despol, Steelworkers, secretary-treasurer.

CIO Seeks Pact Benefits At 'A' Plant

IMMEDIATE extension of certain benefits in contracts at other gaseous diffusion plants and other Goodyear plants to employes of the Goodyear Atomic Corp. at Portsmouth, O., has been asked by CIO Nat. Rep. William B. Taylor.

Taylor's request to Goodyear, operator of the Atomic Energy Commission facility for the government, followed the NLRB election victory at the plant in which employes voted three to one for the CIO Chemical Workers. Taylor directed the successful organizing campaign for UGCCW.

He asked Goodyear for an "immediate award" of the health plan, the company-paid non-occupational accidental death or dismemberment insurance, the 10c and 15c hourly shift differentials and other fringes in Goodyear contracts with the CIO Rubber Workers, and for incorporation of the 4c wage raise just won by Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Paducah, Ky., atomic workers.

Taylor's letter to H. C. Hilliard, industrial relations manager of the plant, said that the union would shortly be certified and that a proposed union agreement would be submitted to the corporation.

11-29

Coming On Dec. 13

Big Annual Convention Issue Of The CIO NEWS

The big annual Convention Issue of The CIO News will be published on Dec. 13, immediately after the 16th CIO Constitutional Convention in Los Angeles.

• BUNDLE ORDERS: Rates for bundle orders are 2c per copy for any quantity up to 1000; 1¾c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000; and 1½c per copy for quantities of more than 2000. Special rates for large orders.

In sending lists of addresses for bundle orders, please indicate the quantity to be sent to each address. To facilitate bookkeeping, please send checks with smaller quantity orders.

• INDIVIDUALLY MAILED ORDERS: Rates for individually mailed copies are 2¼c per copy for quantities up to 1000; 2c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000; and 1¾c per copy for quantities of more than 2000. Special rates for very large orders upon application.

If individual mailing is desired, this may be arranged by sending us mailing strips not more than 2½ inches wide.

THE CIO NEWS
718 Jackson Place, N.W.
Washington 6, D. C.

We desire to place an order for the special 1954 Convention Issue of The CIO News.

Please ship .....in bundle lots to the enclosed address.

Please have the 1954 Convention Issue individually mailed to membership lists for which we will furnish mailing strips.

The total number of names to which we desire the paper sent is..... ☐ Check Inclosed ☐ Bill Us Later

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... Zone ..... State .....

Organization .....

Minnesota CIO Hears Freeman Promise Veto For Open Shop Bill

By EMIL J. KRIEG

A PLEDGE that there will be no general sales tax nor "right-to-scab" legislation during his Administration brought Gov.-elect Orville L. Freeman of Minnesota a standing ovation from the State CIO Council convention.

"If the Legislature should pass such bills," Freeman declared, "I will veto them." Passage of such legislation is considered remote because of the 26-seat liberal gain in the state House of Representatives.

The Council's 17th convention, held in Minneapolis, re-elected Sec.-Treas. Rodney C. Jacobson, amended the constitution to define major responsibilities of its two full-time officers and adopted a 43-point legislative program.

Jacobson, who had been reported to have decided not to be a candidate for re-election, defeated John Nepple of the CIO Auto Workers by a vote of 390 to 175. The term of Council Pres. Robert Hess was not up for election this year.

HIGH ON THE LIST of convention resolutions was one urging that "every possible effort be made to bring about organic unity of all labor at the earliest possible date."

The 43-point resolution on state legislation covered a wide range of subjects, from specific labor bills to taxes, and from soil conservation to cooperative community health plans.

Among the highlights were improvement of unemployment compensation, enactment of a state-wide teacher tenure law, enactment of an FEPC program, increase of personal exemptions for state income tax, opposition to sales, payroll and poll taxes and a boost in the state minimum wage to $1.25 an hour.

The Council's Farm Relations Committee reported to the convention that it maintained booths at 18 county fairs during the year at which they reached 200,000 people and distributed more than 60,000 pieces of literature. Their program was accounted a major contribution to the election victories of the large group of liberal candidates.

THEY FOUND IT—Union label is in suit of Gov.-elect Orville Freeman, ACWA-CIO Reps. Edwin Smith (left) and Burt Genis found at Minnesota CIO convention in Minneapolis.

OTHER convention speakers included Jack Kroll, national CIO-PAC director; Franz E. Daniel, field assistant to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther; Wisconsin CIO Council Pres. Charles Schultz, Dr. William Kosiak of the Two Harbors Community Hospital and Health Center, and the four re-elected D-F-L congressmen, Roy Wier, Eugene J. McCarthy, Fred Marshall and John Blatnik. Sen. Humphrey (D. Minn.) was unable to attend because of the Senate McCarthy censure session.

Trust-Busters Are Suing RCA

The Justice Dept. has filed an anti-trust suit in New York against the giant Radio Corporation of America, charging RCA has monopolized the radio-television patent licensing business.

The complaint said that RCA owns, controls or possesses licensing rights under approximately 10,000 U. S. patents. The suit alleges that actual and potential radio and television manufacturers not licensed by RCA have been harassed by more than 250 suits instituted by the company.

Pre-Convention Issue

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., December 6, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 49

CIO Gains Hailed In Tough Year

—See Page 3

Labor Unity 'Closer Than Ever,' Reuther Says As CIO Meets

A PREDICTION that unity of the CIO and the AFL is certain and "closer than ever" came from CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther as he arrived in Los Angeles prior to the opening of the CIO convention.

Reuther said he felt confident the convention would approve unity steps taken to date as he expressed optimism about unification of the two federations.

The CIO Executive Board, at its pre-convention session, announced that it had accepted "with reluctance and regret" the resignation of Nathan P. Feinsinger as impartial arbitrator of the CIO Jurisdictional Disputes Agreement.

PRIOR to the Senate vote to censure Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) and the preceding substitutes and amendments, the board wired Republican Majority Leader Knowland (Calif.) and Democratic Leader Johnson (Tex.) urging members of both parties to vote for censure (See It's Your Washington, Page 12.)

The Feinsinger statement said that since 1951 the CIO Jurisdictional Disputes Agreement "has operated with notable success in diminishing jurisdictional friction among the various affiliated organizations of the CIO." It paid tribute to Feinsinger for having "demonstrated a statesman-like administration of complex and difficult problems that have come before him."

NATHAN FEINSINGER
Resigns as arbitrator

"He is a distinguished American whose service as the outstanding expert in the field is widely recognized," the board said in complimenting him for his "honesty, fairness, impartiality and integrity."

Feinsinger said he was resigning in order to be able to "devote more time to other types of work in the field of labor-management arbitration." The board said it would name a successor soon.

The telegram to Knowland and Johnson said that the CIO board "unanimously" urged approval of the Watkins and Bennett resolutions because the issue "transcends partisan politics."

"It is vital not only to the Senate's traditions and dignity, but to the well-being of democracy and the stature of America in the eyes of the world," read the wire, signed by Reuther..

McCarthy "has been openly contemptuous of our constitutional processes of democratic procedure and of human dignity," the message continued, and went on:

"This is not a mere question of language, as the junior Senator from Wisconsin untruthfully and cynically declared. In the eyes of the world, it is clearly a vote demonstrating how the Senate protects or abandons the guaranteed rights of American citizens.

"We in the CIO are convinced that the least the Senate can do to demonstrate its regard for human dignity and civil liberties is to censure the junior Senator from Wisconsin."

Another major subject up for discussion will be the recommendations of the CIO Ethical Practices Committee, which held hearings recently in New York to consider problems of administering union welfare programs.

Convention speakers will include Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Sen. Morse (Ind. Ore.), James Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, NAACP Counsel Thurgood Marshall and Labor Sec. Mitchell.

Among Convention Speakers

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

JAMES PATTON

SEN. MORSE

THURGOOD MARSHALL

'Immediate Action' Urged To Boost Jobless Benefits

CIO AFFILIATES and state councils have been asked to take "immediate action" to improve state unemployment insurance legislation because "every CIO member has a stake of from $4.58 to $32.48 a week" in such improvements.

That's what CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther said in a letter to presidents of affiliated unions, regional directors and councils.

He asked for development of specific plans to amend state laws in line with CIO proposals, and that CIO members of state advisory councils of employment security agencies be informed of CIO's position.

The latter step was advised to prevent CIO representatives inadvertently agreeing to undesirable amendments. The letter requested state groups to keep National CIO headquarters informed of local developments so that specific assistance could be rendered them as needed.

Heading the list of amendments CIO members were asked to seek was an increase in the individual's "primary benefit" to at least 65% of his own weekly wage. The maximum primary benefit under this provision should be at least two-thirds of average weekly wages of workers in covered employment.

Other changes advocated include a 39-week duration period, elimination of limits which hold down the total payments an unemployed worker may receive, reduction of the disqualification period to four to six weeks, elimination of unjustified technical disqualifications, broadening of coverage and changes in financing.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS

Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director
Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene Kelley, Ed Lashman.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII December 6, 1954 No. 49

Goldberg Sees Unity Of Labor Strengthening Democratic Life

A UNITED labor movement will engage in "a broader and more constructive participation in the whole fabric of our democratic life," CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg predicted in an address before the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco last week.

Speaking on The Future of American Labor, he decried criticism of the proposed CIO-AFL merger as "monopoly." Rather, he said, it will result in the labor movement speaking "unitedly on important issues of policy" and offering the support of a united labor movement for the government in time of national peril.

Goldberg was severely critical of the "iniquitous" Taft-Hartley union security provision which permits "state laws more hostile to union security than even the national Congress chose to be (to) take precedence."

HE POINTED OUT that this was not a "two-way street, for Taft-Hartley also provides that where state legislation is more favorable to labor, then the federal law takes precedence." He called it "a bald invitation to state legislatures to be anti-labor."

"We in the CIO would not want a clause which made more favorable state legislatures paramount to the federal law," the CIO counsel emphasized. "We are fighting here as a matter of principle, not as a matter of expediency. We are interested in equal justice . . . We want one brand of labor management law in interstate commerce, not 48 brands."

Goldberg said that there were other sections of the act that "complicate organizing problems in the South," and pointed to the way "deliberately complicated, time-consuming, justice-delaying provisions of Taft-Hartley are used by a band of professional legal obstructionists whose services are available to anti-union employers."

CHARGING that Taft-Hartley created "economic sectionalism," Goldberg commented that "the results of this economic civil war have already created distress in regions like New England." He added:

"What faces us in the South (is) the problem of breaking through an iron curtain of economic ignorance and bringing decent wage standards and living conditions — and consumer purchasing power—to what we can well call America's underdeveloped area."

Goldberg said that the "traditional pledge to 'organize the unorganized'" is no "empty phrase."

In the political arena, Goldberg said that labor was "very much concerned about the level of the recent campaign."

"I mean the disgusting spectacle of Republican campaign speakers — led by Vice Pres. Nixon — impugning the loyalty and patriotism of outstanding Americans and of the entire Democratic Party and all its supporters for selfish political purposes," he explained.

Highlights Of The Officers' Report

Reuther	3	Civil Rights	7
Our Economy	4	Legal	8
PAC	5	Organizing	8-9
Labor Unity	5	Resources	10
Legislative	6	Housing	10
International	7	CSC	11

Action Urged On Shooting

FEDERAL authorities last week were asked to issue fugitive warrants for five men alleged to have participated in the shooting and wounding of Gordon Knapp, CIO Maritime Union organizer, a few weeks ago at Cairo, Ill.

The incident occurred during a strike conducted by the Rivers Joint Organizing Committee (CIO-AFL) against the J. W. Banta Towing Co., Plaquemine, La.

State's Atty. Michael O'Shea, Cairo, requested the warrants in a letter to the U. S. Dist. Atty. at East St. Louis, Ill. Those involved are Bert, J. W., Ernest and Frank Banta, brothers, and James Dixon. Illinois warrants accusing them of assault with intent to kill have been issued.

Pres. Herbert L. Daggett of the CIO Marine Engineers and Ben Man of the CIO Maritime Committee met with the U. S. Coast Guard to discuss RJOC charges of Coast Guard "interference" in the dispute.

Report To The CIO Convention

Reuther Tells Gains In A Year Of 'Hard Fights'

THE STRENGTH of the CIO has been maintained and expanded during a year of adverse political and economic climate, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther said in his report to the 16th National CIO convention opening Dec. 6 in Los Angeles.

It was a year of "crucial decisions, of hard fights, of interruption to the steady economic progress" of the last few years, he recalled.

"It is a tribute to the solidarity of our leaders and the unity of our rank and file members," he continued, "that the heavy onslaught against labor that has been the dream-wish of many sections of big business and of many reactionary political circles has not been realized.

"The CIO is a strong organization. The CIO commands the loyalty of its members. It has won millions of friends outside the ranks of labor who see in the CIO a focal point for economic and social progress in America. And the CIO has won the respect—perhaps the grudging respect—of its enemies . . .

"Certainly, the gains we have made—magnificently achieved in the face of mighty opposition—were not the result of a single year's work. They are, in a real sense, a tribute to those great leaders of the CIO who built well a staunch ship which has safely weathered the economic and political storms of the past year.

"And these gains have confounded those who prophesied the disintegration of CIO in the kind of climate we have known this year."

Goal Is A 'Dynamic Democracy'

Reuther cited the election results as proof that the American people support a philosophy of "dynamic democracy," and will never again be satisfied with the "appalling, needless waste of mass unemployment, declining incomes and curtailed spending power."

After paying tribute to the CIO Political Action Committee and the CIO members who worked with it, he pointed out that the incoming Congress will be challenged by the "obvious needs" of the country in the fields of economics, social welfare, civil liberties and civil rights.

He pledged that the CIO, in the months ahead, will work "for the sort of Fair Deal program" on which many candidates were elected, and will insist that Congress recognize its responsibilities to the people.

One of these responsibilities, he emphasized, is unemployment. The election returns show the Eisenhower Administration "seriously misjudged" the people's mood on the problem—and half-heartedly admitted it is a problem only a few days before the voting, he said.

Program For Employment

"It behooves the Eisenhower Administration . . . to work with the Democratic majorities in Congress to forge an economic program that will abolish mass unemployment," Reuther said.

"This will mean the scuttling of the economically unsound and dangerous trickle-down theory of the Republican big business Cabinet, the mistaken theory that bounty for the rich will provide more crumbs for the low and middle income majority."

This means, he explained, revision of the "retrogressive," short-sighted" tax program enacted by the 83d Congress, a public works program with jobs now instead of in a decade, and action on improving the "long outmoded" minimum wage law.

CIO PRES. WALTER P. REUTHER
Tells CIO gains in year of "crucial decisions, hard fights . . ."

'It Is Better To Spill Red Ink Than Red Blood'

Total defense and total mobilization in time of war cannot be hampered by figures in Treasury Dept. ledger books, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther said in his report to the National CIO convention—and they shouldn't be in time of peace.

"We have not yet, as a nation," he said, "fully recognized that the war against poverty and insecurity—and the helping of our friends in the free world to win their first battles against poverty and insecurity—cannot be limited by the complaints of bookkeepers in striped pants.

"It is better to spill red ink than the red blood of American boys in fighting for a stronger democracy and against Soviet Communist imperialism.

"It is better, on the home front, to have an unbalanced budget than to have an unbalanced economy in which a few are prosperous and the many are in need."

"I believe most sincerely," he continued, "that if America has the good sense to gear the productive power of the American economy to the tremendous unfilled needs of the people, we can solve unemployment in peacetime.

"We have the resources, the manpower, the talents, the skills. We can sustain our economy on a full employment basis, on an expanding basis; we can raise the living standards of the American people to an unprecedented level."

The CIO president reiterated labor's conviction that the Taft-Hartley Act should be repealed. Until it is, he said the CIO will continue to support amendments which would make it more equitable for both labor and industry.

He expressed the hope that the time will come when the act is no longer a political football. But so long as the Republicans are determined that any change must be for the worse, he went on, their party must bear "the stigma of an anti-labor reputation."

While the CIO is fighting on the national legislative front, he added, it will continue to oppose with all its strength "the misnamed 'right to work laws'" in the states. He described such legislation as a "sign of hatred and vengeance" by anti-labor diehards, and said the fact that many laws have been enacted constitutes a warning for labor to be vigilant and to develop still further friendly relations with farm and community groups "for the mutual protection of all."

Warns On Scab Laws

On the subject of labor unity, Reuther said that "in the year ahead, it is my solemn pledge that I will make every effort to help attain the unity of CIO and AFL on an honorable, forward-looking basis."

"A unified American labor movement, solidifying the gains of the past and preparing the way for future achievements can be of maximum service to the workers," he said. "We can do no less than strive, in a spirit of responsibility and honest endeavor for the unity of labor."

Turning to the collective bargaining field, Reuther rejoiced that CIO's "strong and dynamic" unions in mass production industries won wage and other gains during the year despite unemployment, "new anti-labor schemes hatched in the personnel departments of trade associations and great corporations," and the "care-nothing, hands-off" attitude of the Republican Administration.

In the year ahead, he added, "our unions will be resuming at the collective bargaining table their quest for ever higher standards of living and for greater security."

The Give-Away Boys Hit

Reuther bitterly denounced the Eisenhower Administration's give-aways. The tidelands oil bill, he said, "had no justification in terms of public good," and forces every school child to pay "a penalty, a tithe, to the great oil companies." The Dixon-Yates contract puts the government in the position of penalizing a great public agency, the Tennessee Valley Authority, he maintained, "to enrich a few insiders who take no risks and make no investments."

CIO Action Is Pledged To Gain New 'Fair Deal'

But while the Administration has been giving away some of the people's natural resources, he said, there are "heartening indications" that the people themselves are rallying to the defense of their essential civil liberties, which have been under attack by Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) and his followers. McCarthy's strength seems to have waned, he indicated.

The mere fact of the censure motion, he said, holds a lesson for all Americans: we must be ever vigilant to defend our freedoms against totalitarian attack from within the country or without.

He expressed pride in the CIO's role as friend of the court in some of the school segregation cases that led to the Supreme Court decision, which he hailed as the "most significant" civil rights gain of the year. He urged CIO members to help implement the decision, and to continue their fight against discrimination in all fields.

Warns On Russ Appeals

Reuther vigorously attacked the foreign affairs record of the Administration, with emphasis on Sec. of State Dulles, as not conducive to the prestige and strength of America's leadership of the free world.

"Simply stated," he said, "we have had a foreign policy of bluster and blunder."

He warned against taking Russia's new line of coexistence and friendship at its face value, called for positive U. S. policies that will demonstrate the sincerity of our desire for peace, and urged strengthening of our foreign aid program. He paid tribute to the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions for its role in building the strength of the free world and fighting the propaganda claims of Moscow and Peiping.

Reuther said the year saw the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation achieving its goals, "to develop living memorials to our great and beloved leader." The Foundation's gifts went to causes dear to Murray's heart, he said, and in honoring him, "the men and women of CIO have been instrumental in continuing the good fights he fought."

'No Mercy' Promised On Welfare Fund Rackets

The CIO Standing Committee on Ethical Practices, named in October at the direction of the Executive Board, will report to the CIO convention on its activities, including a two-day hearing on welfare fund administration, Pres. Walter P. Reuther said in his report.

The committee was appointed as an outgrowth of charges of welfare fund maladministration against a few locals in New York City, with the Executive Board acting under the CIO Statement of Ethical Practices. Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the Clothing Workers is chairman, serving with Pres. Joseph N. Curran of the Maritime Union and Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes of the Steelworkers. CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg is director.

"We shall do everything humanly possible to maintain our hard-won reputation of honesty and cleanliness," said Reuther after reporting that the New York situation has been remedied. "We will show no mercy to those who prey on our members, or who sully our record."

Report To The CIO Convention

Our Economy— Only Optimism Trickles Down

DOGMATIC business theories about the government's economic role and politically-inspired optimism have replaced realistic economic analysis, according to the economics section of CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther's report to the convention.

Since January 1953 the American people have been living through a renewed government experiment in trickle-down economics. The result is now apparent.

During most of this period, the national economy has been characterized by a downturn followed by stagnation. The record of the Administration's economic forecasts is a series of miscalculations and propaganda statements.

MAKING ENDS MEET is a tough problem for thousands of unemployed workers and their families.

That the economic decline of 1953-54 has not spiralled into a full-blown depression was not due to Administration policies. The American people were saved from suffering the full consequences of the Administration's inactivity by the collective bargaining strength of the trade unions and by the legacy of social and economic legislation enacted under the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations, the report said.

The Hard-Money Policy

In the spring of 1953, after warning from many economists that defense spending cuts would cause a business downturn, Treasury officials embarked on a hard-money campaign that dried up financial resources. After the damage to economic activities became apparent, this policy was reversed but its effects had already been worked into the economic scene.

By January 1954 Administration spokesmen dismissed rising unemployment as "a corrective process" and "a minor readjustment" which would soon pass.

Pres. Eisenhower in February indicated he would take action in March if things did not improve.

March came and went without either a pickup in economic activity or government action.

In May, Gabriel Hauge, White House economic adviser, declared that the "downward drift" had been arrested and we could "look forward to going ahead again."

The next month, Dr. Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, expressed a conviction an upturn would be coming shortly. And in the final days of the election campaign, Administration spokesmen frantically made proud claims that the recession they had ignored for so long was finally over.

Since mid-1953, the gross national product—the total production of all goods and services—has declined. By the third quarter of 1954, it had declined by $14.4 billion, or almost 4% below the level reached in the spring of 1953.

Instead of rising as it should to provide job opportunities for a growing labor force in an increasingly efficient productive system, the nation's production of goods and services declined in the last half of 1953 and the first quarter of 1954.

During the following half year the gross national product failed to rise—indicating a state of economic stagnation.

For five months following October 1953, unemployment continued to rise. In March, 3.7 million were reported to be unemployed. Since then, the reported number of jobless has edged down slightly, to 3.1 million or 4.8% of the civilian labor force in September.

The officially reported figures on employment and unemployment, however, fail to indicate the full extent of the decline. In addition to those persons reported as unemployed, there are many more who are temporarily laid off and yet more who are on short work-weeks.

Figures Are Misleading

In September, for instance, when 3.1 million were officially counted as unemployed, the Census Bureau reported that there were over 360,000 workers on temporary layoffs (less than 30 days) or with a new job but not at work. These workers are not officially counted as unemployed.

The Administration and many newspapers have attempted to indicate an economic pickup by pointing to the decline, since June, in the number of unemployed compensation claimants. What they conventiently ignore is the simple fact that a large and rising number of persons have exhausted the unemployment compensation payments to which they are entitled under inadequate state laws.

The Eisenhower Administration's policies consistently follow the trickle-down theory of economics.

Trickle-Down Theory

The trickle-down theory was widely held before the 1929 crash. Unfortunately, there are still those in business and government who believe that all is necessarily well with the economy so long as profits are high and increasing.

But it is consumers who are the largest bloc of buyers in the economy. From 1946 until 1949, consumer spending accounted for an average of over 69% of total production. It is upon this great base that general economic activity largely depends.

Consumer spending, then, is the major factor in the economy—not the only one, but by far, the largest. And in the long run, business spending rests on consumer spending.

Annual Wage— New Urgency For Pay Security

RENEWED URGENCY has been given to demands of CIO unions for a guaranteed annual wage by recent economic developments.

The report of the Guaranteed Annual Wage Committee to the CIO convention noted that distress from unemployment has been great, while profits of many companies have continued to rise. Farmers, small businessmen and all other groups have suffered as industrial payrolls declined.

The committee reported that CIO affiliates are asking that guaranteed annual wage payments and unemployment insurance be appropriately integrated.

Proposals of some CIO unions have been further developed, each affiliate setting its own proposals in the light of conditions in which it operates. The committee continued to serve as a liaison for exchanging information on common problems and union policies.

The report carries a detailed outline of the guaranteed annual wage proposals of three of the larger CIO affiliates, the Steelworkers, Auto Workers and Electrical Workers.

The Guaranteed Annual Wage Committee: Otis Brubaker chairman; Katherine Ellickson, secretary; Solomon Barkin, Lyle Cooper, Gladys Dickason, Joseph Joy, David Lasser, Henry Paley, Stanley Ruttenberg, Rosalind Schulman, Joseph Swire, Nat Weinberg and Woodrow Ginsberg.

Economic Policy— Full Employment Meet Was Highlight

HIGHLIGHT of the year's activity by the CIO Committee on Economic Policy was the Full Employment Conference held in Washington last May.

The committee's annual report noted that over 300 delegates attended the two-day session, and adopted a 10-point program to halt growing unemployment.

In the period that followed, the CIO continued to urge strongly on the Administration the necessity for a recovery program. When Pres. Eisenhower's mid-year economic statement was made public Aug. 12, Chairman Rieve of the Economic Policy Committee, who is also president of the CIO Textile Workers, described it as "selective optimism."

The committee in October issued a statement which chronicled the dismal series of Administration pronouncements on the state of the economy during the past year. It pointed out that the President's "self-styled dynamic economic program has proved to be a complete fizzle."

Committee on Economic Policy: Emil Rieve, chairman; Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, James B. Carey, David J. McDonald, Jacob S. Potofsky, Walter P. Reuther; Everett M. Kassalow, secretary.

WHAT THE GOP THINKS—A revealing demonstration of what the GOP "Cadillac Cabinet" thinks about the American people came last October when Defense Sec. "GM Charlie" Wilson sounded off about unemployed workers being "kennel dogs" instead of "bird dogs." These CIO unionists picketed him in Chicago during the height of the campaign.

Carey Winner In Debate On GAW

CIO SEC.-TREAS. James B. Carey won a hands-down decision over Merryle Rukeyser, financial and business editor of the New York Journal-American, in a televised debate last week on the guaranteed annual wage.

Rukeyser, choking on his own choler, marshalled neither an argument nor a fact during the entire half-hour of NBC's American Forum of the Air.

It was in the middle of Rukeyser's first strangled cry, of "fantastic . . . bombastic . . ." that Carey interrupted the pundit to quote one of his own 1935 columns at him to demonstrate that Rukeyser had been equally vehement in his spluttering opposition to social security.

Carey, who is also CIO Electrical Workers president, scored the coup of the afternoon when Rukeyser asked why unions weren't going to government for increased unemployment compensation instead of "proposing this bunk."

With a smile like a cat who has just swallowed a singularly juicy canary, Carey expressed mock surprise at the suggestion and purred that "unions believe in the free enterprise system and feel that it is the responsibility of management in private industry to insure workers against unemployment."

Report To The CIO Convention

Political Action— '54 Saw 'Most Effective Work'

CIO'S POLITICAL Action Committee said that its "most effective work was done in the 1954 elections."

JACK KROLL

"It should be noted at the outset," the report to the CIO convention said, "that PAC's effectiveness cannot be measured alone in terms of the number of recommended candidates elected and defeated. Equally important is the effect of PAC's activities on the issues discussed in the campaign and on the strategy adopted by the two major political parties within whose framework PAC's activities are contained."

Measured by both standards, the report said, "the 1954 elections contain a truly impressive tribute to the work of CIO-PAC."

Buttressing the argument that CIO political action affected campaign issues, the report noted that "in the later stages of the election campaign, the President of the United States found it necessary to espouse the cause of full employment, in contrast to an earlier stand."

The entire campaign, PAC said, in the industrial areas of political importance, "turned upon the question of which party could best guarantee full employment and full production."

GETTING OUT THE VOTE—Throughout the nation, CIO-PAC block workers helped to get out a big '54 vote.

"The states in which there was concrete evidence of the inability or unwillingness of the Administration to achieve a full employment economy were the states in which the outstanding liberal gains were made," the report noted.

PAC said that "the emphasis placed by both parties on the government's responsibility for the maintenance of a full employment, full production economy" was "perhaps the most significant fact of the entire 1954 election."

"Notice has been served that unemployment will never again be accepted as inevitable and a matter of concern to the individual alone," PAC's report declared. "The election of 1954 demonstrated that the economic welfare of the citizens of the country is as much a matter of government responsibility as the national defense.

"It should be noted that this would not be so if it were not for the fact that organized labor has its own political organization to give weight to its views.

"This organization consists of tens of thousands of active citizens, informed in the techniques of politics and unafraid of the role they are called upon to play in the election process. Their number is growing daily."

Gains In The State

PAC pointed to the sweeping gains of liberal forces in the various state election contests. The Democrats picked up eight new governorships and "liberal forces gained ground in virtually every state legislature."

Particularly highlighted in the report was the "accelerated pace" of the "trend toward liberalism" in the 12 Southern states.

Singled out for special comment in the report was the PAC-sponsored conference on family participation in politics held in Washington. It was attended by 181 wives of CIO members and women members of CIO unions. The conference was followed, during the year, by 24 other conferences held in all parts of the country and attended by CIO women members and wives of CIO members.

"Close Man With A Razor, Isn't He?"

The report noted, in conclusion, that PAC was disturbed by the tendency, evidenced during the closing weeks of the campaign, to substitute "appeals to emotion for appeals to reason."

"We view the raising of the level of political campaigning as one of our most immediate tasks," the report declared.

Political Action Committee: Walter P. Reuther, chairman; David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer; Jack Kroll, director; John V. Riffe, James B. Carey, I. W. Abel, Joseph Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, John Chupka, Joseph Curran, Al Hartnett, O. A. Knight, Emil Mazey, T. M. McCormick, Jacob Potofsky, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James Thimmes, Desmond Walker, Carlton Werkau, and Arthur J. Goldberg, general counsel.

Labor Unity— Renewed Efforts Seen For Merger

"IN THE YEAR ahead, it is my solemn pledge that I will make every effort to help attain the unity of CIO and AFL on an honorable, forward-looking basis."

So said CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther in his speech at the CIO convention. The remarks were in his appraisal of the past year's developments toward labor unity.

Reuther, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and CIO Steelworkers Pres. David J. McDonald comprise the CIO Unity Subcommittee which is "to explore still further the methods of bringing about unity in the American labor movement."

CIO and AFL unity discussions have taken place within both organizations since the 1946-47 post-war period. A series of unity meetings was held between CIO and AFL leaders in the spring of 1947 which achieved agreement only on the fact that "organic unity should be established within the American labor movement."

DAVID McDONALD

A number of other attempts culminated in the establishment, in December 1950, of the United Labor Policy Committee, the purpose of which was to "develop a common approach to the problems arising out of the mobilization and stabilization program." The ULPC disintegrated Aug. 28, 1951, after the AFL withdrew.

No-Raid Pact First

The current unity moves grew out of conversations between Reuther and AFL Pres. George Meany during the latter part of 1952 and the beginning of 1953. Both CIO and AFL conventions subsequently ratified a No-Raiding Agreement as "the first essential step toward the achievement of organic unity . . . a goal to which both organizations wholeheartedly subscribe."

Reuther's report noted that the agreement went into effect in June of this year at a meeting of the Unity Committees of the two organizations, at which time the ratification documents of the various participating unions were exchanged.

"A number of cases have already been settled by CIO Sec.-Treas. Carey and AFL Sec.-Treas. Schnitzler," Reuther said. Only one case has gone to the impartial referee, David Cole, former federal mediation chief.

The ratification and successful application of the No-Raiding Agreement "greatly enhanced" prospects for further progress toward unity, the CIO president noted.

Then, on Oct. 15, the CIO and AFL Unity Committee, after a three-hour meeting in Washington, issued the following statement:

"It is the unanimous decision of this joint committee of the AFL and CIO to create a single trade union center in America through the process of merger, which will preserve the integrity of each affiliated national and international union.

"Further, the presidents of the AFL and CIO are authorized to appoint a joint subcommittee to draft a detailed plan to achieve this objective and to then report its recommendations to this committee at its next meeting."

Reuther's report said that the CIO is "looking toward the establishment of a type of unity that will stimulate growth, not result in stagnation."

"We seek, through unity, more success and more efficiency in organizing the unorganized, in our legislative and public relations activities, in our political action work, and indeed in every phase of democratic trade union activity," he said.

"As President of the CIO, let me emphasize I have no vested interest in disunity; I have a strong desire to get on with the job of unifying American labor and of strengthening the entire trade union movement in America."

CIO Unity Committee: Pres. Reuther, Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe, Sec.-Treas. Carey, Vice Pres. Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve and James Thimmes, and Pres. McDonald of the CIO Steelworkers and Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the CIO Clothing Workers.

HISTORIC PACT — Long-awaited CIO-AFL No-Raiding Agreement became fully effective after signing by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther (right) and AFL Pres. George Meany.

THE NEXT BIG STEP—Good progress toward real labor unity through a "single trade union center" was reported at fall AFL-CIO meeting. In this group (from left): AFL Pres. George Meany, ILGWU Pres. David Dubinsky, CIO Clothing Workers Pres. Jacob Potofsky, and CIO Pres. Walter Reuther. Another meeting will be held soon.

Report To The CIO Convention

Congress— Tax Cuts Were Decisive Issue

CONFRONTED for the first time in its history with a Republican White House and a Republican Congress, the CIO had uneasy premonitions which unfortunately were justified.

ROBERT OLIVER

The report of the CIO Legislative Dept. declared that the 83rd Congress "defaulted in its responsibilities to the American people." The best that could be said, it went on, is that it did not dare go quite as far as some of its extremist elements desired.

The department is headed by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and includes the full membership of the Executive Committee. The work of the department is headed by Dir. Robert Oliver.

"The few positive achievements of the 83rd Congress," the report said, "resulted from bipartisan support and represented continuation of policies initiated during earlier Administrations. The St. Lawrence Seaway, for instance, was approved by as many Democratic as Republican Senators and by almost 100 Democratic members of the House. The modest Social Security improvements received solid bipartisan support."

On The Hill

CIO spokesmen made over 40 appearances before more than a dozen committees of the House and Senate in a six-month period this year. They spoke on a variety of issues affecting the public needs. They established high standards of testimony and received considerable public notice.

The major tax battle of the 83rd Congress was over the Administration's "omnibus" tax reform measure—the so-called "cornerstone" of the Eisenhower legislative program.

The Clash Over Taxes

No issue in the session, the report said, brought into such sharp focus the clash in the underlying economic philosophies of the two major political parties. Few issues in history have been fought so clearly along party lines.

Democrats in the House tried unsuccessfully—first in committee and then on the floor—to substitute for the dividend stock tax bonanza proposed by the GOP, an increase in personal exemptions from $600 to $700. This modest proposal would have meant an annual tax saving of $80 for the average American family.

By straight party vote in Committee and almost straight party vote on the floor, the Democratic proposal was defeated. On the floor, a switch of four votes would have reversed the 210 to 204 vote.

The new Republican tax law, when finally effective, provides more than $3 billion of tax relief. Of every dollar of this tax relief, the report noted, corporations will get 75c, families earning more than $5000 will get 18c and the bulk of American families earning under $5000 a year will get only 9c

Early in the year, Eisenhower gave verbal recognition to the need for liberalization of unemployment compensation when he urged the adoption of minimum standards regarding the level and duration of benefits. Instead of urging the Congress to do this, however, he urged the states to do so.

LOBBYING THAT COUNTS—A trio of Textile Workers looks over Washington, one of several CIO delegations to the Capitol.

As predicted, very few states (and most of them are ruled by the GOP) took the request seriously and only four made any improvements whatsoever. None went as far as the President requested. During the second session of the 83rd Congress, attempts were made in both Houses to adopt liberal federal standards.

In the fall of 1952, the legislative report went on, Candidate Eisenhower went on record as against Taft-Hartley's union-busting provisions. Two years later, the first Eisenhower Congress adjourned, and Taft-Hartley had been neither repealed nor amended. In the light of what happened in those two years, this can be considered a "victory."

The record of the 83rd Congress in the crucial matter of housing likewise is woefully inadequate.

Housing Falls Short

Most experts on housing agree that America needs at least two million new homes a year if we are to make any sizable dent in our tremendous housing shortage. Yet today there are only about a million housing units being added annually.

In the field of public housing, the 83rd Congress has, to all intents and purposes, at least temporarily killed the program. Changes were made in the law affecting private housing but these fell far short of the needs.

But Not Good Enough

The record of the 83rd Congress on social security, the report admits, is good. Not good enough, but good. The CIO is happy to join in the general applause. As one of the principal supporters of liberal social security programs, the CIO welcomes all forward steps.

The last year saw such a forward step. By almost unanimous bipartisan votes, both houses of Congress in 1954 approved substantial extension of coverage and higher benefits.

Outside of voting some funds—inadequate for the most part—for health programs inherited from previous Administrations, the record of the 83rd Congress in the development of an adequate health care program for America is blank.

Labor Sec. Mitchell told the 1953 CIO Convention that his office would recommend raising the 75c minimum wage. The session has come and gone, no recommendations were made and the minimum wage is still 75c.

The Atomic Give-Away

Although not wholly successful—as the result of a bitter debate by Senate liberals which focused public attention on the issue—the Administration and Congress did succeed in enacting legislation which turns the new atomic energy industry—developed by the government with an investment of over $12 billion in public funds—over to a few large corporations for their private exploitation.

One of the worst set-backs handed the people in the fight to amend the atomic energy give-away was the defeat of the amendment which would have made impossible the Administration-ordered contract between the Atomic Energy Commission and the Dixon-Yates companies to supply power to the TVA area.

The nation's six million farm families—whose income has dropped 20% while food prices have reached an all-time high—were perhaps the hardest hit of any single economic group by the Eisenhower Congress.

MAKING A POINT—CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey testifies for bill to improve federal standards for unemployment compensation.

Social Security— Tide Turns For Old Age Benefits

THE TIDE of public sentiment has definitely turned in favor of social security programs and the people and their elected representatives have indicated approval of established programs.

JOSEPH CURRAN

This conclusion is reached in the report of the CIO Committee on Social Security.

A year ago, the committee was seriously concerned with defending existing social security programs against severe attacks intended to whittle away past gains and to hold benefits to minimum levels.

The cleverly developed proposals of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, which would have undermined Old Age and Survivors' Insurance, have been thoroughly discredited and did not even receive serious consideration by congressional committees.

CIO's endorsement of the Lehman-Dingell Bill in 1953, the report said, undoubtedly was influential in leading the Eisenhower Administration to broaden its recommendations from mere extension of coverage to include increases in benefits.

Union collective bargaining, the committee noted, also contributed to the desirable amendments passed this year, since employers realize that workers help to pay for the expenses of government pensions, whereas in many cases private plans are financed solely by the employer.

Up Jobless Benefits

With the decline in job opportunities, the committee said, improvements in unemployment compensation are urgent to prevent human suffering, to lessen downward pressure on wage standards, and to maintain national purchasing power so that the economy may again expand and provide jobs for all who want them.

Few gains were made in this field in 1954, but the substantial votes obtained for federal standards in both Houses provide encouragement for possible progress next year.

Social Security Committee: Joseph Curran, Chairman; Katherine Ellickson, Executive Secretary; Harry Block, Joseph Childs, Jacob Clayman, Gladys Dickason, Max Greenberg, Richard Leonard, John Livingston, George Maher, Andrew Pettis, James Robb, B. J. Schafer, Joseph Swire, John Yancey.

Defaulting On People's Needs

The CIO Legislative Dept. has set forth the following 10-point indictment of the 83rd Congress for "defaulting on its responsibilities to the American people":

1. It has embarked on a give-away program — in oil, in power, in atomic energy—which is morally indefensible and economically dangerous.

2. It has embraced the dangerous school of "trickle-down" economics which believes that the welfare of the highest income groups and corporations must receive top priority.

3. It has exposed its inability to understand the needs of an expanding economy through its callous indifference to continuing unemployment and declines in total industrial production.

4. It has adopted a "trickle-down" tax program which provides huge tax savings for corporations and wealthy stockholders, while it has refused to grant needed tax relief to low- and middle-income families in the form of increased tax exemptions.

5. It has refuted Administration claims of a "liberal" approach to problems of people, by failing to provide adequate unemployment insurance standards, scuttling the housing program, refusing to adopt a school construction program, making no progress towards a meaningful health program, and doing nothing to raise the minimum wage.

6. It has defaulted on campaign promises to make the Taft-Hartley law fair to labor, but instead attempted to adopt a program that would have made this anti-labor law even more harmful to labor.

7. It has adopted a farm policy which will still further reduce farm income, thus causing even worse hardship for millions of rank and file farm families and laying the basis for general economic decline.

8. It has placed the balancing of the national budget ahead of national security in our international affairs and economic security in our national affairs.

9. It has defaulted on our international economic obligations by failing to agree to the three-year extension of reciprocal trade agreements, and by penny-pinching actions on economic and technical assistance abroad.

10. It has been more anxious to play politics than to develop sound, effective legislation to counteract Communist subversion.

Labor's World—
Free Unions, UN Get CIO Backing

A WORLDWIDE integrated program of activities geared to building and maintaining the strength of democratic trade unionism in all countries was carried on by the CIO Dept. for International Affairs during the past year jointly with the CIO International Committee and the Latin-American Affairs Subcommittee.

JACOB POTOFSKY

At the same time, the department kept a sharp eye on the many international developments which affected the United States and the international labor movement. In accordance with CIO policies, it gave support to programs intended to promote peace and prosperity.

UNITED NATIONS: The report showed that the CIO "renewed and reinforced" support of the UN and its specialized agencies in the face of bitter isolationist attacks intended to weaken and ultimately destroy the agency. The department mustered support particularly against the Bricker Amendment, and is prepared to renew the fight should another effort be made to pass similar legislation.

ILO: Cooperation and participation in the work of the Intl. Labor Organization has continued, with a number of delegates representing the CIO and some of its affiliates at its various meetings.

FOA: Advisory participation within the Foreign Operations Administration was resumed by CIO, AFL and the railroad brotherhoods in April on the promise of FOA Dir. Harold Stassen that the agency "will not adopt any labor policy or appoint any labor personnel without first consulting the Labor Committee," which includes CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Pres. David J. McDonald of the CIO Steelworkers.

Doing Anything About The Roots?

As a result, labor participation in administrative and field activities has broadened with CIO members nominated and appointed to several important positions in foreign countries.

LABOR DEPT.: The department reported a "serious breakdown" in the effectiveness of the Trade Union Advisory Committee on which the CIO is represented since the Eisenhower Administration took office

"For more than two years not a single new person from the ranks of American labor has been recruited for the labor attache program," the report showed. "The pattern of broad representation of American labor on the Foreign Service Selection Board was abruptly broken in 1953 when a highly-qualified candidate, whose name had been submitted at the request of the Dept. of Labor, was rejected for apparently partisan political reasons."

ICFTU: In cooperating actively with the ICFTU, the CIO urged that national union centers reduce their separate international activities to a minimum and work more closely with the ICFTU and that young non-Communist unions in underdeveloped countries be given greater material aid.

ITS: The CIO gave strong encouragement in the past year to CIO affiliates to join appropriate international trade secretariats, the organizations of unions in specific industries throughout the world. These bodies work closely with the ICFTU.

Help Free Unions Abroad

CONTRIBUTIONS: CIO contributions in the international field, in addition to that done through the ICFTU and similar agencies, have been made by the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation, the CIO Community Services Committee and the CIO Free World Labor Fund. International activities of the latter two groups are now being consolidated in the International Committee, and plans are being made for a fund raising drive under the Free World Labor Fund.

LATIN AMERICA: Relations with the Mexican labor movement were strengthened during a year that saw the CIO giving increased attention to the migrant labor problem and to closer cooperation on mutual industrial problems.

The CIO, with ORIT, the western hemisphere arm of the ICFTU, supported the strike of Honduran banana workers which brought them their first contract. In Guatemala, it has assisted in the reconstruction of a free union movement and the defense of labor against a comeback of reaction and feudalism.

COOPERATION—Dir. Victor Reuther (right) of CIO International Affairs Dept. presents check for school to Sec. Gen. J. H. Oldenbroek of Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

The report also covers CIO activities on UNESCO, in international trade, the workers exchange program and the CIO Scandinavian workshop.

Victor G. Reuther, assistant to the CIO president, also heads the Dept. for International Affairs. Michael Ross is assigned to ICFTU headquarters in Brussels.

The CIO International Committee: Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman; Walter P. Reuther, James B. Carey, John V. Riffe, Emil Mazey, Frank Rosenblum, Joseph Beirne, Joseph Curran, Ralph Novak, O. A. Knight, Harry Sayre, L. S. Buckmaster, David J. McDonald, James Thimmes, Emil Rieve, William Pollock, Willard Townsend, Michael Quill, and Victor Reuther.

Latin-American Affairs Subcommittee: O. A. Knight, chairman; Jacob Potofsky, Emil Mazey, R. J. Thomas, Ralph Helstein, Frank Grasso, Martin Kyne, David J. McDonald, and Ernst Schwarz, secretary.

Civil Rights—
School Bias Ban Decision Hailed

CIO'S CIVIL Rights Committee hailed the Supreme Court decision abolishing segregation in public schools and its application of the doctrine of non-segregation to other federal and local tax-supported institutions.

JAMES B. CAREY

"The CIO, from its birth, has associated itself with this point of view and has implemented it with every means at our command," the committee's report to the convention said.

The Civil Rights Committee noted that although the National Association for Advancement of Colored People has "taken the leadership in forging the law into an instrument of social justice," the CIO has always been "closely associated and identified with the NAACP and other like-minded groups in this struggle."

The committee found that during the last two decades, America has been "giving reality to the democratic promise inherent in our ideals." This trend "reached its first peak" with the publication of the Report of Pres. Truman's Committee on Civil Rights.

HST's Report Hailed

That report, the committee said, represented a recognition of the strength and determination of the "American people to complete successfully the social revolution in which we have for so long been engaged." The decisions flowing from it "were just a prelude" to the school decision.

"This historic declaration promises our children they will receive a greater and more equal share in our democracy than we experienced," the committee declared.

A PATTERN OF FREEDOM—The historic U. S. Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools is beginning to bring some changes, as in this integrated class in a Washington suburb. But there's still a long way to go to make the decision fully effective, and CIO is aiding in that fight on the legal and other fronts.

The report also took note of CIO's role in improving the opportunity of working people to attain decent housing in good neighborhoods. The committee voiced its concern over the "exclusion of Negroes and non-white families from the vast FHA-aided and redevelopment housing."

"Unless we are successful in arresting current trends, we are convinced that the pattern of racial segregation and exclusion in various forms of publicly aided housing . . . will negate the benefits of recent Supreme Court decisions."

Of the 83rd Congress, the report said that with "the conspicuous exception" of the Humphrey-Ives Fair Employment Practices Bill, the record was "shameful." The record, the committee pointed out, "refutes its leaders claims of a 'liberal' approach to the problems of people." Particularly the committee criticized Pres. Eisenhower's opposition to a FEPC bill with enforcement powers.

The Administration also came in for criticism for allowing the Fair Employment Board of the Civil Service Commission to become "inactive." Additionally targeted for disapproval was Eisenhower's Committee on Government Contracts.

"The results of (its) activities can be summarized as producing a pamphlet, posters . . . and negotiations with government procurement agencies" to create machinery providing for investigation of discrimination complaints, the committee reported.

As to civil liberties and the rights of government employes and defense plant workers, the committee pointed out that the position of these people "has deteriorated within the past 12 months." Defense plant security programs must be watched closely, the committee said, lest employers use them as a "vehicle of anti-unionism."

Civil Rights Committee: James B. Carey, chairman; Willard Townsend, secretary; George L-P Weaver, director; William Oliver, George Maher, Bessie Hillman, W. Richard Carter, Morris Pizer, Cecil Martin, Harry Read, T. M. McCormick, Russell Lasley, James Turner, Francis Shane, Boyd Wilson, Gustav Faber, William Munger and Arthur Goldberg.

Safety—
Factory Death Toll Tops Korea

"WHILE OUR casualty list in Korea for three years was 32,000 deaths and 111,000 battle wounds, we killed during the same period 45,000 workers and injured six million more here at home."

MICHAEL QUILL

With these words, the Committee on Safety and Occupational Health dramatized its problem in its report to the CIO convention.

The committee found that the majority of states give "only lip service" to enactment of safety codes and their enforcement. It urged passage of bills for the enforcement of safety and occupational health standards in all goods that move in interstate commerce. A nationwide standard for workmen's compensation also is lacking, the committee reported.

It said that it is adequately represented on a committee set up by the Labor Dept. to survey the nation's need in the field of workmen's compensation. "The results of such a survey will show clearly the needs for a federal system of workmen's compensation with full state cooperation to replace the hopelessly confused present system of crazy-quilt state patterns," the committee said.

It also reported that provision for rehabilitation of the physically handicapped is woefully inadequate.

Safety and Occupational Health Committee: Michael J. Quill, chairman; Harry Read, secretary; Harry Block, George Brown, Frank Burke, Pat Greathouse, John Green, John R. Kumpel, T. M. McCormick, William Pachler, Dominic Tripode.

Report To The CIO Convention

Organizing— New Techniques Aid CIO Unions

"DESPITE adverse conditions, CIO unions have pushed forward on many fronts to improve their bargaining position and to obtain better wages and working conditions for their members."

JOHN RIFFE

That's what John V. Riffe, CIO executive vice president and director of organization and councils, reported to the CIO convention. He described the adverse conditions as follows:

"Widespread unemployment, restrictive National Labor Relations Board decisions, and an anti-union atmosphere on both federal and state levels have encouraged employer hostility to labor."

Riffe noted the "phenomenal" growth of corporate mergers and of new productive techniques. These conditions have required CIO unions to develop new bargaining techniques and in some cases to conduct strikes "to an unprecedented degree."

"Still others have joined forces in actual mergers or amalgamations, or joint bargaining agreements," he continued.

BLOOD ON THE RIVERS—Organizer Gordon Knapp was shot by company thugs in current drive of joint CIO-AFL Joint Rivers Organizing Committee.

Riffe cited the amalgamation of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union; the Distributive, Processing Office Workers, and the Playthings Workers into one union, and the Railroad Workers with the Transport Workers. He also pointed out that the Optical Workers voluntarily returned their charter, and the Electrical Workers and the newly-named United Glass and Ceramic Workers absorbed their membership.

He hailed a new affiliate, the 52,000-member Mechanics Educational Society of America, as "a valued member of the CIO family," which "has already begun to make important contributions to the development of our organization."

In the NLRB statistical year ending June 1954, CIO unions participated in 1455 collective bargaining elections, covering 279,837 workers, and won more than 50% of them. Six CIO unions took part in 19 elections conducted by the National Mediation Board in the transportation field in the year ended June 1954 and won 11 of them.

At the time the Dept. of Organization report was written, 141 organizers were assigned to 25 affiliates, the 13 CIO regional directors were assisted by 51 representatives. The remainder of the department staff was working on special projects or national programs.

New Organizing Structure

Referring to the reorganization of the department and the field structure of CIO, the report said:

"Even though we have now had one full year's experience with the new structure and operations, evaluation of the success of the new reorganization in relation to the task of basic organizing is somewhat difficult in light of new factors of mass unemployment and government hostility that have become aggravated since the last report."

The work of the special committee to transfer local industrial unions to related international unions also was outlined. At the time the committee was established by the CIO Executive Board more than a year ago, there were 216 local industrial unions.

A LONG FIGHT—With morale high, members of CIO Local Industrial Union 1814 are in second year of Port Arthur, Tex., store strike.

With the assistance of Riffe, the committee has eliminated 134 of them through transfer to international unions, and in a few cases, through withdrawal of charters of inactive locals. Efforts are continuing to transfer the remaining locals except 27 composed of office and clerical workers. No action was taken on this group in the hope that these locals would form the nucleus of an organization for office workers.

Special LIU committee members: Joseph W. Childs, chairman; John J. Moran, Russell Taylor, M. Hedley Stone, and T. M. McCormick.

Labor & The Law GOP Labor Board Writes New Law

ADMINISTRATIVE interpretations of the Taft-Hartley Act by the Republican-controlled NLRB are making the law even more detrimental to unions than Congress intended, the CIO Legal Dept. reported to the convention.

ARTHUR GOLDBERG

"The new Republican board members," the report said, "seem to have taken office with a premeditated design to orient the board's policy along pro-management lines.

"Shortly after being appointed, Chairman Farmer and Member Rodgers declared in public speeches that they intended to replace board employes holding 'policy positions' and that they intended to reexamine and change the board's interpretation of the Act in several respects.

"They have been good as their word. In the course of a single year the board has reversed numerous prior interpretations of the statute which had stood for years unchanged by successive Congresses.

"These new board constructions of the law cover a variety of subjects. But they have one thing in common: in every instance the change favors the employer to the detriment of the worker," the report said.

Included among the changed interpretations were those dealing with the board's refusal to take jurisdiction in certain cases, captive audiences, employer threats, no-strike clauses written into contracts, collective responsibility, employer refusal of recognition, quizzing workers on union membership, terming a slowdown a refusal to bargain and stripping protection from workers who refuse to cross a picket line.

Never Darken Our Door Again

The Legal Dept., headed by CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg, noted in its report that the conservative business magazine, U. S. News & World Report, said of the changed NLRB attitude: "Employers generally look with favor on what is going on."

T-H Debate Reviewed

The report considered at some length the attempts to change Taft-Hartley through legislation.

"In 1954," it stated, "Pres. Eisenhower sought not to liberalize Taft-Hartley as Candidate Eisenhower promised in 1952 to do, but to make the law somewhat more anti-union. In this flagrant breach of faith, Pres. Eisenhower was joined by most of the Senate Republicans.

"The Senate Democrats stood solidly together, however, and with the aid of three Republican Senators and Sen. Morse (Ind. Ore.), they sent the Administration bill back to committee. We did not get the promised revision of Taft-Hartley, but we did defeat the Administration's efforts to make the law worse."

Noting that the Supreme Court decided a number of labor cases during the year, the report said the most important involved state courts' interference in labor disputes which are subject to the National Labor Relations Act.

During the past few years unions have been urging that if the NLRB has jurisdiction, then that jurisdiction is exclusive and employers cannot run to the state courts for injunctions or other anti-union action when a labor dispute occurs.

The court's decision banning segregation in the schools was termed "of overwhelming importance" in the report. CIO filed a brief in the case as a friend of the court and also served as a consultant to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who brought the action.

'Effective Job' Of Councils Praised

"SPECIAL commendation" for the legislative program carried out by CIO state and local councils was given in the report of the Councils Dept.

"It is generally agreed that in the legislative field our Industrial Union Councils are doing a more effective job than ever before, even in the face of an increasingly hostile legislative atmosphere," the department said.

The contribution local councils are making in developing closer relations with other segments of the community also was praised. The local groups are "displaying great insight and imagination, enhancing labor's prestige and strengthening its position of influence in the community," the department asserted.

The report said that affiliation of local unions with councils has increased, with over 200,000 new members added to state council rolls.

Publicity— 25 Million Hear Vandercook Show

ABOUT 25 MILLION listeners hear CIO-sponsored Commentator John W. Vandercook on the ABC radio network during the course of each month, according to a national survey, the CIO Publicity Dept. reported.

JOHN VANDERCOOK

"Various audience measurement organizations indicate that the CIO's program has a very substantial audience and that the growth of that audience continues constant," the report said.

The program was renewed during the summer of 1954, and both the Publicity Dept. and the Henry J. Kaufman & Associates advertising agency "are of the firm belief that the CIO program is filling the role for which it was intended," said Dir. Henry C. Fleisher.

That role, the department recalled is "to reach a broad section of the American public with the message of the labor movement and of democratic liberalism; to add another liberal voice to radio; and to improve the public relations status of the CIO among all elements in the community."

Of The CIO News, the report noted that the paper is "read with interest and respect, not only for its news about the CIO, but also for its coverage of events in government and industry." Its news stories, editorials and cartoons have been "consistently" quoted or reproduced in other publications, the report said. A number of special articles and series of stories received "favorable comment," among them the election campaign and the Westbrook Pegler libel case.

Union-By-Union: Organizing Gains Are Reported By CIO Affiliates In '54

Here is a summary of gains in membership and contract benefits reported to the 1954 CIO convention by international unions and organizing committees:

AUTO WORKERS: UAW-CIO again has reached a new membership high. Allowing for exonerations for strikers and retired members, the active membership totaled more than 1.5 million. Some 30,000 new members were brought into the union during the year ended Aug. 31 through 149 victories in National Labor Relations Board elections. During the past year three more units of Communist-dominated Farm Equipment-United Electrical Workers came into UAW-CIO.

BARBERS: Faced with unique organizing and servicing problems, the Barbers & Beauty Culturists Union continued to progress steadily, chartering three additional locals in New York and Ohio.

BREWERY WORKERS: UBW won 27 NLRB elections during the year ended Aug. 31 and gained some 2500 new members. The union is conducting organizing campaigns in seven states and three Canadian provinces and among tobacco workers in Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

BROADCAST EMPLOYEES: The National Association of Broadcast Employees & Technicians brought many more radio, television and film workers under its banner. Key groups included 150 office employes of the American Broadcasting Co. in Hollywood and 12 privately owned radio and television stations in Canada.

CLOTHING WORKERS: ACWA marked its 40th anniversary this year, chartered two joint boards and 32 new unions during the 13 months ended Sept. 30, won 21 NLRB elections, and signed initial contracts with 63 companies employing 8000 workers. With the opening of the Amalgamated Laundry Workers Health Center in New York City this fall and the completion of the Sidney Hillman Health Center in Chicago this year, the union's health facilities will provide medical care to more than 100,000 members and their wives.

COMMUNICATIONS: CWA's membership reached a new high level during the past year. The union made its first major penetration into the field of non-voice communications by winning bargaining rights for 1200 widely scattered workers employed by the American Cable & Radio Corp. Organizing campaigns are under way in seven states and Canada. CWA again set the wage pattern in communications equipment and telephone industries.

ELECTRICAL: A total of 97 collective bargaining groups representing 48,047 workers voted for IUE since the union's 5th convention. IUE has 361 local unions with more than 600 contracts in 28 states. In the General Electric chain alone, IUE added 16 new locals with 25,000 members during the past year. The pledge given to the late Phillip Murray when IUE was born Nov. 2, 1949, that the union would drive communism out of the electrical industry, has now been four-fifths fulfilled. The Communist-controlled United Electrical Workers, which once had a peak membership of more than 500,000, has been reduced to less than 100,000.

FURNITURE: Faced by stiffening employer resistance and increasing Taft-Hartley restrictions, the Furniture Workers during the past year won recognition in 23 plants employing some 5000 workers. Over 80% of the union's members are covered by health and welfare funds, the majority by the UFW Insurance Fund, which has just celebrated its 10th anniversary.

THEY DON'T WALK ALONE—Carrying banners reading "I'm the union wife in my man's life," members of auxiliary of CIO Auto Workers Local 883 take turn on the picket line in long UAW strike against Kohler Co. at Sheboygan, Wis. As National CIO convention opens, strike moved into its ninth month against the bitterly anti-union firm.

GAS, COKE: UGCCW has won 40 NLRB elections, thus gaining 3500 members. Many of these elections were in plants that are still expanding. The union's 7th constitutional convention in St. Louis last September adopted a resolution approving the proposed amalgamation of the UGCCW with the CIO Oil Workers.

GLASS WORKERS: Since the last CIO convention, this union had its largest membership expansion. The increase totaled 5000 members, 3000 in a new district in Canada, where it is affiliated with the Canadian Congress of Labor.

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES: Despite prejudice and legislation against the right of public employees to organize, the Government & Civic Employees Organizing Committee continued to obtain statements of policy and contracts.

INSURANCE: The Insurance Workers won bargaining rights for agents of three additional life insurance companies, defeated the decertification efforts of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in Pennsylvania and eliminated the last remnant of Communist control over insurance workers in Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

LITHOGRAPHERS: Most ALA contracts negotiated during the past year provide increases ranging from 7c to 10c an hour during the first year and slightly less during the second year. Fully 70% of the membership is now working the 35-hour week or is under contract to work 35 hours with no pay cut by late 1956.

MARINE ENGINEERS: MEBA won wage gains and other improvements in renegotiation of dry cargo, tanker and collier contracts in the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific Coast Districts, and improved contracts in the Western and Southern Rivers, and Great Lakes District.

SHIPBUILDING: IUMSWA won collective bargaining rights for close to 4000 workers in 11 plants during the past year. Wage increases and other benefits were won in all contracts opened for wage review or renegotiated. The union obtained congressional action to aid the depressed industry.

MARITIME UNION: Despite the loss of 5000 jobs in the depressed American shipping industry, NMU still holds contracts covering practically half of the American ocean-going merchant marine. In negotiations with passenger and freighter companies in June the union won a number of improvements including a fourth week of vacation for crewmen employed by one company a year, and pension and welfare contributions from all ocean-going shipping companies ranging from 60c to 75c a day.

OIL WORKERS: OWIU won 21 NLRB elections during the past year and increased its membership at an annual rate of 12% through a program by which members are awarded premiums for signing new members. OWIU participated through the Coalition of Oil Unions in taking positive steps to form one union of oil workers.

PACKINGHOUSE: UPWA gained 5000 new members through the affiliation of LIU 78, Salinas, Calif., on the recommendation of the CIO Committee on Local Industrial Unions and by victories in NLRB elections which boosted its membership by 25% during the past year. The union also negotiated two-year contracts with Swift, Wilson, Cudahy and Armour which brought a 5.5c general wage increase, and reductions of female and geographic differentials.

PAPERWORKERS: Since the last CIO convention 19 units of workers received UPA charters, most contracts were negotiated with substantial gains and the average dues-paying membership rose almost 10%.

RADIO: ARA organized the radio officers on vessels of the four new steamship companies formed last year. A brief strike of radio officers on East Coast freight and passenger ships last June won a fourth week of annual vacation, agreement to provide adequate pensions before the end of the year and other fringe benefits.

RETAIL: A merger convention last June brought into the Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union 70,000 members, who formerly belonged to the Distributive, Processing and Office Workers and the Playthings, Jewelry & Novelty Workers. Since then pension plans were established for employes of Borden Dairy Co. in Ohio, Gimbels and Stern's department stores in New York City; several organizational drives were started.

RUBBER WORKERS: Long strikes of URWA at the Goodyear and Firestone chains netted a wage pattern of a 6.5c general wage increase and elimination of some of the area differentials. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 24 charters were issued or reinstated and the membership rose by 35,041.

SHOE WORKERS: This union negotiated union shop agreements with the two largest manufacturers in the industry.

STEELWORKERS: A total of 1,157,658 USA-CIO members employed by 2030 companies are under contract. Since last January the union signed 36 new contracts covering 3557 new members. An organizing campaign in four Southern states netted victories in 17 NLRB elections covering 3376 employes. Continued success was reported in the drive designed to bring seamen on Great Lakes ore boats into the union. Despite unemployment in the industry, USA this year won approximately 12c an hour increase in wages and other benefits and the complete elimination of the southern differential.

STONE WORKERS: During the past year USAPWA chartered seven local unions, one directly affiliated group and a district council for Vermont marble workers, won eight NLRB elections and negotiated wage increases ranging from 2.5c to 15c an hour and other benefits.

TEXTILE WORKERS: Despite the anti-union rulings of the Republican-dominated NLRB and the resistance of employers, TWUA won certifications for 10,000 workers in 84 plants during the past year. TWUA believes that it can turn to its advantage renewed interest in unions in the South, where it has been assisted by CIO organizers.

TRANSPORT SERVICE: In the past year UTSE organized red caps employed by the Metropolitan Coach Lines in Los Angeles and the employes of the Dixie Chemical Corp., New Bern, N. C., and became bargaining agent for red caps at the New Orleans Union Passenger Terminal. The union recently resisted a raid on Boston & Maine Railroad dining car employes by an AFL union which did not sign the CIO-AFL No-Raiding Agreement.

TRANSPORT WORKERS: TWU's 20th year was highlighted by an election in which it won collective bargaining rights for workers on New York City's transportation system. As a result of this victory, TWU obtained a $9 million package in negotiations with the Transit Authority. Through an amalgamation with the Railroad Workers Organizing Committee, the union gained 40,000 new members.

UTILITY WORKERS: Since the last CIO convention UWUA gained substantial wage increases and other benefits for its members. It is conducting organizing campaigns in New England, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin.

WOODWORKERS: IWA made substantial organizing progress in the past year despite increased employer resistance, and gained hundreds of new members in operations where it did not have the union shop.

5 Jurisdiction Disputes Were Settled Voluntarily

Five of 13 jurisdictional disputes referred to CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe during the past year were voluntarily settled in the first stages of the disputes procedure.

In one case a local industrial union charter was issued with jurisdiction to be determined lated; the arbitrator, Dr. Nathan P. Feinsinger, heard two cases; one dispute went to an election, which neither union won, and four cases are at various stages in the disputes machinery.

Progress On Several Fronts Reported By Auxiliaries

"The National CIO Auxiliaries have made progress on several fronts" during the past year, the Organization Dept. reported to the CIO convention.

New auxiliaries are being established, and "old auxiliaries are noticeably increasing in size and strength," the report said.

"The wives of CIO members through their continued daily contacts," it continued, "are the best means of publicizing the aims and objectives of the CIO and all meetings are planned with this in mind.

"Some auxilaries have organized tours to their state capitals and this is going to be a continued activity to acquaint CIO wives with political action."

Fr. McGowan Retires From Church Position

RETIREMENT of Rev. Raymond A. McGowan as director of the Social Action Dept. of the National Catholic Welfare Conference was announced last week. He has been in ill health for several years.

Father McGowan had been with the NCWC since it was organized in 1920. For 25 years he served as assistant director under the famous Msgr. John A. Ryan, succeeding him in 1945.

His successor is Msgr. George G. Higgins, a member of the Social Action Dept. staff for more than 10 years, its assistant director since 1946, and widely known for his weekly column syndicated by the NCWC News Service.

Report To The CIO Convention

Resources— A Vision Of Atomic Plenty

"A BLANKET of electrification for the entire country" was urged by the Committee on Power, Atomic Energy and Resources Development in its report to the CIO convention. The committee said:

O. A. KNIGHT

"In our electrical future, use of refrigerators, ranges, water heaters, home freezers, washers, ironers, vacuum cleaners, dishwashers, driers, radios, television sets and air-conditioning will depend in part on the availability of low cost power . . .

"In this connection the CIO has urged the use of atomic energy for power purposes and has continued to support the development of available hydro-electric power sites for generation of additional power."

The committee opposed handing over atomic production to private industry and called for the development of hydro-electric sites "according to the most productive proposals." It condemned "the Administration and private utility company proposals to reduce production by either low dams or high financing costs for their development."

Committee representatives set forth its views at hearings of governmental committees. Committee Chairman O. A. Knight told a Hoover Commission Task Force that the Administration should "encourage active participation in the development of our natural resources, including electric power, because this will in the long range bring the greatest benefit to the greatest number."

Dixon-Yates Deal Hit

The committee supported the Langer subcommittee on monopoly in urging that the Dixon-Yates contract with the Atomic Energy Commission be suspended pending a thorough investigation.

It was concerned with the problems of workers in plants owned by the AEC and operated through contractors. Its report mentioned particularly the strike of the CIO Chemical Workers for better conditions at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Paducah, Ky., plants operated for AEC by the Carbide and Carbon Chemical Co.

"An alleged national crisis was developed and used as a threat to secure a return to work," the committee reported.

The Subcommittee on Collective Bargaining Liaison was joined in its efforts to aid the striking workers by Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

The committee called for demineralizing sea water by atomic electric power "to make the desert bloom."

It also pressed for a forest conservation program based on federal regulation of timber cutting on privately owned timber lands, except small holdings, and the protection and enlargement of the national forest system.

The committee also backed soil conservation efforts and watershed management in hydroelectric power projects.

Committee on Power, Atomic Energy and Resources Development: O. A. Knight, chairman; Leo Goodman, executive secretary; James B. Carey, Emil Mazey, A. T. Jones, Elwood Swisher, Joseph Childs, I. W. Abel, John Chupka, Joseph Fisher and A. F. Hartung.

Subcommittee on Conservation is: O. A. Knight, chairman; Anthony W. Smith, executive secretary; Russell Letner, James Click, A. F. Kojetinsky, Claude Ballard, J. William Belanger, Rodney Jacobson, James Davis, Harold Garno, D. Roy Harrington and Mathew Lynch.

Makes The Old One Look Like Peanuts

Maritime— Lack Of Concern On Shipping Hit

DESPITE the uncertain international situation, the U. S. Merchant Marine is not getting enough consideration by our government. It is withering to a dangerously low level, the CIO Maritime Committee reported to the convention.

HOYT HADDOCK

The unions comprising the committee include the Maritime Union, Marine Engineers, American Radio Association, Shipbuilding Workers and Dist. 4 of the Steelworkers (Great Lakes). Pres. Joseph N. Curran of the Maritime Union heads the committee and Hoyt S. Haddock is its executive secretary.

The report noted that from February 1952 to September 1954, our merchant marine was decreased by 717 ships and 36,000 jobs were lost by our seamen. The depressed industry will continue to sink unless the U. S. government acts to save it or the world tension rises drastically.

The committee and AFL unions, through the Conference of Maritime Unions, spearheaded the drive to save the Marine Hospitals slated to be cut by the Eisenhower Administration. The fight is not over and the Administration is expected to substitute the attrition method of slashing appropriations and functions for the plan of eliminating the hospitals in one stroke.

Victory On Hiring Halls

During the recent session of Congress the committee blocked an amendment to the Taft-Hartley Act that would have killed the union's hiring halls.

One of the reasons the privately owned and operated merchant marine is sinking, the report said, is the competition it receives from the merchant fleet of the Military Sea Transportation Service. This has been greatly expanded during and since the Korean war while the private fleet has been allowed to languish. Legislation to curb MSTS growth is needed, the committee said.

Support was given the Coast Guard's port security program in the report. The elimination by the GOP-controlled Congress of maritime upgrading schools and courses utilized to increase the skills and rating of seamen was condemned.

Besides Curran and Haddock, the Maritime Committee includes Herbert L. Daggett, William Steinberg, John Grogan and Joseph P. Molony.

Housing— Builders Gain Under New Law

THE CIO HOUSING Committee condemned the Housing Act of 1954 as "reflecting the predominant influence of spokesmen for the builders, the real estate boards and the financial institutions."

JAMES THIMMES

These groups, the committee said, "scored their greatest victory at the expense of the people by the virtual destruction of public housing."

The committee's criticism was somewhat mollified by its satisfaction that longer FHA mortgage repayment periods, reduced down payments and requirement of a warranty on new houses had been achieved. The changes, the report said, reflect the impact of ceaseless pressure of CIO and other consumer-minded groups.

Shortcomings In Law

The chief shortcomings of the 1954 Housing Act were summarized by the committee in six major points.

First was the fact that Congress only authorized 35,000 new public housing starts for the ensuing year, "and then voted to approve none thereafter."

Second, the committee pointed out, this action "jeopardizes the future of the entire slum-clearance and urban redevelopment program."

Third, the liberalizing changes in home financing are "still inadequate" to bring "millions of families with incomes ranging from $2500 to $6000 into the new housing market."

Fourth, cost of home ownership has been "substantially raised." An increase of "as much as 5% in interest rates" for VA and FHA mortgages "has delighted the bankers" but it "has added millions of dollars to the long-run indebtedness of home purchasers."

Fifth, the committee was especially critical of the failure to ameliorate the housing problem of minority groups. "Even families who can afford to pay for better housing at present high costs find themselves faced by almost insurmountable obstacles," the report noted.

Sixth, the failure to encourage cooperative housing "sufficiently" was criticized. The report called cooperative housing an "outstanding means by which home-ownership costs can be reduced for moderate income families."

Fail To Meet Home Needs

Although new housing starts in 1954 will "approximate 1.1 million, as compared with the 1.4 million record of 1950," the committee said that "America should now be building at least two million new homes each year."

The report said that the CIO Housing Committee believes that "the most productive and resourceful nation in the world" can achieve "a decent home in a good community for every American family." Additionally, it pointed out, "a vast expansion in home construction can be a major factor in restoring the economy to a state of full employment and full production."

Housing Committee: James G. Thimmes, chairman; Richard Gosser, John J. Moran, William Snoots, John Duffy, Elwood Swisher, Burl Phares, Andrew Pettis, Ralph Helstein, James J. Thomas, Sam Scott, Willard Townsend, A. F. Hartung, and Ben Fischer, director. Technical advisers; John Edelman, Frank Fernbach, Hyman Bookbinder, Everett Kassalow, Don Montgomery, and others.

PHILIP MURRAY
New portrait of late CIO leader

Memorial— Awards Honor Late CIO Leader

GRANTS of close to $1 million "to a wide variety of projects in which the late Philip Murray was keenly interested" were made during the past 18 months, the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation reported to the CIO convention.

EMIL RIEVE

Funds for the foundation — whose chairman is Emil Rieve, a CIO vice president and head of the Textile Workers — were given by various CIO unions and a number of individuals. The story of these grants is told in a separate report published by the foundation for distribution at the CIO convention.

The foundation sponsored publication of the book, Human Dignity, a record of the careers of Murray and his friend, the late Allan S. Haywood, CIO executive vice president. It also commissioned a portrait and a sculptured plaque of Murray by outstanding artists.

"Through these constructive contributions," the foundation reported "the man and the spirit of Philip Murray will be perpetuated and associated with the good works that interested him throughout all the years of his life."

Union Label Unit Sets New Drive

EDUCATION of union members about the power they wield through their pocketbooks, so they can use their dollars to protect their own standards, is the job of the newly-reorganized CIO Union Label Committee.

By using its dollars to help itself, labor can make great strides in overcoming the effect of restrictive laws and runaway plants, the committee said in its report to the CIO convention.

The committee said it will use educational and publicity techniques to increase union label consciousness among members and among all enlightened consumers so they will demand union label products when they buy.

The Union Label Committee: Frank Rosenblum, chairman, Karl Feller, John Blackburn, Fred Fulford, Milton Weirauch, Ernest Hebert, Frank Grasso and Harry Read, director.

The Community—CSC Helps Gain Surplus Food Plan

ONE OF THE key jobs of the CIO Community Services Committee during the past year has been its cooperation with the Agriculture Dept. in developing a program for "full utilization of surplus foods."

JOSEPH BEIRNE

This "practical program of aid and assistance" was designed primarily to help families in need as a result of unemployment and partial employment.

Other services to CIO unions included providing help in organizing strike relief programs and expansion of the union counselling program. There are now approximately 20,000 union counsellors in more than 100 communities across the country.

A great many of them, CIO-CSC said in its report to the convention, function in the plants on a day-to-day basis, helping their fellow workers with their personal problems.

In the committee's program for CIO representation on agency boards, the report noted "constant improvement." The problem now, though, is that in many communities "there are not enough CIO members who have either the time or the training to serve effectively on the governing bodies of community agencies."

In summarizing CIO activities on behalf of voluntary fund-raising campaigns, CSC said that CIO members contributed more than $25 million to community chest and united fund drives.

Need Labor Members

CIO-CSC has also been responsible for "directing a successful overseas relief program through trade unions and other channels in 21 foreign countries, totalling more than $15 million," the report said.

The committee report also called attention to the lack of CIO participation on the boards of Blue Cross organizations and hospitals.

Community Services Committee: Joseph A. Beirne, chairman; John Brophy, treasurer; Leo Perlis, national director; Irving Abramson, Harry Boyer, Joseph W. Childs, Frank Grasso, John J. Grogan, William J. Hart, Al Hartnett, Bessie Hillman, Louis Hollander, Joe Joy, Emil Mazey, Thomas Rusch, August Scholle, Sol Stetin and M. Hedley Stone.

Voice Urged On Manpower Policy

IN A SECTION on Manpower and National Defense, the CIO Officers' Report scored the Administration's "lack of recognition of labor's concern with such planning and potential contribution to it."

CIO's representation on the National Labor-Management Manpower Policy Committee "is the only phase of the work of the Office of Defense Mobilization on which active CIO cooperation has been requested in the last year," the report said.

Even there, the report noted, "management representatives repeatedly express doubts as to the value of labor-management committees." Employer spokesmen are attempting "to get the Administration to revise its policies so that it would consult with labor and management but not through permanent committees."

The report also said that present arrangements for meeting demands for migratory farm labor are "unrealistic." Importation of "several hundreds of thousand" Mexican contract workers to meet the demands of large-scale farms in the Southwest has idled U. S. workers or made them take jobs at substandard pay.

COMMUNITY SERVICES problems are discussed by CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe with CIO-CSC Dir. Leo Perlis at conference.

Education—U. S. Statistics Are Deteriorating

CURTAILMENT of budgets for research in the name of economy and reduction of government activities has resulted in a "deterioration" of government economic statistics, CIO's Education & Research Dept. said.

RUTTENBERG

The Research Div., in cooperation with research directors of CIO affiliates, prepared congressional testimony about the inadequacy of government statistics and research for the Subcommitee on Economic Statistics.

The testimony set forth CIO's goals for high standards of "integrity, consultation with labor and compulsory reporting of basic data" so the material might be made available to the American people. Specific proposals were made for improved reporting on employment and unemployment, wages, productivity, the Consumer's Price Index, business finances, economic structure, levels of income, savings and wealth.

The report by Dir. Stanley Ruttenberg cited the example of the Labor Dept's. Bureau of Labor Statistics whose "service to labor has become highly restricted." Funds for industry wage surveys "are completely inadequate to provide current data for collective bargaining purposes in most industries," the report pointed out.

In cooperation with various other CIO departments and committees, the research division prepared a variety of materials in important fields. Chief among them were a comprehensive Handbook on State and Local Taxes and a manual on state "right-to-work" laws.

Education Work Reviewed

The Education Div. received the first UNESCO grant ever given a U. S. trade union group to cover travel expenses between countries in Scandinavia in connection with its third Scandinavian labor workshop.

The 25 CIO and CCL members who participated in this year's workshop were able to learn about Scandinavian cooperatives, social and economic legislation, labor education and foreign policy during their three-week tour.

Additionally, it provided assistance to other CIO departments in helping to build understanding of the role of free trade unions in international affairs and in providing materials to help local unions and community groups interested in implementing the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregated schools.

Veterans' Job Needs Increasing

PROBLEMS in the field of reemployment rights for returning veterans have reached an "all-time high," according to the Labor Dept., the CIO Committee on Veterans' Affairs said.

To meet this need, the committee has prepared a program to protect the job rights of veterans so that all local unions may have a uniform policy. It deals with such matters as full accumulated seniority, promotions, wage increases, pension service credits and eligibility for vacation pay for the year of entrance into the service and the year of reinstatement.

The committee's program, its report said, is designed to benefit not only the 30-35% of CIO members and their family members who are veterans, but also to "aid all American citizens who have served their country."

The 83rd Congress, the report said, was "definitely anti-veteran."

The CIO Committee on Veterans Affairs: L. S. Buckmaster, chairman; Emil Mazey, secretary; James C. Gildea, director; Al Barkan, Herbert D. Dawson, Frank Hoffman, Martin Hughes, Harold Near, Wesley Steinhilber.

LISTEN TO THE CIO RADIO PROGRAM

John W. Vandercook AND THE NEWS

every weekday evening on the ABC Network

Location	Station	Dial Position	Time
ALABAMA
Auburn	WAUD	1230	6:00
Birmingham	WSGN	610	7:15
Florence	WJOI	1340	6:00
Gadsden	WGAD	1350	7:15
Greenville	WGYV	1400	9:45
Mobile	WABB	1480	6:00
Montgomery	WAPX	1600	6:00
ARIZONA
Flagstaff	KGPH	690	4:00
Kingman	KGAN	1230	6:45
Phoenix	KPHO	910	7:00
ARKANSAS
Little Rock	KLRA	1010	6:00
CALIFORNIA
Fresno	KARM	1430	6:00
Los Angeles	KABC	790	6:00
San Diego	KCBQ	1170	6:00
San Francisco	KGO	810	6:45
COLORADO
Denver	KVOD	630	7:00
Pueblo	KGHF	1350	7:00
CONNECTICUT
Hartford	WGTH	1410	7:15
New Haven	WELI	960	7:15
Torrington	WTOR	1490	7:00
Waterbury	WATR	1320	7:00
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Washington	WMAL	630	7:00
FLORIDA
Jacksonville	WPDQ	600	8:15
Miami	WQAM	560	7:00
Tampa-St. Petersburg	WSUN	620	7:00
GEORGIA
Atlanta	WGST	920	7:00
Augusta	WGAC	580	7:00
Brunswick	WGIG	1440	7:00
Cornelia	WCON	1450	7:00
Macon	WNEX	1400	7:45
Rome	WLAQ	1410	7:00
ILLINOIS
Chicago	WLS	890	6:00
Peoria	WIRL	1290	6:00
Springfield	WCVS	1450	7:15
INDIANA
Bloomington	WTTS	1370	9:45
Evansville	WJPS	1330	7:15
Ft. Wayne	WGL	1250	7:15
Indianapolis	WISH	1310	7:15
South Bend	WHOT	1490	6:30
IOWA
Des Moines	KSO	1460	7:45
Waterloo	KXEL	1540	6:00
KANSAS
Topeka	WREN	1250	7:45
KENTUCKY
Bowling Green	WKCT	930	6:00
Louisville	WKLO	1080	7:15
LOUISIANA
New Orleans	WSMB	1350	6:00
Shreveport	KRMD	1340	6:00
MARYLAND
Baltimore	WFBR	1300	7:00
MASSACHUSETTS
Boston	WVDA	1260	8:00
Gardner	WGAW	1340	8:00
Springfield	WSPR	1270	8:00
Worcester	WORC	1310	8:00
MICHIGAN
Bay City	WBCM	1440	7:00
Detroit	WXYZ	1270	8:45
Flint	WTAC	600	7:00
Grand Rapids	WLAV	1340	7:00
Iron Mountain	WMIQ	1450	10:15
		Mon thru	Thurs
Lansing	WILS	1320	10:00
Muskegon	WKBZ	850	7:15
Sault St. Marie	WSOO	1230	10:45
MINNESOTA
Mankato	KTOE	1420	6:30
Minneapolis-St. Paul	WTCN	1280	7:15
Montevideo	KDMA	1450	7:30
St. Cloud	WJON	1240	7:30
MISSISSIPPI
Laurel	WLAU	1490	6:00
Meridian	WTOK	1450	6:00
MISSOURI
Kansas City	KCMO	810	9:00
St. Louis	KXOK	630	7:15
MONTANA
Butte	KOPR	550	7:00
NEBRASKA
Sidney	KSID	1340	9:00
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Claremont	WTSV	1230	8:00
Lebanon	WTSL	1400	8:00
Manchester	WMUR	610	8:00
NEW MEXICO
Albuquerque	KOAT	1240	7:00
Los Alamos	KRSN	1490	7:00
Santa Fe	KTRC	1400	7:00
NEW YORK
Albany	WROW	590	7:00
Buffalo	WKBW	1520	7:00
Endicott-Binghamton	WENE	1430	7:00
Geneva	WGVA	1240	7:00
Jamestown	WJTN	1240	7:15
New York	WABC	770	7:00
Rochester	WVET	950	7:00
Syracuse	WHEN	620	7:00
NORTH CAROLINA
Asheville	WLOS	1380	7:00
Charlotte	WAYS	610	7:00
Goldsboro	WGBR	1150	10:15
Greensboro	WCOG	1320	11:00
Hendersonville	WHKP	1450	10:00
Raleigh	WNAO	850	7:00
Reidsville	WFRC	1600	7:30
Salisbury	WSAT	1280	8:15
OHIO
Akron	WAKR	1590	8:15
Canton	WHBC	1480	10:00
Chillicothe	WBEX	1490	7:00
Cincinnati	WSAI	1360	8:15
Cleveland	WJW	850	7:00
Columbus	WCOL	1230	7:00
Dayton	WING	1410	7:00
East Liverpool	WOHI	1490	7:00
Mansfield	WMAN	1400	7:00
Toledo	WTOL	1230	7:00
Youngstown	WBBW	1240	7:00
OKLAHOMA
Ada	KADA	1230	7:00
McAlester	KTMC	1400	6:00
Oklahoma City	KTOK	1000	7:15
Tulsa	KRMG	740	7:15
OREGON
Pendleton	KWRC	1240	10:15
Portland	KEX	1190	7:15
Redmond	KJUN	1240	6:30
PENNSYLVANIA
Altoona	WRTA	1240	7:00
Erie	WERC	1330	7:00
Harrisburg	WHGB	1400	7:00
Johnstown	WCRO	1230	7:15
Meadville	WMGW	1490	7:00
Philadelphia	WFIL	560	7:00
Pittsburgh	WCAE	1250	7:15
Scranton	WARM	590	7:00
Wilkes-Barre	WILK	980	7:00
RHODE ISLAND
Providence	WEAN	790	8:00
Westerly	WERI	1230	8:00
SOUTH CAROLINA
Charleston	WHAN	1340	7:00
Columbia	WCOS	1400	7:00
Orangeburg	WDIX	1450	11:15
Sumter	WSSC	1240	7:00
SOUTH DAKOTA
Sioux Falls	KSOO	1140	6:00
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga	WAPO	1150	7:00
Jackson	WTJS	1390	6:00
Knoxville	WBIR	1240	7:00
Memphis	WMPS	680	6:00
TEXAS
Austin	KNOW	1490	7:15
Beaumont	KFDM	560	7:15
Dallas-Ft. Worth	WFAA	570	6:00
Houston	KXYZ	1320	7:15
UTAH
Provo	KCSU	1400	7:00
Salt Lake City	KUTA	570	7:00
VERMONT
Brattleboro	WTSA	1450	7:00
VIRGINIA
Danville	WBTM	1330	8:15
Norfolk	WGH	1310	7:00
Roanoke	WROV	1240	7:15
South Boston	WHLF	1400	8:15
Suffolk	WLPM	1450	7:00
WASHINGTON
Aberdeen	KBKW	1450	6:00
Pasco	KPKW	1340	10:30
Seattle	KING	1090	6:30
Spokane	KGA	1510	6:00
WEST VIRGINIA
Charleston	WKNA	950	7:00
Fairmont	WVVW	1490	7:00
Huntington	WSAZ	930	7:00
Princeton	WLOH	1490	7:00
Wheeling	WKWK	1400	7:00
WISCONSIN
Duluth-Superior	WDSM	710	7:00
Madison	WISC	1480	7:30
Milwaukee	WCAN	1250	6:00
WYOMING
Casper	KVOC	1230	7:00
Cheyenne	KFBC	1240	7:00
Cody	KODI	1400	7:00
Laramie	KOWB	1340	7:00
New Castle	KASL	1240	7:00
Rawlins	KRAL	1240	9:00
Riverton	KWRL	1450	7:00
Torrington	KGOS	1490	7:00
Worland	KWOR	1490	7:00

UAW Settles Chrysler Dispute, Raps Arms Contract To Kohler

$18,000 SMILES are worn by these three reinstated employes of Magnavox Co. at Greeneville, Tenn. That's amount of back pay award won for them by CIO Electrical Workers in Federal Court after company appealed NLRB decision. From left, Estel Hensley and his wife, Naomi, and J. C. Ward, show checks.

IUE Wins 1950 Firing Case

THE CIO Electrical Workers have won back pay awards for three Greeneville, Tenn., employes of the Magnavox Co. who have been reinstated after being fired in 1950 for union activity.

The three, Estel Hensley and his wife, Naomi Bowman Hensley, and J. C. Ward, were awarded a total of $18,000, before taxes, by the U. S. Court of Appeals for the 6th Dist.

Magnavox appealed the NLRB finding of discriminatory discharge to the court and threatened further legal action after this decision, but then reversed its plans and paid off the money.

12-6

THE CIO Auto Workers settled its contract dispute with the Chrysler Corp. Body Div. in Detroit last week—just one hour before 30,000 employes were scheduled to walk out.

Meantime, the UAW accused the Defense Dept. of "actively participating in strike-breaking and union-busting activities" by giving a $2 million ammunition order to the Kohler Co., now in the ninth month of a strike.

Biggest issue in the Chrysler dispute was the demand for a union contract for 850 Body Div. office workers. They had been represented by the UAW when they worked for Briggs Manufacturing Co., which was bought out by Chrysler last year. The new agreement is similar to an earlier one negotiated with salaried engineers, also former Briggs employes.

WORKERS at Chrysler's Plymouth and De Soto Divisions have voted to strike over a number of grievances, but neither strike vote has yet been acted upon by the UAW executive board. Both union and management sources privately expressed hope that the disputes would be settled before a strike deadline is set.

Latest development in the UAW strike at Kohler, Wis., was a letter from UAW Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey to Defense Sec. Wilson in which he said the union was "shocked to learn" the order for 155 mm. artillery shells had been placed in a plant "where a strike for economic justice has been in progress since Apr. 5, 1954."

He called the order a "stab in the back" to Kohler workers.

MAZEY SAID the company "has the most vicious anti-labor policies of any company in America." Unfair labor practice charges are pending against Kohler before the NLRB, Mazey wrote.

He called on Wilson to cancel the contract "in the interest of fair play," until the company sits down with the union and works out a fair and equitable bargaining agreement.

QUESTIONERS Henry J. Langdon (left), AFL Machinists, and John Sheehan (right), CIO Steelworkers, discuss fine points of talk with Chester Bowles, former U. S. Ambassador to India. Unionists from CIO, AFL, independent unions and six foreign nations attended week-long school on UN held under auspices of American Labor Education Service in New York City.

Radio Free Europe Assists Workers In Czechoslovakia

DIEHARD free democratic trade unionists in Czechoslovakia and Hungary, stifled for years, have been given a voice by the Free Europe Committee for use in heckling the two nations' Communist regimes.

Through Radio Free Europe broadcasts and a coordinated balloon-dropped leaflet campaign by the Free Europe Press, they are now able to express their resentment at the failure of the Reds and their puppet unions to deliver on promises.

This is being reflected in Czechoslovakia, where workers are now electing some 300,000 union shop officials. A few months ago such an election would have been a joke—straight Communist tickets with unanimous votes.

Now, however, Czech workers who through Radio Free Europe know what a free trade union stands for have a means through the committee's work of showing their dissatisfaction with candidates who do not represent them.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

IT WAS NO HAPPENSTANCE that the heaviest blows struck against Sen. McCarthy, prior to the censure vote, were delivered by deeply conservative men, men profoundly devoted to the American system, to senatorial traditions, to the more gracious and courteous habits of American public life.

> Quote
>
> "What happened to Joe McCarthy's elbow? Well, imagine what would happen to your elbow if you had spent the last five years patting yourself on the back."—Fletcher Knebel in the Washington Star.

The Senate is often called "the world's most exclusive gentlemen's club," and there is substance in the name. All the senators are prima donnas, or they would not be there. They are jealous of their prerogatives, of their powerful position as co-makers of foreign policy, of their ancient custom of full deliberative debate.

The seniors finally turned their backs on Joe McCarthy, and the senior senators are not men to be reckoned lightly.

Sen. Johnson of Colorado arose for his valedictory, he is returning to the governorship of his state. Johnson is not much of a speech-maker; he does not thunder like Webster; he can barely be heard in the galleries.

But from his 18 years of experience he solemnly warned that McCarthy's tactics could disrupt American democracy just as Hitler and other demagogues disrupted the democracies of Western Europe.

Sen. Watkins of Utah, Republican chairman of the select committee that recommended censure, is a junior in experience but a senior in years, a man of unchallengable personal rectitude, and he conveyed a sense of shock and shame that McCarthy's brutalities had so long been allowed to overawe American political life.

A Flood Of Filth And Hate

Sen. Fulbright of Arkansas, before reading the filthy letters flooding the Senate from McCarthy's lunatic-fringers, earnestly declared that the Wisconsin senator may have started a "prairie fire" that neither he or anyone else could smother.

Look at the list: Watkins, Johnson and Fulbright. These men are not flaming disciples of the New Deal; they blow no trumpets for sudden social change.

They are simply men of honor, men of integrity, sick unto death of the McCarthy-Jenner evil pretense that anyone who refuses to adopt their language and thought-habits is a "handmaiden," whether "unwittingly" or otherwise, of the internal Communist menace.

The simple fact is that there isn't, and never has been, any internal Communist menace, within or outside the government, justifying McCarthy. The business of catching the inevitable Soviet agents who commit overt crimes is a job for the FBI.

The federal government of the New Deal and Fair Deal days was an honest government, deeply devoted to America. The horrible suspicion that our own leaders were or are traitors is an induced nightmare, conjured up by knaves for fools.

The logical thing to have done with McCarthy, on Jan. 3, 1953, was to deny him a seat following his re-election—to deny him a place as a result of his arrogant refusal in 1951-52 to answer questions about his finances and personal integrity before the Hennings subcommittee. The Senate failed itself and failed the country.

The censure resolution was a substitute, however belated, and the question of McCarthy's fitness to remain in the Senate was inevitably projected from the moment the man's seniors pronounced judgment condemning him.

Coming Next Week

Big Annual Convention Issue Of The CIO NEWS

The big annual Convention Issue of The CIO News will be published on Dec. 13, immediately after the 16th CIO Constitutional Convention in Los Angeles.

• BUNDLE ORDERS: Rates for bundle orders are 2c per copy for any quantity up to 1000; 1¾c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000; and 1½c per copy for quantities of more than 2000. Special rates for large orders.

In sending lists of addresses for bundle orders, please indicate the quantity to be sent to each address. To facilitate bookkeeping, please send checks with smaller quantity orders.

• INDIVIDUALLY MAILED ORDERS: Rates for individually mailed copies are 2¼c per copy for quantities up to 1000; 2c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000; and 1¾c per copy for quantities of more than 2000. Special rates for very large orders upon application.

If individual mailing is desired, this may be arranged by sending us mailing strips not more than 2½ inches wide.

THE CIO NEWS
718 Jackson Place, N.W.
Washington 6, D. C.

We desire to place an order for the special 1954 Convention Issue of The CIO News.

Please ship .....in bundle lots to the enclosed address.

Please have the 1954 Convention Issue individually mailed to membership lists for which we will furnish mailing strips.

The total number of names to which we desire the paper sent is..... ☐ Check Inclosed ☐ Bill Us Later

Name.....

Address.....

City..... Zone..... State.....

Organization.....

Convention Issue

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., December 13, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 50

CIO Sets Program Of Courage

Jobs, Unity, Organizing Are Our Tasks

—See Page 3

'Citizenship In Operation' A call for "faith in the attitudes" of the New Deal and Fair Deal and courage in the atomic age was voiced by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in an address which was a highlight of the 16th CIO convention in Los Angeles. FDR's widow, "first lady of the world," confers with CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther (right), Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe (left) and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey. The convention approved negotiations for CIO-AFL unity on a fair and principled basis, set a vigorous and independent political action program, emphasized need for the guaranteed annual wage, and called for an expanding employment economy in peacetime. (See story on Page 3.)

International

Sabre-Rattling By Knowland Is Condemned

STRONG condemnation of Senate Republican Leader Knowland's views on Red China, coupled with a determination that that government not be allowed to shoot its way into the United Nations, was voiced by the CIO convention in a resolution on the Far Eastern crisis.

The delegates charged the California Senator and the group about him with "ill-chosen words and ill-conceived actions . . . inflammatory and reckless proposals . . . (and) hysterical sabre-rattling."

The "one, inevitable result" of his policies, the resolution said, would be "the outbreak of immoral, so-called preventive war and the ultimate destruction of civilization."

"The Senator is heedlessly and irresponsibly urging this nation into an isolationist position which would leave us without friends or allies in the most crucial moment in world history," it maintained.

"On the other hand, Pres. Eisenhower has demonstrated restraint and realistic understanding which reflects the thinking of the overwhelming majority of the American people and our allies."

The tragic spectacle of the President being opposed by the leader of his party's majority in the upper house of Congress, the resolution said, has worried the American people and frightened our allies.

"In times of crisis," CIO stressed, "America cannot tolerate irresponsible, divided leadership in the party of the Administration."

The delegates made it clear that they "deplore" as vigorously as Knowland does "the uncivilized, inhuman actions" of Red China.

"The recent imprisonment of American airmen, as well as the continued acts of aggression, both open and indirect, in Southeast Asia, have added new and dangerous obstacles to the eventual peaceful resolution of these already serious tensions between East and West.

"We abhor, as strongly as does Sen. Knowland, the totalitarian and anti-democratic character of the Red Chinese government.

"While we are as determined as he that no despotic government shall be allowed to shoot its way into the councils of the United Nations, we will not be swept into an hysteria that leads step-by-step to all-out war."

While disclaiming Knowland's stand, the resolution expressed equal opposition to appeasing Red China.

The choice, it made plain, is not between war and "naive co-existence with an ideology we detest."

Rather, it added, it lies between policies which threaten war and "a realistic, sustained policy of pro-democratic deeds and actions, as well as mutual military security arrangements," which will win the uncommitted nations to the Free World and give hope to those behind the Iron Curtain.

Organizing

Leather Workers Swinging Back To CIO

ANOTHER blow at Communist-led unions was struck by CIO at its convention with the formation of the Leather & Tannery Workers Organizing Committee in response to requests from democratic elements in the Fur & Leather Workers Union.

Nucleus of the new LTWOC will be the 4000 members presently in Local 21 of the Fur Workers in Peabody, Mass., a major tannery center. They are expected to reject their affiliation with the union which was expelled from the CIO in 1950. The action, it was indicated, will be taken at a mass meeting early next month at which they will join LTWOC.

Cheers greeted Local 21's Business Manager Richard B. O'Keefe as he pledged himself to the task of bringing "all the leather workers back to the CIO." He said his local was the union's largest and its loss would be a crippling blow to the Furriers.

CIO PRES. Walter P. Reuther said that the CIO, investigating the Fur and Leather Workers, found it was the most Communist-dominated of the unions expelled and its officers ranked highest in the councils of the Communist Party.

"I want to make it very clear," Reuther declared, "that CIO welcomes the democratic, anti-Communist rank and file of the Fur and Leather Workers but it will have none of its Communist leadership.

O'Keefe was accompanied to the convention by Arthur Cecelski, business agent of Local 21.

The quick affiliation of approximately 10,000 workers in tanneries and leather plants in New England was predicted by O'Keefe. His aim, he said, is to realize the full organizing potential of 42,000 in the leather industry, about 35,000 of whom are in the Fur and Leather Workers.

"Leather workers want their own union," O'Keefe told the convention. "They don't want to be a division of any other union, especially the AFL Meat Cutters."

O'Keefe said he had been a member of the Fur and Leather Workers executive board for 12 years and was invited to attend a meeting last week in Chicago where details of amalgamation between his union and the Meat Cutters were being worked out.

"We've been organized since 1933," he said, "first as an independent union, then with CIO and then independent again. I speak for the thousands of workers in New England who are pro-CIO. Instead of going to Chicago, I thought it was more important to come here so they could again be in good standing as CIO members with their own union."

O'Keefe said that word of his action spread quickly and he received a telegram expressing interest in developments from officers of a large Midwest local of the Fur Workers.

WELCOME HOME—Arthur Cecelski (left) and Richard B. O'Keefe (center) discuss return of leather workers to CIO in new organizing committee. With them, from left, are Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who endorsed the anti-Communist move.

6 Cone Mills Won By Textile Workers

Good news on the organizing front was reported to the CIO convention by the CIO Textile Workers. They scored a clean sweep in NLRB elections held at six mills of the Cone chain in Greensboro, N. C.

TWUA-CIO won a total of 2818 votes in the separate elections. There were 1704 no-union votes and 123 for the AFL Textile Workers which has been the bargaining agent in five of the mills since 1952. The sixth plant had never been organized.

'Organizing Is Our First Job'—Riffe

INTENSIFIED efforts to organize all workers within their jurisdictions were urged on all CIO unions by the CIO convention.

Organization of the unorganized remains "a basic objective of CIO," a resolution stated.

CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe called for "a living resolution" to do the job for which CIO was created.

He named many CIO affiliates who have made great organizational strides since the last convention.

JOHN RIFFE

Riffe, who also is director of organization and councils, said that CIO unions were involved in 1500 NLRB elections last year, winning 745, and establishing collective bargaining agreements for 200,000 workers in a number of industries.

"I am proud of what we have done this year," Riffe continued, "but I am sure we can do a much better job by all of us working at this job."

RESTRICTIONS imposed by Taft-Hartley and state "right to scab" laws, especially in the South, were cited by Executive Vice Pres. William Pollock of the CIO Textile Workers as roadblocks to organization.

"The employers . . . absolutely refuse to accept the philosophy that the American worker has a right to organize and bargain collectively," Pollock added.

Although the paper industry is the nation's fifth largest, only about 300,000 or approximately half of its workers are organized. "This will have to be corrected," promised Pres. Harry Sayre of the CIO Paperworkers.

Pres. Morris Pizer of the CIO Furniture Workers made a plea for organizing help from the "big brothers," the larger CIO unions.

"We need you to go down south, put in your big resources there, your best organizers, and together we can be successful," Pizer said.

THE ORGANIZING record of the CIO Electrical Workers was recited by Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett. He said IUE-CIO refused to believe the South was a challenge but an invitation to organize, and had made significant gains in that section during the year.

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther challenged the delegates to show him a basic industry that was unorganized "where the employers brought organization of a union on a silver platter."

"We had to go out and fight to build these unions," he reminded, "and that's the way we are going to have to organize the unorganized—whether they be in the North, South, East or West."

Ike Says Unions Help Strengthen The Nation

Two messages of greetings to the CIO convention were sent by Pres. Eisenhower to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther. In a message read by Sec. of Labor Mitchell, the President said in part:

Through the opportunity afforded by the presence of Sec. of Labor Mitchell at your meeting. I should like to extend to all attending it my warm personal greetings.

EISENHOWER

Trade unionism has become a vital part of American life. The activities of the American labor movement have brought about social and economic reforms which have enriched the lives not only of union members but of millions of other Americans.

Union efforts to help strengthen our general welfare, our national prosperity, and our democracy have earned sincere gratitude among our people.

You have my good wishes for a highly successful convention.

Sincerely,
DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

CIO's Goal For '55

Program Of Courage Set

By GERVASE N. LOVE

Blazing in yellow and black, the CIO emblem dominated the stage above the ballroom in Los Angeles' Hotel Statler, and above it a banner proclaimed: "Citizenship In Operation."

And when the 16th national convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations ended last week, a program had been set to fulfill the responsibilities of "Citizenship In Operation."

At home, the CIO's program looks toward fair and honorable unity with the American Federation of Labor, to a continued drive to organize the unorganized, and to domestic economic and social legislation designed to end stagnation.

Abroad, it looks toward building peace—without appeasement—and security in a world marked by cold war and the lengthening shadow of atomic developments for both good and evil.

A Better Life

It was a program reflecting the courage that went into two decades of building strong unions and a better life for their members, a program reflecting confidence in an age of uncertainty, one reflecting the determination of the CIO and the people who make it up to meet whatever challenge the future holds.

PRESIDING—As CIO's "senior" vice president in length of service, Textile Workers Pres. Emil Rieve presided for election of the CIO officers.

It was a convention that spoke out boldly against the real prophets of gloom and doom who occupy high places in the nation's councils, and it laid down specific plans for the restoration of an expanding economy at home.

It was a convention that reiterated CIO defiance of Communist dictatorship in all parts of the world, spelled out steps to counteract it without the need of a shooting war, and extended the warm hand of friendship to all who believe in peace, freedom and democracy—wherever they may live.

The Organizing Job

And it was a convention that pledged again the continuing time and effort of the CIO to bring the benefits of unionism to the country's unorganized workers, and to raise their living standards despite restrictive laws and the opposition of feudal-minded employers.

In one of its most significant actions, the convention again endorsed the efforts of affiliates to negotiate guaranteed annual wage plans.

This was one phase of a frontal attack on economic problems that included a re-statement of the CIO's 10-point full employment program and was geared to pulling the country out of the economic doldrums and their accompanying unemployment.

Action on the guaranteed annual wage came after CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, in his keynote address, expressed confidence that the Auto Workers, of which he is also president, "will nail down a guaranteed annual wage" when major contracts in the industry open next year.

Time For Action

The resolution pointed out the CIO has never claimed that guaranteed wages are a cure-all, but maintained they are "an important lever for raising the sights of business leadership so that their planning takes into account the needs of the workers . . . and the community for a steady flow of income and purchasing power."

The unanimity of opinion on the annual wage was pointed up by the unanimous approval of the resolution and summarized by Reuther's terse statement just before the vote:

"This is the kind of resolution on which there has been sufficient discussion and on which we need more action. I think that is what we're going to get in the period ahead."

The convention's economic program was aimed not only at meeting the problem of economic stagnation, but at safeguarding the national economy against what threats there are in automation.

It called on the one hand for a program that includes higher wages through both collective bargaining and a higher minimum wage, and a complete reversal of GOP Administration economic policies.

On the other, it welcomed automation but warned that if it is "irresponsibly introduced and exploited, it can result in unprecedented unemployment and an economic depression." It called on Congress to investigate the impact of automation and prepare for its expansion.

Labor Unity Moves

The delegates gave vigorous support to labor unity. They hailed the progress already made, commended the decision of the Joint AFL-CIO Unity Committee to "create a single trade union center in America," and directed CIO members of the committee to continue negotiations "in the constructive spirit that has already been displayed."

During some two hours of discussion, they cheered the prediction of Pres. David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers that a united movement will bring "another renaissance" in labor's ranks.

Reuther stated bluntly that "the CIO wants organic unity," and predicted that problems impeding it will be solved. CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, seeing in unity an opportunity to make new strides forward, declared that the problems to be solved will be solved, although they are difficult ones.

The convention endorsed the alertness of the CIO Executive Committee in moving against maladministration of union health, welfare and pension funds, and unanimously adopted an eight-point program recommended by the CIO Standing Committee on Ethical Practices.

Based on an extensive investigation by the committee and on testimony at a two-day public hearing in New York, the program is intended, in the words of the resolution, to assure "clean, decent and honest" administration of such programs.

Leather Workers Act

Plans for intensified organization were highlighted by another in the series of sledgehammer blows the CIO has dealt Communists in the labor movement.

This was the establishment of a Leathery & Tannery Workers Organizing Committee in response to pleas from democratic elements that have sickened of Communist leadership in the Fur & Leather Workers Union. The latter was expelled from the CIO in 1950 because of Red domination.

John V. Riffe, CIO executive vice president and director of organization, pleaded for a "living resolution" to do the job for which the CIO was created—spreading organization in the mass production industries.

The convention took heart from liberal successes in the 1954 elections, but concurred in Reuther's statement that "the CIO is not a tail to the Democratic kite." In reviewing the results, Dir. Jack Kroll of the CIO Political Action Committee expressed the belief they indicate greater political maturity among the voters.

Third Party Rejected

A proposal for a third party voiced by Pres. Michael J. Quill of the Transport Workers found no support. But a resolution asserting that "political action is indivisible," and uniting it with a legislative program of action by state and local CIO councils, was heartily endorsed.

In addition to acting on some 60 additional resolutions, the delegates heard speeches by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Sec. of Labor Mitchell, Sen. Morse (Ind. Ore.), Pres. James Patton of the National Farmers Union, and Thurgood Marshall, general counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

And in its final action, the convention unanimously reelected CIO officers for another year. The delegates broke up with Reuther's words of acceptance still echoing—

"I pray in the days ahead to be worthy of your trust and confidence, and pledge myself to give the CIO the best that's in me."

WAVING A GREETING—CIO's three top officers—from left, Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe, Pres. Walter P. Reuther and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey—greet delegates after their unanimous re-election at finale of convention in Los Angeles.

Potofsky, Townsend Sent Get-Well Wires

"This convention doesn't seem the same with you absent," Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the CIO Clothing Workers was told by CIO's top officers.

A wire wishing speedy recovery from his minor illness was sent to the ACWA officer by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey.

They also sent a telegram to Pres. Willard Townsend of the CIO Transport Service Employees wishing him a speedy recovery from illness.

This TV Bid Was Politely Rejected

Los Angeles has seven television channels, and TV-radio-press coverage was a big feature of the 16th CIO convention.

But there was one invitation which was politely turned down by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther. It was for a filmed interview with Jack Latham on a KRCA-TV evening newscast.

It turned out the advertising sponsor for the show was Richman Bros.—with whom the CIO Clothing Workers have had a long organizational dispute. So Reuther didn't appear.

'McCarthy's Blast At Ike Shows GOP Is Incapable'

THE INEVITABLE charge by Joe McCarthy that Pres. Eisenhower is soft on communism was finally voiced last week.

The claim by the Wisconsin Republican that Eisenhower has demonstrated a "shrinking show of weakness" towards Communists brought this comment at the CIO convention:

Pres. Walter P. Reuther: "This is further proof . . . that the Republican Party is seriously and deeply divided. It is a tragedy that it is incapable of efficient leadership in this period of world crisis."

Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey: "Perhaps now the President will belatedly reject McCarthy's support which he cultivated in his 1952 hunt for votes . . . It's about time Eisenhower also rejected the McCarthy cult before they, too, denounce him."

P.S.: At his press conference next day, Eisenhower declined comment on McCarthy's blast.

Pictorial History Of Murray Given To Chicago School

THE PHILIP MURRAY Memorial Foundation last week presented a display to the Philip Murray Branch of Kenwood School, Chicago, as the school, named in honor of the late president of CIO, was dedicated.

The display, containing pictorial highlights of Murray's life and a brief tribute, was presented through Rabbi Jacob Weinstein, a long-time friend of Murray.

Foundation Dir. Arthur J. Goldberg said the presentation to the modernistic 12-room school was "in keeping with the spirit of Philip Murray, whose proudest public office was that of school board member in Pittsburgh, his home town."

The Thing We Are Going To Fight For

From CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther's keynote address to the CIO convention in Los Angeles:

If America has the resources and the productive know-how and the will to provide full employment in making the weapons of war and destruction, then pray tell me why we haven't got the courage and the good sense to find a way to give our people jobs in peacetime making the good things of life for our people? This is the question we ask and that is the thing we are going to keep fighting on.

Labor Unity

CIO Leaders Discuss Merger Problems

By EUGENE A. KELLEY

"The CIO wants organic unity."

The hope moved closer to fact in Los Angeles last week as the CIO convention unanimously adopted a resolution which echoed the statement made a year ago and endorsed the decision to create a joint CIO-AFL trade union center in America.

A succession of speakers held the attention of delegates for nearly two hours while the labor unity resolution was under discussion. The tension broke as CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther put the issue to a standing vote and it was carried without dissent.

Reuther was the concluding speaker, after Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Pres. David J. McDonald of the CIO Steelworkers who served with him on the CIO Unity Subcommittee with the AFL.

Speakers cited the problems still remaining to be solved before unity is an accomplished fact. They gave reassurances that no small unions from either group would be "gobbled up" in the amalgamation promise.

As one example of growing harmony, Reuther reported that he had sent greetings to the recent AFL convention, the first such exchange between the two groups in 17 years. He instructed Carey to read a telegram from AFL Pres. George Meany conveying the fraternal greetings and best wishes of the AFL membership.

UNITY would give "double strength" to American labor, predicted Pres. Joseph Curran of CIO Maritime Union.

He said the pact was "basically significant only to the extent to which they promote the greater goal of achieving organic unity . . ."

McDonald

"Another renaissance" in labor's ranks when a new trade union center comes into being was envisioned by McDonald.

The CIO's desire for organic unity with the AFL was termed "not a mere pious hope" but "a firm declaration of intent" by the USA-CIO head.

Unity, he declared, is most important "because the people want it." He predicted that the subcommittees from the two labor federations will devise recommendations to bring it about.

"There are millions of people who need to be organized in this country," McDonald told the convention, "some in craft unions, many in industrial unions. Sixteen million of us united in one labor movement can do that job of organizing — far better than we are able to do it now."

He pledged the Steelworkers "to do more than our share" in providing manpower and money for the conduct of "great organizing campaigns."

"When this new trade union center comes into being," McDonald forecast, "and it will come into being, there will be another renaissance in the ranks of labor as there was a renaissance in 1936 when the CIO came into being."

"On the chart behind me," he said with a gesture to the convention backdrop, "there are indications of milestones of progress. And this I desire to see, that when the next line is drawn in that chart, the figures will read, '1955 — organic unity achieved.'"

Reuther

The cardinal principle on which a unified trade union center would be based is the protection of every affiliate's integrity, Reuther emphasized.

Early in his discussion of the labor unity resolution, the CIO head traced the "real," "difficult" and "human" problems involved in the achievement of organic unity. None of them, he reassured, are beyond solution.

He called for a "sound, honorable and principled basis" for unity with the AFL, seeing this as a reality if those responsible approach the task "in a spirit of good faith and good will."

"The labor movement is not a loose federation of private empires but is a great opportunity," he declared, "a great opportunity for those in positions of leadership. If we measure the things we have in common they will give us the vision to overcome the small areas that we have in conflict."

The declaration to create a national union center that will protect the integrity of every union, large or small, is not an automatic principle, he said.

"It will not implement itself just by good will, no matter how much good will there may be behind the principle," he asserted.

Reuther outlined the unity talks to date, hailing the No-Raiding Agreement as clearance of "the most important single hurdle. He said he could not discuss before the press all of the details thus far, adding that "the best way to advance the cause of labor unity is keep some of these things within our family during the period of delegate discussion."

Reuther said that early meetings with Pres. George Meany, Sec.-Treas. William Schnitzler and Pres. Harry C. Bates of the Bricklayers Union, the AFL unity team, are planned.

Carey

"The CIO is not going out of business," said Carey in the debate.

He promised that a unified labor center would go forward in the work of organizing "and complete the task we started before and that we recognize as a never-ending struggle."

Carey recalled that the three CIO Unity Subcommittee members "represent more organized workers that pay dues into their unions than the whole membership of the American labor movement 20 or 21 years ago . . . unions that did not exist before the CIO.

"They quite properly symbolize not only what they, as your representatives, seek to do to bring about a bigger, better home for American workers," Carey told the delegates.

He praised the promise to defend the integrity of every union. Referring to the CIO Electrical Workers which he heads, Carey said his organization feared no raids from some AFL groups.

"We may need a little help from a raid by the Teamsters Union," he admitted. "I am not too sure the Teamsters are ready to join the agreement of helping to defend the integrity of every other union. They would not even agree to defend the integrity of other AFL unions."

Carey conceded there would be problems and difficulties on the road to unity. But, he added, "I think the committee can provide the affiliated unions of the CIO with the kind of confidence that our organizations need to press forward to complete this task."

"THE PEOPLE WANT IT"—A major issue before CIO convention was further negotiations with the AFL for organic unity in the U. S. labor movement. "The people want it," said CIO Steelworkers Pres. David J. McDonald (first photo). He predicted unity would bring "renaissance" in organizing and more strength in legislative-political action work. McDonald was congratulated by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther (center photo). Reuther pledged "the best that we have" toward gaining unity on a principled basis. At right: CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey (third CIO member of joint unity subcommittee) predicted unity negotiations will "move forward as rapidly as possible."

More Power

Pres. Joseph Curran of the CIO Maritime Union scoffed at reports that he headed a bloc of smaller CIO unions opposed to labor unity.

"We came out in 1936 and trod many rough roads," Curran said. "We expect to go back into a unified labor movement which will have double the strength of the labor movements divided as they are today, to go after better conditions on a double strength basis; to go after organizing the unorganized.

"Yes, and to clear out . . . parasites in the form of racketeers, gangsters and Communists who may be clinging on the backs of any part of the labor movement."

Good Thing

Labor unity was called "a good thing" by Labor Sec. Mitchell.

Some employers may think it undesirable, he told the convention, but he said that if they considered it carefully they would realize it would lead to greater responsibility on the part of unions.

Meany Asks Early Meeting On Unity

In a message of "fraternal greetings and best wishes" to the CIO, Pres. George Meany of the AFL urged an early meeting of the Unity Committee representing the two federations. His wire to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther:

Please convey to the delegates in attendance at annual Convention of Congress of Industrial Organizations the fraternal greetings and best wishes of the members of the American Federation of Labor.

I know you share our gratification over the successful operation of the no-raiding agreement between our two organizations. It has served to reduce strife in the labor movement and promote greater good will among the affiliated unions who have become parties to it. It is a matter of record that in the first six months of this agreement, only one dispute has had to be referred to the impartial umpire for decision. A total of 75 AFL affiliates, representing the great majority of our membership, has now signed the pact.

As we all realize, the constructive results to date of the no-raiding agreement are basically significant only to the extent to which they promote the greater goal of achieving organic unity between our two organizations. I sincerely believe that the time is now ripe for action toward that goal.

It is my earnest wish that we can have a meeting of the full Unity Committee as soon as possible following your Convention.

DuPont Wins Trust Suit

BIGNESS alone does not constitute monopoly, Judge Walter J. LaBuy ruled in U. S. District Court in Chicago in dismissing anti-trust charges against the duPont industrial empire and individual members of the family.

The suit was started by the federal government in 1949.

The government alleged duPont forced GM and U. S. Rubber to buy its products, and in turn forced GM to buy U. S. Rubber products.

After a trial of 102 days LaBuy issued a 220-page decision. In a summation, he said the government failed to prove "conspiracy, monopolization, a restraint of trade, or any reasonable probability of restraint."

The Fight For Jobs

Automation Adds Peril To Economy

A MULTI-POINT program intended to end the stagnation into which the Republican Administration has allowed the country to drift, with safeguards against threats to the workers inherent in growing automation, was spelled out by the National CIO convention.

The delegates warned that the economic downturn stemming from lower defense expenditures, the drop in business investment and farm income, and a halt in expansion of personal consumption, may grow worse in 1955.

"If the economy is to be lifted out of its current stagnation and renew its forward progress toward abundance," they said in an economic policy resolution, "personal consumption will have to rise substantially above present levels.

"The persistence of economic stagnation presents a threat of mounting unemployment. With productivity and the size of the labor force increasing each year, the economy must expand on a continuing basis if mass unemployment is to be avoided."

The resolution recalled that the Eisenhower Administration has acted as if the country's economic problems do not exist, and has failed to fulfill its obligations under the Full Employment Act of 1946.

"Politically-inspired optimism has been substituted for sound economic analysis, and stagnation has been hailed as economic stability," he said.

"Ostrich-like behavior has been the pattern, rather than bold action to stimulate economic activity. Trickle-down policies of special privilege have been followed, instead of strengthening the mass consumption base.

"The time is long overdue for a sharp reversal in the economic policies of the federal government. Inaction must be supplanted by positive acts. Trickle-down policies must be replaced by policies designed to strengthen the economy's mass consumption base."

In a resolution on technological progress and full employment, the convention made it clear the CIO welcomes automation and other developments if they are wisely used.

The New Technology

"If wisely used," it said, "(they) hold great promise of advance to new levels of prosperity and abundance for all people. But if we repeat the mistakes of the past, and allow them to be recklessly and irresponsibly applied, they hold also the threat of great suffering.

"Responsibly controlled in the interests of human welfare, the new technology can not only make possible a vast improvement in the material standards of living of all the people, including a rapid rise of living standards in the underdeveloped areas, but can permit at the same time an increase in human leisure to enjoy the new abundance.

"Irresponsibly introduced and exploited, it can result in unprecedented unemployment and an economic depression which may threaten the very foundations of our free society."

In a third resolution dealing with the economy and full employment, the convention denounced the 1954 revision of federal tax laws as benefitting only the upper strata of taxpayers. It called on the incoming Congress to "grant tax relief where it is needed" by:

- Repealing that section of the law drastically slashing the tax on income from dividends, and the provision which increases depreciation allowances.
- Increasing individual income tax exemptions from the present $600 to $800, and eventually to $1000.
- Permitting excise tax cuts scheduled for Apr. 1, 1955, to become effective as a step toward their eventual elimination.
- Continuing the 52% corporation tax rate for another year.
- Closing loopholes in the 1954 act which permit the loss of more than $7 billion in tax receipts.
- Disallowing rentals paid for plants built from the proceeds of municipal bond issues; and eliminating the tax exempt status of local bonds when the proceeds are used to build plants for runaway shops.

The convention also vigorously opposed a federal sales or manufacturers' excise tax, and called on its affiliates to fight such levies at the local level.

CHANGE FOR THE WORSE—Maps based on Labor Dept. reports show how the number of job crisis centers with substantial unemployment has increased in past year. Twelve months ago they were concentrated in coal and textile areas; now they dot the industrial states of the East and Midwest.

Text: 'We Will Do Everything In Our Power To Achieve Unity'

Here is the full text of the key CIO convention resolution hailing progress toward labor unity and renewing support for continuing efforts toward that goal:

SINCE OUR last convention, important developments have taken place in the labor unity discussions between the CIO and the AFL.

Following our 1953 convention, and pursuant to its unanimous authorization, the No-Raiding Agreement was formally executed on Dec. 16, 1953, in Washington by the officers of the CIO, and, the AFL likewise having unanimously ratified the Agreement, by the officers of the AFL.

The official signatures of the officers of the CIO and the AFL bound the two national organizations, the CIO's local industrial unions and the AFL's federal local unions.

The Present Truce

Following this signing, adherences were obtained from CIO affiliates and AFL affiliates, and on June 9, 1954, in Washington, Pres. Walter Reuther signed the No-Raiding Agreement on behalf of 29 of the CIO's international unions and AFL's Pres. (George) Meany signed on behalf of 66 of the AFL affiliates. At that time, in a joint statement, Presidents Meany and Reuther said:

"This agreement represents a cease-fire. During the truce the joint CIO-AFL Unity Committee will go to work on the manifold problems involved in bringing about a merger of the two major labor federations into a single united labor movement . . . We are confident that this goal, so beneficial to the workers we represent and to the nation as a whole, can be accomplished before the truce expires."

On June 29, at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, several hundred leaders of both CIO and AFL attended a dinner celebrating the signing and ratification of the No-Raiding Agreement. The dinner was designed to "pave the way toward closer fraternal bonds" between the two organizations. It was presided over by David L. Cole, former Director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, who was named Impartial Umpire under the No-Raiding Agreement.

Raid Ban Hailed

Since the June 9 ratification ceremonies, six additional AFL unions have adhered to the No-Raiding Agreement and one additional CIO union. At the present time, therefore, 72 AFL unions and 30 CIO unions have adhered to the No-Raiding Agreement.

The No-Raiding Agreement has achieved significant results since its ratification. Raiding between the signatory unions has virtually ceased, to the great benefit of the membership of the unions, employers in established contractual relationships with unions, and the general public.

Only a score of cases have arisen where charges have been made of violations of the Agreement. Virtually all of these cases have been amicably settled through the mediation machinery provided in the Agreement and without recourse to the arbitrator. Only one case has gone to decision by the arbitrator and the officers of the two federations are cooperating together in the effort to secure compliance with the arbitrator's award in that case.

Favorable Climate

In the favorable climate engendered by the successful operation of the No-Raiding Agreement, the joint CIO-AFL Unity Committee met in Washington on Oct. 15 to carry forward unity discussions. After a long and harmonious session, the unity negotiators of both organizations announced:

"It is the unanimous decision of this joint committee of the AFL and CIO to create a single trade union center in America through the process of merger, which will preserve the integrity of each affiliated national and international union.

"Further, the presidents of the AFL and CIO are authorized to appoint a joint subcommittee to draft a detailed plan to achieve this objective and to then report its recommendations to this committee at its next meeting."

Pres. Reuther then designated Pres. David J. McDonald of the United Steelworkers of America, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and himself as the CIO members of the joint subcommittee. The AFL members are Pres. George Meany, Sec.-Treas. William F. Schnitzler, and Vice Pres. Harry C. Bates.

The CIO members of the joint AFL-CIO unity subcommittee are now engaged in drafting proposals to submit to an early meeting of the joint AFL-CIO subcommittee for a detailed plan to achieve the objectives of the Joint AFL-CIO Unity Committee to create a single trade union center in America through a process of merger which will preserve the integrity of each affiliated national and international union.

In drafting these proposals the CIO members of the subcommittee are mindful of the unanimous resolution of the last CIO convention that:

"In the unity discussions that are in progress we will not sacrifice any of the basic principles for which the CIO stands, and which are essential to the building of a strong democratic and socially responsible labor movement.

"In these negotiations we will not sacrifice the interests of any union, big or small, within the CIO.

"In these negotiations we will not permit the interests of any individual for office or power to stand in the way. We recognize that the good of the whole labor movement transcends that of any individual or group."

Now, therefore, be it resolved:

We hail the progress that has been made during the last year toward the goal of seeking organic unity.

We voice our approval of the successful operation of the No-Raiding Agreement which we have always regarded to be a touchstone of our larger goal of seeking organic unity.

Endorse Decision

We commend the constructive progress that has been made by the members of the Joint AFL-CIO Unity Committee and endorse their decision to "create a single trade union center in America through the process of merger which will preserve the integrity of each affiliated national and international union."

We direct the CIO members of the Unity Committee to continue the unity negotiations in the constructive spirit that has already been displayed and repeat to them what we said at our last convention:

"The CIO wants organic unity. We seek unity in the American labor movement firmly based on the principles of free democratic unionism. We will do everything in our power to achieve this goal."

Wage Gains, Fair Tax Cuts Highlight Economic Program

THE 10-POINT economic policy program adopted by the National CIO convention provides for:

1. Encouragement of free collective bargaining geared to assuring workers an adequate share in the fruits of production; annual wage guarantees to cut needless employment fluctuations and promote stability in workers' expenditures; and reasonable price policies.
2. Tax legislation aimed at strengthening consumer buying power, including an increase in the federal income tax exemption from the present $600 to $800 now and $1000 later.
3. An increase in the minimum wage to $1.25 an hour.
4. Improvement of the Social Security Act to increase benefit payments to a figure commensurate with the cost of living, give protection against disability, strengthen the public assistance program, and establish a national health program.
5. Modernization of the unemployment compensation system.
6. A housing program geared to yield two million new units a year, with adequate provision for low income families and slum elimination.
7. A farm program to strengthen the income position of the family farmer and increase the consumption of farm products.
8. A liberal credit policy as an essential to an expanding economy.
9. A full employment program aimed at lifting the economy out of a state of stagnation.
10. A comprehensive public works program.

Welfare Funds

CIO Sets Plan To Keep Program 'Honest'

AN EIGHT-POINT program reflecting the CIO's determination to keep the administration of health, welfare and pension programs "clean, decent and honest" was unanimously adopted by the convention on recommendation of the CIO Standing Committee on Ethical Practices.

The committee is headed by Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the Clothing Workers and includes Pres. Joseph N. Curran of the Maritime Union and Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes of the Steelworkers, with CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg serving as director.

Its recommendations were based on answers to questionnaires sent all 11 CIO international unions, and on testimony given at an unprecedented two-day open hearing in New York at which union and independent experts, insurance company officers and government representatives appeared.

KEEPING IT CLEAN—CIO Gen. Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg (left) and Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes, a member of the Ethical Practices Committee, confer on program for preventing racketeering in health, welfare and other funds.

Proposals Adopted

The program, which Goldberg said makes "policy in a field of paramount importance not only to the CIO as a whole, but to each affiliated union and to the 5.5 million members of the CIO," follows:

1. The trustees or administrators of health, welfare and pension plans of any kind have the obligation to make sure that maximum benefits are provided from the money available, with their administration meeting "the highest ethical standards" for handling of such funds.

2. All funds should be audited at least semi-annually by outside independent auditors.

3. The trustees or administrators should make a "full disclosure and report" to the beneficiaries at least annually, showing "detailed financial reports and audits which shall specify the salaries, expenses and fees paid . . . to whom paid, and how much and for what purpose."

4. Persons having full-time paid positions with unions or companies should not receive additional pay for acting as trustees or administrators of such funds.

5. When benefits are carried through insurance, a responsible insurance company should be selected by competitive bidding on the basis of the lowest net cost for benefits provided. Also, the company "should warrant that no fee has been paid directly or indirectly to any representative" of union or management.

6. Insurance companies should be required to file statements with trustees or administrators showing claim experience, commissions paid, to whom paid, retentions, and amounts of dividend received and to whom paid; this information should be made available to the beneficiaries.

7. Brokers performing no service should receive no commissions or other fee payments, with savings resulting from nonpayment of unearned commissions utilized for greater benefits. State laws requiring such payments should be repealed.

8. International unions should establish and enforce specific standards and conditions of performance incorporating the above recommendations; have expert advice available for negotiating and administering such programs; provide for both internal and independent audits by locals; train union representatives in the techniques and proper administration of programs; educate members as to the contents of the program and their rights under it; and act promptly to correct abuses when they occur.

Goldberg urged adoption of the committee plan on the ground that it was the result of "the most searching inquiry into the field to date."

"This is only the first report of the Standing Committee," he emphasized. "If this convention approves this report and authorizes continuation of the committee, the committee will make other reports. Probably the next will deal with a proposal for legislation in the field."

Unions Can Save On Welfare Funds

An estimate that union-administered health and welfare funds can be run at half the cost of those operated by insurance companies was voiced by Frank Rosenblum, CIO Clothing Workers secretary-treasurer.

Rosenblum said cost of the ACWA welfare program is 4.9% of total premiums collected. Similar coverage by private insurance companies, he said, runs as high as 12-14%.

The ACWA officer noted that its welfare fund now has $102 million in reserves.

Farm Union Chief Slaps Benson As Poor Shop Steward

THE FARMERS of the U. S. are represented in the Dept. of Agriculture by the owner of "the finest 18th century economic mind on the Washington scene today," Pres. James G. Patton of the National Farmers Union told the National CIO convention.

Patton declared that Sec. of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson would not make a very good bargaining agent for a labor union.

"But in a sense he is bargaining agent for some four to five million farm families," Patton went on. "Farm prices are made in Washington, and Congress and the Dept. of Agriculture make them.

"CONGRESS SETS a great deal of store by what the farmers' bargaining agent, the secretary of agriculture, has to say. This last year Mr. Benson seemed to argue that farmers were making too much money.

"Congress should, Mr. Benson continued, reduce the farmers' take-home pay. Not only that, but some 30 million acres of land should be taken out of production.

"Just how long would a CIO official last if he met with a bargaining committee and complained that the people he represented were making 90% of a fair wage, and should be cut to 75%?

"PARITY means equality, a fair price. And 90% of parity is nothing more or less than 90% of a fair price."

Patton said his group has adopted a slogan, "Farmers Union Fights Back" for the next years because of the "terrific beating" it took from the 83d Congress.

"We're going to fight back against the farm price flexers," he explained, "the false front farm organizations; against the rapidly forming American War Party, led by (Sens.) McCarthy (R. Wis.) and Knowland (R. Calif.)

COWBOY COSTUME—Pres. James G. Patton (left) of National Farmers Union and CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther meet Vernon Sandusky, 15-year-old winner of Kansas CIO Council's state-wide talent contest.

"We're going to fight the utility combines seeking to cripple our valley authorities and rural electrification programs; the union busters, and we're going to fight gutter politics with every resource at our command."

The fight against gutter politics, he said, "is an area where farmers and labor can well find a common ground," an area of education and information.

"Perhaps we should pool our resources to educate each other to our problems, our ways of life and our goals," he said.

"And when the gutter politicians take to the air and television waves with their small dogs and toothpaste smiles, perhaps we should follow, and soberly and frankly portray the issues as they are."

Patton recalled the tie-in between prosperity for farmers and workers which the CIO has long recognized. He urged the Eisenhower Administration to adopt a full employment program, which closely parallels that of the CIO, in order to bring about a $500 billion national economy with jobs for everybody.

Educational TV Stations Urged

The Federal Communications Commission was urged by the CIO convention to reserve all of the 251 channels for educational television, already designated for that purpose. A resolution also called on CIO councils and local unions to participate in the development of educational TV.

McCarthy Petition Lays A Goose Egg

The highly-publicized petition drive of "Ten Million Americans" for Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) was called off last week with a total of 2,281,000 signatures claimed by the sponsoring committee, which is headed by retired Army and Navy brass.

H.S.T. Backs Program To Conquer Poverty

Former Pres. Harry S. Truman sent this wire of greeting to the CIO convention to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther:

Please express my sincere regret that as much as I wanted to, I could not be with you for this meeting.

TRUMAN

I want to and I intend to help you in every way I can in the program to conquer hunger, ignorance and disease. The future of America as well as the future of the world depends upon the successful achievement of such an objective. You know very well my belief and attitude on this subject.

I send you my greetings and wishes for a successful meeting. Please give Mrs. Roosevelt my kindest regards and tell her that I wish I could be with her on the platform.

HARRY S. TRUMAN

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS

Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene Kelley, Ed Lashman.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII December 13, 1954 No. 50

Mrs. FDR Calls For Sanity, Courage In Atomic Era

A CHALLENGE to individual and group responsibility to meet the problems of war and peace in an atomic era with sanity and without fear was made to the convention by one of the CIO's best-loved friends, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

The widow of the wartime President and father of the New Deal was given a heart-warming welcome by delegates and guests.

At the end of her appeal for courage and understanding in meeting the known problems of the present and the unknown ones of the future, she received another ovation which attested to the affection and respect in which she is held.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she has been told by scientists that the potentialities of destruction which may be developed in another two years are so great that no sane ruler will make war because the world might be destroyed.

Try New Answers

If we are fortunate to avoid war, she went on, we must meet the problems of peace—and that calls for the attitude behind the New Deal and the Fair Deal, a willingness to try new answers to problems "when you were not sure any particular solution would be right."

"First, we have the great problem of choosing our leaders so that they act with sanity—and it takes courage today to keep us out of war," she said. "It takes courage to be willing to have patience and to try to work out decisions in a peaceful way.

"Then you have to look at the problems of peace. Labor has a great role to play. You are growing stronger and stronger, and with your strength you are getting more responsibility.

"You always have the responsibility each of us carries as a citizen in a democracy. But as a group, as you grow stronger, you have a greater responsibility for the policies of your nation, for what your nation does at home, and how it will develop in relation to its leadership in the world."

The responsibility is heavy because we did not look for world leadership, she said.

"We often do not realize," Mrs. Roosevelt went on, "that communism is fought here in the U. S. not only by having greater military power and greater economic power, but actually by the example we give in our own country of the way we handle our problems, the way we live."

"FIRST LADY OF THE WORLD"—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt waves a greeting to delegates and CIO Pres. Walter Reuther applauds her vigorous address.

She pointed out that the growth of labor's strength parallels the increase of U. S. influence in the world.

Thus, she went on, it becomes more and more important that labor regard "what happens at home as a demonstration of what can be done in a democracy by a sense of responsibility" in the individual—"always remembering that communism makes alluring promises, but that we have to demonstrate what we actually accomplish."

With peacetime use of atomic energy and automation, she said, we must meet "all kinds of things that will change conditions of our lives."

One phase of the solution, she believes, is a new education to meet the problems of a new world, an education that prepares Americans—adults and juveniles both—to live in a world in which their nation is a leader.

New Atomic Age

"The new atomic age is to some people a rather frightening thing," she observed. "Well, I think we have to think of the opportunities it will give us, of how we can plan and choose our leaders, how we can develop a greater sense, a growing sense, of social responsibility."

Mrs. Roosevelt expressed the hope that "in the future, there will be greater unity in labor and you can accomplish even more." She concluded by wishing "members of a great and strong group of people . . . the vision to imagine and see possibilities in the future, and the strength not to be afraid."

Civil Rights

Now Is The Time To Speed Up War On Bias

"THIS IS NOT the time for slowing down. Now is the time to accelerate our program against segregation."

That's what Thurgood Marshall, general counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the CIO convention.

He said that "a major job rests on organized labor" during the "final stages" of the fight against discrimination.

"The nearer we get to ultimate victory," Marshall warned, "the more we will find the opposition seeking to divide us and use sugar coated words to delay action.

"It is time," he also cautioned, "we realized that neither the CIO, organized labor in general, the Negro, the Jew, the Mexican nor any other minority group can exist alone. The only solution is to remove all race and caste as determining factors in any part of American life—and it can be done if we want it."

MARSHALL SAID that looking at the future was required by the Supreme Court ending segregation in public schools.

"If this decision is to be made a reality throughout this country individuals in local communities will have to make it so," he said.

Marshall hailed as helping "in this task" the grant of $75,000 by the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation to the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund. He said that this was one of the many ways the CIO has helped fight discrimination throughout the years.

THE CONVENTION later pledged "the total resources of the CIO to help implement this (the Supreme Court) decision in our local communities."

The civil rights resolution also urged:

- International unions and CIO councils "to accelerate a quick and peaceful transition to an unsegregated American educational community."
- Pres. Eisenhower to extend federal aids in housing only to those housing facilities that agree to a non-discrimination policy.
- Each CIO affiliate to make sure that the anti-discrimination provisions of contracts be administered vigorously.
- The Government Contracts Committee to use fully its resources to require fair employment practices by firms holding government contracts.

Federal FEPC Law Urged By Reuther At Auto Meet

A RENEWAL of the long-standing CIO demand for a federal fair employment practices code was voiced by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther at an Auto Workers' regional fair practices and civil rights conference during the National CIO convention in Los Angeles.

"The practice of discrimination is sharpest," said Reuther, who also is UAW-CIO president, "where the worker is denied the right to work because of the color of his skin.

"Negroes are not alone as victims of discrimination. We find that in this area, people of Spanish and Mexican descent are discriminated against—and this is equally bad.

"The ultimate answer will be found in federal legislation, an FEPC with the kind of teeth that can be enforced in every state."

The opinion of Pres. Eisenhower that fair employment practices are a responsibility of the states is "a convenient way to pass the buck," Reuther said. He explained that where discrimination is most vicious, "relief cannot be found on a state or local basis."

Not only is legislation necessary to combat job discrimination, Reuther told the conference, but education programs, like the safe driving campaigns which are supported by traffic laws, also are needed.

A BIG HAND—CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther joins in applause for Thurgood Marshall (center), general counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, while CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey adjusts the mike. Marshall urged intensification of anti-bias campaign.

Marshall Has A Word For Bigot Bowles

Pres. Bryant Bowles of the National Association for the Advancement of White People was characterized as "making a living" preying upon the bigotry and prejudice that is deep in a lot of people's minds."

He was thus described by General Counsel Thurgood Marshall of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "He is under suspended sentence right now in three cases in Maryland, and people still believe that he can give them leadership," Marshall said.

NAM Asks Tax Whack

"Button up your overcoat when the wind grows freezing." The National Association of Manufacturers has come out with its ideas on tax legislation, and they're designed to put the chill on any hopes of workers to get their exemptions raised and their income tax bill cut.

The place to start, the NAM said at its recent "Congress of American Industry" in New York, is up on top, 'natch.

The NAM wants whopping reductions in taxes paid by top income brackets and by corporations. It urged a five-year program for putting a federal income tax ceiling of 35% of income.

This 35% tax ceiling scheme of the NAM bears a close resemblance to the "millionaires' amendment" proposal.

State Councils Open Drive To Improve Jobless Pay

A KICK-OFF meeting to open a campaign to improve state unemployment compensation laws was held by the CIO Councils Dept. during the convention.

Executive Sec. Katherine P. Ellickson of the CIO Social Security Committee said aims of the drive include increasing the maximum payment to at least two-thirds of the worker's average wage and making the duration of payments at least 39 weeks.

The period of disqualification should be not more than four weeks, coverage of workers should be as broad as possible, and as a general rule experience rating should be eliminated.

It was brought out that time for improving the laws is running short, because 44 legislatures meet in 1955, many of them in January.

STATE CIO council leaders filled out questionnaires to determine the status of their efforts for improving the laws and how National CIO departments could help them in their campaigns.

Assistant Dir. Carl McPeak of the Councils Dept. presided. Participants in the discussion included Dir. Stanley Ruttenberg, CIO Education and Research Dept.; Hyman Bookbinder, chief, congressional research, CIO Legislative Dept.; and Paul Sifton, Washington legislative representative of the CIO Auto Workers.

WAVING A GREETING as convention opens are California CIO Sec.-Treas. John Despol, Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler, Pres. Walter P. Reuther and Los Angeles CIO Council Sec.-Treas. Albert T. Lunceford. "Welcome CIO" banners were on streets.

STAR SPANGLED Banner was sung by Roberta Linn.

PHILIPPINE mahogany gavel was presented to Pres. Reuther.

PRESIDENTS' WIVES—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt meets the wives of three veteran CIO unionists. From left: Mrs. Walter Reuther, Mrs. Bessie Hillman (widow of the late Sidney Hillman, long president of the Clothing Workers), Mrs. Roosevelt, and Mrs. James B. Carey.

Reuther's Keynote

'We Want Unity

By WALTER P. REUTHER
President of the CIO

WE MEET today in the same city and hall we were scheduled to meet in two years ago. But a great tragedy struck the CIO, and a great, good man, our beloved friend and dedicated leader, Philip Murray, was taken from our ranks.

In Atlantic City, it was with a heavy heart, filled with sadness, that I assumed the responsibilities that Philip Murray laid down when he passed away, and everyone in the CIO left the convention fully conscious of the fact that we had suffered an irreplaceable loss.

We had no more than dried our tears when tragedy followed tragedy, and we lost our good friend and fellow worker, the happy CIO warrior, Allan Haywood.

In a real sense, the only true and lasting and living memorial to these two great men is the CIO, is the admiration and affection and devotion and respect that dwells deep in the hearts and minds of millions of American workers.

Those are the kinds of monuments to which we want to dedicate ourselves, by building our movement stronger, by winning for our membership and for all people that better tomorrow that Philip Murray and Allan Haywood fought for and gave their lives for.

Next Cells

From CIO Pres. Reuther's keynote address:

We have said many times that when you find a corrupt labor leader, he ought to be kicked out of the labor movement and put in jail.

But we go farther than that. We believe that the employer who bribed the corrupt labor leader ought to occupy the next cell in the same jail.

And where insurance brokers are guilty of bribes and kickbacks, there ought to be a third cell reserved for them so that they can put the three of them in a row because they belong together.

★ ★ ★

Steps To Unity

I'm happy to report that in the past year, we have made substantial progress toward establishing a united labor movement.

The no-raiding pact was a historic step forward. The principle is the cardinal principle around which organic unity must be built—this principle around which we believe the architects of labor unity can work.

We in the CIO leadership want labor unity. We want labor unity not just in name but in fact and in substance. We shall work sincerely and in good faith and do everything within our power to bring about that kind of labor unity, because we have no vested interests in disunity.

We want an honorable principle basis for unity, and as we have said, we shall be unwilling to trade our basic principles for political expediency in the struggle for labor unity.

We want labor unity that will assure growth, not stagnation. We want labor unity that will mobilize greater resources, greater power, and we want that power used in greater dedication to the job of organizing the unorganized, building our unions stronger and giving more people the glorious opportunity to participate in building that stronger and better labor movement.

WALTER P. REUTHER

"What we want is good government, government with a heart instead of a calculating machine."

We pledge to this convention that we shall do everything humanly possible to bring such a sound, principled and honorable basis for labor unity about at the earliest possible time.

★ ★ ★

Ethical Practices

The past year has brought into focus another serious problem inside the labor movement. The question of unethical and corrupt practices on the part of certain anti-social elements that found their way into the American labor movement has been called to our attention.

I am proud to be able to join with other CIO leaders in saying that the CIO is clean, and I am equally proud to say we are going to keep it that way.

If there is corruption in the CIO, it is in a few isolated places that we haven't found yet. When we do find it, we will deal with it without fear or favor because we will not tolerate it.

The convention, I am confident, will take action to make it crystal clear not only to CIO members, but to the public generally, that we in the CIO will not tolerate Communists or crooks in the leadership of our movement.

We will either clean the house of American labor with a stiff, strong broom, or our enemies will try to clean it with an ax in an effort to destroy or weaken the labor movement.

★ ★ ★

Our Economy

Despite many real difficulties during the past year, I can report that CIO unions have made progress at the bargaining table. This progress has been made despite serious obstacles.

In many cases, CIO unions had to struggle on the picket line because socially irresponsible management groups, attempting to exploit the economic and political climate, resisted labor's just demands.

We in the CIO have said for many years that collective bargaining in a free society ought to be based upon economic facts, not economic power. But you will find many segments of American industry, many large corporations, who still prefer that bargaining be a contest of economic power rather than a joint exploration of economic facts.

We look at collective bargaining essentially as an instrument of broad social policy, and we will use our collective bargaining power in the interests of advancing those kinds of broad economic and social policies that come to grips with the basic problems of all the American people.

We say this not as a matter of rhetoric, we say it because we believe it; in a free society neither labor nor management in a true sense can make economic or social progress except as they work out collective bargaining decisions that reflect progress for the whole community.

★ ★ ★

Out Of Balance

We get in trouble in America because there is a dangerous imbalance between expanding productive power and our failure to expand purchasing power to keep abreast of our expanding productive powers.

That is why we have said that the demand for our guaranteed annual wage transcends the question of economic justice to the worker and his family, and deals with the basic principle of economic necessity in terms of our total expanding economy.

I would like to advise my good friends in the CIO that early in 1955, the UAW-CIO will have an opportunity to sit across the bargaining table with General Motors, Ford and other big corporations.

I want to say now, as we have said to our rank and file, we pledge to you that in these negotiations we will work harder and harder at the job we have to do in the vineyards of collective bargaining.

And we are confident that, because this demand for a guaranteed annual wage is both economically sound and morally right, in 1955 we will nail down a guaranteed annual wage plan in our basic industries.

★ ★ ★

Political Scene

During the last political campaign, CIO members demon-

'What's Good For Th

From CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther's keynote address:

We believe in a free society in a free economy. We don't argue with that. There ought to be a just reward and encouragement for initiative and incentive, but what we can't understand is why this becomes purely a one-way street.

We are at a complete loss to understand what kind of moral and mental gymnastics one must go through to justify economically and morally the r who makes $4 tive and the i year, but wh who makes $4 through colle with his fello a year, that be morally wrong

We believe what is good gander.

That Will Assure Growth'

'—There Is Plenty Of Work To Be Done'

From CIO Pres. Reuther's keynote address:

There is plenty of work to be done in America. There is just no logical reason why any American able and willing to work cannot have a job.

There are the housing needs; there are the school needs. On the medical front, on the problem of developing our resources, on social security, giving our people security and dignity in their old age, on minimum wages, increasing unemployment compensation—on all these things there is plenty of work.

But what happens? They say these are wonderful things, but we cannot afford them. Well, we can afford these things. The one thing we cannot afford is mass unemployment.

We wasted in the last 12 months $30 billions of economic wealth that we could have created if the unemployed had been fully employed.

If the unemployed had been fully employed, we could have built 500,000 $12,000 homes. We could have built new hospitals with 250,000 beds. We could have given our old people $200 a month for 12 months' social security. We could have doubled our educational budget. We could have spent $12 billion instead of $6 billion for education and we still would have had a lot of money left over to help fight communism by fighting poverty and hunger in a world where people are hungry.

strated a higher sense of citizenship responsibility than in any other political campaign.

I want to commend Brother Jack Kroll (director of the CIO-PAC) and the people of every level of the CIO for the great contribution they made during the last campaign, because what happened would not have happened if it had not been for the work and the dedication of thousands of CIO members doing PAC work.

We have said in CIO many times that politics is the people's business, and we believe that we gave real substance to that slogan during the last election.

We have said that politics is the practical housekeeping job of democracy and that if people want their house kept properly, then they must involve themselves in that practical housekeeping job by being active citizens.

We in the CIO are not interested in political power or patronage. What we want is good goverment, government with a heart instead of a calculating machine.

We want a government sympathetic and sensitive to the needs of the people; a government that will use its resources and power to see that every American gets an opportunity to share in the great abundance that we have; that every American, regardless of race or creed or color, will have that measure of dignity to which every citizen is entitled.

★ ★ ★

The Tragedy

From CIO Pres. Reuther's keynote address:

Instead of taking encouragement from what the U. S. Senate did, let us not be unmindful of the fact that the basic and serious problem in America is not Joe McCarthy but rather McCarthyism.

This evil, ugly, immoral political phenomenon that attempts to exploit people's fears and their hatreds and their hysterias is an instrument to gain political power.

The greatest tragedy of McCarthyism is not that Joe McCarthy has smeared innocent people, but that it has corrupted the intellectual and moral climate in America.

The Changing World

The American economy is freedom's greatest material asset.

What we do with it, how intelligently and effectively we mobilize its productive potential and how we gear that potential to the needs, the hopes and the aspirations of the people of America and throughout the world, can be the most decisive single factor in the struggle to preserve peace and freedom in the face of the threatened forces of Communist tyranny.

What we really need is to find a way to match our technical know-how with comparable human and social know-why. The great productive power of our economy, unrelated to human and moral values, is of no importance because power without morality is power without purpose.

What we need to do is to say that this great expanding power is going to be used for moral, human purposes . . . facilitating man's growth as a spiritual and cultural and social human being.

We work with the ICFTU (Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions), our brothers of the free labor movement of the world, because they are in the vanguard of this struggle to gear our economic resources to the practical struggle against poverty, hunger and human desperation. They are the vanguard of freedom's fighters against Communist tyranny.

The Administration just doesn't understand the dynamics of this changing world. That is why we have to constantly fight to get policies that reflect the realities of the world situation.

I am confident, although the challenge is great, that we shall be equal to the opportunity, and together with people of good will, we can build a better world in the image of peace and freedom, social justice and human dignity, and in the image of human brotherhood.

e Goose—'

t of a corporation executive 000 a year to have the initiaentive to make $5000 more a a worker in these factories a year exercises his incentive e bargaining, in conjunction orkers, and tries to get $5000 mes economically unsound and incentive and in initiative, but r the goose, is good for the CONGRESS made "a terrible mistake when it adopted the evil provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act," CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg told the convention.

Debate on the Taft-Hartley Act was featured by sharp criticism of the Eisenhower Administration's labor policy or lack of it.

"I think the hour is late for Pres. Eisenhower to make up his mind as to what the labor policy of his Administration is, and I think by the time he makes up his mind, perhaps we will have another Administration," Goldberg said.

He offered a suggestion that the Administration listen to its Secretary of Labor, who, he said, ought to express government labor policy.

"I don't think executive policy is made by a debating society between a Secretary of Labor charged with . . . administering his department and a Secretary of Commerce who consistently is manifesting an anti-labor attitude . . .," Goldberg continued.

Action On T-H

He added that if the Administration decides to accept the "sensible suggestion" made by Sec. Mitchell in his denunciation of states' right-to-work laws, it only has to repeal the provision of Taft-Hartley which invites the states to pass more restrictive laws.

The CIO continued its press for repeal of Taft-Hartley and called for a sound and fair labor law based on the policies of the Wagner Act.

"All of us were shocked," CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther said, when Mitchell's statement at the convention was repudiated by the White House the next day.

"If Sec. of Commerce Weeks stands before a convention of the National Association of Manufacturers and states a policy, you will not find that he is repudiated by the White House," he said.

"We have a right to know why the Secretary of Labor in a department affecting the welfare . . . of more Americans than any other department of our government cannot also be a first-class Cabinet member," Reuther went on. "I believe the people of America ought to recognize the political fraud that is taking place in Washington. The Secretary of Labor is not a member in the Cabinet."

Another resolution scored the NLRB for "the rash of anti-union policy changes" it has made and its "irresponsible" legislating through administrative action contrary to the plain intent of Congress. The board, it said, "has forfeited the confidence of labor and the public."

GUEST SECTION—The Hotel Statler's convention ballroom was crowded daily with delegates and guests, with women predominating in the group. In center foreground is Mrs. George DeNucci, wife of CIO regional director in Ohio-West Virginia.

A FAMILY group paused for the cameraman at convention.

TELEVISION and newsreel photographers were on hand.

CONGRATULATIONS—Sec.-Treas Frank Rosenblum of the CIO Clothing Workers receives congratulations of his fellow CIO vice presidents and other union leaders after his re-election. Others in group include Vice Pres. James G. Thimmes of the Steelworkers, Pres. L. S. Buckmaster of the Rubber Workers, and Executive Vice Pres. Hyman Blumberg of the ACWA.

'Right To Scab' Laws Flatly Opposed By Mitchell

STATE right to scab laws are opposed "categorically" by Sec. of Labor Mitchell, he told the National CIO convention.

"I believe that when employers and unions representing a majority of their employes agree on a union shop," he said, "they should have the right to have one."

Commenting on Mitchell's address, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther said the "test of the Administration's good faith" is the way in which they seek to amend Taft-Hartley provisions which encourage the open shop laws.

Reuther noted the Administration "had no responsibility" on State legislation. "If they mean it," he added, "they will amend T-H, for they do have responsibility in the federal field."

Opposition to such State legislation was one of several tasks Mitchell listed for the labor movement in the year ahead. He pointed out that 17 states, 12 of them in the South, have passed laws barring union shop agreements.

"They call these 'right to work' laws, but that is not what they really are," he said.

"I hope that the states which have these laws will give them further consideration. If they do, I believe, they will find that they do more harm than good.

"In the first place, they do not create any jobs at all. In the second place, they result in undesirable and unnecessary limitations upon the freedom of working men and women and their employers to bargain collectively and agree upon conditions of work. Thirdly, they restrict union security and thereby undermine the basic strength of labor organizations."

Employer Drive

Mitchell described as "disquieting" reports that national and state organizations are being formed to promote or extend right to scab laws.

"Good relations between labor and management must be developed at the plant level," he added.

"Certainly an organized effort by employers to promote state laws undermining union security is not conducive to harmonious working relations between employers and their employes."

Among other tasks Mitchell listed for labor and government are elimination of the "last vestiges" of Communist-dominated unionism; vigorous enforcement of laws like the Fair Labor Standards and Public Contracts Acts and improvements in unemployment insurance, workmen's compensation and unemployment insurance standards.

He reviewed the long legal fight to raise minimum wages for textile workers under the Public Contracts Act.

Other areas he listed for action were the strengthening of state labor departments; expansion of safety and apprenticeship programs; improvements in child labor laws; action against discrimination in employment, and consideration of the employment problems of older workers.

"It is also encouraging," Mitchell continued, "that both the CIO and the AFL are seeking to admonishment that there is no room for crooks in the CIO shows clearly where the CIO stands on this question."

CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther said he was shocked by Pres. Eisenhower's "repudiation" of Mitchell's stand. "It is obvious that Mitchell is in the cabinet merely as convenient window dressing to make workers think they have a voice in government decisions."

"CATEGORICAL" OPPOSITION to state right to scab laws was voiced by Sec. of Labor Mitchell, shown chatting afterwards with CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther. The Labor Dept. head also urged improvement in unemployment compensation benefits, among other recommendations.

assure proper administration of welfare funds.

"I am pleased that a number of union officials have endorsed Pres. Eisenhower's recommendation of last January that there be legislation 'to protect and conserve these funds for the millions of working men and women who are the beneficiaries.'

Hails Welfare Action

"I am more pleased, however, by the prompt and efficient way in which the CIO is investigating possible maladministration of welfare funds. Pres. Reuther's

Disavowed

Pres. Eisenhower disavowed Sec. of Labor Mitchell's opposition to state right to scab laws when questioned at the White House press conference last week.

The President said he knew of Mitchell's belief that there was a paradox in such laws, but that the latter's speech before the National CIO convention did not represent Administration policy. Cabinet members, he said, have a right to present their own views while a policy is being formulated.

Getting Worse

The job situation took a turn for the worse during October, the combined report of the Labor and Commerce Depts. showed last week. Unemployment increased by 79,000 to 2,893,000, the report disclosed, while employment declined by 410,000 to 61,731,000.

Drive Urged For Better State Laws

"POLITICAL ACTION is indivisible," the CIO convention declared in calling for a double-barreled program in the states.

In a series of resolutions, CIO pledged:

1. A fight for repeal of existing "right to scab" and other state anti-labor laws, and to block further employer moves to hamper unionization.

2. A call on state and local CIO councils and political action committees "to apply the lessons of the 1954 campaign and to mobilize their resources on behalf of progressive state laws."

3. To participate to the fullest extent in more than 600 city and county elections scheduled for 1955—a preliminary to the next presidential campaign.

The "right to scab" laws—outlawing all forms of union security—which now are on the books in 17 states are a direct result of Taft-Hartley sections atomizing labor relations.

SINCE 1947, when T-H was enacted, there have been two waves of state action to curb unions. In all cases they take advantage of the T-H provision which allows state laws to be more restrictive against union security.

All of these state laws, and the parallel willingness of many local courts to grind out anti-strike injunctions, the CIO warned, "mean only one simple thing: the destruction of union power so that an employer can pay his workers less for the same work than organized workers are getting in other states."

While emphasizing legislative action on labor measures, the convention pointed out that the improvement of unemployment and workmen's compensation, taxes, school funds, highway construction, civil rights and health and safety are of equal concern.

AS RESULT of the 1954 elections, labor's legislative efforts in the states will be aided by the election of liberal governors in eight states and a larger number of pro-labor lawmakers.

However, CIO warned, the legislatures always "have been the particular target of special interest groups" and this will be truer than ever since the Republicans lost control of the 84th Congress.

A Million Exhaust Jobless Benefits

Remember the Republican cry, from early last winter and on through the spring and summer, that everything was entirely o.k. with the U. S. economy?

Now that the election is over, the GOP Administration itself is revealing figures supporting CIO's year-long warnings on the danger of growing unemployment.

From Labor Sec. Mitchell himself came the revelation—more than six months after the fact — that some 1.3 million workers were unemployed for such long periods in the first quarter of this year that they exhausted all claims to unemployment compensation benefits.

Labor's '20 Century Brotherhood' Hailed At Church-Union Meet

"LABOR unions are the 20th century expression" of man's age-long aspiration for brotherhood, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther told some 250 clergymen, union leaders and seminarians at Los Angeles.

They were attending a luncheon meeting sponsored by the National Religion and Labor Foundation and the Los Angeles Religion and Labor Council during the CIO convention.

Reuther traced the idea of "living together" from its more primitive form to that of the present nations.

"Now we are trying to live together throughout the world," he said. "We are trying to harness material values to feeding and clothing mankind, and thus facilitate man's growth as a moral, spiritual and cultural being.

"The CIO is hated because it seeks to give substance to the ideal of brotherhood. Together we can go out into the dark corners of America, preach the good gospel and fight to make it live."

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who is also president of the CIO Electrical Workers, paid tribute to Joseph Schlossberg, former secretary-treasurer of the CIO Clothing Workers, who was the first labor co-chairman of NRLF.

Carey said that at Schlossberg's request, he urged aid to Israel, an ideal which he saw realized when he visited that nation.

"We may all have to die before our time" unless mankind learns to cooperate, according to CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe. "We must learn to live, plan and work together around the world," he said. "Nothing else will do."

CHURCH-LABOR cooperation was theme of luncheon of National Religion and Labor Foundation and Los Angeles Religion and Labor Council. From left, LARLC Pres. George Pratt; CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey; Dir. John Ramsay, CIO community relations; Joseph Schlossberg, former NLRF labor co-chairman, and CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe talk over various programs.

Advice From Other Side Of The Street

CIO editors and public relations directors got some advice from the other side of the street —Wall Street, that is—when the labor correspondent of The Wall Street Journal addressed a pre-convention session of the CIO Press & Public Relations Conference.

Stephen Galpin, a Washington staffman of the Journal, spoke informally and off the record on the pros and cons of labor's public relations.

Other conference speakers included Jack Kroll, CIO-PAC national director, and Hyman Bookbinder of the CIO Legislative Dept. Editor Ray Davidson of The International Oil Worker is the conference chairman.

Congress

Morse Urges 'Massive Retaliation' On Jobs

A PLEA for continued labor support for a congressional program of "massive retaliation" against unemployment and recession was made by Sen. Morse (Ind. Ore.) in a speech that received enthusiastic support from the CIO convention.

Morse warned that as winter approaches, unemployment again is growing to serious proportions —and that government has a responsibility for doing something about it.

"During the past two years, the executive branch has closed its eyes to these problems," he said. "The Republican leadership in Congress saw no further than its closed lids.

The Blindfold Era

"With a Democratic Congress, we no longer have a case of the blind leading the blind.

"Put another way, the federal government is no longer monopolized by those whose vision is so selective they cannot recognize unemployed human beings, but only see bird dogs and kennel dogs."

He said the economic philosophy and programs of Pres. Eisenhower, Sec. of Commerce Weeks and Sec. of the Treasury Humphrey "have been devoted to pulling plums out of the national pie for big business and the banking fraternity."

"Weeks and Humphrey had that job in private life," he added, "and just can't get out of the habit. The only solution is to get them out of office."

Morse recalled that in the 83rd Congress it was the Democrats, with whom he cooperated, who worked for tax relief for moderate and low income families.

Tax Fight Praised

"The fight will be waged again," he promised. "The CIO worked hard at the grassroots to put the program across. It was defeated by a handful of Republicans. We must win it in the 84th Congress."

He called for lower individual income taxes; reduction and elimination of "consumption-depressing excise taxes — the national sales tax in disguise"; a "substantial" increase in the minimum wage; higher and longer unemployment compensation benefits, and a public works program.

The Oregonian commended the CIO for informing the public on these problems, and especially for aiding the Pacific Northwest in the fight for maximum development of the Hells Canyon dam site. This assistance, he said, helped elect Richard Neuberger as Senator from Oregon, first Democrat to win the post in 40 years.

"Labor did a tremendous job in Oregon and elsewhere in the elections—and the nation will be the beneficiary," he said.

Turning to international affairs, Morse warned that "hot heads will not thaw out the cold war," and that "we cannot go it alone."

"While the certainty of war may seem less trying than the constant tension of continued, long-term resistance," he said, "it is no solution for anyone.

"If the cold war is to be won, it must be won on the economic front. Let me say to the Secretary of the Treasury, who reportedly is opposing a new economic aid program for Asia, that human life and hope cannot be subordinated to a balance sheet."

Tribute

Sen. Morse paid tribute to former Pres. Truman for having "done more to stop the danger of communism around the world than all his Republican detractors put together."

"PLUM PULLERS"—Oregon's Sen. Wayne Morse receives congratulations of CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther after address charging Eisenhower Administration has "devoted itself to pulling plums out of the national pie for big business and the banking fraternity." CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey applauds at right, while PAC Dir. Jack Kroll watches.

Monopolies Grab For Atomic Rule; CIO Raps Power Give-Aways

OBJECTION to the efforts of a few monopolistic corporations to get a stranglehold on atomic energy patents was voiced by the CIO convention.

Similar blasts were directed at Eisenhower Administration giveaway policies in the electric power and natural resources fields.

"Until the most economic methods of use for the benefit of all the people have been determined," the resolution said, "we believe all patents in the field of atomic energy must be held by the federal government."

The convention called upon Congress to repeal those portions of the atomic give-away law passed by the 83rd Congress relating to patents, the Dixon-Yates contract and the isolationist restrictions for developing international cooperation in atomic energy.

THE CIO committee on Power, Atomic Energy and Resources Development was instructed to consult with scientists and experts to get information on the use and control of atomic energy for industrial, non-military purposes.

The significant contributions made by CIO in the fields of regional development and conservation of natural resources were marked by the convention in noting the organization's entry to these fields 10 years ago.

CONTINUED SUPPORT for a strong public and cooperative power movement was pledged, despite what a resolution noted was "increasingly heavy attack" since the advent of the Eisenhower Administration.

Opposition, similar to that voiced at previous conventions, was voiced by the CIO Utility Workers to the public power development features of the resolution.

Harold J. Straub, UWUA vice president and organization director, argued that public power should be supported only when utility needs are "beyond the capacity of private industry."

The UWUA spokesman contended that public power agencies deny collective bargaining rights and union recognition to their workers, and said "we don't want our people to have disqualifications and second class citizenship."

Dixon-Yates Deal Legality Doubted

"Substantial doubts" about legality of the Dixon-Yates contract—by which the Administration seeks to move private power operations into the TVA area—have been voiced by the State of Tennessee and three municipal power districts. Their brief was presented to the Securities & Exchange Commission.

CIO's Goals In The New Congress For 'Peace, Freedom, Security'

ENACTMENT by Congress of a program "aimed at peace, freedom and security for all Americans and for all the world" was urged by the CIO convention. Highlights of the legislative resolution are:

Program To Implement Employment Act Of 1946

Replacement of the Taft-Hartley Act with "a fair and just labor relations law," because "a strong labor movement is a powerful incentive for economic growth," modernization of unemployment insurance, and a fair tax bill to provide higher personal exemptions and the closing of tax loopholes.

Raising the minimum wage to at least $1.25 an hour; repealing the Fulbright Amendment to the Public Contracts Act; creating a public works program and a farm program "geared to a full economy;" re-establishing a federal agency to aid small business, and legislating for a larger U. S. Merchant Marine.

Program To Provide For General Welfare

"Maintenance of our natural resources for all the people, not for a privileged few;" increased public housing, with the removal of present restrictions; funds to end the present school room shortage and enactment of Sen. Hill's (D. Ala.) "oil for education" proposal; improvement of social security "to meet changing needs;" and "a national health plan, including national health insurance."

Program To Strengthen Democracy

Civil rights legislation such as a fair employment practices law, outlawing poll taxes and lynching, and implementation of the Supreme Court's decision barring segregation in the schools; liberalization of immigration policy by legislation and administration; statehood for Hawaii and Alaska, and home rule for the District of Columbia; strengthening the civil service system, and continuation of the present Selective Service Act, with inequities eliminated.

Program To Resist Communist Imperialism

"Adequate protection of our national security, regardless of costs;" a foreign policy with a reasonable balance between military aid and economic and technical aid, strengthening of the United Nations, and extension of international trade programs, with enactment of legislation "to ameliorate any harm resulting affected workers, areas, industries."

Social Security

The nation cannot be content with accomplishments already achieved in social security protection, the convention declared.

It called on Congress to enact further improvements in federal safeguards which will "adequately protect" all Americans against penury in old age or after the death of the family breadwinner, long-term disability, temporary sickness or injury, unemployment, and the cost of medical care.

Housing

A housing program with a goal of two million new homes a year for 20 years, including a minimum of 200,000 new units of public housing for low income families each year, was urged in a five-point housing program that won unanimous endorsement of the convention.

The resolution also urged more aggressive local and federal action to clear slums and replace them with modern housing and community facilities, but warned that "the first concern" be the relocation of families displaced by such programs.

It called for reactivation of the Housing Act of 1949 to spur public housing construction, and pledged support of a program based on lower down payments and interest rates and longer mortgage terms to make housing available to families of moderate income.

UMT

The Universal Military Service and Training Act of 1951, and the experience of the country under the draft, were reviewed by the convention, which resolved that:

- The CIO opposes the institution of any form of universal military training.
- The CIO supports continuation of Selective Service as now operating for as long as it is necessary.
- The CIO will constantly and vigorously work for fair and equal treatment for all citizens subject to Selective Service.

National Defense

Short of agreement on international control of atomic weapons and honorable settlement of difficulties between Russia and the free world, the convention urged that:

- The federal government take the people into its confidence and "explain" the nation's defense requirements.
- The federal government make every effort to meet defense requirements, regardless of difficulties, instead of measuring defense expenditures against revenue receipts.
- The industrial base of national defense be broadened so as to give smaller businesses defense contracts and experience in defense production.

Butler Picked As Demo Chief

Paul M. Butler of South Bend, Ind., was elected chairman of the Democratic National Committee at a meeting in New Orleans. He succeeds Stephen Mitchell.

Labor's World

There Was International Flavor To Parley

INTERNATIONAL TONE of the convention was characterized by exhibit of Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions (left), being inspected by a couple of delegates. A group of Latin Americans, typical of visitors from many foreign nations, is seen (center) listening to a translation of the proceedings, while at right CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Pres. Walter P. Reuther bid a goodbye to Sir Archibald McDonald Gordon (center), the world's first labor attache, who is going home after 13 years of service at the British Embassy in Washington.

Bold Action In Foreign Affairs Demanded To End World Fears

BOLD ACTION in the Eisenhower Administration's foreign program was demanded by the National CIO convention as the only way to recover the ground lost in the last two years.

It was in January, 1953, delegates recalled in a broad foreign policy resolution, that the then incoming Administration adopted what it called a policy of "seizing the initiative," and "promptly lost the initiative in both Southeast Asia and Europe."

The convention maintained a U. S. foreign policy must be based on the "decent aspirations" of people everywhere. These it listed as the desire to live in peace, friendship and harmony with other nations, "working in harmony to raise living standards, to promote freedom and to achieve personal security."

"INSTEAD of progressing in that direction," the resolution held, "the Administration in its first 23 months achieved an impressive record for vacillating and contradictory policies.

"Threatening some of those we need as allies, ignoring others, these policies at once confused America and our friends abroad, and gave comfort and advantage to the enemies of democracy."

The delegates rapped some Republicans, such as Senate Leader Knowland (R. Calif.), for playing into the hands of the Communists, who are attempting to isolate us from the rest of the world.

"CIO welcomes recent post-election evidence of a new willingness by the Administration to establish a bipartisan foreign policy," the resolution said, "and to turn its back on the handful of military adventurers who would risk throwing the U. S. into preventive war.

"Such an affirmative program for peace, freedom and security can win the support of the peoples of the world."

IN A COMPANION resolution, the delegates reaffirmed CIO support of the United Nations and its specialized agencies, and called for strengthening the world body so it will be strong enough effectively to take collective action for peace.

The convention called for greater support for the "greatly needed and constructive activities" of the specialized agencies, particularly the Intl. Labor Organization, and expressed continued support for the work of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions at the UN.

Tunisian Warns On 'Half Measures'

Tunisian workers are faced with three basic problems—French colonialism, communism, and the fight against all prejudices, Ahmed Ben-Salah, secretary-general of the Tunisian General Federation of Labor, told the CIO Executive Committee at a luncheon during the convention.

Ben-Salah, a fraternal delegate from his union, said the new French North African policy under Premier Mendes-France "cannot possibly succeed if it limits itself to half-measures designed simply to gain time."

World's First Labor Attache Leaves U. S. After 13 Years

A MODERN social pioneer, Sir Archibald McDonald Gordon, the first person in the world ever to serve as a labor attache, is leaving Washington after more than 13 years of service in that post at the British Embassy.

Despite his title, he is familiarly known as "Archie" to hundreds of CIO members and leaders whose conventions he has attended and whose homes he has visited as a friend. His pioneering role he lightly dismisses as that of a "guinea pig."

Since he was named to the newly created post of labor attache by the late Prime Minister Ernest Bevin of Great Britain, in 1942, he has seen the labor attache program expanded in his own country and adopted by most other industrial nations, including the U. S.

A barrister-at-law, he had been doing manpower mobilization work in Britain's war effort.

"I shall go back to England with at least some knowledge of the American people and their organizations, and I hope I shall be a faithful reporter of the way of life, the aims and ideals of Americans."

Gordon attended every National CIO convention since he came to this country. At Los Angeles, he was the guest of the officers at a farewell luncheon.

Israel Praised By Reuther As 'Great Democratic Bastion'

PRAISE for Israel as "this great democratic bastion of the Middle East" was voiced by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther in a message to the 31st convention of the National Committee for Labor Israel.

In a message to the recent New York conference, which was read by CIO Vice Pres. Michael J. Quill, Reuther said:

"We count as our friends all who aid this great democratic bastion of the Middle East in its continuing fight for national survival; for prosperity; for security; for brotherhood; for peace.

"The achievements of the State of Israel and of Histadrut (the Israeli labor federation) have won the admiration of all who truly believe in democracy. We are confident that in the years ahead these successes will be multiplied many-fold."

Quill, president of the CIO Transport Workers, condemned current policies of the Republican Administration in the Middle East. He charged that the State Dept. "spoon-feeds the Arab landlords and kowtows to countries with oil."

A report on the recent visit of CIO and AFL unionists to Israel was presented by Harry Block, vice president of the CIO Electrical Workers and president of the Pennsylvania CIO Council.

Arming Arabs Hit By CIO As A Threat To Israel

"ANGRY opposition" was voiced by the convention to the policy of the Eisenhower Administration of arming the Arab nations.

This sentiment was expressed in a resolution which reaffirmed CIO's solidarity with the people of Israel and Histadrut, that nation's trade union movement.

"To supply arms to Israel's enemies in the face of their declared objective of wiping her from the face of the earth, is to seriously weaken the cause of democracy in the Middle East," the resolution said.

It urged the U. S. to use the United Nations to obtain negotiations between Israel and the Arab nations to establish peace and expand the Point Four program in the Middle East.

The convention praised Histadrut for raising living standards, receiving Arabs as members, developing cooperative housing projects and health activities, vocational training and educational and cultural programs.

New Report

The United States has a "tremendous stake" in Israel, according to four CIO leaders who recently returned from visiting that nation.

They tell why in the new pamphlet "We Saw Israel." The visitors were Vice Pres. Harry Block of the Electrical Workers, who also is secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania CIO Council; Vice Pres. Ray Dryer, Communications Workers; Sec.-Treas. Albert T. Lunceford, Los Angeles CIO Council, and IUE Vice Pres. William Snoots.

TRIBUTE TO ISRAEL—Vice Pres. Harry Block of CIO Electrical Workers reported on recent Israel trip at session of American Trade Union Council for Histadrut. Seated at right (in background) is Joseph Schlossberg, chairman of the National Committee for Labor Israel.

CIO on ABC
Monday thru Friday
John W. Vandercook
AND THE NEWS

Political Action

CIO Urges Vigorous, Independent Work

By FRED ROSS

"THE CIO is not a tail to the Democratic kite," CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther told the convention in a spirited debate over political action.

Reuther rebuffed a plea for a labor third party, but called for a "basic political realignment in America."

His remarks were in reply to Vice Pres. Michael J. Quill, who said that "we should give serious consideration to building up a third party."

Quill, who is also Transport Workers president and head of the New York City CIO Council, said "the ring that runs Tammany" decided in favor of Averell Harriman over Rep. Roosevelt for the Democratic nomination for New York's governor. (The New York State CIO Council first backed Roosevelt, but supported Gov.-elect Harriman after his nomination.)

'A Practical Job'

Answering assertions that CIO is the captive of the Democratic Party, Reuther said "it is not our fault that it takes a microscope to find a Republican who is willing to support the platform and fight on the issues we support."

"What we have got to recognize," he said, "is that politics, just like collective bargaining, is not an exact science. It is a practical job. You can only win political campaigns by building political forces in the neighborhoods, in the precincts, in the counties and in the states.

"In Europe where you had society developed along fixed political lines," he said, "labor parties are a natural political expression because of the highly fixed class society.

"In America where social groups are in flux we do not have this rigid class structure. A labor party would commit the American political system to the same narrow class structure upon which the political parties of Europe are built.

MICHAEL J. QUILL
They took opposite sides . . .

"What we are trying to do is to pull like political forces together and try to build these forces into the kind of political structure so that we will have the answer to this question:

"Do the people believe in a government that wants to use its power to meet the welfare of all the people, or, on the other hand, do they want a government that believes that to help the few is the only way to help the many?"

During the discussion Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey of the CIO Auto Workers said:

"I believe that we can make the greatest progress at the present time by continuing the policies of CIO, endorsing the best qualified candidates for office, by analyzing each individual political situation.

"I believe that we can only solve the broad social questions of our time by increasing our political activities, by intensifying our political education, by doing a better job of organization on the ward and precinct basis in every section of the country where we have members, by more clearly bringing these issues to our people.

The Job To Do

"The kind of domestic programs and policies we have, the kind of foreign policy that we have, depends to a great extent on the kind of job we do back in our own neighborhoods in the election and selection of candidates to Congress and to other parts of our government.

"And I say to you that CIO has done a good job this past year. We have made progress, but we still have a long, long way to go."

Like Mazey, PAC Dir. Jack Kroll, who was the first to speak on the resolution, said he believes that American voters are growing more politically mature. He said that increased ballot splitting in this year's election "means that the people of America are demanding performance as well as promise from their candidates."

JACK KROLL
. . . on the question of PAC.

"And it means," Kroll said, "that political parties in America are going to have to work harder and work better to hold the allegiance of the voters. We are growing up—politically speaking—and I think it is fair to say that we in the CIO have contributed to this process."

He said that in the November election farmers, like workers, "voted their economic interests. Those who had been hard hit by the agricultural policies of the Eisenhower Administration voted against Republicans in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and other states."

'54 Gains Listed

Political gains listed by Kroll included 21 congressional seats picked up by Democrats, Democratic control of one or both houses in five state legislatures, eight Republican governors defeated by Democrats and three reactionary Democrat governors replaced by liberal Democrats.

"Let me now turn to the political job ahead," he said. "Next year in over 600 cities and counties there will be local elections.

"They offer CIO citizens splendid opportunities to build our political organizations, to make alliances with other public spirited groups, to demonstrate our interest in the local issues that for many citizens are the yardstick of government."

Big Business Failed In '54 Vote Despite High Pressure Drive

BIG BUSINESS failed to achieve its major political objectives in the recent elections, according to a series of resolutions on politics and political action at the CIO convention.

Despite the mobilization of press, radio and television, and the exploitation of the prestige and personal popularity of Pres. Eisenhower, a number of liberal senators and representatives escaped the political hatchet aimed at them by corporate interests, the convention said.

This "conspicuous failure" was laid to the Administration's inability to maintain a full employment-full production economy, the give-away program, tax relief handouts to the wealthy, inattention to the problems of the farmer and small businessman and surrender of the "high moral leadership of the free forces in the world."

"Many of the races were decided by a margin of one vote per precinct or less," one resolution said, "which makes even more emphatic the necessity of year-round activity directed towards registration. No individual can say that his vote or failure to vote did not influence the course of the election."

THE MANY CIO members who engaged in the political life of the nation were saluted for their patriotism and good citizenship. CIO-PAC Dir. Jack Kroll, CIO unions and councils, regional directors and members were commended for their work "to raise the standards of government to higher levels of public service and responsibility."

The recent campaign, another resolution said, saw a "further deplorable and dangerous deterioration in political ethics."

Honest and vigorous presentation of the facts and reasonable debate of the issues was supplanted by the Republican Party with "the use of innuendo and insinuation and deliberate propagation of half-truths and outright falsehoods."

CIO DEPLORED this tactic and called upon both major parties to resist the practice of impugning the motives, patriotism and loyalty of their opponents. It called on the new Congress to investigate the use of such unethical practices and to take adequate measures to curb them.

Another resolution called for abolition of the electoral college system of electing the President and the substitution of direct popular vote. Other electoral reforms called for included democratic election of congressional committee chairmen.

The Women's Angle

New Spirit Speeds Growth Of Auxiliaries

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

A GROUP of women representing around 10,000 CIO housewives held their own convention at another hotel in Los Angeles, while the CIO convention met at the Statler.

No spotlights glared in the eyes of speakers, no band played, no long press table crowded with reporters stretched across the hall.

Yet the 13th annual convention of the National CIO Auxiliaries indicated that the organized women folk of CIO men show promise of a developing importance that far exceeds their present numbers. For a new spirit is moving among CIO housewives these days.

"The men can't gripe about the way women voted in '54," Esther Murray, National PAC-CIO representative told the Auxiliaries delegates. "There is no doubt this time that they were a positive factor in helping elect labor-endorsed candidates."

DURING THE campaign in Oregon, for example, PAC women volunteers made 78,000 telephone calls to union families that were undoubtedly a factor in the election of a pro-labor Senator, Mrs. Murray said.

"It's nonsense for people to say that women aren't effective in helping turn out the vote. Women have a very special talent in this field and should be trained to work effectively."

To help women learn how to function better as political workers, Mrs. Murray recommended that the Auxiliaries members try to get the unions and councils with which they are affiliated to set up training centers, or institutes, where they can learn the "do's and don't" of telephone campaigns, house meetings, precinct work and other political techniques.

A LEGISLATIVE program endorsed union label buying, called for an improved mental health program, better housing and recreation for the aged, urged support for the National Association for Retarded Children.

The Auxiliaries mourned the recent death of Mrs. Bertha Perrin, seretary-treasurer. Mrs. Lillian Sherwood, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was unanimously re-elected president. Acting Sec.-Treas. Minnie Zoller, of Beaumont, Tex., was named to a full term, while Mrs. Evelyn Smith, of Warren, O., was elected executive vice president.

MAKING A POINT—Mrs. Esther Murray, CIO-PAC representative, talks about women and politics at convention of National CIO Auxiliaries. Seated (from left) are Mrs. Lillian Sherwood, president; Mrs. Minnie Zoller, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Evelyn Smith, executive vice president.

PAC Work By Women Is Praised

WOMEN'S role in political activities won new acclaim in a resolution adopted at the CIO convention.

Failure to fully mobilize the women of CIO in the 1952 campaign was at least partially overcome in the recent elections, with the result that some marginal races were won by CIO-backed candidates.

The convention directed CIO-PAC to continue to strengthen its program of integrating the family voter into the CIO political action program, with emphasis on developing women as skilled workers in building alert and responsible citizenship.

Resolutions

CIO Urges Civil Liberties 'Counter-Attack'

A CALL for a "counter-attack on the civil liberties front," against demagogues who seek to subvert basic liberties, was sounded by the National CIO convention.

With "renewed dedication to freedom and to victory in the cold war," the delegates offered a four-point program as the springboard for such a counter-attack:

1. Appointment of a joint subcommittee by the House and Senate Judiciary Committees to investigate infractions of civil liberties, and to recommend ways of combatting them.

2. A review by the joint committee of all congressional legislation dealing with the Communist problem to insure that federal authorities have all the powers they need to deal with espionage and subversion, and that all laws limiting what people can think and say be earmarked for repeal.

3. Adoption by Congress of a code of fair procedure, restricting investigations to their proper functions, and assuring every one appearing before a congressional committee of a fair opportunity to tell his side of the story.

4. Reinforcement of the present federal ban on wiretapping.

The resolution pointed out that the Communist movement poses no serious threat against the government, but rather serves as a recruiting ground for spies and perhaps saboteurs, and, hence, is a matter for police action.

It called congressional outlawing of the Communist Party "a sign of weakness rather than of strength." It declared that the branding and wrecking of "Communist-infiltrated unions," part of the Communist Control Act of 1954, "a dangerous first step toward state control of all unions."

Immigration

The convention noted "some disposition" toward a more generous attitude on immigration policy by Congress, but charged the State Dept. and Sec. of State Dulles have "largely nullified" such liberalizations. The delegates:

- Reaffirmed the CIO's stand for a liberal immigration policy, with the necessary revision of the Immigration and Nationality Act. of 1952.
- Demanded that the Administration and State Dept. administer the Refugee Relief Act of 1952 "as Congress intended."
- Urged that the joint congressional committee, set up under the Immigration and Nationality Act, fulfill its responsibility by reviewing the act's administration and recommending revisions.

Puerto Rico

The convention hailed political developments that have given Puerto Rico self-government, but warned that economic advances have not kept pace despite "impressive gains" won through activities of the CIO and its affiliates. It renewed the CIO's pledge to bring Puerto Rican workers the benefits of militant, democratic unionism, and:

- Urged the U. S. to recognize its continuing responsibility to promote the welfare of the Puerto Rican people with an immediate increase in minimum wages and extension of unemployment insurance to the island.
- Endorsed the program of Gov. Munoz Marin and his Administration for encouraging industrialization.
- Called on the Governor and Legislature to enact a program assuring the workers their rightful share in the benefits of the industrialization program, and outlawing anti-union practices.

Murray Foundation

The officers, directors, trustees and public advisers of the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation were commended for having "truly created living memorials to the memory of a great labor leader, a great humanitarian and a great man—Philip Murray."

A resolution said the Foundation through its grants "has reached as best it could all phases of activities dear to the heart of Philip Murray."

Public Relations

A resolution approved the John W. Vandercook nightly radio program, sponsored by the CIO since September 1953; urged affiliates to continue to support the broadcast and the CIO Executive Officers and Executive Board "to continue to study the possibilities of a national CIO TV program."

Government Employes

The convention approved the work of the CIO Government & Civic Employees Organizing Committee in aiding workers for the federal government, the states and their subdivisions in "obtaining status with workers everywhere."

CIO declared that the "right of government workers to join unions should be fully protected" and "all government workers (should) be lifted from the classification of second-class citizens by the restoration to them of full political rights."

Community Relations

"The work all CIO affiliates have done to bring our organization and other groups together in common effort for the common good" was praised by the convention.

A resolution also called on all CIO affiliates to intensify their efforts to obtain better working relationships with other groups and individuals seeking to advance democracy and enrich community life.

Another resolution endorsed the National CIO Community Services Committee's program and urged all CIO affiliates to establish and "promote community services committees, departments and programs within their jurisdiction."

"The energies and the time of the citizen volunteer and solicitor can be conserved," a third resolution said, "if there is a sincere and concerted effort on the part of health and welfare organizations to initiate community-wide planning and fund raising."

Merchant Marine

Pointing to high unemployment in the merchant marine and shipbuilding industries, the convention blamed the federal government for failure "to administer the maritime laws in accordance with their intent."

It adopted an 18-point program to aid these industries which was headed by opposition to all schemes to eliminate services provided for seamen by Public Health Service Hospitals and to prevent the transfer of American merchant ships to foreign flags. High on the program is a long range ship replacement plan for private shipyards, and legalization of the rotary ship hiring halls.

Farm Labor

A request for legislation making it a felony to hire, transport and exploit "wetback" labor was renewed by the convention. It strongly objected to a "go-it-alone" law, which threatens Mexico that it will be faced by unilateral action on admitting farm labor unless it accedes to U. S. demands in the future.

"We demand that legal foreign contract labor be guaranteed full rights and social benefits equal to those enjoyed by U. S. labor," the resolution said.

BASIC POLICIES of CIO are set forth in some 60 resolutions adopted by the Los Angeles convention. In pre-convention week, resolutions committee headed by Pres. David J. McDonald of the CIO Steelworkers (center at rear table) met several days to act on policy declarations. To right is Pres. Joseph Curran of Maritime Union, secretary.

Disputes Program Hailed As 'Success'

"The continued success of the CIO jurisdictional disputes program" was hailed by the convention.

A resolution expressed confidence that the program would continue to function well, praised Dr. Nathan Feinsinger, who recently resigned as impartial arbitrator, and CIO Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe and his staff for aiding the plan.

'Imprint Of A Man' Film Is Presented

"Imprint of a Man," a new half-hour film based on the life of Philip Murray, late president of the CIO, was previewed by the convention. The film was produced by the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation.

Foundation Dir. Arthur J. Goldberg said the film was designed to "recall to you the face, the presence, the personality of the living spirit which will always be with us, Phil Murray."

Prints of the film, for showing in union meetings and other forums, will be available shortly.

Federal Aid Urged By CIO For Building Needed Schools

THE let-the-states-finance-school-building theory was demolished with facts at the convention.

A resolution pointed to the U. S. School Facilities Survey which indicates that "only two of the 43 states reporting could obtain under the existing laws and practices enough resources to meet the current capital outlay needs."

The resolution called on the 84th Congress for "federal aid for a comprehensive, nationwide school construction program;" general federal aid, most of it earmarked for teachers' salaries; and denial of grants to schools continuing segregation.

Congress also was urged to allocate "royalties from offshore oil developments on the continental shelf" to schools.

Also requested were federal grants to states for college scholarships for needy students, special health services for elementary and high schools, and free library service, and an adequate budget for the school lunch program.

'Economy' Hit On Aid For Children

The CIO convention warned that "the twin drives for 'economy' in governmental expenditures and for ending federal grants-in-aid for social programs gravely threaten the welfare of our nation's children."

The resolution urged expansion of maternal and child health services and public child welfare services, good medical care for dependents of servicemen; federal, state and local aid to education, and improved federal and state child labor laws.

Accident Rate Gets CIO Action

The CIO convention took steps to halt the appalling toll of accidents at work, on the highways and elsewhere after noting that 95,000 persons were killed and 9.6 million disabled in all mishaps in 1953.

A resolution called on the CIO Committee on Safety and Occupational Health to continue its cooperative efforts to reduce the accident toll, and urged CIO affiliates to work with states and local communities to the same end.

'Buy Goods With CIO Label To Protect Gains We've Won'

MOBILIZATION by labor of its mass purchasing power through buying goods bearing the CIO union label was urged by the CIO convention.

"Restrictive laws and the continued growth of monopoly conditions in many industries," a resolution said, "are making it more difficult for labor to organize the unorganized and even to protect the gains its has already won.

"Runaway shops, often selling their products in industrial areas, are a constant threat to union standards. By using its dollars to help itself, rather than help its enemies, labor can help meet these challenges through its consuming power."

The convention endorsed the union label campaigns of all CIO unions and pledged support to the CIO Union Label Committee in its expanded educational campaign.

In a separate resolution, the delegates called on members to buy insurance from members of the CIO Insurance Workers, and affiliated unions and locals to purchase policies from companies under contract with IWA-CIO.

TELLING CIO'S STORY—Display booths for The CIO News and John W. Vandercook's daily radio news commentary, presented by CIO on ABC, were inspected by these convention delegates between sessions of conclave.

Executive Board Members All Re-elected By Delegates

MEMBERS of the CIO Executive Board — comprising the executive officers, the eight vice presidents and representatives of affiliated unions—were re-elected at the convention's final session.

Included with CIO Pres. Walter R. Reuther, Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe and Sec-Treas. James B. Carey are the following vice presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum and James G. Thimmes.

NAMED TO the board to represent international unions were: Emil Mazey, Auto; Ernest Hebert, Barbers; Karl Feller, Brewery; George Maher, Broadcast; Jacob S. Potofsky, Clothing; John J. Moran, Communications; Harry Block, Electrical; Morris Pizer, Furniture; Elwood Swisher, Chemical; Burl W. Phares, Glass; Anthony J. Federoff, Government.

Kenneth O'Dell, Insurance; John Blackburn, Lithographers; Herbert L. Daggett, Marine Engineers; John Grogan, Shipbuilders; M. Hedley Stone, Maritime; Matt Smith, Mechanics Educational Society; Joseph L. Collis, Newspaper Guild; T. M. McCormick, Oil; Ralph Helstein, Packinghouse;

Harry Sayre, Paper; William Steinberg, Radio Association; Max Greenberg, Retail & Wholesale; Joseph L. Childs, Rubber; Russell Taylor, Shoe; David J. McDonald, Steel; Sam H. Scott, Stone; William Pollock, Textile; Willard S. Townsend, Transport Service; Gustav Faber, Transport; Joseph A. Fisher, Utility; A. F. Hartung, Woodworkers.

Help Urged For 300,000 Idle In Textile

A PROGRAM was proposed by the CIO convention to aid the textile industry where "some 300,000 workers are idle, more than 50,000 as a result of permanent mill closings during the past two years."

A resolution called on the federal government to negotiate with mills in distressed areas for textiles it buys.

The convention supported the proposal of the House Ways and Means Committee "to disallow the deduction of rent from taxable income by industrial companies which lease plants built from the proceeds of municipal bond issues."

"This action," the resolution said, "would be a suitable first step in eliminating state and local tax exemptions and other subsidies to private enterprise."

The Senate Labor and Education Committee was urged "to look into the use of capital gains taxes, local subsidies and corporate mergers as stimuli to the liquidation of business enterprises."

THE RESOLUTION called for taxation at the rate of 25% of all profits and capital gains resulting from the liquidation of mills, with the proceeds to be used to finance local development programs.

Another proposal would have a federal agency set up to represent the industry, labor and the public in enforcing a basic 35-hour work week at 40 hours' pay in the industry. It also recommended that the government stockpile needed military fabrics now, the use of textiles for the relief of the needy at home and abroad, and an investigation to broaden the use of wool and cotton.

IUE Sets New Drive On West Coast

Free Unions Cripple Commie Groups—

"The decimation of Communist-controlled unions has dried up the prime source of revenue for the Communist Party itself—and drying up that revenue has meant curtailment of scores of Party activities and the activities of dozens of Communist-front groups."

That's what CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey told the Los Angeles chapter of the American Jewish Committee.

A leading figure in the 1949 ouster of 10 Communist-led unions from CIO, Carey said that "by crippling Communist unionism—the membership of the expelled unions has dwindled from 1.5 million to less than 300,000—democratic labor has crippled the Communist party itself."

A "MOPPING-UP" drive is planned by the CIO Electrical Workers on the Pacific Coast against the Communist-controlled United Electrical Workers. That's what IUE-CIO Pres. James B. Carey revealed as the IUE executive board met in pre-convention session in Los Angeles.

With the five-year-old IUE now the predominant union in General Electric, Westinghouse and throughout the industry, Carey said the union is going to speed up organizing in the West, particularly California.

While IUE has organized some 2000 workers in the Los Angeles area, Carey noted that UE still holds bargaining rights in "a substantial number of defense plants" in the State. These include General Electric plants in Ontario and San Francisco and Westinghouse units in Emeryville and Sunnyvale.

CAREY WARNED that "because of its complete subservience to communism and the established Communist character of its leaders, the UE is a potential menace to our national security wherever it exists in defense plants."

He said that "right now there are at least seven known Communists working for UE in California." And he pledged that both IUE and the CIO will devote "whatever is necessary—in organizers and in funds—to insure that the UE is eradicated from the California labor scene during the coming year."

Beating Of IUE Woman Organizer Hit

FEDERAL and state investigations of the brutal beating of a young woman field representative of the CIO Electrical Workers at Jonesboro, Ark., was demanded by IUE-CIO.

Diane Sargent was beaten by a man and four women while working in an organizing campaign at the General Electric plant at Jonesboro, after participating in successful IUE-CIO drives at GE plants at Anniston, Ala., and Rome, Ga.

The IUE-CIO executive board, meeting at Los Angeles, demanded that the Justice Dept. and Gov. Francis D. Cherry investigate.

THE BOARD adopted a resolution asking that these authorities "ascertain whether GE management or its representatives instigated, provoked or in any way participated in this atrocious assault."

IUE-CIO also asked that it be determined "whether Miss Sargent's civil and constitutional protections were violated."

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

COMMUNITY ROLE—Vice Pres. Joseph A. Beirne, who heads Communications Workers and CIO Community Services Committee, speaks on CSC.

UFW Wins In Jersey City

PERHAPS the next time contract negotiations come up between CIO Furniture Workers Local 76-B and the Lignum Vitae Products Co., that Jersey City firm will decide to engage in collective bargaining.

Heretofore, the firm has forced the local into strike action in order to get a contract settlement.

The latest strike recently was settled with substantial gains for the UFW local. The new three-year pact includes a union shop agreement, a 10c hourly wage increase covering the first two years, and a cost-of-living wage adjustment if justified in the third year.

Short Strike By ARA Forces Shippers To Okay Contract

AN ATTEMPT by the Pacific Maritime Association to back out of a contract negotiated last June with the CIO American Radio Association ended last week after a five-day strike that kept about 50 ships tied up in West Coast ports.

The strike came unexpectedly during negotiations on a pension plan being conducted in San Francisco by association spokesmen and a union committee headed by Pres. William Steinberg.

When J. Paul St. Sure, association president, told the union that his group considered the June agreement non-existent, bargaining ended abruptly.

The strike call went out in a matter of hours. Soon a special meeting of the CIO Marine Engineers and four AFL unions—Sailors, Marine Firemen, Marine Cooks, and Masters, Mates & Pilots—voted to support it and respect picket lines.

AMONG THE vessels kept in port at Los Angeles was the American President Liner President Monroe, which was scheduled to leave early last week on a round-the-world cruise.

The first break for the union came when the Luckenback Steamship Co., one of the larger freighter operators, signed an agreement.

With shipping in a tangle all along the Pacific Coast, negotiations were resumed, and the association finally agreed to recognize the contract. The strike was called off a few hours later.

Subscribe Now

You Need The CIO NEWS Every Week Of The Year

Now, more than ever, you need The CIO News every week of the year.

With the one-party press apologizing for the failures of the Eisenhower Administration and with a new Democratic Congress trying to reverse the tide of the last two years, fast-moving events will be breaking.

You can't afford to miss the first-hand reports in The CIO News on Washington developments and legislative, political, organizational and collective bargaining news throughout the country.

For the tops in labor news, pictures, features, cartoons and comment, subscribe today. Do it now—clip, sign and mail this coupon.

The CIO NEWS
718 Jackson Place, N.W.
Washington 6, D. C.

☐ Send me The CIO News for a year at $1.
☐ Send me a bundle order of ..... copies of this Convention Issue. Rates 2c per copy for orders up to 1000.
☐ Send me rates for larger bundle orders of the Convention Issue.
☐ Send me rates for regular group and bundle subscriptions. Issue.

Name.....

Address.....

City.....Zone.....State.....

Organization.....

Photo Story

Highlights, Sidelights From Convention

12-13

Under backdrop proclaiming "Citizenship In Operation," CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther gives keynote address (top left) at Los Angeles convention of National CIO. At right, a group of delegates chats near registration desks.

Immediately below, members of the CIO Executive Committee—composed of the three officers and vice presidents—and Steelworkers Pres. David J. McDonald meet before the convention to hear report on labor unity negotiations and act on issues coming before delegates.

Bottom row: The CIO Clothing Workers' "40 Years of Progress" booth is inspected by Pres. Reuther and ACWA's Sec.-Treas. Frank Rosenblum and Executive Vice Pres. Hyman Blumberg. Joint union label display (center) drew attention. At right, Reuther receives citation from Harrison McClung for the National Committee for Educational Television for assistance to TV group.

"WELCOME CIO" banners flew over streets of downtown Los Angeles.

N

CIO Leaders Visit Mexico
—See Pages 2 & 3

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., December 20, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 51

PRESIDENTIAL greetings marked a high spot of the visit to Mexico as Pres. Adolfo Ruiz Cortines received the CIO delegation. At left, he stands flanked by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey at meeting with the group. At right, Reuther and John Brophy, secretary of the CIO Free World Labor Fund, stand beside a wreath the delegation placed at base of the handsome Independence Monument in Mexico City during visit. (More pictures of the CIO delegation's visit will be carried in next week's issue of The CIO News.)

Reuther Asks 'Teeth' For Migrant Pact

UNCLE SAM should help his southern neighbors work their way to higher living standards, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther told Mexican trade unionists last week.

Visiting Mexico City as a guest of the Mexican Confederation of Labor (CTM), the CIO head won acclaim for his strong call for fair dealing by the U. S. Government with Mexico in handling the problem of "wetback" migrant workers employed on the big farms of the West and Southwest.

Reuther's statements won resounding approval from the Mexican government, unions and newspapers—many of which usually follow a cool editorial policy toward unions.

Answering a question about the "wetback" Mexican workers who cross the border illegally to work on the big U. S. agricultural properties, Reuther said:

Asks Equal Pay

"We recognize that Mexican workers are being exploited. We have urged our government to take steps to protect these people from exploitation, but there has been no aggressive action on this problem by our government.

"I believe that Mexican workers in the U. S. should get the same wages as anybody else doing the same work.

"The unions of the United States are working with the CTM to get a better U. S.-Mexican treaty, with effective arrangements for policing the treatment of Mexican workers in our country.

"At the present time, the exploited workers, not their exploiters, are being punished. We believe that those big farm owners who violate the laws in their treatment of Mexican workers should be punished."

The CIO president said the present Mexican-U. S. agreement is a "bad treaty, badly implemented." What is needed is a treaty with "teeth in it."

CIO Disappointed

He charged that many U. S. agricultural interests in the West and Southwest hire the "wetbacks" at starvation pay levels—and then ask the federal authorities to deport them when the crop is harvested. And he indicated that enforcement of the agreement by U. S. authorities does not seem very enthusiastic or effective.

The recent economic conference at Rio de Janeiro, towards which most of the Latin American countries had looked with hope, was not successful and the actions of the U. S. delegation "disappointed" the CIO, Reuther said.

$ Diplomacy

A blast at the "banker attitude" of the U. S. delegation to last month's Rio de Janeiro economic conference was leveled by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther in Mexico City.

Coincidentally came the announcement that Detroit banker Joseph M. Dodge, former GOP Budget Bureau director, had been sworn in as Pres. Eisenhower's special assistant on foreign economic matters.

He charged that Sec. of the Treasury George Humphrey, a leader of the U. S. delegation at Rio, "acted like a banker, when the people of Latin America wanted to be treated as human beings."

Reuther urged a policy on the part of the U. S. government for paying fair prices for raw materials sold by the Latin American nations. He added:

"The salvation of Latin America lies in the mobilization of domestic capital towards its own industries. Domestic capital cannot do everything, and that is why help is sought from other governments."

He urged a big increase in U. S. economic aid to the Latin American nations, and noted that military aid cannot by itself fight a war against poverty or the conditions that breed communism.

Statements Hailed

These statements were hailed throughout the nation. They received detailed treatment in the Mexico City press and on the radio—which broadcast a number of the events in which the CIO delegation took part.

One Mexico City tabloid filled its front page with the headline: "Sensational Statements by W. Reuther;" and another tabloid, wandering well away from the facts, headlined that the CIO president had called for the jailing of all U. S. farm owners!

But the friendly tone of the CIO statements, with their call for cooperation in solving mutual problems and seeking higher living standards for the people, won a warm, enthusiastic response from Mexican unions and the public.

Pres. Ruiz Cortines, of Mexico, expressed his pleasure at the CIO visit, and added that "we must put real life into our democratic ideals."

Reuther told the Mexican President that "we will return to the U. S. as missionaries of good will. The vast majority of the American people share our common hopes for prosperity, liberty and justice."

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, addressing the Mexican union leaders, said: "Truly, we have made a great beginning in building our friendship.

"The CIO pledges to you that this is just the beginning of a broad and strong fellowship—a fraternity that must be spread through Latin American and indeed throughout the rest of the free world."

'Massive Offensive' Urged Against 'Want, Fear'

A CALL for a "massive economic offensive against want, fear and insecurity" was voiced by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther in an address at the Mexico City rally sponsored by the Mexican Confederation of Labor (CTM).

A digest of his program follows.

1. Support for "long-range plans for the economic and social progress of Latin America," with improvement of living standards and working conditions of the people "a principal goal."

2. Financing such plans from public funds "in the form of long-term, low-interest bearing loans," with assistance from Latin American governments through "mobilizing local savings" and other investment funds, and "particularly through tax reforms."

3. Participation by Latin American unions "on all levels" in the use of the funds, and "specific and concrete guarantees" that benefits of international public loans "will go to the working people and consumers."

4. Substantial extension of the programs of technical aid and workers' education and training to bring "not only industrial progress, but progress in agricultural practices to small farms and progress in the fight against disease and illiteracy in the villages."

5. Support by the U. S. government for the "forces of democracy and free labor" in their "struggle for the maintenance and restoration of freedom and human, civil and labor rights."

6. Establishment of a more liberal U. S. tariff policy to "assure stable markets at good prices for Latin American exports."

7. Immediate land reform and extension of the principle of "equal pay for equal work to include employes of U. S. corporations abroad."

8. Development of closer relations with the unions of Latin America, and working with Mexican unions for a "decent human solution" of the problem of migrant workers.

HEMISPHERE problems are discussed with CIO Pres. Reuther, OWIU-CIO Pres. Knight and Mexican labor leaders by Sec.-Gen. Albert Luis Monge, right, of ORIT, western hemisphere branch of Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions during visit to ORIT's Mexico City offices.

'Senor Juan Mann' Proves A Titian Surprise, Viva!

MEXICAN CTM members got a surprise at the big mass meeting in honor of the CIO delegation.

The master of ceremonies announced, for presentation to the audience, the name of "Juan Mann."

Up stood Mrs. Joan Man, a CIO headquarters secretary—who is recognized on both sides of the Rio Grande as an attractive red-head.

The crowd roared a good-natured shout; and a keen ear could detect a few Mexico City wolf whistles.

MRS. JOAN MAN

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

CIO Leaders Take Mexico By Storm

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

A HEART-warming welcome was given to a CIO delegation to Mexico last week by that country's democratic labor movement.

During two event-studded days, leaders of the Mexican CTM and other unions hailed the CIO visit as a major event in the good-neighbor relations of the U. S. and Mexican labor movements.

And they gave the CIO group, headed by Pres. Walter P. Reuther and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, a memorable demonstration of hospitality and friendship.

As Reuther told Sec.-Gen. Fidel Velazquez of the CTM:

"We have come to renew friendships, to cement the solidarity of our unions, and to bring greetings from the workers of the United States to the workers of the Mexican trade union movement."

Velazquez told the CIO group that "you have brought the warmest message of fraternal greetings which we have ever received from the workers of the United States."

"You have shown you understand the important role you have to perform in collaborating and helping to strengthen the democratic labor movement of the Americas," he continued,

FRIENDS—Sec. Gen. Fidel Velazquez of the Mexican Confederation of Labor (CTM), at left, greets a guest and friend, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, who headed CIO delegation to Mexico. More than 1000 people filled CTM's Mexico City hall, at right, to cheer leaders of CIO who brought pledges of friendship and cooperation. Speaking before backdrop of Mexican Pres. Adolfo Ruiz Cortines, Reuther asked for U. S.-Mexican migrant treaty with "teeth."

No Bull!

The CIO delegation's schedule called for a visit to the bull fight on Sunday afternoon.

But that part of the trip had to be cancelled. The bull fighters' union—affiliated with the CTM—was on strike!

"with a view to overcoming obstacles to the worker's attaining higher standards of living and better working conditions."

The CIO group included O. A. Knight, head of the Oil Workers and chairman of the CIO Latin American Affairs Committee Vice-Pres. David Monas of the Clothing Workers; and a number of CIO staff officials.

Midnight Arrival

In addition, four officials of the Auto Workers comprised a separate delegation to the Mexican auto union, whose representatives visited Detroit some months ago on a similar good will mission.

Flying directly from Los Angeles a day after the CIO convention, the delegation received a rousing welcome at the Mexico City Airport at midnight Dec. 11. Velazquez and other leaders of Mexican unions were on hand, together with a horde of reporters, radio men, photographers—and a Mexican folk band.

After brief ceremonies, the group was escorted to the Del Prado Hotel, in the center of the city.

The next day, the CIO delegation toured the city, appeared at a meeting of executive committee members and stewards of the independent government workers' union; attended a big 90-minute press conference, and were guests at a mid-afternoon lunch provided by the CTM.

Dec. 13 started with a mammoth breakfast given by the unions of the hotel, restaurant and culinary workers.

Then the delegation inspected the fine headquarters of the CTM—the Mexican Confederation of Labor—in downtown Mexico City; and visited the offices of ORIT, the western hemisphere branch of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions, which occupies a floor of the CTM building.

Visit President

Following the tour of union offices, the CIO and Mexican union groups paid a formal visit to Pres. Adolfo Ruiz Cortines of Mexico, a close friend of the CTM. After a reception in his office, the delegation inspected the Federal Palace and visited the governor of the District of Mexico City.

From there, the group traveled to the offices of the Mexican Labor Dept. to meet Minister of Labor Adolfo Lopez Mateos, a former CTM officer.

Then the CIO leaders journeyed to the imposing Independence Monument to place a wreath in honor of the men who helped Mexico win its freedom and its impressive social and economic advances.

In the afternoon, the CIO delegation was honored at a luncheon by the Mexican Auto Workers, at the swank Jockey Club.

The CIO and CTM people then went to the U. S. Embassy, where Ambassador Francis White entertained at a reception. Reuther, Carey and Knight conferred with him on problems affecting U. S.-Mexican relationships.

The delegation ended the busy day as guests of the CTM at a mass meeting in the Mexican unions' assembly hall attended by more than 1000 people. Velazquez, Gen. Sec. L. A. Monge of ORIT, and Reuther spoke.

Delegates

Members of the CIO delegation to Mexico were:

Pres. Walter P. Reuther, Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Pres. O. A. Knight of the Oil Workers, Vice Pres. David Monas of the Clothing Workers, General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg, Victor Reuther, assistant to the CIO president and director of the International Affairs Dept.

Also, R. J. Thomas, assistant to Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe; George L-P Weaver, assistant to Sec-Treas. Carey; Dan Benedict and Dr. Ernst Schwarz of the International Affairs Dept.; John Brophy; Henry C. Fleisher, editor of The CIO News, and Mrs. Joan Man, secretary in Pres. Reuther's office.

Members of the Auto Workers' delegation included Reuther, E. S. Patterson, Ken Bannon, Research Dir. Nat Weinberg, and Guy Nunn of the Radio Dept.

Hails CIO Members

Velazquez is a big, square-jawed man who started life as a farm worker and was first elected to his office in 1941. He termed the CIO visit an event of "outstanding importance," and voiced the friendly regard held by Mexican workers for the CIO.

"We hope that you get a good impression of Mexico and the CTM," he told the visitors.

"We beg you to bring our best greetings to the workers of your country; please tell them that it has been a great honor for us to act as your hosts, and please tell them that we find ourselves happily in honorable and responsible agreement."

Monge, who comes from Costa Rica, is young and handsome. He hailed Reuther for bringing "not only greetings, but effective cooperation." True defense of the hemisphere, he said, rests on "continental cooperation without imperialism."

Lashing out both at Communists and other dictatorships, he said the ideal of all-American cooperation has enemies throughout the hemisphere — enemies "who jail the leaders of labor, deny civil liberties and thwart social progress."

Reuther Cheered

Reuther—speaking in brief paragraphs which were then translated to the Spanish-speaking audience—was greeted with applause each time his words were repeated in Spanish by the interpreter. At the end of the meeting, the entire audience rose in a mighty cheer.

"We of the CIO are proud to associate ourselves with the humanitarian ideals of the Mexican democratic revolution," Reuther told the audience.

"Because the democratic unions of Mexico are getting stronger, and because of the foresighted leadership of Fidel Velazquez, the Mexican democratic revolution is in good hands, in the hands of the workers of the CTM."

Countering the propaganda of Communists and other foes of the United States, Reuther received a rousing cheer when he said:

"I want to assure the people of Mexico that the people of the U. S. do not want to fight a military war. The war they really want to fight is the war of humanity against poverty and oppression throughout the world."

He received a cheer, also, when he said that the "McCarthys of the world don't know how to fight communism—because they are fundamentally opposed to social and human progress."

"Together with the workers of Mexico and free democratic unions everywhere," he concluded, "we can build a world of peace, in the image of social justice, human friendship and progress for mankind.

"Salud!"

Coming To UAW

Fidel Velazquez, secretary general of the Mexican CTM, has accepted an invitation to address the convention of the CIO Auto Workers at Cleveland, O., in March.

Amigos

"Ceteme," the official trade union paper of the CTM unions, issued a special English-language edition to mark the visit of the CIO delegation to Mexico.

The four pages contained articles and pictures about the history of the CTM, and biographies of CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, CTM Sec. Fidel Velazquez and ORIT Sec. Luis Alberto Monge.

Murray Fund Gives $5000 To Mexico University

A $5000 gift from the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation, to be presented to the University of Mexico through the CTM labor organization, was announced in Mexico City by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey.

The donation—which may be used for scholarships for the children of Mexican workers or the purchase of needed equipment—will be worked out by the CTM and the university authorities in coming months.

The gift was strongly praised by CTM Sec.-Gen. Fidel Valazquez, who expressed the gratitude of the Mexican people, and said that he was "greatly impressed by the significance of this gift."

Praise for the contribution also came from Alberto Trueba Urbino—who is a Mexican Senator, a professor at the university and general counsel of the Mexican unions.

He noted that the university—visited by the CIO delegation—had been established in colonial times, and had evolved throughout the centuries as a cathedral of learning for the people of the nation.

"Built with the sweat of the workers and the taxes of the people, its function is to place science and knowledge at the service of the people," Trueba Urbino declared.

Reuther won shouted applause when he told a meeting of government union leaders:

"I have just visited your University City.

"We wish that more time and money could be spent for the development of schools and universities like yours rather than for the building of stockpiles of H-bombs."

The university is an outstanding example of modern architecture in the western hemisphere. Many of its buildings—combining glass, steel, brick and lava rock—contain great handsome mural paintings that depict the life and spirit of the people of Mexico.

At present, some 5000 students attend, but University authorities look forward to an eventual 50,000 student body drawn from all over the Americas.

Christmas, 1954

Greetings of the season to all workers and their families and to free labor unions around the world, and our best wishes for a new year of peace, full employment, and social progress . . .

—The CIO News Staff

Good Neighbors

The visit of the CIO delegation to Mexico as guests of the CTM (the Mexican Confederation of Labor) and allied democratic labor unions should do much to strengthen the friendship of two neighboring peoples and two labor movements with common aspirations for peace, bread and freedom.

The CIO visitors found a lively labor movement, devoted to the democratic ideals of modern day Mexico and keenly interested in promoting the unity, strength, and effectiveness of the free unions of the western hemisphere.

The visit was, in other words, a visit with good neighbors and good friends.

The CIO is proud that its delegation was received with such warm hospitality by the unions and the people of Mexico.

We of the CIO are also proud of our pledge to continue and to intensify our cooperation with our southern neighbors.

We are happy that the CIO visit was a sharp answer to the propaganda claims of the Communists and Latin American dictators that there is no common ground between the people of the United States and their neighbors to the south.

The visit, the spirit of our Mexican hosts, and the pledges of CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther to work for economic advances in Latin America—all of them demonstrate that the totalitarians lie when they argue that there can be no friendship between the people of the United States and the people of Latin America.

The CIO salutes its democratic trade union neighbors to the south; and it pledges that no wedge will ever split the friendship and cooperation that exist between the workers of the United States and their brother and sister unionists south of the Rio Grande.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS

Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene Kelley, Ed Lashman.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII December 20, 1954 No. 51

Hands Across The Border

In Other Words—

Something New In Strike Settlements

This account of the strike in the Ohmi silk mills in Japan, which attracted wide interest because of its social implications and to which the CIO Textile Workers contributed $1000, is abridged from Free Labor World, official publication of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

A STRIKE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS which continued for 100 days attracted the attention of the world to the paternalistic feudalism that has not entirely ceased in certain factories in Japan.

The strike was in the Ohmi Silk Textile Co., where there were three nominal trade unions, only one of which was truly representative of the workers. This body called a strike on June 4, when about 6000 workers responded. Finally, about 13,000 were involved.

The strike was backed by public opinion; the National Federation of Textile Workers' Unions; All-Japan Seamen's Union and the national trade union centers, Zenro, Sodomei and Sohyo; and by international organizations such as the Intl. Transportworkers Federation, Intl. Federation of Textile Workers' Associations, and ICFTU.

The company was founded in 1927. Its president is Kakuji Natsukawa, who runs it with the assistance of his four brothers. It has developed into an exporting enterprise with a central office and 10 factories. Among its employes are many young girls whose average age is 18-19 and who live in dormitories; productive efficiency is not more than half of that of the industry as a whole.

A Company Union At First

Unions became legal after the war and the union movement was encouraged. In 1945 the company formed a company union and chose its officials. This is known as the "first union." It did nothing to improve feudal labor relations and working conditions.

For years the National Federation of Textile Workers' Unions (Zensen) had been trying to form a genuine union, but their efforts were thwarted by the company. In June, however, Zensen finally succeeded: the "second union" was founded and presented demands.

The president of the company flew back from Paris to deal with the revolt, as he called it. Chief among the demands were immediate recognition, dissolution of the company union, cancellation of all other so-called union agreements, the eight-hour day; cessation of enforced education in Buddhism, of enforced living apart in dormitories for married couples, of violations by the company of personal correspondence and personal effects, and of the Money System for spying activities.

The company refused to negotiate and the union called a strike. The company declared a lockout, dismissing the original workers; putting barbed wire around the factories, thus barring employes from dormitories and canteens, and employing strike breakers.

At the Hikone factory seven workers are reported to have been injured, 10 at Tsu, at Gifu there were 13 casualties, in another conflict at Hikone 200 strikebreakers became involved in a fight with the workers, of whom a dozen were injured. At Fujimiya when Natsukawa drove his Cadillac through a picket line five girls were knocked down. Altogether, about 200 were injured.

The Union's Gains

At first the company refused to acknowledge the validity of the implications in the demands. But when official investigations began, they could no longer maintain their denials. Because of this, and because more and more members of the company union were joining the "second union," the company formed a "third union." This presented demands similar to those put forward by the real union.

In July, assistance came from overseas and international solidarity began to make its effect felt.

Government intervention took the form of recommendations to Zensen and the company on Aug. 4. Finally, after 100 days, an agreement was signed which constituted a signal victory for the trade union.

The company fully recognized the union and undertook to negotiate an agreement with it; it took immediate steps to observe the human rights of employes; wages, hours and working conditions and welfare standards were to be brought up to standards of other textile firms; there was to be no victimization of (discrimination against) strikers; those dismissed during the strike were to be reinstated; closed mills were to be reopened immediately; and the company was to give the union about $140,000 for distribution as lost wages, and a further $140,000 to meet the expenses for food, lodging, etc., incurred by the union during the strike.

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

THE SAVAGE CIVIL WAR in the Republican Party over Sen. McCarthy presents more grievous problems to GOP professionals, such as Republican National Committee Chairman Len Hall, than to those who despise and oppose the junior Wisconsin Senator on grounds of principle.

Pres. Eisenhower's situation is by no means intolerable. He can get himself renominated by the Republicans in 1956 merely by refusing to raise a finger to prevent renomination.

A considerable number of the GOP senators who insulted the President by voting against the "condemnation" resolution will inevitably join those crying that the General "must" run for a second term to "vindicate" his leadership—and to "save his party."

Contrast

Remember the generous appropriations voted in the past for Sen. McCarthy's big-spending investigations?

In contrast, the committee which investigated Sen. McCarthy before the recent vote of censure is going to return more than half of its $30,000 appropriation to the Senate. Chairman Watkins (R. Utah) said he expects to return more than $17,000 unspent from the appropriation.

The nonsensical talk about McCarthy and a third party has about as much substance as the talk, in 1940 and 1944, of an anti-Roosevelt Democratic third party. Most Republican officeholders will discover, in the fullness of time, that they do not share McCarthy's political suicide impulse.

The President can whip his GOP opponents by letting himself be renominated. Or, if he decides that he is fed up, he can massacre them by simply refusing to run again. Who among the GOP stalwarts could be found to launch a successful campaign in his place? Never underestimate the final power of the man in the White House.

The position of the Democrats, gleefully looking at the bitter quarrel of the Republicans, is perhaps better than they deserve.

Ike Must Depend On Demos

As a matter of conscience, the overwhelming majority of Democrats will sustain the President in a wise, but firm, foreign policy. Foreign policy, and the great issue of war and peace, are the overriding questions of our time.

It is the Democrats on whom Eisenhower must depend, in the upcoming 84th Congress, to rescue him from Republican warhawks such as the alleged GOP Administration Senate leader, Knowland of California, who thinks we should chew up China before breakfast.

The Democrats will fight the President on many issues of domestic program. They probably should fight him on more policy questions than are now contemplated.

Eisenhower's conception of a "progressive, moderate" program is grossly mistaken. He is wrong on the Tennessee Valley Authority, wrong on public power generally, wrong on tax policy and full-employment issues. Democrats can oppose him on the Dixon-Yates contract, for example. But in sustaining him on foreign policy, they may make his own Republicans look like monkeys.

And what about Len Hall, the Republican national chairman?

Hall barely got rid of an attack on Paul M. Butler, the new Democratic chairman, before he found himself forced to fight a defensive action in support of Eisenhower against McCarthy.

Many congressional Democrats agree with Butler that Eisenhower's background and training gave him only meager equipment for the White House. But never a one has assailed him personally; no one accuses him of a "shrinking show of weakness" in foreign policy; no one calls him a "coddler of Communists."

These delightful epithets, this "Indian Charlie" brutality, come from Len Hall's Republicans exclusively. And the pious old politician from New York, who willingly welcomed McCarthyism as a tactic against Democrats, now has to pretend that the current savagery is just a slight little misunderstanding among friends.

Hall has a party so deeply divided that the extremist wings scarcely seem to belong on the same planet, let alone in the same broad political grouping.

"Join a decent union, get a pay increase, and you won't have to break your neck trying to make the matinee prices."

Book Reviews—

A Benevolent Protector's Story —Since When Do We Need 'Em?

By EUGENE A. KELLEY

ONCE UPON A TIME there was a poor Texas boy named Hugh Cullen. He worked hard, had phenomenal luck in striking oil, became one of the world's richest men.

About the time that he had acquired more millions than were probably good for him, he made Herbert Hoover his idol—and since has supported every conservative, reactionary movement and sympathetic candidate who came down the pike.

He has given away $175 million—one can't help suspecting to keep it from the nasty old government which might want some of it in taxes.

Cullen is the subject of a new book described as "a story of American opportunity." There is no question that any man who made the kind of money that Cullen has is deservedly a subject for biography. Cullen, however, deserves better than he got from Ed Kliman and Theon Wright, who write as though their attention to the manuscript has been constantly diverted by sidewise glances at Cullen's checkbook.

Everything But Divinity

The authors never quite dared to attribute divinity to their subject but they do credit Cullen with the election of Pres. Eisenhower, passage of the Tidelands Oil Bill and assorted other minor benefactions to mankind. He has, the reader is told, "assumed a kind of benevolent protectorate over the political affairs of his state and country."

His benevolence led him in 1945, when the Senate ratified our entry into the United Nations, to mourn that "our great country is decaying politically—so fast that it is very doubtful if we can continue as a democracy much longer, unless we retrace our steps . . ."

Cullen's benevolence likewise has caused him to endow the Dixiecrats, attack TVA and champion the Bricker Amendment.

According to Cullen's biographers, Eisenhower's march to the White House began with a conversation in the Cullen living room in November 1950, when Cullen counselled the general not to talk politics. The living room in Houston, one gathers, has long been a shrine where Republican hopefuls go in hopes of getting a Cullen benediction. Stassen, Taft and MacArthur are listed among the pilgrims.

Cullen's ranch, 50 miles from Houston, was the locale of a mild crisis when Gov. Allan Shivers phoned to report that the tidelands bill was being shelved for consideration of Hawaiian statehood. Cullen, man of action, wired several senators. Next day Sen. Dirksen (R. Ill.) phoned Cullen reassuringly that the tidelands bill would be back on the Senate calendar.

Cullen's political contributions have all been financial—he has never sought office. Not all of his contributions, however, have been political. He has endowed numerous institutions heavily. He set some kind of record for philanthropy when he endowed four hospitals with $1 million each in two days.

—Fitzpatrick in St. Louis Post-Dispatch

"For What Shall It Profit A Man—"

The Big Money

The Cullen Foundation, next largest to the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations, is endowed for $160 million to be used in Texas.

Often the book is more distinguished for what it fails to say than for what it does. Strikingly, there isn't a single reference to Sen. McCarthy although Cullen gave $5000, the legal limit, and a lot of advice to the Wisconsin Senator's race in 1952 and McCarthy has been a guest in the Cullen home. It is impossible to deduce whether or not Joe has fallen from grace.

On its literary merits the book has but a dim future. It may, however, be widely distributed through the benevolence of its central figure. Cullen has distributed hundreds of thousands of books in his day, most of them by authors like John T. Flynn, darling of the arch-reactionary, union-hating set. Broad dissemination, however, will not make it a better book.

Cullen's story deserves to be told and will be someday—by authors less partisan and more detached than the present Texas Boswells.

Hugh Roy Cullen, A Story of American Opportunity, by Ed Kilman and Theon Wright; Prentice-Hall, Inc., New York, N. Y., $4.00.

Satevepost Looks At GAW

NATIONAL INTEREST in the guaranteed annual wage—announced as a major target in the CIO Auto Workers' negotiations next spring—is reflected in an article in the current Saturday Evening Post.

The sharp divergence of labor and management opinions on GAW are pinpointed by Edward Maher's piece, "Can Labor Get A Guaranteed Annual Wage?" The article reports "a battle of titanic proportions seems to be shaping on the industrial front."

Not unexpectedly, Maher's article devotes some considerable space to countering the arguments not even yet presented by the UAW-CIO in anticipation of its meeting with the auto companies a few months hence.

"The UAW says its proposal 'fits UAW members like a glove'," says the piece. "It might add that, in the opinion of management, it fits the employers like a strait jacket."

Some of the piece's tone is indicated from the accompanying illustrations; lines of Detroit jobless, auto workers on the job, management people and an economist. By inference, the only one excited about GAW is Walter P. Reuther, president of UAW and CIO, shown while addressing CIO's Full Employment Conference in Washington last May.

"The UAW proposal, if adopted, would be the first major breakthrough of the guaranteed annual wage into the large mass-production industries," Maher says. "The first effort at such penetration was made in 1944. At the height of World War II the CIO Steelworkers demanded a guaranteed annual wage. The War Labor Board was the controlling factor in labor relations at the time, and the demand was turned down."

Meanwhile, it continues, "the Federal Government is watching from the side lines with an extremely worried look on its figurative face, praying that a blowup which can upset the whole economy can be avoided. Undersecretary of State Arthur Larson hopes the present emotional atmosphere will give way to facts and common sense before the time comes to bargain."

The article quotes UAW Research Dir. Nat Weinberg as saying GAW costs can be withstood without serious harm to the industry, and adding:

"Leaders who are responsible for the welfare of 1.5 million people don't lead them into a struggle which will be futile because the costs of the demands can't be borne."

This prediction by Reuther is recalled:

"We're going to get the guaranteed annual wage; there's no question about it. We hope the issue can be resolved at the bargaining table, but we'll do what is necessary to get it."

The article says "what is necessary" "means strikes, big or little ones, if, as and when strategy dictates." Weinberg's 1951 speech before the American Management Association is recalled in the same connection when he said U. S. workers want the GAW and are going to get it.

"If you make it necessary, they may acquire a lot of picket line seniority before they win wage guarantees," Weinberg is quoted, "but in the end, you will come to the bargaining table, pen in hand, to sign guaranteed wage contracts."

INSPECTION TOUR—The City of Hope, labor-supported center which pioneers in medical care, was visited by many CIO officers and delegates during the Los Angeles convention. On one visit, CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and his wife, May, were shown master plan for the hospital by Mort Brondler, administrator (left center in first photo), and Sam Moskovitz, labor coordinator. Two Auto Workers meet (center) as Reuther, UAW president, greets Dan Fecketi, a UAW member. At right: Dr. Fisher, radiologist, shows X-ray equipment to the Reuthers.

TORCH OF HOPE award for public leaders "who have given their most to humanitarian causes" is presented to Reuther by Ben Horowitz, City of Hope executive director, while Pres. Joseph A. Beirne of Communications Workers watches. Beirne is CIO Community Services Committee chairman. Above, the Reuthers meet with two medical staff members.

The City Of Hope—

'House Of Good Samaritan' Gets More CIO Assistance

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

A GROUP of low-slung, dusty pink buildings with red-tiled roofs grouped around a wide expanse of soft green lawns, and long walks bordered with palm trees . . .

This was the first view delegates to the CIO convention got as they approached the City of Hope in Duarte, Calif., after a 20-mile drive from Los Angeles.

This national medical center for catastrophic diseases such as tuberculosis, cancer, heart cases needing surgery, and leukemia, looks nothing like a hospital outside, and very little like one inside.

And this is as it should be, for the City of Hope is not an ordinary medical institution. It embodies ideals of health and medical care close to labor's desires and aspirations and has the warm support of trade unionists throughout the nation.

Better Standards

CIO Pres. Walter Reuther, who was presented a Torch of Hope plaque in a testimonial dinner given for him by the City of Hope, called the medical center, the "House of the "Good Samaritan." He told the dinner guests that he was impressed by the high standard of medical care at the City of Hope, but was impressed most of all by the spirit there.

Support

Support for the City of Hope was reaffirmed by the CIO at its recent convention. A resolution also urged affiliates "to give their support to this important work."

It said that the City of Hope, since its formation 40 years ago, "has restored to health" thousands of unionists, many of them CIO members.

"The value, worth and dignity of the individual come first," he said. "Too little is done to apply these principles preached about so much. The City of Hope has attempted to put them into effect." (Reuther is honorary chairman of the City of Hope's National Labor Council.)

Pres. Joseph A. Beirne of the Communications Workers, chairman of the dinner, said that this year's Torch of Hope award was given to Reuther for what he has done in his various official capacities "to better the health and welfare standards of men, women and children everywhere."

A check for $25,000 was turned over to City of Hope officials at the dinner, bringing total CIO contributions to $105,000.

Executive Dir. Ben Horowitz of the medical center told CIO officials and guests who attended the dinner ceremony that the medical center at Duarte had these unique features:

- Patients are treated as individuals and are given personalized care. They don't pay a cent for anything, but they are not treated like charity cases, or made to feel like second-class citizens. An effort is made to give a home-like atmosphere to the hospital.

Backed By Labor

- The medical center is "a people's movement," supported by trade unions as well as fraternal, religious and other associated groups scattered through 35 states. Horowitz called it the "only democratic philanthropy in the world."
- It is a "pilot medical center," and has an influence on medical institutions throughout the country.
- It preaches and practices labor solidarity, and anti-discrimination, and is non-sectarian, accepting patients from every state in the union without regard to race, creed and color.
- It is a research institute and medical center for catastrophic diseases, and studies and develops techniques for treatment of TB, cancer, heart surgery, and most recently leukemia, under a $40,000 grant from the federal government.

DINNER SCENES—The City of Hope testimonial dinner was a social highlight of the convention. Typical scene (at left) includes Victor G. Reuther, assistant to Pres. Reuther and director of the CIO International Affairs Dept. in left foreground. Two CIO vice presidents—Emil Rieve, head of the Textile Workers, and Joseph Curran, head of the Maritime Union—and Sen. Morse (Ind. Ore.) were at one table.

N

WHAT'S GOOD FOR AMERICA IS GOOD FOR THE CIO

Now CIO's 16th Parley Is History . . .

"Hey, Mom, there's Pop's picture," says 2½-year-old Tommy Burke (left), as he points to photo of his father, Thomas Burke, who is health and safety director of the CIO Steelworkers in Pittsburgh.

"What's good for America is good for the CIO," said banner (top of page) at 16th CIO convention hall in Los Angeles' Statler Hotel.

The confetti-hurling demonstration which marked reelection of officers is indicated (top right) while CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey exchange congratulations (in right center photo). Auto Workers Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey applauds.

Swapping yarns (l. to r. in far right photo) are R. J. Thomas, assistant CIO director of organization, Pat Conroy of the Canadian Embassy, and Pres. David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers.

At left, Tunisian unionist Ahmed Ben-Salah was greeted by Reuther, while the music maker, Joe Glazer of the Rubber Workers (lower left photo), was on the job.

An informal study (lower right photo) of CIO's three executive officers: Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Pres. Walter P. Reuther, and Executive Vice Pres. John V. Riffe.

The Political Scene—

Reuther Says CIO Seeks Realignment Of Parties

A clear statement of CIO's independent, non-partisan and vigorous political action program was voiced by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther as a highlight of the recent CIO convention in Los Angeles.

Reuther spoke during debate on the PAC resolution after formation of a labor third party was urged by Pres. Michael J. Quill of the CIO Transport Workers. Excerpts from Reuther's remarks follow:

By WALTER P. REUTHER

TO BEGIN with, everyone who knows anything about the elementary facts of political history in America knows that building third parties will get no one anywhere.

Every try has failed miserably, not because the motives or the reasons or the morality behind it was wrong, but because we are dealing with a structure in America that does not lend itself to the creation of third party movements.

You don't organize a national party in America. You have to organize 48 state parties and try to tie them together in some sort of a national party.

I can stand before this convention and I can look any delegate in the eye and say in all good conscience that no one in our movement has worked harder or has tried to be more consistent in trying to be independent politically.

I have never participated in a single Democratic Party function as such. I haven't even to this day made a Jackson Day dinner, or some other dinner. If there is somebody in the CIO leadership who is pure, I am among those few guys.

I have stayed that way because I believe that the president of the CIO of necessity has to be in a position where he can say in all good conscience, without fear of challenge, that he has used his office not as a tail to any political party's kite, and that we have had people and candidates and parties based on issues, as those issues affected the well-being of all of the American people.

The CIO is not the tail to the Democratic kite. But, when the CIO looks at the issues and looks at the platforms and looks at the candidates who are committed to carry out the platforms, it is not our fault that it takes a microscope to find a Republican who is willing to support the platform and fight on the issues we support.

Michigan GOP Had No Good Candidates

And because we support more Democrats than we do Republicans, and because in certain states like the State of Michigan, where, in the last election for the first time, we endorsed the whole Democratic slate, we did that because every decent candidate was running on the Democratic ticket and every reactionary anti-labor candidate was running on the Republican ticket.

Now does that make us a captive of the Democratic Party, because it has good candidates committed to a platform and policies that are right, and the Republican Party has bad candidates?

We are independent because, if the Democratic Congress on Jan. 1 begins to do things that we think are wrong, does anybody remotely think that the CIO will sit back and bite its fingernails and say, "Too bad we can't criticize them because we are the tail to the Democratic kite?"

We have to recognize that politics, just like collective bargaining, is not an exact science. It is a practical job.

THE PAC STORY—Some highlights of the CIO-PAC display at the convention are shown by PAC Dir. Jack Kroll (left) to Abe Chatman of the CIO Clothing Workers from Rochester, N. Y.

You can only win political campaigns by building political forces in the neighborhoods, in the precincts, in the counties and in the states.

Politics is a job that we need to work at not two weeks before the campaign, not two weeks before the election, but 365 days in the year, building consciousness in the hearts and the minds of the people.

We must make them understand their responsibilities and the issues, and then get that consciousness reflected in terms of activity in the period before election and on election day.

Campaigns Decided In The Precincts

What are we trying to do on the American political scene? Well, we of the CIO occupy a unique position, when our brothers across the sea who come from countries that have political parties ask us, "How come you don't have a labor party in America?"

Then we have to explain the whole different political development of the American political system, of the essential difference in our culture, and the basic difference in the social structure of America.

In Europe where you have society developed along very classic economic lines, where you have rigid class groupings, there labor parties are a natural political expression because there you have a highly fixed and class society.

Trying To Work In Two-Party System

A labor party would commit the American political system to the same narrow class structure upon which the political parties of Europe are built.

Basically what we are trying to do is to work, within the two-party system, a fundamental realignment of the basic political forces so that political parties can become responsible.

We want a party to have such integrity that when it has a national convention, adopts a platform and nominates candidates, anyone running on that party ticket is obligated and bound by party discipline—if elected—to carry out the platform on which he got the popular mandate.

CIO Trying To Build Responsible Parties

We are trying to bring a sense of responsibility into the political structure of America, so that the political parties are not just convenient vehicles to get to power, and then having gained power by the use of that vehicle, to forget about the responsibilities and commitments made in the platform on which they rode into power.

That is why Joe McCarthy has his own little piece of the Republican Party and (Sen.) Welker has his own little piece, and somebody else has his own little piece. And the Democratic Party, to a degree, has the same basic problem.

What we are trying to do is to pull political forces together and to build these forces into such a political structure that we will have the answer to this question:

Do the people believe in a government that wants to use its power to meet the welfare of all the people, or, on the other hand, do they want a government that believes that to help the few is the only way to help the many?

So, what we are working on is to bring about this basic political realignment.

I can go down to the South—there is a new beginning in the South. Sure, we know about the Byrnes and the other apostles of white supremacy. We know something about the Talmadges and the Jimmy Byrnes.

We know these things, but the encouraging thing in America is the fact that we have the Kefauvers and the Sparkmans and the Lister Hills coming out of the South.

History Has Proved Viewpoint Correct

I believe that history has proved our point of view is correct, because just as Jimmy Byrnes and Mr. Shivers were endorsing the Republican candidate, so Wayne Morse, a Republican, endorsed the Democratic candidate in the last presidential election.

That is the process that must go on, and out of that process will come a day in America when political parties will stand for responsibility and integrity and internal discipline. On that day in American history, we will have matured politically as a nation.

Now what we have to do is to help that process. We can't do it alone, but we can help other people to bring about that political growing-up process, that political maturing, that basic realignment of political forces.

Why Labor Needs Allies In Politics

"America is a society in which social groups are in flux, in which we do not have this rigid class structure like in Europe," said CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther in opposing a U. S. labor party.

"We have small businessmen," he continued. "They don't really belong with the high priest of the Republican Party who controls big business and the party.

"We have millions of farmers. They are not wage earners.

"They don't fit into any narrow class structure. And yet they are an essential part of the vitality of our free political system and we cannot do what needs doing in America unless we get these kind of people joining forces with us."

VITAL QUESTIONS of labor law were discussed at a conference sponsored by the CIO Legal Dept. From left: David E. Feller, CIO assistant general counsel; Harold Cranefield, UAW general counsel; William Isaacson, ACWA general counsel; and Lindsay Walden, OWIU general counsel. Conduct of NLRB was sharply criticized.

NLRB 'Scraps' Rules—Goldberg

RULINGS of the Republican-dominated National Labor Relations Board are "shocking" for disregarding prior NLRB decisions under the Taft-Hartley Act, according to CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg.

He spoke at a two-day conference on labor law sponsored by the CIO Legal Dept. during the CIO convention. It was attended by some 100 attorneys for CIO and AFL unions and management, law school professors and company industrial relations directors.

"We have today a board," Goldberg said, "which has almost explicitly said that it counts the experience of the past seven years as virtually nothing, that it regards itself as perhaps uniquely endowed with a mandate to interpret, as if it were a fresh statute just passed, a law which has been on the books seven years."

He feared that "the new board is not listening to these substantial and responsible elements of the business community but has come to regard the unreconstructed fringe as the element it must balance, in its own way, against the interests of labor."

Goldberg said the board's "acceptance of this fringe" is leading "to decisions adverse to labor" and "the establishment of rules which interfere with the wholesome relationships which we have been able to achieve with responsible members of the business community."

Prof. Archibald Cox of Harvard Law School also criticized the NLRB for its decision in the Blue Flash Express case. The board ruled that questioning workers on union membership and activities is not an unfair labor practice in the absence of further evidence of coercion.

He said the decision is "especially" disappointing "because it may indicate that the present NLRB majority espouses the theory that unions are outsiders with whom the employer should enter into competition to outsell the union."

A feature of the conference was a panel discussion on "Civil Liberties" in which two of the participants were Thomas E. Harris, CIO assistant general counsel, and Max Kampelman, legislative counsel to Sen. Humphrey (D. Minn.). Harris attacked the Communist Control Act, particularly as it applies to unions, while Kampelman defended the legislation but said that it could be amended by the 84th Congress.

CLYDEBANK CEREMONY—In Blantyre, Scotland, British and U. S. unionists joined in dedication of Philip Murray Memorial Rooms at the Miners' Welfare Institute—honoring CIO's late president in his home town. Speaking for CIO was John Green (first photo), another Clydebank native. A game of draughts, which looks like checkers, was played by Green and Archie Murray, one of Blantyre's oldest miners (center photo). Watching are Chairman Charles Geddes of British Trades Union Congress; Sir William Lawther, secretary of the Miners' International Federation; and Dan Kellachan of Miners' Welfare Society. At right, Lawther and Green chat with Mrs. Kelly (seated at right), who is Murray's nearest surviving relative in Scotland. "Living memorial" at miners' social center was the gift of the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation.

'Living Memorial' To Phil Murray Dedicated In His Old Home Town

IN THE GRIM Scottish Clyde Valley that was his birthplace, a "living memorial" has been dedicated in honor of Philip Murray, late president of the CIO and the United Steelworkers of America.

Once Murray himself was a young miner in Blantyre, Lanarkshire—and the lessons he learned there about vigorous, democratic unionism were demonstrated many times in the land to which he emigrated.

Appropriately, the Murray memorial recently dedicated at Blantyre will be of continuing service to the men and women of the coal fields, for it consists of two social rooms added to the Blantyre Miners' Welfare Institute.

One Of Many Gifts

Dedication of the Murray memorial came almost two years after the death of the late CIO president. British and American unionists joined in the ceremonies.

The $10,000 memorial was one of a series of gifts—to economic, educational, legal and religious organizations — by the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation.

Representing CIO at the Blantyre ceremonies was John Green, a CIO national representative now stationed in New York and a past president of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers. Like Murray, Green once was a Scottish unionist.

After an informal inspection of the Blantyre Miners' Institute, with its new Murray memorial rooms, Green said "this is just what Phil would have wanted. I know he would have been thrilled to know he was going to be remembered by the people of Blantyre in this way."

Green paid tribute to Scotland's union pioneers, saying:

"For it was here that Phil Murray learned the great lessons of trade unionism which he never forgot—that it is the responsibility and the duty and the privilege of the strong to help the weak. And it was here that he learned that deep, abiding concern for the welfare of his fellowman."

The CIO representative also pledged that "we shall continue to strengthen and expand the unions he built in the democratic and humanitarian image which Murray gave life, breath and meaning."

A 'Magic Penny' Brings Results

The coal mines of Britain long have been one of the black chapters of industrialism, but "the miners' magic penny" has brought some changes.

Starting after World War I, a levy of a penny per ton of coal was instituted, and now totals one million pounds a year. It provides canteens, pit-head baths, ambulances, medical services and social centers like the Blantyre Miners' Welfare Institute.

As a result, Britain's miners no longer are a race apart—and it all started with a magic penny.

UAW Gains In Plane Pact

WAGE INCREASES of more than $3.5 million a year for 32,500 CIO Auto Workers were gained by the union in a new 15-month contract with North American Aviation.

The workers are employed at plants in Los Angeles and Fresno, Calif., and Columbus, O.

Jack Conway, administrative assistant to UAW Pres. Walter P. Reuther, and E. D. Starkweather, NAA director of public relations, said the principal provisions of the new pact are:

- A 2.5% hourly wage increase after incorporating into base rates the present 3c cost of living allowances.
- A retirement plan for hourly-paid employes who retire at 65 with at least 10 years' service.
- On-the-job smoking privileges and two 10-minute rest periods per shift.

Big Issues Coming Up—

Here's When State Legislatures Meet

BIG ISSUES such as improving unemployment compensation, fighting right-to-scab bills and bettering workmen's compensation face state legislatures, 44 of which will meet next year.

Already state CIO councils are preparing to seek better laws. Here is a list of states whose legislatures will meet in 1955 and the opening dates:

Alabama—May 3	Maryland—Jan. 5	Oklahoma—Jan. 4
Arizona—Jan. 10	Massachusetts—Jan. 5	Oregon—Jan. 10
Arkansas—Jan. 10	Michigan—Jan. 12	Pennsylvania—Jan. 4
California—Jan. 3	Minnesota—Jan. 4	Rhode Island—Jan. 4
Colorado—Jan. 5	Missouri—Jan. 5	S. Carolina—Jan. 11
Connecticut—Jan. 5	Montana—Jan. 3	S. Dakota—Jan. 4
Delaware—Jan. 4	Nebraska—Jan. 4	Tennessee—Jan. 3
Florida—Apr. 5	Nevada—Jan. 17	Texas—Jan. 11
Georgia—Jan. 10	N. Hampshire—Jan. 5	Utah—Jan. 10
Idaho—Jan. 3	New Jersey—Jan. 11	Vermont—Jan. 5
Illinois—Jan. 5	New Mexico—Jan. 11	Washington—Jan. 10
Indiana—Jan. 6	New York—Jan. 5	W. Virginia—Jan. 12
Iowa—Jan. 10	N. Carolina—Jan. 5	Wisconsin—Jan. 12
Kansas—Jan. 11	N. Dakota—Jan. 4	Wyoming—Jan. 11
Maine—Jan. 5	Ohio—Jan. 3

Job Layoffs Decline In Steel Mills

UNEMPLOYMENT in the ranks of the CIO Steelworkers has dropped 15% from its August peak, USA-CIO Pres. David J. McDonald estimated last week in Pittsburgh.

Jobless members of the union are now estimated at 180,000, he said, compared to a high of 212,000 in August and about 201,000 at the end of October.

In addition, he said, the number of workers on less than 40-hour weeks has decreased to an estimated 150,000 from the August peak of 188,000, and about 166,500 on Oct. 31.

THE DROP in unemployment and short work weeks reflects increasing activity in the steel industry. Steel operations, which were at a low of 60% of capacity during the summer, have been stepped up past the 82% mark, with November the best production month in a year.

McDonald also said he had "complete confidence" that the CIO and AFL will reach organic unity in 1955.

The USA-CIO will do "more than its share" in a united labor movement, he said, "in providing money and manpower for organizing."

Retail Signs No-Raid Pact With Teamos

THE FIRST no-raiding agreement between the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union and the AFL Teamsters was signed recently in Chicago.

It covers 12 Midwest states and two Canadian provinces.

Signing the pact were RWDSU Pres. Max Greenberg and Organization Dir. Alvin Heaps and IBT Central States Conference Chairman James Hoffa and Sec.-Treas. Harold Gibbons.

The agreement noted that in inter-union raids, "the only beneficiaries of such conflict are the employers."

TERMS of the pact include that neither organization will raid the membership of the other, both unions will respect each other's picket lines, and the two unions will seek prompt settlement of any disputes under the agreement.

Greenberg said he will seek to win similar RWDSU-Teamster no-raid pacts in other areas of the country. —(PAI)

Jersey CIO Raps Rent Lid Knifing

TENANTS would be "hoodwinked by political chicanery" if New Jersey rent controls are limited to six months instead of 18, the State's CIO Council charged last week.

Only the caucus rule of the Republican Senate majority stands in the way of passage of the 18-month bill, State CIO Executive Vice Pres. Joel R. Jacobson charged.

One additional GOP member would be required to support the longer extension bill under the caucus rules, although 10 Republicans are already recorded in favor.

Opening the State CIO's legislative conference in Newark, Jacobson urged that tenants press for Senate approval of the measure already adopted by the Assembly and supported by 14 of the 21 State senators.

"A six-month extension would be a political solution to a critical social and economic problem. The housing shortage in the 67 municipalities with rent control will not be cured in six months although it might be alleviated in 18 months since housing is exempted from rent control" under the proposed measure, Jacobson said.

"Evictions for non-payment of rent, which are due to occur on Jan. 7 and Feb. 7, in the heart of winter, are just as cruel to tenants unable to find housing at reasonable rents in the heat of summer on July 7 or Aug. 7," he argued.

"To compress the decontrol of housing into a six-month period would mean that tenants have been hoodwinked by political chicanery."

The legislative conference drew 150 delegates from CIO locals in the State. Their party's position on labor laws was presented by Assemblymen Thomas Lazzio (R.) and Frank Meloni (D.), both officials of CIO unions. State Labor Commissioner Carl Holderman, former Council president, outlined his department's legislative proposals.

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

You And Your Money—

'Them As Has Gits' Is The Result Of 2 Years Of GOP Policies

By Public Affairs Institute

WHEN THE REPUBLICAN Administration took office nearly two years ago, it announced, as a primary objective of its program for economic stability and growth, the stimulation of personal savings. As Sec. of the Treasury Humphrey put it, a rise in savings was necessary to provide increased investment which in turn was needed to increase production and jobs.

How successful has that program been?

Personal savings have gone up. They are higher today than they were in the first half of 1953 and were running at a yearly rate $100 million higher in the second quarter of 1954 than they were a year earlier, even though the personal income rate of the country as a whole had fallen $700 million during that same period.

Although many factors can be said to be playing a part in this phenomenon, unquestionably a major factor has been a significant shift in the way in which national income has been distributed. There has been a substantial gain in the relative position of those shares of income which normally result in increased personal savings rather than in increased consumer spending.

Here are six broad groups which split the American income and what has happened to the relative share of each of them:

1. Interest. Those who receive interest from loans made to private borrowers. In 1952 the net interest share of the national income was 2.5%. In mid-1954 net interest had risen to 3% of the national income—a boost of 20%.

2. Rental income. This includes the net earnings of individuals from their holdings of real property, but excludes the income of corporations engaged in the real estate business. Since 1952 the rent share of national income has risen from 3.4% to 3.6%, representing a gain of nearly 6%.

3. Dividends. The ratio of dividends to national income has risen from 3.13% to 3.21%, representing a gain of 2.5%. Like the other shares, this is before taxes. However, account must be taken of the special tax relief voted dividend recipients in the 1954 tax revision voted by Congress.

4. Wages, salaries and supplementary benefits. During this same period the employes' share of national income increased 1% despite the rise in unemployment and shorter work hours. Increased wage rates for employed workers, larger supplements to wages and a rise in the government civilian payroll combined to offset the decline in employment and hours.

5. Unincorporated business and professional income. This covers most of the country's small businessmen and professionals—dentists, lawyers and doctors. Their relative position fell slightly from 8.8% of the national income in 1952 to 8.7% in mid-1954.

6. Farm income. Here we find a decided loss of ground, farmers losing 16% of their 1952 share of the national income.

FPC Ladles Out Gas Rate Hikes

IF YOU USE natural gas for heating, cooking or any other household or business chore—your bills will soon be bigger.

Reason: The Federal Power Commission has rubber-stamped, without investigation, the largest number of gas rate increases for the biggest total in its 25-year history.

And more are on the way, according to The Issue, publication of the National Issues Committee. At least 100 million gas consumers in 44 states will feel the pinch. Benefits will go chiefly to some 133 big oil companies that produce 87% of the natural gas piped to consumers.

IN THE PAST MONTH or so, the FPC has permitted about 300 rate jumps amounting to nearly $9 million a year. Close to 1000 more requests are pending, and dozens are pouring into Washington every day. Chances are that the bulk of them will be approved before the end of the year.

The flood of FPC rate increase approvals is a direct rebuff to the Supreme Court, which recently handed down a decision that was supposed to have the opposite effect.

On June 7, in the Phillips Petroleum (biggest gas producer of all) case, the court decided that the FPC has the duty to regulate prices charged to pipelines by natural gas producers.

But the FPC, according to its critics, has now amended the law by administrative action. Normally when the agency grants a rate hike, the increase is suspended for five months and then bonded when it goes into effect. This gives the FPC a chance to study the case further; if it decides finally against a rise, the bonded money is returned to consumers.

Now in most of its recent actions, the Commission has for the first time skipped both the suspension and the bond. Rate increases will go into effect at once on the basis of only the data supplied by the gas companies.

Michigan CIO To Give Yule Smokes To Vets

THE MICHIGAN CIO Council this year again is playing Santa Claus to veterans in hospitals by giving them cigarets.

The packages of cigarets are financed from a State CIO Council fund underwritten by contributions from local unions and councils in the State.

Pres. August Scholle and Sec.-Treas. Barney Hopkins of the State Council recently sent out an appeal for funds to all affiliates which do not contribute on a year-round basis.

Want To Loaf In Rockies For 2 Weeks?

CIO MEMBERS can win a free two-week Colorado vacation for two in a contest sponsored by Colorado Travel Guide and a large number of Colorado firms serving tourists to the state.

There are "no gimmicks, catches or puzzles" in the contest, according to Kyle O. Counts, president of Travel Guild Publishing Co. All that's required is to complete a statement in 500 words or less reading: "I (or we) would like a Fall — Winter — Spring — vacation in Colorado because . . ."

There's nothing to buy and no entry blank is required, but contestants must include a good photograph or snapshot. The sponsors ask that each contestant mention this news item or the source of his or her information about the contest.

Entries should be sent to Colorado Travel Guide, 1950 Curtis St., Denver 2, Colo., by July 15, 1955, contest deadline.

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

"You can have $300 in cash tomorrow for your Christmas shopping so don't let money worries pester you any longer."

"Your credit is good! You can buy your Christmas gifts now and pay later."

That's the way many loan companies and installment stores have been pounding away at wage-earners during the gift-shopping season. For it's almost as traditional for wage-earners to go into debt for Christmas as it is to have a Christmas tree. Unfortunately, often both get trimmed.

Beware The Fees On Christmas Bills

If you have succumbed to these offers of easy credit or cash loans for Christmas shopping, it would be wise to start planning to extricate yourself as soon as you can. Interest rates have a way of snowballing into large sums. Many families habitually pay out $50 to $250 a year in interest charges and fees to various lenders and credit merchants.

The actual interest charges may range from 7-12% a year interest rate charged by reputable department stores, credit unions and commercial banks, to as much as 24-30% charged by small-loan companies and the equally high, if sometimes hidden, charges exacted by some unscrupulous credit stores.

EVER SINCE THE END of World War II, there has been a trend among moderate-income families to use credit for their purchases, or borrow money rather than use their own savings, the Institute of Life Insurance has pointed out. Apparently people are afraid that if they take their own money out of savings accounts or bonds they won't replace it.

A survey made for the Federal Reserve Bank found that 60% of all families with incomes of $3000 to $7500 owe some debt, but over 80% of these same families have their own savings. The fear of using one's own savings is understandable—especially in this period of spotty unemployment and economic indecision—but costly.

Here are money-saving policies to follow to get yourself out of debt at least cost:

1. If you do decide to use your own savings to pay debts, wait until the end of the year so you don't lose the interest which will be credited to your account at that time. If you do need your cash sooner, it may be wiser to arrange for a short-term passbook loan which many banks and savings and loan associations grant, rather than draw out your money just before the end of the interest period. However, this is the only time a passbook loan may be advisable, since otherwise you do pay the bank a higher interest rate than your own money earns while it rests in your account.

2. If you haven't got savings to draw on, consider getting a consolidation loan from a low-cost lender like the credit union in your shop or a commercial bank, to pay off higher-cost lenders. But beware getting a consolidation loan from a high-cost lender like a loan company to pay other debts. This is a sad mistake on the part of the borrowers.

In fact, if your debt is to a reputable store that charges only 5% a month on the declining balance, as many department stores charge (a true interest rate of about 7% a year) it would not be wise to borrow elsewhere to cancel your debt to the store.

3. Your life insurance policy is another source for a low-cost loan to repay existing debts, if it is the kind of policy that has cash-surrender value. You can borrow from the insurance company at a rate frequently of 5%, or use the policy for collateral for a bank loan at a rate of as little as 4%. But if the policy is on the family breadwinner, remember that the family's protection is reduced by the amount of the loan and be sure to pay back this kind of loan especially promptly.

4. When you pay your debt to an installment store, beware the pressure such dealers often put on you to "add-on" to your account by making new installment purchases.

In states where installment selling is poorly regulated, you run the further risk that an add-on purchase may subject even your original purchase to repossession in case you default on the new debt. As a general rule, a store that high-pressures you to add-on is a store to avoid.

(Copyright 1954 by Sidney Margolius)

CIO Overseas Aid Role Saluted In CARE Report

CIO'S ROLE in support of CARE is featured in the ninth anniversary booklet, "People to People," just released by CARE headquarters in New York City.

The CIO Free World Labor Fund and the CIO Community Services Committee have made it possible for affiliated unions to send CARE aid abroad to strengthen the free and democratic trade union movement overseas.

Recently, CIO's participation as a CARE member agency was transferred from CIO-CSC to the Free World Labor Fund.

Under a union "Point Four" program, CIO is sending CARE-packaged organizing kits with typewriters, mimeograph machines and other office equipment to unions in Europe and Asia to help them organize the unorganized and help their fight against Communist domination.

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

OUR TASK in the coming year is a big one. We must work hard at getting jobs for the unemployed, strive at setting up machinery for achieving unity with the AFL, and work hard at organizing the unorganized workers all across the country.

That's the meaning of the policies and programs adopted by the National CIO convention in Los Angeles.

To implement those plans and attain our goals, we need the help of all CIO officers and members. This is especially true of the state CIO councils and officers.

They are in the forefront of the fight to achieve improved workmen's compensation and unemployment compensation that are so inadequate today. The councils must do battle with those who are trying to pass so-called "right-to-work laws" in the various state legislatures.

Yes, our job is a big one, but a job that can be done so long as we work together as a team to build a bigger and better CIO.

THREE BIG CIO ELECTION victories in the South prove that CIO is still doing an effective job in bringing organization to southern workers. As reported last week, the CIO Textile Workers scored a clean sweep in NLRB elections at six mills of the Cone chain in Greensboro, N. C.

The CIO Steelworkers were victorious in an election at the Alcoa plant at Rockdale, Tex. The workers favored the CIO by a vote of 548 USA-CIO to 147 AFL, 2 neither, 10 void, 2 challenged. CIO Rep. Frank McCarty and the Steelworkers' staff are to be commended for a job well done.

In the third major victory, the CIO Electrical Workers won a tremendous victory at the Magnavox plant, Greeneville, Tenn., by the following vote: eligible 1796, IUE-CIO 846, against 743. CIO Rep. Edward Lingo, with excellent assistance from CIO Rep. Melville Kress and IUE-CIO Rep. George Norcross and other IUE staff members, worked hard at bringing this victory about. Congratulations!

THE FOLLOWING CIO election victories have been reported in the past several days:

Charles Taibi, research and publicity director of the CIO Furniture Workers, reports that in an election at the Pratt Read Co., Ivoryton, Conn., employes favored the Furniture Workers by a vote of 317 UFWA-CIO to 227 AFL, 13 neither. CIO Rep. Ed McCrone was in charge of this important campaign.

CIO Rep. James B. Touchstone reports that the workers of the Lock Joint Pipe Co., Columbia, S. C., in a representation election, favored the CIO Stone and Allied Products Workers by a vote of 72 to 1 for no union. Rendering valuable assistance were CIO Rep. B. T. Judd and USAPWA-CIO Reps. Anders, Rumley and Blaylock.

Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett of the CIO Electrical Workers, reports the following important election victories: Silbert Optical Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Insulating & Fabricating Co., Watertown, Mass., IUE-CIO 49, no union 27, challenged 6; American Optical Co., Providence, R. I., (Boston—stockworkers) IUE-CIO 14, no union 12, (Providence—lab workers) IUE 6, no union 0; New Jersey Porcelain Co., Trenton, N. J., IUE-CIO 77, UE 16, no union 4, challenged 1; Lion Grinding Wheels, Ltd., Brockville, Ont., Canada, IUE received certification.

Russell J. Taylor, president of the CIO Shoe Workers, reports that in a representation election at the International Shoe Co., St. James, Mo., the workers favored the CIO Shoeworkers by a vote of 119 to 68 for no union. This drive was conducted by USWA Rep. Ewald Holtgriewe and St. Louis Dir. Dave Wilson.

TWUA Cracks Breach In Feudal 'Iron Curtain' At Elkin Mills

A WIDE breach was knocked into the anti-union wall the Chatham family has built around their feudal barony of Elkin, N. C., when they signed an NLRB agreement pledging to cease interference with their employes joining the CIO Textile Workers.

TWUA-CIO signed the agreement with reluctance, Boyd Payton, the union's southern organizing directer reported.

"We would have preferred to go to a Labor Board hearing where the tactics used by the company to discourage their workers from organizing could have been exposed . . . and the guilt of violation specifically established before a trial examiner," Payton said.

"We notified the NLRB of our desire for a public hearing but were told the Board's policy advised against public hearings if a settlement agreement with the company could be worked out."

THE AGREEMENT stems from unfair labor charges filed several months ago by TWUA in the town which is dominated by the Chatham family. The firm's real head and the area's congressman is Thurmond Chatham (D.).

The family-company's vicious opposition to union organization prompted Payton to say:

"It is a sad commentary on the affairs of this nation that while the U. S. Congress upholds the right of workers to organize, employes of a company whose president is an elected representative of Congress would be subjected to this kind of opposition."

Under the terms of the agreement the blanket-making company promises to cease threats against employes who join the TWUA or promise rewards to those who don't.

NO SUCH agreement can be exacted by the NLRB from another Elkin agency — the Anti-Union Committee. It is headed by the local mayor, banker and newspaper editor—all loyal retainers of the Chatham clan.

This committee recently tried to railroad TWUA out of Elkin with a petition drive, results of which never were announced although coercion was tried to get signatures.

One mass meeting staged by the committee was held in a theater whose use has been consistently denied to the union which has been forced to meet across the county line in Ronda because Elkin property owners are fearful of drawing the Chatham wrath.

Also recruited to help keep TWUA out of Elkin is an agency calling itself "Americanism Preferred," featuring hate-peddler Alston Calhoun. An Atlanta, Ga., firm helps the Chathams with distribution of a vicious paper, "Militant Truth."

A 'Miracle' Comes To A Mill Town

The Chatham brand was stamped on Elkin, N. C., as plainly as on its blankets until the CIO Textile Workers began their organizing drives several months ago.

The Chatham family dominates the town and its name appears everywhere — from streets, to bridges to hospitals. Its influence was everywhere, in the stores, the bank, the newspaper and in some of the pulpits.

More attractive than most southern mill towns but as dominated as the worst, Elkin is a strategic target in the TWUA-CIO southern organizing drive. The manner in which Chatham workers have rebelled against the Chatham variety of benevolent despotism has been called "a latter-day miracle" by a veteran CIO organizer.

Victory At Magnavox—

IUE Wins Another Plant In South

WORKERS at the giant Greeneville, Tenn., plant of the Magnavox Corp. won their four-year fight for a union in an NLRB election last week.

The vote was 847 for the CIO Electrical Workers to 743 for no union, with 1796 eligible.

Company opposition ranged from paying time and a half to captive audiences at hill-billy shows to threats and firings.

Employes also had to contend with the Greene County Citizens for More Jobs, a self-styled citizens committee that scattered anti-union leaflets from airplanes.

The Magnavox vote was the latest in a series of IUE southern organizing victories, and is now the second plant in the chain represented by the union. A third plant at Fort Wayne, Ind., currently is represented by the Communist-dominated United Electrical Workers, but IUE has a petition pending there for an election.

CIO Rep. Edward Lingo directed the campaign for IUE, assisted by CIO Rep. Melville Kress and IUE-CIO Reps. George Norcross and Carol Conner. Lingo also gave credit to Franz Daniel, field assistant to CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther, for a final boost to the organizing drive in a speech at a mass meeting the night before the election.

N. Y. Guild Settles Pacts On 2 Dailies

NEW CONTRACTS have been signed by the New York Newspaper Guild with the New York Post and the Daily News, providing a $5.80 average weekly increase spread over two years.

The News management made a determined effort to weaken the union security provision of the Guild contract, but agreed —just before a strike deadline— to the old clause which provides that nine out of 10 employes in the editorial room shall belong to the union.

A new clause provides that by mutual agreement an employe with 25 years or more service may resign and collect his severence pay. The new pact changes the reduction-in-staff dismissals provision, sets up a progression schedule for employes trying out for reporter or desk jobs, and clarifies the sick-leave clause.

THE POST agreed that there will always be 409 jobs, the number the Guild represents. Severence pay for persons fired for gross insubordination and gross neglect of duty will be subject to arbitration.

Meantime, the CIO Newspaper Guild has chartered its fourth local union in Canada, and the first west of Ontario. An editorial-advertising-circulation unit at the New Westminister, B. C., British Columbian was chartered. It previously was an industrial local union directly affiliated with the Canadian Congress of Labor.

Standard Oil Unions Form Joint Councils

CIO, AFL and independent unions at the world's third biggest oil refinery, the Standard Oil installation at Richmond, Calif., have reactivated the Richmond Refinery Trades Council.

Purpose of the council is "to do the best possible job of representing the individual people in our various bargaining units," Henri B. LaRue of the CIO Oil Workers, council secretary, said.

"There are many issues and problems which are common to all of the unions in the Standard Oil refinery which cannot be resolved by the individual union, but which can be resolved through concerted effort by all the unions in the refinery," he declared.

LaRue noted that there were "obvious differences in organization" between the three union groups, but said that "our goals are precisely the same."

Council president is W. J. Clark of the AFL Boilermakers, and Don Deabenderfer of the AFL Machinists is vice president. Other affiliated groups are the AFL Electrical Workers, the AFL Carpenters and the Northern California Council of the Independent Union of Petroleum Workers.

ADDITIONALLY, OWIU-CIO Local 561, which is part of the Richmond Council, and OWIU-CIO Local 547 at El Segundo, which represents Standard Oil workers at that refinery, have set up a joint council to strengthen their bargaining positions.

Coast Veteran Of TWU Is Dead

A veteran San Francisco unionist, Henry S. Foley, died last week at 65. Foley retired a few years ago as president of the CIO Transport Workers Municipal Carmen's Union. Some years ago he was a San Francisco CIO Council officer.

CIO on ABC
Monday thru Friday
John W. Vandercook
AND THE NEWS

AFL Slams Merger Door On Red Furriers' Union

A VIGOROUS, unanimous thumbs down by the AFL Executive Council last week greeted the proposal of the AFL Meat Cutters & Butcher Workmen to merge with the independent Fur & Leather Workers, ousted by CIO in 1950 for Communist-domination.

Meanwhile, democratic leather workers in New England and the Midwest were rallying to the Leather & Tannery Workers Organizing Committee, chartered at the recent CIO convention in Los Angeles.

Despite the opposition of AFL's top body, the merger plans were being pressed by leaders of the 265,000-member Meatcutters and the Furriers, who claim 60,000 membership. Sec.-Treas. Patrick Gorman of the Meatcutters professed "absolute surprise" at the Executive Council action and said merger plans "cope with" the Communist problem in the Fur Workers.

The AFL said approval of the merger was denied because "it would be completely contrary to the longtime position of the AFL in opposition to the control and domination of American workers by Communist agents."

The Council said merger would bring in the Furriers "lock, stock and barrel, including many well-known Communists in key positions of leadership . . . (and this) in no way meets the problem of Communist domination from the viewpoint of the AFL."

Furriers Pres. Abe Feinglass recently succeeded Ben Gold, who resigned after his conviction for perjury in filing a Taft-Hartley non-Communist affidavit.

Economic Outlook—

'Growing Menace' Of Unfair Sales Tax Hit In CIO Study

THE "GROWING menace" of sales taxes was denounced last week by the CIO, which said that such "regressive" state and local taxation is forcing low and moderate income families to bear "more and more" of the tax burden.

The reason, according to the CIO Economic Outlook, is that "despite many loopholes," federal taxes are based on ability to pay, while most state and local taxes "take more, proportionately, from those who are least able to pay."

The publication, issued by CIO's Dept. of Education and Research summarizes some of the major recommendations in the Handbook on State and Local Taxes which the department has just issued. (See adjoining column.)

The Outlook's prime criticism of state and local taxation was that in 1953 more than 59% of all state tax revenues came from sales taxes levied on consumers, while only 17% came from individual and corporate state income taxes.

Shifting of responsibility for civilian public services onto states and localities is a major reason for the increase in their taxes, the Outlook declared.

Such collections "already account for more than two-thirds of all tax revenue spent for schools, highways, health, recreation, police protection and the rest," it noted.

"Common sense and fairness should have led state governments to turn more and more to income taxes to meet their growing revenue needs," the CIO said. "Only income taxes with rates that move upward as incomes rise conform to the principle of progressive taxation based upon 'ability to pay.'

"The failure to produce adequate revenue from most of the state income taxes reflects the serious defects in their structure. Sometimes exemptions are unjustifiably high, while at the same time the tax rates are unduly low."

The same "defects," the Outlook said, apply to almost all of the state income taxes on corporations. "Income taxes in most states are shockingly low because the reactionaries who so often control state legislatures want it that way," it charged.

THE PUBLICATION listed a five-point plan for making property taxes fairer and more productive of revenue since "they will unquestionably continue to be the most important source of local revenue for many years to come."

Besides overhauling property tax systems, CIO said, "all cities should be granted authority by the state legislatures to levy genuinely progressive income taxes of their own," with the amount to be determined by the citizens of each locality.

Sales Levies Now Top Revenue Source

The extent of what CIO's Economic Outlook called the "growing sales tax menace," is best shown by the fact that 59% of all state tax revenue is coming from general and selective sales taxes.

General sales taxes are now imposed in 32 states, with 11 of them added since World War II. They are levied even on purchases of food and medicine and account for as much as 52% of total state revenue in West Virginia.

All 48 states collect selective sales taxes on specific commodities like cigarets, gasoline, beverages and the like. These two kinds of taxes together raise from 70% to 84% of the total revenue in 16 states.

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

Ohio Jobless Pay Petitions Filed

THE DRIVE to "humanize and liberalize" Ohio's unemployment compensation laws has been climaxed with filing of over 135,000 signatures from 72 counties by the Ohio CIO Council calling for action by the Legislature.

The initiative petition, according to Council Pres. James P. Griffin, "indicates a real concern on the part of the people of Ohio for the problems of unemployed workers and their families."

The Legislature was asked to increase the present weekly maximum from $30 to $50 and the duration of benefits from 26 to 39 weeks, to eliminate indiscriminate appeals by employers and to raise dependency allowances from $2.50 per child for no more than two dependents to $3 a week per dependent and not to exceed three dependents.

The Council has maintained that the Ohio law, which does not even match poor relief standards in the State, has been getting worse instead of better in recent years. The worker, as a result, has been forced to accept less and less in benefits in relation to his weekly wage.

It is estimated that the CIO petitions must contain about 78,000 valid signatures to comply with the law. Petitions must contain about 3% of the total vote cast for governor at the last general election and 1.5% of the vote from at least 44 counties.

If the Legislature fails to act to the satisfaction of the CIO, more signatures can be obtained and the matter placed on the ballot at the next statewide election.

Council Sec.-Treas. Jacob Clayman said "although we have filed enough signatures to amply comply with the law, thousands of other Ohioans also have indicated their desire for a liberalization of the present laws."

Griffin commented that Ohio's unemployed "are being treated shabbily and in a manner which doesn't add any luster to the history of the State."

FINAL CHECK—Officials of the Ohio CIO Council make a last-minute tally of the 135,000 signatures on petitions calling for jobless pay improvements by the Legislature. From left: Council Staff Reps. Julius Uehlein and Charles Mitchell and Assistant Sec.-Treas. John Rooney.

TWU Cancels Philadelphia Tieup

Local 234, CIO Transport Workers, agreed to a 30-day cooling-off period at the expiration of its contract last week with the Philadelphia Transportation Co.

In return, the company agreed not to press an injunction suit against the union to halt a strike which had been planned.

LABOR ANALYZES GROWING PROBLEMS!

Two problems of vital concern to all trade unionists and all good citizens are the open shop, "right to scab" laws in 17 states and the complexities of state and local taxation.

The Case Against "Right To Work" Laws presents a thorough analysis of the legal and economic aspects of these laws, and indicates their danger both to trade unions and the community as a whole.

A Handbook on State and Local Taxes examines these levies, points out present inequities and suggests changes to produce needed revenue more fairly.

Clip the coupon below and order these two CIO publications today!

CIO Dept. of Education and Research
718 Jackson Place, N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

We would like to place an order for the following publications:

The Case Against "Right to Work" Laws, 171 pages, ☐ paper bound, $2; ☐ cloth bound, $3.

A Handbook on State and Local Taxes, 142 pages, ☐ paper bound, $2; ☐ cloth bound, $3.

☐ Both books, paper bound, $3.50.

Name.....

Address.....

City.....Zone.....State.....

Organization.....

CWA Says NLRB Order 'Hits Close To Home'

THE CIO Communications Workers accused the Eisenhower Administration of "not giving a fair shake to workers" in a new NLRB decision that "hit close to home for telephone workers."

The decision, by a 3-to-2 GOP majority, applied a previous doctrine of a $200,000 profit minimum as a limit on board jurisdiction over radio and television stations to telephone and telegraph companies.

The dissent, by Democratic members Ivar Peterson and Abe Murdock, said the ruling would deny board protection to 80% of the country's radio stations and one-third of the interstate telephone companies.

Replying to a majority statement that "less than 1%" of all interstate telephone employes were involved, Peterson said this was not the "critical" point. He declared that the new standard was "giving immunity in many localities to employers and unions for the potential disruption of this nation's communication system by industrial strife."

Also eliminated by the ruling, Peterson said, were nearly 5000 intrastate companies with interstate connections.

He attacked the ruling as "incongruous," saying that Taft-Hartley provisions sanctioning damage suits in federal courts against some union activities would still apply to persons cut off from NLRB protection.

Federal regulation of "all other significant aspects of broadcasting" still applies through the Federal Communications Commission, he added.

THE CASE in point involved board refusal to consider a California radio-television labor dispute between the Hanford Broadcasting Co. and Local 202 of the Radio-TV Technicians Div. of the AFL Electrical Workers.

In another action, CWA said, the board "pretty clearly called a halt" to minor splinter movements among labor groups in operating telephone companies.

The NLRB rejected a petition of the AFL Operating Engineers to carve out a five-man unit of stationary engineers in the Denver area from a group represented by CWA since 1939. (Related story on Page 8.)

C. Of C. Pushes For Curb On Labor

"Unreconstructed" employers are trying to cripple unions through the device of anti-trust laws.

One such demand came from U. S. Chamber of Commerce Pres. Clem D. Johnson in a recent speech.

Another Chamber spokesman took off on Labor Sec. Mitchell and announced the Chamber favors state right-to-scab laws as "sound and wise." He reported that "new interest is snowballing" among business groups for such legislation.

CWA Wins 5c At Globe Wireless

Wage boosts averaging 5c an hour were won by the CIO Communications Workers for 106 employes in a new contract with Globe Wireless, with headquarters in San Francisco.

CIO Leaders Visit Mexico
Photo Story—Pages 6 and 7

The CIO News

Official Weekly Publication, Congress of Industrial Organizations

Washington, D. C., December 27, 1954 — Vol. 17, No. 52

'Right To Scab' Law Denounced

—See Page 2

Digging In For Sure— Making sure that the new Philip Murray Building headquarters of the CIO Electrical Workers gets off to a good start is IUE-CIO Pres. James B. Carey, at controls of power shovel during groundbreaking for the union's new Washington home. Carey, who is also CIO secretary-treasurer, said the building will be "a tribute and a lasting memorial to the late, great president of the CIO." IUE will occupy three and a half floors of the six-story structure on 16th Street. (See Story on Page 3.)

New CIO Report Says—

Scab Laws Harm States Which Adopt 'Em

STATE "right to work" laws are the fruit of "fraudulent slogans" and a "veneer of high principles" that adversely affect not only unions but the communities that enact them, the CIO charged last week.

Such legislation is "a threat to sound industrial relations and economic progress," and it "is hard to see" how it can reduce unit labor costs to any material degree, the CIO said in a new 171-page publication, "The Case Against 'Right to Work' Laws."

The volume discusses in detail the laws now on the statute books of 17 states and being advocated by anti-labor elements in other states. It covers legal and philosophical as well as economic aspects, and was prepared jointly by the CIO Legal and and Education and Research Depts.

"To organized labor," it maintains, "these laws are a menace.

"THEY PRESENT a threat to the attempt to extend union organization. They hamper collective bargaining. And they make local union administration a daily and unnecessary difficulty.

"Many people think that these laws narrowly affect trade unionists alone. But, in reality, they have adverse effects on the communities that adopt them.

"Although these laws are proposed as a means for achieving economic progress, their advocates aim at low wage incomes for working people.

—Fitzpatrick in St. Louis Post-Dispatch
Unexpected Snowball

"While they are presented in the name of justice and freedom, they restrict the rights of labor organizations and their members and impede the development of trade unions, which have proven themselves to be a bulwark of democracy in an industrial society."

When the prattle about principle and the "illusory promise" of economic progress are stripped from their advocates' claims, the volume maintains, "a reality of low wages and poor working conditions" is revealed.

"Low incomes for workers mean low living standards that affect businessmen, farmers and professionals," the CIO points out. "Rather than creating an environment that promotes economic growth, 'right to work' laws may delay expansion of the communities that adopt them.

"There is no evidence that 'right to work' laws can or do result in economic progress. Neither is there any evidence that they can contribute to the achievement of peaceful industrial relations."

The legislative histories of the 17 laws now on the books is traced. In each case, the publication notes, they were approved "in the name of states' rights and the right to work."

Both catch-phrases, it continues, are "a cloak or disguise" for anti-unionism. The people who favor such laws do not want to get rid of federal control of labor-management relations, it goes on, but seek only to add new prohibitions making the Taft-Hartley Act more anti-labor.

Use of "states' rights" as a tag for this aim, the volume maintains, is "a fraud . . . a perversion of an ancient and political slogan to ends wholly unrelated to the slogan's history or meaning."

"It is a fraud first, the CIO adds, "because those using it do not mean that the states shall handle relations instead of the federal government, or even that federal regulation shall be curtailed in favor of expanded state regulation, but only that the states shall add their restrictions on unions to those of the federal government.

"THE USE of the 'states' rights' slogan is a fraud, secondly, because those using it do not mean that the states shall have unconditional power to regulate labor unions, but rather that the states shall have this power upon condition that their regulations are anti-union."

Legislation intended to keep down wages by barring unions, the publication says, "is utterly obnoxious on two important grounds:"

"That the nation needs a high wage economy, and not a low wage economy; and that the nation must continue to function as a single-market economic unit, instead of being economically balkanized by states seeking special competitive advantages against each other," the report says.

"WHAT a few employers seek, rather, is to keep wages low for themselves. Obviously, such an arrangement, apart from its flagrant injustices, cannot, if it really serves to give these employers a competitive advantage, last very long."

"In reality," it concludes, "'right to work' laws aid no one —neither workers, business nor the community—other than a very small percentage of low-wage, anti-union employers."

Unity

The first joint CIO-AFL legislative committee in Maryland history has been established to fight the right-to-scab law threatening in the coming session of the General Assembly.

State CIO Council Pres. Robert Martin and State AFL Pres. Harry Cohen are co-chairman of the subcommittee formed to recommend a program for the two organizations. —(PAI)

Cause And Effect

Workers don't make out too well under the open shop bills that go by the pious-sounding name of "right-to-work" laws. Per capita personal income in the U. S. averaged $1709 in 1953, but here's how right-to-scab states stacked up.

State	Date of Adoption	1953 Per Capita Income
Alabama	1953	$1043
Arizona	1947	$1473
Arkansas	1947	$ 939
Florida	1944	$1368
Georgia	1947	$1184
Iowa	1947	$1518
Louisiana	1954	$1249
Mississippi	1954	$ 834
Nebraska	1947	$1533
Nevada	1952	$2175
North Carolina	1947	$1097
North Dakota	1947	$1295
South Carolina	1954	$1095
South Dakota	1947	$1362
Tennessee	1947	$1186
Texas	1947	$1480
Virginia	1947	$1361

Mayor Seeks Runaways With Open Shop Pitch

WHEN MISSISSIPPI passed its open shop law, it didn't take long for anti-union public officials to capitalize on it in recruiting runaway plants.

Take the case of the town of Pelahatchie, pop. 989, about 25 miles west of the State capital, Jackson. Immediately letters went out to northern manufacturers over the signature of Mayor H. C. Rhodes.

"The closed union shop has just been outlawed," this public-spirited booster of the thriving metropolis of Pelahatchie crowed in a letter personally addressed to the president of H. B. Ives Co., a hardware, heating and plumbing firm in New Haven, Conn., with an A-plus-A-one Dun and Bradstreet rating.

"For either a main or a branch plant, we will provide the site and building just as you want them," the mayor wrote, "making the carrying charges easy—eventually becoming as low as $1 per year with taxes being exempted up to 99 years, and you make no capital outlay for them.

"Then our wonderful labor, 98% native born, mostly high school graduates, will lower average hourly industrial wage rates 6c to 49c below other Southern States, and from 50c to 95c below Northern States. You will also get a much higher average man production, some plants even getting double what they got in their Northern plants.

"THIS LABOR is truly American, not inflicted with the 'Something for Nothing' idea and works together joyously with Management for the success of both. . . . No one will tell you whom you must employ and all detrimental State laws for industrial operations have been repealed."

The Joker

The Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer hit the nail on the head in a recent editorial when it said the "joker in the Taft-Hartley law is that it takes precedence over a state law permitting a closed shop, but is superseded by a state law forbidding a union shop."

"That provision is manifestly unfair," the editorial concluded. "Under it, the labor laws of 31 states are nullified while those of 17 states are given a higher status than the federal law."

2 CIO Books Analyze Growing Problems—

Two problems of vital concern to all trade unionists and all good citizens are the open shop, "right to scab" laws in 17 states and the complexities of state and local taxation.

The Case Against "Right To Work" Laws presents a thorough analysis of the legal and economic aspects of these laws, and indicates their danger both to trade unions and the community as a whole.

A Handbook on State and Local Taxes examines these levies, points out present inequities and suggests changes to produce needed revenue more fairly.

Clip the coupon below and order these two CIO publications today!

CIO Dept. of Education and Research
718 Jackson Place, N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

We would like to place an order for the following publications:

The Case Against "Right to Work" Laws, 171 pages,
☐ paper bound, $2; ☐ cloth bound, $3.

A Handbook on State and Local Taxes, 142 pages,
☐ paper bound, $2; ☐ cloth bound, $3.

☐ Both books, paper bound, $3.50.

Name.....

Address.....

City.....Zone.....State.....

Organization.....

Scab Law States Low In Income

FACTS and figures on economic expansion show that no economic growth results from open shop laws, the CIO said in its book, The Case Against "Right-to-Work" Laws. An excerpt from this section of the book:

Despite rapid increases in employment and incomes between 1939 and 1953, the less developed states generally are still behind the nation as a whole.

Every one of the "right to work" states had per capita personal incomes in 1953 that were below the national average except Nevada, which has benefitted from its upper-income resort center and tourist trade.

In fact, several of the "right to work" states in 1953 were among the lowest per capita personal income states in the nation—such as Arkansas, Alabama and North Carolina.

In contrast, the West Coast states, which also developed rapidly after 1939, had per capita personal incomes in 1953 which were above the national average.

THIS comparison between the "right to work" states and the West Coast states is well worth noting. California, Oregon and Washington experienced economic improvements since 1939 without "right to work" laws, and with relatively high wage and salary structures.

If the laws are an aid to economic development, some spectacular advances should have been experienced in the states that enacted such legislation. There is no evidence whatsoever of any such advances in the states that adopted "right to work" laws.

Indeed, an examination of the available data shows that the rate of economic advances slowed down in those states after 1947, when most of this legislation was adopted.

Non-farm employment, for example, rose 62% in the eight years, 1939-1947, in Texas—an average yearly increase of 7.8%. And it slowed down to a rise of 29% in the six years 1947-1953—an average increase of 4.8% a year. In that same state, industrial employment rose 80% in the eight-year period, and only 35% in the later six-year period.

SCENES at dedication of the Philip Murray School, on Chicago's South Side. At left, plaque is admired by Principal J. Mel O'Rourke (far left), students and Rabbi Jacob Weinstein, chief speaker. Center: kindergarten pupils pictured during dedication pageant. Right: ceremony participants (from left) were Rabbi Weinstein; School Supt. Benjamin Willis; Cook County PAC Dir. R. J. Levin (whose son, David, attends new school); and Henry J. Henry, assistant director of CIO Reg. 8, who also spoke. The Murray school is a $500,000 structure.

Phil Murray Praised As Chicago School Is Dedicated

SCHOOL children on Chicago's South Side, who in future years will enroll in the Philip Murray Public School, will "utter a name with the sound of a silver trumpet in it."

That was the tribute paid the late president of the CIO and the Steelworkers, as the Philip Murray School was dedicated recently. Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein, a member of the public advisory board of the Philip Murray Memorial Foundation, was the principal speaker. He also presented an illuminated picture case, to be a permanent installation in the foyer of the new $500,000 elementary school.

OTHERS participating in the ceremony were Henry J. Henry, assistant director of CIO Reg. 8, and Dr. Benjamin C. Willis, superintendent of schools.

"Philip Murray dedicated his life to restore the dignity of labor by giving the laboring man a voice in determining the conditions of his employment," Rabbi Weinstein said.

"He desired that working men and women might face illness, old age and unemployment without dread. He labored to build a storm-proof roof over the collective head of labor and a sustaining floor under its collective feet."

Henry predicted that Murray's name "will serve as an inspiration to the children who make use of these facilities" and stated that the school "will stand as a permanent monument to the noble aspirations of an outstanding American."

TWU Wins On Northwest

NAVIGATORS for Northwest Orient Airlines won a landslide representation victory as they cast a unanimous ballot for the CIO Transport Workers recently.

The navigators, who will be represented by TWU's Air Transport Div., were formerly members of the Air Carriers Navigators' Association.

TWU-ATD Dir. James F. Horst announced that negotiations for a new contract will begin as soon as Local 523 is certified by the National Mediation Board which conducted the mail balloting.

IUE Starts Construction On Philip Murray Building

CONSTRUCTION of the new Philip Murray Building headquarters of the CIO Electrical Workers in Washington got under way last week with Pres. James B. Carey at the controls of the power-shovel.

Carey, who is also CIO secretary-treasurer, and IUE Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett turned the first spadesful of earth before a crowd of well-wishers during the brief, informal groundbreaking ceremonies.

Named in honor of the late CIO president, Carey said the headquarters "will be a permanent expression of the IUE-CIO's gratitude and its affection for one of the greatest advocates of human dignity and brotherhood in the history of the American labor movement."

Set into the marble wall of the lobby of the new six-story structure will be a portrait of Philip Muray, illuminated by a perpetual light.

IUE will occupy the top three floors plus half the second floor for a board room, giving it 20,000 square feet of space compared to its present 7500 in a downtown office building. Present plans call for renting out the rest of the space, preferably to other CIO affiliates.

The $500,000 cost of the building and site in the 1100 block of 16th Street is being subscribed by IUE members.

Architect for IUE's new home is A. R. Clas. Construction is expected to be completed within a year.

Unity Committees To Meet Jan. 4

A meeting of the full CIO and AFL unity committees will be held in Washington at 2:00 p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 4.

The two committees are headed by CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and AFL Pres. George Meany. Last joint meeting of the committees was in Washington on Oct. 15.

'Subversion On Extreme Right' Exposed In Report To House

THE LID on the Pandora's box of neo-fascist hate groups that have sprung up since the war was tilted last week by the House Un-American Activities Committees—and out spilled some of the same old names, plus a couple of new ones.

It sharply condemned such bodies as "subversion from the extreme right" in a report released originally by its staff, then later formally made public by the committee itself after minor changes.

It cited the National Renaissance Party of New York, a newcomer to hate circles, and the semi-monthly publication "Common Sense," printed at Union City, N. J., by Conde J. McGinley, an old hand at promoting racial strife, and his son, C. J. McGinley. It called the party and the magazine examples of "this demagogic menace."

"The committee condemns any such resurgence of pro-Fascist and hate activity," the report said. "Subversion cannot be combatted by subversion."

THE COMMITTEE asked the Justice Dept. to invoke the Smith Act against the Renaissance group, but made no such recommendation about "Common Sense." It called the former "neo-Fascist" and "clearly subversive and un-American."

The report said the NRP is the creature of "a young fanatic," James H. Madole, Beacon, N. Y., on the Hudson River about 50 miles above New York City.

Its headquarters at first were in Beacon, where it was founded in 1949, then were shifted to the German-populated Yorkville section of New York. However, the Associated Press said no trace of it could be found at the New York address given. It has between 200 and 700 members.

"The program and propaganda of the NPR," the report stated, "is virtually borrowed wholesale from the Fascist and Nazi dictatorships."

Madole, accompanied "by a handful of young fanatics wearing dark caps and trousers, and brassards on which a lightning bolt replaces the swastika," frequently proclaims his doctrines at New York street corner meetings, the report said.

RECENTLY, according to the New York Times, he presided at a meeting of "Patriots for McCarthy" in New York. The newspaper quoted him as saying at an open air meeting on May 1, 1953:

"I am proud of being a Fascist and a Nazi. They (the Jews) have got to get the same concentration camps they got in Germany and Italy. We've got to get rid of them, the sooner the better."

The McGinleys publish "Common Sense" under the name of "The Christian Educational Association, a shrewd and growing business," the committee said.

"Through the columns of 'Common Sense' and innumerable booklets printed and offered for sale," the report said, "the McGinleys appear to serve as a clearing house for hate propagandists throughout the country. Among these are many of the native Fascists and hate racketeers who were active in the 1930's."

The publication is marked by vitriolic anti-Semitism. It has reprinted articles by some of the country's most vicious Jew-baiters, or had advertised their publications.

Among them are such veteran hate specialists as some survivors of the wartime sedition trials: Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, the "Red Network" author; Gen. George Van Horn Moseley (ret.), once regarded as a possible feurher by fellow pro-Nazis; Col. Eugene N. Sanctuary; Charles B. Hudson, "Gentile News" columnist, and Robert Edward Edmundson.

Ham Fish Starts New Fringe Group

Former Rep. Hamilton Fish (R. N. Y.), who has fronted for more reactionary, right wing groups than even he can shake a stick at, has come up with another. It's the American Political Action Committee — and it's no relative of CIO-PAC.

He announced its formation last week "to fight domination of both major parties by left wing internationalists," a familiar theme with him. More specifically, it's ag'in "communism, Marxism, socialism, left wing New Dealism, American handouts to foreign nations, one-worldism, super-nationalism" and Americans for Democratic Action. The announcement made no mention of its position on motherhood.

FIRST SPADESFUL—CIO Electrical Workers Pres. James B. Carey, second from right, and IUE Sec.-Treas. Al Hartnett pitch in on shovels at groundbreaking for new IUE Philip Murray Building headquarters. From left: contractor Joe Nebel, architect A. R. Clas and realtor James Dixon watch.

Hope For 1955

Let us hope and pray that 1955 will not be a second-best year or a third-best year—but that 1955 will be the very best, for America and the world: a year of peace, security, prosperity and good health and liberty for all the people on this planet.

The people want bread, not bombs; security, not starvation; freedom, not frustration.

And what they want, they should have and they can have.

NAM Rides Again

Just when everybody is getting full of that old Christmas spirit, the National Association of Manufacturers decides the hour has come to cast itself once again in the role of Scrooge.

This is a familiar role for the NAM—and, indeed, its latest pronouncement has a familiar Scrooge-NAM ring to it.

Says the NAM: social security old age payments shouldn't be based on "adequate benefits"—but rather on "minimum subsistence."

Having studied the 1954 improvements—moderate improvements—in the Social Security law, the NAM points with alarm to the fact that old age pension payments are getting "bigger and better."

Most folks would think that's wonderful. But not the Scrooge-NAM, which worries that "today's bargain benefits" will ruin taxpayers yet unborn and remove the incentive to work among people who have been working all their lives until they get those still-meager social security pensions.

We feel sorry for the stuffed shirts of the NAM. Sorry that they can't get rid of the Scrooge attitude even during Christmas week; sorry that really they can't get any fun out of watching our country make social progress.

Merry Christmas, NAM—and cheer up;-it's really not that bad.

Symbol On 16th Street

Ground has been broken for a new building on 16th Street in Washington—just across the way from the Embassy of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The building will be the new headquarters of the CIO Electrical Workers. The IUE-CIO building will also be a challenge and a symbol to the not-very-diplomatic representatives of the USSR across the street.

Facing the Soviet Embassy, the IUE-CIO headquarters will be a constant reminder that free workers prefer democracy, and have contempt for the type of dictatorship over the workers that the Communists have built wherever they have achieved power.

Disappointment?

We suggest you take a good look at the CIO's financial statement, published on Page 11 of this week's issue.

It shows that the CIO's income was higher for the year ending Sept. 30 than for the 12 months ending Sept. 30, 1953. The deficit in CIO's operations came from expanding activities, not from lower income.

These facts will come as a disappointment to all those gossip-artists who have been "assuring" the world that the CIO is going bankrupt. The figures talk louder than the whispers.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

WALTER P. REUTHER
President

JOHN V. RIFFE
Executive Vice President

JAMES B. CAREY
Secretary-Treasurer

VICE PRESIDENTS

Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, O. A. Knight, Michael Quill, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum, James G. Thimmes

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Editors, Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Gervase N. Love, William Millis, Al Zack, Eugene Kelley, Ed Lashman.

Editorial Office: 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. 5c a copy, $1 a year, $1.50 a year in Canada. Mail subscriptions: Old and new addresses and three weeks' notice are required for change of address.

Vol. XVII December 27, 1954 No. 52

Changing Shifts

In Other Words—

The Right To Employment

The right to employment, rather than a property right in a job, is the aim of today's trade union movement, says Research Dir. Solomon Barkin of the CIO Textile Workers in "Industrial Conflict," a publication of McGraw Hill Book Co. Excerpts follow:

By SOLOMON BARKIN

REFORMERS and trade unionists over the years have been challenged by the highly protected position of property owners. How could workers secure an equal set of rights?

BARKIN

The historical battle for political liberty resulted in freeing property from the restraints and controls of the state. The rights of man became the immunities of property. After their release, legislation and the judiciary combined to protect property and erected a system of common law that effectively guarded property owners.

Such freedom was of no benefit to the mass of persons without property. For them a new system of rights has been sought. One was to establish a structure of inalienable rights in jobs and rights to income. These would balance the rights of property. But this course proved difficult and the results were inadequate.

The rights of individuals to a social system which produces economic security, expanding opportunities and advancing living standards has been reflected in a number of the more recent national constitutions. It has reached its fullest expression in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights proclaimed by the United Nations, which declares that "all of us have the right to work and the right to choose the kind of work we may desire . . . (and) are entitled to just and favorable wages ensuring for ourselves and our families an existence worthy of human dignity . . ."

The advent of the commercial and industrial revolutions demolished the system of legal rights to jobs and conditions of employment. The medieval guilds and laws of apprenticeship disappeared or were repealed. The cruel forces of early industrialism uprooted all forms of protection for the laborer and left the employer free to hire and secure his workers at his own terms.

Out of this struggle emerged the organization of craft workers. Their labors were prized and their bargaining powers were at times considerable. Their unions were the first to survive.

Employers and our legal system have strongly resisted the rise of the system of collective property rights in jobs sought by craft unions. Even the more elementary worker rights to strike, unionize, picket, enjoy free speech and bargain collectively have been realized only after long struggles. No sooner were they gained than the courts restrained them through new interpretations. The courts have spurned attempts to provide the worker with equity in jobs and thereby raise him to a position more nearly on a par with the property owner.

The trade union in the newer industries cannot control a specific technology or job. The plant includes a vast range of jobs at which workers of the most diverse skills, experience, attitudes and personalities may be employed. Workers band together into industrial unions for the same basic reasons.

The union must reflect all their needs. It must obtain protection for all of them in face of technical changes which modify older tasks, supplant older jobs by new ones, substitute new production techniques and procedures for older ones, eliminate old products and create new ones.

Labor And New Technology

In this setting the union does not seek collective property rights in jobs. Even when it protests an employer's effort to contract out specific types of work normally performed by his own crew, such as new construction or cafeterias, it is not seeking them for its own control.

The union's basic goal in negotiation is to define the rules regulating the rights of classes of individuals to different employment opportunities.

The workers' fight for security has, by and large, except for areas in which craft unionism is strongly entrenched, been converted into a battle for an economic society which will assure an abundance of employment opportunities for all.

The rights of groups of workers to jobs and to specific terms of employment have been evolving through collective bargaining. Individual security and opportunity are being advanced in an era where government is determining and trade unions are negotiating, terms for the use of private property.

1954—The Year McKinley Got Slapped Down

By ED LASHMAN

THE YEAR the GOP's big-business Administration tried to re-make the country in the image of McKinley era economics — and got slapped down for it—that's the way 1954 looks in retrospect.

Here were some of the highlights:

- "Gloom and doom" shouters was what Administration officials called CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther and others who asked for action as the nation's toll of jobless mounted, but themselves refused to recognize the existence of the problem until election eve.
- CIO and AFL unity negotiators put into effect the No-Raiding Agreement, marking "an era of good feeling," and in later negotiations set the goal of creating a "single trade union center" in the U. S.
- A major White House-supported drive to add anti-labor amendments to Taft-Hartley ground to a halt before solid opposition of Senate Democrats, but the GOP-dominated NLRB succeeded in "amendment by decree" as a series of restrictive decisions reversed doctrines protecting workers' rights.
- Living costs fluttered around all-time highs, spotlighted by skyrocketing coffee prices that hit as much as $1.25 a pound, but farmers went farther in the hole while Agriculture Sec. Benson managed to ram lower, "flexible" price supports through the GOP Congress.
- The result was a clean-sweep victory in the November elections for Democrats, who won control of both Senate and House, along with major gains in state governorships.
- The one significant gain of the year was the Supreme Court's decision to abolish public school segregation as unconstitutional.

Month by month, 1954's high spots looked like this:

JANUARY echoed with "pious phrases" by Pres. Eisenhower as he promised "to maintain a strong, growing economy," but CIO said it would judge the Administration by "its ability to translate these fine sentiments into tangible and constructive programs to meet the problems of all Americans."

Making T-H Worse

In a special 14-point labor message to Congress, the President spelled out his notion of proper Taft-Hartley changes. These were immediately characterized by Reuther as making the law "worse" instead of "fair and just" as he promised in the 1952 election campaign. Chief target for criticism was a proposal for a pre-strike vote, termed "an open insult to unions, their leaders, and especially to union members."

FEBRUARY had its own "prevue of coming attractions" as employment dropped by one million workers in one month, the Administration appointed avowedly pro-employer Albert C. Beeson to the NLRB and the CIO charged that the GOP tax bill would give $3 billion in tax relief chiefly to a few families owning four-fifths of all stocks.

It was also the month when Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams called the CIO and all others daring to mention climbing U. S. unemployment "political sadists." The CIO News commented editorially that "all the Republican epithets" wouldn't put jobless back to work.

Forging A New Link

MARCH was the month the Administration put off again doing something about the plight of unemployed, originally promised for "the spring," and CIO called for a 10-point program to "keep America at work." On the labor scene, the shift of the 20,000-member General Electric Schenectady, N. Y., local from the Communist-dominated United Electrical Workers to the CIO Electrical Workers made big news—a move later reaffirmed in an NLRB election. The Philip Murray Memorial Foundation—set up by CIO affiliates to honor the late president of CIO and the Steelworkers—was announcing a series of "living memorials" which by year's end totalled $1 million. The awards went to a wide range of labor, religious, medical and educational institutions. Among them were the National Council of Churches of Christ, Catholic hospitals and agencies, Histadrut, Harvard and Roosevelt Universities, and the American Association for the United Nations.

Jobless Rate Climbs

Unemployment climbed to a new total of 3,671,000, and CIO demanded immediate action to halt the climb, then at a faster rate than in the last recession.

APRIL saw the Administration's Taft-Hartley steamroller moving to crush any opposition to a whole series of restrictive amendments, one of the worst of which would legalize a series of anti-union laws in interstate commerce under the guise of "states' rights." CIO Steelworkers Pres. David J. McDonald proposed a $17 billion national prosperity program to the White House to offset such growing unemployment as USA's own 446,000 members laid off or working only part time.

The CIO Auto Workers education conference in Chicago unveiled the union's guaranteed annual wage program, and served as a forum for Bishop Bernard J. Sheil to deliver a stinging denunciation of Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) as an immoral anti-Communist playing a "shell game" with the Soviet menace to America.

In MAY, the nation saw itself vindicated in the eyes of the world as the Supreme Court handed down one of its historic decisions, ruling unanimously that segregation in public schools is unconstitutional and must be abolished. CIO leaders hailed the decree as "a heart-warming reaffirmation of American democratic principles," noting CIO's role in the cases as a "friend of the court."

No-Raid Pact Signed

CIO also achieved a notable victory on the legislative front with the shelving of the Administration's drive for a super-Taft-Hartley. And CIO called a full employment conference in Washington designed to focus attention on this biggest national problem, which had already cost some $26 billion in lost production.

In JUNE, a solid foundation for peace in the American labor movement and ultimately unity of its two major branches was laid down when top officials of the CIO and AFL ratified the No-Raiding Agreement. The ban on harmful, costly inter-union raids covers more than 10 million union members. The pact, CIO and AFL officers predicted, would "usher in an era of good feeling and cooperation in the labor movement" which would speed the negotiations for organic unity.

JULY marked some notable union victories, among them the CIO Steelworkers' 12c package contract, a smashing election triumph for the CIO Transport Workers covering 35,000 New York City transit workers, and the almost 2-1 repudiation of the Communist-dominated United Electrical Workers by the CIO Electrical Workers in an election at the key Schenectady, N. Y., GE plant. The CIO Chemical Workers were forced into the nation's first strike against atomic energy installations and the CIO Rubber Workers walked picket lines in the first nationwide strike in Goodyear Rubber Co. history.

AUGUST brought the first hints of the political battles to come, as CIO-PAC helped bring sweeping gains in Southern primary elections. Many an issue which was to figure prominently in the fall campaign first crystallized in the dog days as Congress rushed toward a tardy adjournment, leaving behind what CIO called a "shameful record." The GOP tried to christen the 83rd Congress the "Can Do" one, but the "Give-Away" label stuck instead, highlighted by the 13-day debate over the Administration-sponsored Atomic Energy Bill. Its lack of safeguards against monopoly or exploitation, and inclusion of enabling provisions for the Dixon-Yates contract, typified the Republican record.

SEPTEMBER opened with a renewed call by Reuther for action to produce a full employment, full production economy, and blistering attacks on the Eisenhower Administration as having replaced "government for the people with government for profit." It also saw CIO move swiftly and surely to crack down on racketeering in union welfare funds, brought to light in charges against five New York City locals of the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union.

OCTOBER: Political campaigns rose to fever pitch, with the GOP impaling itself on many a thorny issue and the barbed point of Defense Sec. Wilson's sneering reference to the unemployed as "kennel-fed dogs." CIO created a Special Standing Committee on Ethical Practices, empowered to deal with mismanagement or corruption in handling union funds. And labor unity came a major step closer to reality with the unanimous decision of a joint AFL-CIO committee to "create a single trade union center in America through the process of merger, which will preserve the integrity of each affiliated national and international union."

None So Blind

Fair Deal Gains

NOVEMBER election results saw Fair Deal forces "striding down the comeback trail halfway to the White House," as Democrats gained a slim one-vote control in the Senate, a 29-seat margin in the House and won six out of 10 contested governorships outside the South. The CIO Auto Workers spelled out details of the guaranteed annual employment plan they will seek from major auto makers in next year's bargaining. CIO climaxed its action on welfare and pension funds with precedent-setting hearings in New York that resulted in "broad agreement on a set of general principles designed to keep such funds operating honestly and at top efficiency."

DECEMBER brought CIO's 16th national convention in Los Angeles, which laid out a program looking forward to fair and honorable unity with the AFL, to a continued drive to organize the unorganized, and to domestic economic legislation designed to end stagnation. Abroad, it set goals of building peace, without appeasement, and security in a world marked by cold war and the lengthening shadow of atomic developments for both good and evil.

The blazing yellow and black CIO emblem, surmounted by a banner proclaiming "Citizenship In Operation," looked down on a gathering that reelected Walter P. Reuther, James B. Carey and John V. Riffe, laid concrete plans for restoration of an expanding U. S. economy, vigorously supported labor unity, backed efforts of affiliates to negotiate guaranteed annual wage plans, and adopted an eight-point program to protect against maladministration of union welfare funds.

Such were the highlights as 1954 came to an end, and CIO entered into its 20th anniversary year.

New Cop On The Beat

Unequal Proportions

The Octopus Has Grown New Tentacles

"Now What Did I Say?"

Some cartoon highlights of the year, by LeBaron Coakley in The CIO News.

'South Of T
Down Mex

The "good neighbor" towards nations to the sou
when a CIO delegation rec a good will trip as guests federation of Labor. Here of the visit.

MEXICAN WELCOME—Spotlights, bands, newsmen and leaders of the country's labor movement greeted CIO delegation at airport on good will visit. CTM Sec. Fidel Velazquez greets CIO Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

MEET THE PRESIDENT—A highlight of the trip was a reception by Mexico's labor-supported Pres. Ruiz Cortines, talking with Carey and Reuther.

SMILING WELCOME — Mrs. Fidel Velazquez, wife of CTM leader, has a warm embrace for Mrs. Reuther.

STANDING ROOM ONLY—Every se big meeting in honor of CIO delegatio

MEXICAN 'SWING'—Sombrero-wearing musicians provided background music at luncheon for CIO delegation. Mexico radio carried visit highlights.

TWO CTM MEMBERS—Sec. Velazquez of CTM and Ernst Schwarz of CIO Latin-American Committee, who is honorary CTM member.

SIGHTSEEING, TOO—CTM officials
Mexico's capital city. Here they pos

CUTTING A CAKE—Mr. and Mrs. Reuther cut a friendship cake—decorated with frosting flags of U. S. and Mexico—while CTM hosts applaud.

FOR ORIT—Luis Albert Monge, secretary of ORIT, hemisphere union group, greets CIO Pres. Reuther.

e Border, o Way...'

licy of the United States was given real meaning y visited Mexico City on he CTM, Mexico's Con- some photo highlights

CENTER OF LEARNING—Trip to see modern architecture at new University of Mexico is a "must" for any visit to Mexico City. The Philip Murray Memorial Foundation gave $5000 to CTM for presentation to the University.

n the house was filled, at CTM's CTM banners decorated theater.

HAILS TIES—O. A. Knight, head of Oil Workers and of CIO Latin-American Committee, hails friendship of U. S., Mexican labor.

ANOTHER WELCOME—Mexican government workers, by law, cannot affiliate with CTM; but, like the CTM, they gave a warm reception at meeting.

k CIO delegation to see the sights of tside one of many historic churches.

EXTRA!—CTM paper published special English edition in honor of CIO visit and it pleased Reuther.

BUSY SCHEDULE—CTM hosts kept CIO group moving at fast pace through Mexico City. Most of CIO group meets with some Mexican union leaders.

SHAKE! — Hands were shaken in greeting all over Mexico City—here with a CTM leader.

MEET MEXICAN LABOR MINISTER—Adolfo Lopez Mateos, Mexico's Labor Minister, received CIO group in his offices. He is close friend of labor.

Rigged Report On Foundations Blasted

THE REECE Committee which investigated tax-exempt foundations for the House came up last week with a report which was promptly denounced by Democratic members as filled with "untruths . . . half-truths . . . (and) misleading statements."

The Republicans said they found such organizations "directly supporting 'subversion' in the true meaning of that word," with some permitting their huge incomes to be channeled to causes "detrimental" to the American system.

Other harsh charges, such as the promotion of "socialism and collectivist ideas," were hurled at foundations bearing names like Rockefeller, Carnegie and Ford which are more frequently regarded as symbols of free enterprise.

There was considerable doubt that the committee did in fact turn in a majority report. What was called that was signed by Reps. Reece (Tenn.), the chairman; Wolcott (Mich.) and Goodwin (Mass.), with the minority report signed by Democratic Reps. Hays (O.) and Pfost (Ida.).

THEN GOODWIN apparently thought better of it, and in a statement of "individual views" disavowed the bulk of it.

He said he had signed it only with "strong reservations from many of its findings and conclusions," then listed so many of his "reservations" that it caused wonder in Washington that he had signed in the first place.

The Republicans took it upon themselves to warn some of the largest foundations to "clean house" of "leftist tendencies" and "very grave abuses," or Congress would do it for them.

To all these charges—and others—the foundations were given no chance to reply. The hearings were abruptly concluded June 17, when Hays was desperately insisting on injecting some sort of objectivity into the investigation.

The most Reece—carrying the proxies of the other Republicans—would do was permit them to file statements. And even these statements were not carried in the printed report.

HAYS AND MRS. PFOST in their dissent said they "earnestly" believe the so-called majority report never should have been published.

"Each step of the proceedings of this committee placed an ugly stain on the majestic record of the House and the great tradition of the American people," they said.

They called the GOP conclusions "shocking" and "barbaric," and said they were drawn in "an arena of bias and prejudice." The "basic characteristic" of the investigation," they added, was "elemental unfairness."

Inquiry Called A 'Saturation Assault'

In an article on the House probe of tax-exempt foundations in the May 24 edition of The CIO News—a few days after hearings got under way—Assistant Editor Eugene Kelley warned the probe was a "saturation assault" on the public mind by the GOP right wing to "dragoon it into public thinking."

Based on a research report by the staff to the committee, the CIO article said that the effort "at placing intellectual pursuits in a straitjacket" reflected the bitter views of isolationist and virulent Republican extremists.

TWU Asks 17c Boost In N.Y. Transit Wage

A PROPOSAL for a 17c hourly wage increase for New York City's 34,000 transit workers was made to the New York City Transit Authority by CIO Transport Workers Pres. Michael J. Quill last week.

Under the present two-year contract, the authority agreed to consider a wage increase Mar. 15, but Quill said he was sending the union's proposal to the five-member board in time for consideration at last week's regular meeting.

The 500-member executive committee of TWU Local 100, representing most of the city's subway, elevated, bus and trolley lines, voted unanimously to make the new wage demand.

Quill said that the 17c figure was an average increase which he figured would be necessary to make up the remainder of a 25c an hour across-the-board increase demanded by the union two years ago.

"Irregular increases" of 6.5c to 11c per hour were won by the TWU last July, Quill said, after the authority rejected a fact-finding board's recommendation for a 14c across-the-board hike.

The TWU president made it clear that in the new negotiations the union would concentrate on eliminating what he called "the unfair inequities created by discriminatory T. A. wage hikes of last summer." He said the authority could meet the demand without raising fares.

MARCH OF DIMES

FIGHT INFANTILE PARALYSIS

JANUARY 3-31

NO REPUBLICAN, HE—Herbert Hoover, standing left, is good Democrat and good union man who produces union-sponsored broadcasts in Flint, Mich. At left he talks things over with Michigan Gov. Williams and Shift Break Announcer Noble Gravelin. At right center, UAW Vice Pres. John Livingston answers questions.

Who'd Think Two Herbert Hoovers Could Be So Utterly Different?

By MARSHALL BOOR

Editor, Flint, Mich., Weekly Review

OUT IN FLINT, Mich., Herbert Hoover is producing a radio program for the CIO Auto Workers.

Not the Great Engineer with the rounded collar, but a former newspaper man who's both a good Democrat and a good union man, is responsible for Shift Break, a five-day-a-week hour-and-a-quarter broadcast over Station WBBC. The program reaches 53,000 of the 58,000 Flint auto workers on their way to and from work.

Shift Break caught on in Flint in 1954 the way unionism did back in 1937. UAW members have come to regard the program as a source of news on union activities, sports events and shop chatter, all woven into a tapestry of catchy music.

Early in the summer when the UAW's General Motors Dept. decided on a radio program as a means of informing the membership about their local unions and as a way of helping make the community a better place to live in, staffer Hoover was tapped for the job.

UNLIKE his namesake, who could never recognize the fact that a problem like the depression existed, the UAW's Herbert Hoover knew he had a problem. But he set to work and came up with a show that quickly captured the loyalty of Flint workers.

One of Hoover's first projects for Shift Break was sparking a voter registration drive. From the very first, teams of unionists talking to people about registering found a receptive audience because Shift Break had brought the message into their homes and they were prepared to sign up when asked.

UAW members at the big GM Ternstedt plant give the program a lot of credit, too, for breaking up the stalling during negotiations at the new plant.

Maybe it was coincidence, they say, but when Shift Break began talking strike, management settled down and, in a day-long session, worked out with Local 326 what is regarded as the best seniority agreement in the auto industry.

While the GOP's "two chickens in every pot" Hoover was plumping for a return to reaction, Flint's Herbert Hoover was helping Shift Break and its traveling microphone play a major role in the recent political campaign which resulted in a clean sweep for labor-backed Democrats in the area.

It was Shift Break, too, which treated Flint unionists to the privilege of hearing a recording of the famous "bird-dog" remark by Defense Sec. Wilson—a major contribution to the election of Michigan's new Democratic Sen. McNamara.

Shift Break brought them as well recordings of such dignitaries as Sens. Kefauver (D. Tenn.) and Morse (Ind. Ore.) and Gov. Williams (D. Mich.), who were on the political offensive against the GOP.

EVEN DURING the election campaign, Shift Break didn't neglect its community responsibilities. This year's Red Feather campaign, jointly sponsored by the UAW and auto industry management, was an outstanding success, with a lot of the credit given to Shift Break.

Hoover's big project for Shift Break during 1955 will be support of the UAW's drive for a guaranteed employment plan. Already Hoover has turned part of the program into a forum for explaining the plan to listeners. Featured on initial broadcasts were tape-recorded portions of the recent UAW National Economic Conference which dealt with it.

One thing is sure. Whatever good things are in store for Flint unionists around the corner, the UAW's Herbert Hoover and Shift Break will be there to help get them. And somehow, Flint UAW members feel it will be a different corner from the one around which the other Herbert Hoover insisted prosperity lurked.

This Program Is Really Union Made

The Herbert Hoover of Flint, Mich., who is not related to the depression President either spiritually or by blood, is producer of Shift Break, a radio program that's really CIO union made.

Hoover himself is, of course, a union man. The sponsor is the General Motors Dept. of the CIO Auto Workers, and the station, WBBC, has members of the CIO Broadcast Employees as announcers and technicians.

ANG-CIO Names Vandercook Judge In Broun Contest

JOHN W. VANDERCOOK, noted radio commentator whose broadcasts are sponsored by the CIO, will help judge the 1954 Heywood Broun Award, the CIO Newspaper Guild announced last week.

Serving with him to pick the winner of the ANG-CIO's annual award for outstanding journalistic work—"in the spirit" of the famed columnist who was the union's first president—will be Edwin A. Lahey, national correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, and Bruce Catton, winner of the 1954 Pulitzer Prize for history.

Eligible for the award are workers in the ANG-CIO jurisdiction—whether they are members or not—on newspapers, news services, news and feature magazines, and radio and television stations. The deadline for entries is Feb. 1, 1955. They should be sent to the award committee at the ANG office, 99 University Place, New York 3, N. Y.

Milwaukee CIO Conducts Course On World Events

THE MILWAUKEE County CIO Council and the University of Wisconsin School for Workers are conducting a course on world affairs.

More than 40 CIO members attended the first of the four meetings. Each class is for two hours, with the first hour devoted to a lecture by a member of the university faculty and the last reserved for discussion. Chairman Charles Grunder of the world affairs committee of the Council said:

"Labor is affected by what the government does. Your taxes are affected, your sons go into service, your money is going to foreign countries for aid. Find out why."

IT'S YOUR WASHINGTON

by Willard Shelton

THE REPUBLICANS who ran investigating committees on the "subversives" beat in the dead-and-gone 83rd Congress have a beef, a grouch, against the newspapermen who reported their activities and the publishers who controlled the editorial pages criticizing these activities. The beef, the grouch, is—like a new Detroit auto—a two-tone job.

'Heat' Turned On The Press

The working reporters here in town are alleged to have a pro-New Deal, not to say Democratic bias. They don't write their stories exactly the way Sen. McCarthy and Rep. Velde (R. Ill.) think they should.

A Velde House Un-American Activities Committee aide once explained to this reporter that there were two reasons for taking so many of its subcommittee hearings out on the road—to Detroit, Cleveland, Los Angeles or particularly any place other than Washington.

Reason No. 1: the subcommittee could count on local television coverage. Reason No. 2: the hearings didn't have to be "filtered" to the country through the "pro-New Deal" Washington press corps.

That permanently-precocious young gentleman, Roy Cohn, whose private opinion of Sen. McCarthy would be extremely interesting to obtain, lectured the New York Times recently about how certain overt facts in a story should have been handled. The Times solemnly reported, in detail, that if Cohn had been managing editor (instead of a Southern-born gentleman named Turner Catledge), some "facts" would have been placed "higher" in the story and others "lower."

The Reece Report

The Republican investigators' assault on publishers and their editorial pages is more interesting, in many ways, than their suspicion of the "pro-New Deal reporters."

The assault is summed up by the report of the Reece special House committee dealing with the activities of great tax-exempt foundations bearing the revered names of Ford, Rockefeller and Carnegie, of Ogden Reid and Eugene Meyer.

The rich foundations, in the view of Committee Chairman Reece (R., Tenn.), are under the control of "planners" engaged in a "diabolical conspiracy" to further "socialism."

The editorial opinions of the Washington Post, the Reece report intimated, are controlled by the activities of the Meyer Foundation. The New York Herald Tribune's opinions are dominated, theoretically, by the interests of the tax-exempt Reid Foundation. The New York Times also somehow gets into the act as an offender against Reece's idea of Americanism.

The interesting fact is that all three of the newspapers the Reece report named—the Washington Post, the New York Times and the Herald Tribune—were among the first and most vigorous supporters of Gen. Eisenhower for the Republican nomination and the Presidency.

It is time to let Rep. Reece, Velde, McCarthy and other right wing Republicans in on a secret: They are entirely correct in surmising that most of the working Washington reporters covering their activities have contempt for their activities. The percentage, I would guess, is at least 90.

Attack Defies Explanation

Nevertheless, these same reporters write the news accurately, with pride in their profession. I recall one reporter defending his lengthy story on one McCarthy episode—favorable in its implications to the Senator—who responded to criticism by a colleague by saying, "McCarthy is news and as long as he's news I've got an obligation to report him. I chronicled his rise and I'll stay to chronicle his fall."

The right wing Republican attack on publishers, with a pretense that the opinions of publishers are controlled by wealthy tax-exempt foundations dominated by "conspirators" pushing for "socialism," defies rational explanation.

It has never been noticed that these publishers had a kind word to say for a union on strike, or an unkind word for the Eisenhower policy of giving special tax benefits to corporation stockholders at the expense of wage earners.

The dominant persons in the great foundations—Paul G. Hoffman, Nelson Rockefeller, et al—are almost unanimously pro-Republican and pro-Eisenhower. Nelson Rockefeller spent nearly two years as Undersecretary to Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby before moving to the White House, and the amount of health, education and welfare he promoted could be measured in a medicine dropper.

Maybe the Reece report, boiled down, simply means that Reece still hasn't forgiven Eisenhower for beating the late Sen. Taft in the Republican convention and getting elected. But it is ludicrous to express this lingering right wing GOP hatred of Ike in terms of an assault on publishers and foundation operators as socialistic "conspirators."

LISTEN TO THE CIO RADIO PROGRAM

John W. Vandercook AND THE NEWS

every weekday evening on the ABC Network

Labor's World—

Union Chief Says Tunisians Lose Faith In French Policies

THE PEOPLE of Tunisia are strongly disappointed in the lack of action by the French government to assure them of freedom and independence, according to Ahmed Ben-Salah, secretary-general of the Tunisian General Federation of Labor (UGTT).

Ben-Salah was a recent visitor to CIO headquarters in Washington, after attending the Los Angeles convention.

He is a successor to Farhat Hached, who was murdered by anti-nationalist forces in Tunisia two years ago. Like his predecessor, he is a member of the executive board of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

The 28-year-old Tunisian union leader was critical of French Premier Mendes-France, who, he said, "has expressly refused to admit of any evolution of Tunisia toward real freedom and independence, especially in matters like defense and foreign relations."

Ben-Salah voiced criticism of statements by M. Fouchet—the French Minister of Tunisian and Moroccan Affairs—that treaties between Tunisia and France must be ratified in Tunisia "only by the Bey of Tunis, with no democratic or parliamentary action of any sort."

HE CHARGED that Mendes-France is "trying to take half-measures in order to gain time" on the question of Tunisian independence.

That would have bad effects for the unions of Tunisia, he continued, because it means we will have "to wait for social and economic improvements until the political problem is solved, and because we'll have to fight for democracy and freedom."

Despite legal restrictions and the fact that many union leaders have been jailed or put in concentration camps, he said, the UGTT has organized about 100,000 members out of a work force of some 800,000. Approximately half is regularly employed, he explained. The other half is fully or partially unemployed, or works only in seasonal activities.

Farm workers in the predominantly agricultural country earn only an average of 60c a day, he said, and enjoy no social benefits. The UGTT has tried for many years to win a minimum wage law for them. At present it is carrying on an intensified effort, and also has proposed a program for resettlement of jobless farm workers on arable land through collectives.

BEN-SALAH talked about relationships with Jewish people in his section of North Africa.

"There is no anti-Semitism in Tunisia," he said bluntly, "and I never heard of any in Morocco.

"In Tunisia, the Jews are just as strong Nationalists as the Moslems. They belong to the UGTT, and the leader of the Jewish community served with Hached on the Nationalist Committee of 40, the guiding body in the fight for liberty.

"When the Germans held Tunisia during the war, the Tunisian government and the then ruler, Moncef Bey, refused to discriminate between Jews and Moslems in the matter of forced labor even though the French resident-general wanted to conscript the Jews for it.

"And Tunisia was the only country the Germans seized, so far as I know, where the Jews were not forced to wear the yellow star."

CIO Mourns For 2 Pioneers-- Albert Haywood, Crawford

ALBERT HAYWOOD

WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD

TWO PIONEER CIO leaders, Albert Haywood and William H. Crawford, died last week.

Haywood, brother of the late CIO Executive Vice Pres. Allan Haywood, was in his middle 60's. Crawford, CIO Steelworkers district director in Atlanta, Ga., was 66.

Messages of sympathy and condolences went to the two bereaved widows from CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Mrs. Carey.

HAYWOOD'S career closely paralleled that of his younger brother in the coal mines of England and America. He was active in the United Mine Workers and later in the earlier days of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

He played an important role in the organizing campaign at the Ford Motor Co., and served as an organizer and director of the CIO Railroad Workers.

Crawford worked in steel mills in Ohio and Alabama in the 1920's during which period he was active in the Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Plate Workers, AFL, and later, in the SWOC.

He was elected a district director of USA-CIO at the organization's founding convention in Cleveland, O., in 1942. He was president of the Georgia CIO Council until his retirement this year, and served on the boards of a number of community organizations in Atlanta.

Another death recently was that of Clyde J. Massey, 42, an international representative of the CIO Chemical Workers. Massey, who lived in Decatur, Ga., suffered a heart attack during contract negotiations in Chattanooga, Tenn.

New Public Housing Bill To Be Presented By Garmatz

A BILL to restore the original public housing provisions of the Housing Act of 1949 and to repeal later limitations "intended to kill public housing" is being prepared for introduction by Rep. Garmatz (D. Md.).

"Not only those of us who have been the friends of public housing, but the organized groups which have been its worst enemies now agree that the 1954 Act is the death knell for this essential phase of slum clearance work," the Baltimore Congressman said.

Garmatz said his bill would "enable us to resume a full-scale public housing program once again."

He recalled that Pres. Eisenhower was willing last year to go "part way, at least," toward such an objective when he asked authorization of 35,000 units a year for four years.

"But a majority of his own party members in Congress refused to agree to that and limited the program to 35,000 units altogether," Garmatz charged. "They then wrote into the bill these added restrictions which make even that small program unattainable."

Steelworkers Return $3000 Overpayment

CIO Steelworkers at the Homestead Works of U. S. Steel at Pittsburgh thought Santa Claus had arrived a few days early.

Through an error in preparing their pay envelopes the Peoples First National Bank & Trust Co. dropped in too many high denomination bills in bundles. However, the union members returned practically all of the extra money—some $3000 worth.

—(PAI)

Economic Report—

Despite Sales, Production Gains, Full Employment Chances Are Dim

THE ECONOMY picked up in November but doesn't have the steam to make the complete trip to full employment, the CIO Education & Research Dept. said last week in the current edition of its Economic Newsletter.

"Retail sales were above last November's, and December's will probably show another rise," it said. "Steel production picked up from the low levels of the summer and fall. Employment did well for this time of year. Unemployment did not rise as much as expected.

"Two important underpinnings were high: December's auto production will be the highest since January 1953, and November's housing construction was greater than any month since August 1950.

"But workers' and farmers' incomes have dropped. Employment still lags behind last year. With the fall of income and employment, we can't see enough strength in the economy to keep auto production and housing construction at their present heights. Hopes for complete recovery to full employment are therefore dimmed."

1. Production: Industrial production index reached 129, equal to November 1953 but 6% below the mid-1953 peak. Steel production was the highest for any 1954 month, but 7% behind last year. Auto production for December may reach 637,999, but "we doubt that such heights can be carried on through much of 1955."

2. Employment and Unemployment: November employment was 61.7 million, or 400,000 under October; non-farm employment rose 700,000, but farm employment dropped 1.1 million, with manufacturing employment picking up but slightly and staying 900,000 below November 1953.

Unemployment was up 151,000 over October and 1.5 million over November 1953 to 2.9 million, with 4.5% of the labor force jobless. Another 2.6 million workers, or 4% of the labor force, were working part time.

New unemployment compensation claims were estimated at 1,194,848, or 103,000 fewer than in October and 57,000 under November 1953; continued claims on Nov. 30 were 1,588,000, or 142,000 above October and 277,000 over Nov. 30, 1953.

3. Income and Savings: Personal income was down $2 billion in October, including a drop of $3.3 billion, or about 2%, in wages and salaries, and a 10% cut in farm income (4% less for the first 11 months than in 1953). But cash dividends by major corporations were 7% higher in the first 11 months than a year ago, and interest and government payments, including unemployment compensation and old age benefits, went up. More $25 savings bonds were cashed in the first nine months than were sold.

Fewer Workers

The latest government figures show that 900,000 fewer workers are producing the same amount of goods:

Nov.	Industrial Production Index	Manufacturing Employment
1953	129	17,000,000
1954	129	16,100,000

How To Buy

By Sidney Margolius

YOU CAN EXPECT higher living costs in mid-1955 following a temporary dip in prices this winter. Your living costs will be lower in the early months of the year because of cheaper prices of meat, and the cut-rate winter sales of clothing and household furnishings.

1955 Prospects On Prices

But by spring the prices you have to pay for necessities will start moving up again, and you will find yourself with new high bills for food, clothing, shelter and medical and other services.

This situation calls for smart shopping to cushion these new blows against your family's living standard—especially, timing your buying to take advantage of the mid-winter sales, and shifting your food buying as various commodities, especially meats, become more costly later this year.

The temporary break you get this winter will be due largely to the present heavy supplies of meat. But rent and other housing costs are still climbing, and the steadily rising costs of medical care—doctors' and hospital fees and medicines—will become an increasingly severe problem for moderate-income families in 1955.

Here's what you can expect in price trends in the first six months of 1955, and suggested buying policies that can help protect you from these new living-cost problems:

FOOD: Your food bills will be a little cheaper this winter but not as low as they should be. While prices farmers get for food products have gone down 20% since 1951, in that same time the prices the public pays for food at the store have gone up about 5%. The reason: more of your food dollar is now going for processing, marketing and transportation charges. One of your most valuable policies for 1955, to hold down your living costs, is to avoid being enticed by the increasing number of prepared and semi-prepared foods on the market which raise your food bills.

This winter you'll find best buys in beef, pork, eggs and cheddar cheese, with lamb and veal also down in price. In beef, you'll get more for your money in round and flank steaks, which provide twice as many servings per pound as sirloin.

You'll also find reasonable prices for hamburger, chuck steak, pork shoulder chops, and lamb shoulder roast, breast and shank. But one of the best values to depend on this year is eggs.

CLOTHING: Except for shoes, clothing prices have gone down steadily in the past two years but there are signs they will go up a little this spring. Take advantage of the mid-winter sales and clearances to anticipate your needs in basic wardrobe items.

Look for sales of women's and children's coats in January; for men's coats in February. But one of the most important sales to watch for is the January shoe sales. You can save 15-20% on staple styles and brands in footwear.

HOME FURNISHINGS: Prices of household appliances and television sets will continue to get cheaper in 1955, with retail discounts widespread and open. There is a trend to lower prices on automatic washing machines and driers.

CARS: List prices of new cars are about the same as last year but dealers expect actual selling prices early in the year will be higher than last year, because manufacturers have cut down production.

Trade reports indicate that dealers currently are offering only about half the amount of discount on 1955 models they gave last year. But the car-price situation may well change by summer, with dealers forced to offer larger discounts again. Tire manufacturers have raised prices; if you need tires now, see if your service station or retailer can supply you at the old price.

(Copyright 1954 by Sidney Margolius)

D. C. Council Plays Santa To Local Children's Home

CHRISTMAS was a lot merrier for the nearly 100 kids at St. Anne's Infant Home in Washington, thanks to two CIO Publicity Dept. secretaries and the District of Columbia CIO Council.

So far as the children were concerned, the important event was the ice cream and cake party complete with a visit from Santa Claus, played by Harry Pollak, assistant CIO director of international affairs.

But to the sisters who operate the facility, the Council's gift of an electric dishwasher and a jungle gym was what really marked the season.

Miss Lorraine Marshall and Mrs. Dixie Pennoyer, who sparked the project, got interested through welfare work in the home, which cares for unmarried mothers and their children and places the children for adoption.

They interested their union of National CIO headquarters employes in the idea, and LIU 1695 took it up with the D. C. Council, which raised over $500 from all the CIO locals in the area.

Mrs. Maxine Lucas, CIO representative to the Community Chest, gave a helping hand in preparing the party. James Gildea, assistant to CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, presented the gifts on behalf of the Council to Sister Rose Marie of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul, the home's administrator.

Farm Income Drops By 10%

FARMERS' INCOME continued to decline, the Agriculture Dept. reported last week, announcing that they received $3.2 billion from crop and livestock sales in November. That was down 10% from October and 6% below November 1953.

The November figures bring to $27.2 billion the farmers' cash receipts from crop and livestock marketings the first 11 months of 1954, or 4% below last year.

Farmers' crop receipts in the 11-month period were about 6% below the same period last year, with "rather substantial declines" in receipts from cotton, wheat and truck crops.

Social Security Urged For GIs

A special House committee has recommended that Congress give "serious consideration" to extending social security to servicemen. They now get $160 monthly social security credit for service in the armed forces since 1940, but do not get retirement benefits if they receive military retirement payments.

CIO PLAYS SANTA — James Gildea, assistant to CIO Sec.-Treas. Carey, presents D. C. CIO Council gift of electric dishwasher, jungle gym, to Sister Rose Marie of St. Anne's Infant Home. Right: Asst. Intl. Affairs Dir. Harry Pollak plays Santa as Lorraine Marshall, Joe Evans and Ruth Valentine help serve.

Price Index Starts Up Again

IN A REVERSAL of the downward trend of the previous three months, the cost of living increased by approximately one-tenth of 1% in the month ending Nov. 15, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported last week.

The Consumers' Price Index figure went up one notch, to 114.6 from 114.5 on Oct. 15. The BLS said this was largely because of the disappearance of price concessions on new autos that had been in effect the previous few months.

Costs of food, house furnishings, reading and recreation dropped in November. Rent, fuel, medical and personal care and household operations rose. Food costs were at their lowest since January 1951.

Here are the cumulative figures for the BLS index:

Period	Index	Period	New Index
1939 monthly average	99.4	Nov. 15	115.0
1943 monthly average	123.6	Dec. 15	114.9
1944 monthly average	125.5	Jan. 15	115.2
1945 monthly average	128.4	1954 Feb. 15	115.0
1946 monthly average	139.3	Mar. 15	114.8
1947 monthly average	159.2	Apr. 15	114.6
1948 monthly average	171.2	May 15	115.0
1949 monthly average	169.1	June 15	115.1
1950 monthly average	171.2	July 15	115.2
1951 monthly average	185.9	Aug. 15	115.0
1952 monthly average	190.6 (old index)	Sept. 15	114.7
1953 monthly average	114.4 (new index)	Oct. 15	114.5
1954 monthly average	114.9	Nov. 15	114.6

Organizationally Speaking

By John V. Riffe

I HAVE JUST COME from the 18th annual convention of the Texas State CIO Council. Hailed as one of the most successful conventions in that Council's long history, it is certainly one of the finest state council conventions I have attended.

There is a vigor and an enthusiasm among our members in this area which is reflected by the Council's growth in members, in influence, and prestige. This has been accompanied by increased effectiveness in its political and legislative activities.

Congratulations and commendation are due the Council's officers, the international unions whose staff representatives are rendering such great assistance to the Council, and to the whole CIO membership in the Lone Star State.

IT WAS WITH SORROW that I received notice last week of the death of two friends who were long time trade unionists and fighters in the CIO cause: William Crawford, Steelworkers' Dist. 35 director, and USA-CIO Staff Rep. Albert Haywood. All of us who knew them, and their distinct contributions to our movement, will feel their loss. I know I speak for all of CIO when I say that our sympathy goes out to the widows and families of these two CIO stalwarts.

At this time, I would like to take the opportunity afforded by the holiday season, when we exchange traditional greetings, to express my thanks and appreciation to all who have worked to help make this one of CIO's great years. It is my hope that the coming New Year will bring peace among nations, unity to labor, and health and happiness for us all.

T. M. McCormick, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Oil Workers, reports three recent election victories: Texas Co., Denver, Colo., where bulk station and marketing workers voted 12 for OWIU to 8 "no union" ballots; Standard Oil Co. at Sauk Center, Minn., where pumping terminal workers favored OWIU over another union by a 4 to 1 vote; and Great Lakes Pipe Line Co. of Grand Island, Nebr., whose terminal workers voted 10 to 1 for OWIU over a rival union.

FROM SEC.-TREAS. AL HARTNETT of the CIO Electrical Workers we receive word of two election triumphs: In St. Louis, Mo., workers at the General Electric Service Shop, previously represented by the discredited UE, cast 47 votes for IUE-CIO to one for no union. The other victory represented a hard-fought battle at the Humphrey's Manufacturing Co. in Mansfield, O. At this previously unorganized plant, 188 workers voted for IUE-CIO, with 160 votes being cast for no union, according to IUE Dir. William Snoots.

CIO Rep. Joe Joy sends information of an important election victory for the CIO Glass and Ceramic Workers over the expelled Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. In this bitter election, the Glass Workers received 259 votes compared with 208 for Mine-Mill at the Mississippi Lime Co., St. Genevieve, Miss.

CIO Reg. Dir. Del Garst and Joy report a second recent election triumph in Missouri for the Glass Workers. At Festus, Mo., 44 Shrugg Co. workers voted for UG&CW-CIO as against 19 who voted for UE. Every eligible vote was cast in this spirited election. Joy and Garst refer in their report to the excellent work done by the staffmen assigned by the Glass Workers to this campaign.

Feller And Other Top Officers Reelected By Brewery Union

MEMBERS of the CIO Brewery Workers reelected Karl F. Feller of Cincinnati, as president by a referendum vote.

Arthur P. Gildea, Boston, and Thomas Rusch, Cincinnati, were chosen again as secretary-treasurer and director of organization, respectively.

Executive board members were reelected, as follows: Thomas E. Owens, Boston; Jack Heil, Cleveland; Clifford Schneider, St. Louis; B. M. Watts, Houston; Robert R. Person, Golden, Colo.; Albert Fotino, Peekskill, N. Y., and William J. Lawler, Allentown, Pa.

New executive board members are J. R. Humphreys, Vancouver, B. C., and Glen Cyphery, Windsor, Ont.

Joseph E. Brady was reelected as coordinator of the union's state councils, as he was unopposed. Owens, Heil, Schneider, Watts, Person and Humphreys likewise did not appear on the ballot because they were unopposed. The victor in the contest for the 4th Dist. seat on the board is still undecided.

KARL FELLER

Robert Greenock Of ANG Dies

Robert Greenock, III, a member of the CIO Newspaper Guild staff since 1946, died Dec. 16 at San Francisco. He was 47.

A veteran Guildsman, Greenock was a member of the strike committee at the Chicago Herald-Examiner where a walkout began in 1938 and continued for 18 months. He represented the ANG in various organizing projects in western states.

CWA Out 20 Weeks In Alabama

THE STRIKE of CIO Communications Workers at the independent Alabama Telephone Co. last week entered its 20th week.

Settlement was stalled by the company's apparent desire to break off all relations with the union. CWA made an all-out effort to provide the strikers and their families a Merry Christmas.

CWA locals in the Southern district voluntarily collected $3000 to buy clothing for the strikers, toys for their children and a turkey for every family involved in the walkout. The national union's defense fund is being used to take care of basic needs.

MAIN OBSTACLE to a CWA contract settlement with Southern Bell on behalf of 50,000 workers is the firm's insistence on a no-strike clause. Negotiations were resumed last week. The old agreement was set to expire Aug. 23, but was extended under its terms.

Only other Bell System contract now being negotiated by CWA covers some 2500 traffic workers of Illinois Bell in Chicago. The old agreement, which concerns only wages and other related items, expires on Jan. 2.

Los Angeles News Folds; 450 Jobless

THE MOVE to newspaper monopoly spread last week to Los Angeles, where the Daily News suspended publication.

The independent Democratic paper was absorbed by the Times and Mirror, owned by Norman Chandler. These two papers, with the Examiner and Herald Express of the Hearst chain, now dominate the daily newspaper field in the city.

The merger made jobless 450 employes of the Daily News, about half of them members of the CIO Newspaper Guild. Employes discussed establishment of another daily.

Wisconsin CIO To Hold 11th Bowling Tourney

THE WISCONSIN CIO Council will hold its 11th bowling tournament next Apr. 2 to May 15 at the American Serb Hall, 5101 West Oklahoma Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

The prize for the winning team will be $500, based on 300 team entries. Fourteen other cash awards ranging from $300 to $15, and 200 other prizes are scheduled.

Unions Aid Children With Summer Camp

Camp Easter Seal for crippled children at Lakeside, Ore., has been hailed by Dist. Pres. E. G. High of the Oregon Society for Crippled Children as a monument to the unselfishness of CIO, AFL and independent union members in the Northwest and Alaska, who gave it $85,000.

RICHER BY $1000—Former Pres. Douglas Lovelace of San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild (left) presents to Campaign Chairman John Neukom $1000 check for United Crusade. It was part of $4000 proceeds from world premiere of the movie "Desiree" sponsored by the local. SFONG Pres. Edward O'Connor (right) assisted in presentation.

No Wage Increase Policy Laid To Ford Of Canada

OFFICIALS of the Ford Motor Co. of Canada are carrying out a policy of no wage increases adopted by the Canadian Manufacturers Association, leaders of the CIO Auto Workers charged last week as the union's strike went into its third month.

About 10,000 members of the union, which also is affiliated with the Canadian Congress of Labor, walked out of Ford plants at Toronto, Oakville and Windsor, all in Ontario, when negotiations for a new contract broke down.

The breakdown actually came when the company withdrew a wage offer of 4c an hour and predicted the union would not get "a fraction of a cent." This evidence of open hostility to the union is borne out, union officers claim, by management refusal to meet with UAW Pres. Walter P. Reuther, who also is CIO president.

One union official quoted a company spokesman as predicting weeks ago that "come Christmas, and you'll still be striking." The union's answer has been to keep its picket lines as strong as ever.

Congress Of Industrial Organizations

Financial Statement

(October 1, 1953—September 30, 1954)

(Editor's note: Below are printed excerpts from the detailed audit of the books of the Congress of Industrial Organizations for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1954. These excerpts show the Organization's total resources and liabilities as of September 30, 1954, and its income and expenses for the year ending on that date.)

STATEMENT NO. 1

STATEMENT OF RESOURCES & LIABILITIES

(As of the end of the fiscal year September 30, 1954)

Total Resources	$2,336,043.39
Total Liabilities	107,547.97
Net Worth Represented by the excess of Resources over Liabilities	2,228,495.42
Net Worth—as of September 30, 1953	2,429,217.60
Net Decrease—October 1, 1953 to September 30, 1954	200,722.18

STATEMENT NO. 2

STATEMENT OF INCOME RECEIVED & EXPENSES INCURRED OCTOBER 1, 1953 TO SEPTEMBER 30, 1954

INCOME RECEIVED
Per Capita Taxes from National Unions and Organizing Committees for general purposes		$5,271,503.95
Per Capita dues and initiation fees from Local Industrial Unions		199,042.71
Dues from Industrial Union Councils		6,868.75
Charter Fees		425.00
Sales of CIO News		86,747.59
Sales of Educational and Organizational Supplies		49,040.06
Interest Income from Investment Securities		27,257.39
TOTAL INCOME RECEIVED		$5,640,885.45
EXPENSES INCURRED
Salaries, Travel Expense, and Subsidies for Affiliated Organizations		$1,814,539.29
Regional and Field Offices
Salaries	$606,389.09
Travel Expense	466,415.12
Other	377,322.59
		1,450,126.80
Departmental Expenses		2,441,866.54
Contributions Made		135,075.00
TOTAL EXPENSES INCURRED		$5,841,607.63
Excess of Expenses Incurred over Income Received, October 1, 1953 to September 30, 1954		$ 200,722.18

—And A Happy New Year!

—By Pasca

"You couldn't hurt a fly with that super cosmic death ray disintegrator. It hasn't got a union label."

"It's a novelty New Year card from the shop steward you tried to fire last year."

". . . The entertainment committee would consider a fine fraternal gesture if you would stop toasting th local with each of your 50 well-wishing resolutions."

TWU Urges Pennsy To Act On Layoffs

THE PENNSYLVANIA Railroad was urged last week by the CIO Transport Workers to come forth with a plan "without delay" to reemploy some 12,000 maintenance workers laid off during the past two years. Pressing for immediate action, TWU-CIO Pres. Michael J. Quill met last week in Philadelphia with Vice Pres. James P. Newell of the railroad.

Meanwhile, the union last week sent out a call for a full employment conference to be held at the William Penn Hotel, Pittsburgh, Jan. 22—which is subject to cancellation if the railroad takes effective action to remedy the situation.

"SOMETHING must be done about this situation without delay," Quill wrote Pennsy Pres. James M. Symes.

"We read every day now that the recession is over; the newspapers headline the story of the stock market hitting an all-time high.

"Even under the notorious 'trickle-down theory' that is so popular in some circles these days surely, unless there is a leak in the pipeline somewhere, the 'trickle' in the form of jobs and pay checks ought to be reaching the furloughed employes of your company."

Maintenance workers have been furloughed in more than 30 communities, with the layoffs particularly heavy in Altoona—where the railroad has large shops — Hollidaysburg, Philadelphia, and Enola, all in Pennsylvania, and in New York City.

Similar mass layoffs of Pennsylvania employes in Altoona have been announced for the past Christmas seasons.

12-27

Wilson Cuts Manpower, Asks UMT

HARD ON the heels of announcing a new sugar-coated universal military training proposal, Defense Sec. Wilson last week revealed plans to cut military manpower by 100,000.

The CIO at its recent convention approved a resolution reaffirming its opposition to any form of universal military service.

Wilson's plan is part of a $1 billion yearly program which would see almost every physically fit youth perform some sort of military service. It also calls for a four-year extension of the present draft law.

The program, which has top White House priority, is aimed at building up a reserve force of five million men, with three million of these in an organized group that would be called up immediately in case of attack.

MEANTIME, in line with the Administration's feeling that the threat of global war has diminished, the Secretary announced a cutback in overall military manpower to 2,815,00 by mid-1956.

The decision was immediately protested by Sen. Kefauver (D. Tenn.), who said, "I hope the Administration isn't reducing our military strength merely to balance the budget."

Support of selective service "as now operated" was reaffirmed by the same CIO convention resolution opposing UMT.

19 Synthetic Rubber Plants Go On Block

WANT TO BUY a synthetic rubber plant? Uncle Sam is selling them out—cheap.

The half-billion-dollar government investment which had been earning $50 million a year is going to private industry under terms of a bill passed in the 83rd GOP Give-away Congress.

Prices won't be announced until Congress has a chance to review the contracts for 60 days, but it's a cinch the giant rubber companies and oil-chemical combines snapping them up don't figure to lose on the deals.

Nineteen of the 27 plants have already been sold to such firms as Shell Chemical Corp. which bought three plants at Los Angeles. Three others at Port Neches, Tex., were parceled out between Goodrich-Gulf Chemicals, Inc., owned by B. F. Goodrich Co. and Gulf Oil Corp., and Texas-U. S. Chemical Co., owned by the Texas Co. and U. S. Rubber Co.

Informed guesses are that the plants will go for a total somewhere between the $500 million investment and the present "book value" of $167 million.

Long Strike Wins Full Union Shop

A six-month strike won a full union shop for Local 452 of the CIO Rubber Workers at the Midwest Rubber Co., Warren Township, Mich.

The local also obtained seniority for officers and rehiring of strikers according to seniority.

'Blackmail' Charged On Dixon-Yates Deal

A CHARGE of "blackmail" tactics regarding the D Yates contract was leveled at Atomic Energy Commi.sio Chairman Lewis L. Strauss last week by Sen. Kefauve (D. Tenn.).

In a prepared statement, Kefauver said a press conference statement by Strauss "was one of the most highly improper things that a man holding high office in the United States has done in many, many years."

In the conference Strauss had warned that if the Dixon-Yates plant were not built, the AEC would demand power from TVA.

IN HIS ATTACK on Strauss, Kefauver asked whether it wasn't "significant" that Strauss should hold his second news conference in 18 months "at this particular moment, while the Securities and Exchange Commission is holding hearings to determine whether they will approve Dixon-Yates financing."

"And isn't it significant that he should choose this time to say that the AEC is going to take power from TVA whether or not the Dixon-Yates plant is built, and that it may do so 'at the expense of TVA customers in the area'?" he demanded.

"And isn't it equally significant that the State of Tennessee and 33 other interested parties—all TVA customers in the area—are the parties opposing the Dixon-Yates deal before the SEC?

"One can draw hardly any conclusion other than that Admiral Strauss' press conference is a form of blackmail—telling us that we had better withdraw our opposition, or he'll take our power away from us."

Meantime, the American Farm Bureau Federation went on record at its national convention as opposed to private power companies moving into the TVA area. The delegates upset a proposal of the resolutions committee to endorse use of private power to supplement TVA's supply by deleting a sentence to that effect from the resolution in a floor vote.

Heat Turned On Critical Witness

Testimony that a Universit of Mississippi professor receive a mysterious phone call fror someone who was "very muc disturbed" that he was to appea in the Dixon-Yates hearings wa introduced in the Securities an Exchange Commission proceed ings.

Dr. F. H. Kellog, engineering dean and a soil expert, wa scheduled to testify that Dixon Yates picked a poor location fo its controversial plant. But be fore giving his technical infor mation, he recounted the phon call from Jackson, Miss., whic questioned the "propriety" of hi appearance and promised con tributions for a university air port and engineering equipment

Listen To Vandercook Every Night On ABC

GM Workers Hit With Tricky Annual Wage Survey

SUSPICIOUS eyes are being cast by CIO Auto Workers leaders in the Flint and Lansing areas on a survey on the guaranteed annual wage plan, which the union has set as a goal in 1955 wage talks.

They are asking quizzed workers to report to their local unions on the questions asked, according to two CIO papers, the Flint Weekly Review and the Lansing Labor News.

As far as can be ascertained, the survey is confined to UAW-CIO members at General Motors plants. There are more than a half dozen large GM operations in the two areas.

The survey is reported to work this way:

A woman phones a worker to make an appointment to interview him. On the appointed day she asks a number of questions as to his union membership, where he works, whether he likes his job and is satisfied with his wages.

After a number of questions on unemployment compensation, she wants to know whether more workers would be inclined to draw benefits rather than work if payments were increased.

The surveyor asks what the UAW-CIO is doing to provide an annual wage and whether the worker thinks a corporation should pay a worker for 52 weeks if he is laid off that long.

The two union papers point out that "a slick propaganda artist can take a thousand questionnaires of this type and come up with whatever type of statistics he desires."

"The questionnaires are not made available for public study and the answers are known only to the surveyor and the sponsor who compiled the loaded quiz," the papers say.

"Combine a loaded quiz with letters to daily papers signed 'union man' or 'union man's wife' and you have the first steps of a formula designed to cast discredit on union goals and insert a wedge between union members and their elected leadership."